WHEN the present Volume was commenced, it was expected that it would embrace, in addition to Argyll and the Isles, the three Northern Dioceses — Ross, Caithness, and Orkney. But when the Diocese of Ross was finished, it was found that the Volume already exceeded the proposed size, and that it would be extremely inconvenient, indeed impossible, to crowd into the same Volume the Dioceses of Caithness and Orkney. After much deliberation, the COMMITTEE of the BANNATYNE CLUB have resolved to issue, in One Part, the PARISHES OF ARGYLL and the ISLES, and to reserve for another the DIOCESE OF ROSS, already printed, together with the DIOCESE OF CAITHNESS, which is now in progress. It will be for after consideration whether the DIOCESE OF ORKNEY will be included in that Part.

ORIGINES PAROCHIALES SCOTIÆ.

THIS peninsular district, extending in length about forty miles from the isthmus of Tarbert to the Mull of Kintyre, and having an average breadth of about eight miles, was anciently divided into South and North Kintyre, the former comprehending the portion lying south of the head of Loch Kilkerran, and the latter, including a very small district sometimes styled Mid-Kintyre, extending northwards somewhat beyond the boundary of the old parish of Kilcalmonell, which was almost wholly included in the lordship of Knapdale.²

In the year 1128 King David I. granted to the canons of Holyrood one-half of the royal tithes, namely, the kane, pleas, and gains of the crown in Kentir and Errogeill.³ The grant was confirmed, probably in 1165, by King William the Lion, between 1306 and 1329 by King Robert Bruce, in 1342 by King David II., in 1382 by King Robert II., in 1391 by King Robert III., and in 1450 by King James II.⁴ Between 1147 and 1153 King David granted the other half of his tithes in Kentir to the monks of Dunfermelyn, and the grant was confirmed in 1154 by King Malcolm IV., in 1164 by Pope Alexander III., in 1165 by King William the Lion, in 1184 by Pope Lucius III., in 1227 by King Alexander II., in 1234 by Pope Gregory IX., and in 1276 by King Alexander III.⁵ Between 1150 and 1153 King David I. granted the tithes of the royal kane, pleas, and gain of Ergaithel to the monks of the priory of Urquhard in Morayshire.⁶

² In ancient records Kintyre is occasionally described as an island. Macpherson's Geog. Illust. of Scot. Hist. v. Tarbat. Palg. Illust., vol. i. pp. 309, 315. Brev.

From the year 1156 to the year 1164 Somerled or Sorlet (in Gaelic Somhairle, and corrupted by chroniclers into Sorli Marlady, Surle Maderdy, and Sowrdy Madurdy or Mac Illurdy¹), styled Prince of Argyle (Regulus Eregeithel), was Lord of Kintyre.² After a rebellion of twelve years against King Malcolm IV. he was slain in 1164,³ and was succeeded by his son Reginald, who styled himself Lord of Inchehal (the Western Isles), and also King of the Isles and Lord of Ergile and Kyntire.⁴ Before the year 1200 Reginald became a monk of Paisley, and granted to that monastery eight cows and two pennies for one year, and one penny in perpetuity from every house on his territories from which smoke issued, and his peace and protection to the monks whithersoever they should go, enjoining his dependents and his heirs in no way to injure them, and swearing by Saint Columba to inflict on the former the punishment of death, and that the latter should have his malediction if they disobeyed his injunction.⁵ His wife Fonia, who was a sister of the convent, granted to the monks the tithes of all her goods, whether in her own possession, or sent for sale by land or sea.⁶ After the year 1210 Dovenald the son of Reginald, who also had become a monk, and whose wife was a sister of the convent, granted the monks of Paisley eight cows for one year, and one penny or eight cows as a permanent yearly payment from every house on his territories that emitted smoke.⁷ Before the year 1295 Angus the son of Dovenald, also a monk, granted to the convent one penny yearly from every house on his territories, and half a mark of silver from his own mansion.⁸

In 1292, by an ordinance of King John Balliol, the lands of Kentyr with all tenants of land therein, the land of Lochman M'Kilcolm M'Ereuer, the land of Enegus M'Ereuar, the island of Boot, the land of Sir Thomas Cambel, the land of Dunkan Duf, and some other lands, were erected into a sheriffdom to be called the sheriffdom of Kentyr.⁹ In 1295 King John was ordered to appear before King Edward I. to answer for withholding the land of Kyntyr from Malcolm the son of Lengleys, who had complained to the King of England.¹⁰ About the year 1300 John of Ferrers was a suitor to King Edward I. for the lands of Malcolm M'Culian in the isle of Kentyr.¹¹

Between the years 1306 and 1309 King Robert Bruce granted lands in Kintyre, of what extent does not appear, to four persons, Gilchreist Macymar M'Cay, James the son of Dunsleph, Robert the son of Walter the Steward, and Angus of the Isles.¹² The last named individual, known as Angus Oig (the younger), was the son of Angus the son of Dovenald,¹³ and the same

In 1335 the land of Kentyre was granted by Edward Balliol to John of the Isles (son of Angus Oig) for his allegiance.² King David II., apparently about 1344, granted the lands of Kyntire with the advowson of its churches to Robert the Steward of Scotland, and to John Stewart his son by Elizabeth daughter of Sir Adam More, with remainder to Walter, John's younger brother.³ In 1376 the lands of Kyntyr were granted by King Robert II. to John del Yle and Margaret his wife.⁴ They seem to have thenceforward remained in the possession of the Lords of the Isles till the forfeiture of John of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, in 1475.⁵ In 1476, when at the instance of Margaret Queen of King James III. he was restored to his titles and possessions, the lands of the lordship of Kentyre and some others were expressly excepted from the grant.⁶

In the year 1481 King James III. granted to Tarlach Makalexander for life the stewardry of the lands of Kyntir within the bounds of the same, namely, from Sannych westward, and upon the water of Sannys on the east side of the same⁷—bounds which include only South Kintyre—and within the same jurisdiction forty marklands, namely, the four marklands of Machquharrymore of Dovnaverty, the two marklands of the two Ramwllis, the two marklands of Edyn, the markland of Knokstappillmore, the markland of Keranbeg, the two marklands of Glennomvklach, the five marklands of Kildavy, the five marklands of Polmolyn, the markland of Gartanagarauch, the markland of Eradall, the markland of Solkauch, the three marklands of Glennahervy, the two marklands of Feachaig, the twenty shillinglands of Corpany, the half markland of Barfarnay, the two marklands of Auchnaglek, the two marklands of Kilmichell, and the four marklands of Le Crag.¹ In the same year King James III. granted to John of Ila, Lord of the Isles, the lands of Killewnane, of the extent of twelve marks; Owgill, Auchnaslesok, Achenacork, and Kenochane, six marks; the two Knokrenochis, Glenmorele, Altnahay, Baduff, and Areskeauch, nine marks; the two Tereferguse and Largbane, five marks; Keynethane and Henyng, three marks; the Knokantis and Calybole, six marks; Le Lossit and Glenhawindee, five marks; Ballegrogane and Cragok, four marks; Catadill, Gertmeane and Gartloskin, Brede-laide and Keppragane, eight marks; Ballenabraide, two marks; Kilsolane, four marks; Ach-na-claich, two marks; Terefonyll, two marks; Lagnacreig, one mark; Kerowsoyre, one mark; Gartloskin, one mark; Glenranskill, three marks; Glenvey, two marks; Browneregyn, Drum-tyrenoch, Dalsmerill, Lagnadaise, and Enyngcokalach, four marks and a half; Kildallok and Lonochane, a mark and a half; Ellerich and Arenarroch, two marks; Cralekill, Macharhanys, Darbrekane, and Clagkeile, thirteen marks—all in the lordship of Kyntyr (and chiefly if not wholly in South Kintyre) and sheriffdom of Tarbart, and all claimed by Maknele.² In 1493 the possessions of the Lord of the Isles were again forfeited.³ In 1494 the sum of £6, 13s. 4d. was paid to a messenger 'to passe to summond Sir Johne of the Illis of tresone in Kintyre, and for the expensis of the wites.'⁴ This John of the Isles, surnamed Cathanach or warlike,⁵ and apparently the same with John of Ila who in 1481 received the grant of lands in Kintyre, was in 1500 executed at Edinburgh along with three of his sons.⁶

In the year 1503 it was ordained by the parliament of Scotland, that the justice air of Bute and Arane, Knapdale, Kyntyr, and Mekill Cumray, should be held at Ar or Rothissay, as the king pleased.⁷ In 1506 Archibald Earl of Argyle was appointed by King James IV. justiciar and chamberlain of the lands and lordships of Knapdail and Kintyre.⁸ In the same year King James IV. twice granted to David, bishop of Ergile, all the unlaws, compositions, escheats, and other profits belonging to the king in the next justice air of all the bounds of Ergile, Lorne, Knapdale, Kyntyre, and Cowall, and of all the other justice airs and sheriff courts within the same bounds, during the king's pleasure.⁹ In 1513 King James V. appointed Colin, Earl of Argyle, justiciar, sheriff, coroner, bailie, and chamberlain of Kintyre and Knapdail, South and North.¹⁰ In 1515 Colin Earl of Argyle, Sir John Campbell his brother, and several others, with their friends and others inhabiting the lands under the Earl's jurisdiction within the same bounds, received from King James V. a remission of all their crimes except treason.¹¹ In 1526 Archibald Campbell, son and heir apparent of Earl Colin, had from King James V. a grant of the lands of Kintyre, with the office of bailie of both Kintiris, and the keeping of the castle of Downawartich when it should be built.¹ In 1531 Archibald Earl of Argyle, at the request of King James V., resigned his office of chamberlain of Kintyre.² In 1536 the lands and lordship of Kintyre South and North were part of the crown lands in the lordship of the Isles.³ In 1539 Alane M'Clane, brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, was appointed by King James V. 'Tossochdoir of all Kintyre fra Mule to Altasynnoch.'⁴ In 1540 the lands of both Kintyres, along with the lordship of the Isles, were inalienably annexed to the crown.⁵ At the same time the castle of Dunavertich appears to have been occupied by a royal garrison.⁶ In 1541 there was paid from the king's treasury the sum of £20 'to twa gunnaris of the castell of Dunavertiche for thair feis this yere to cum.'⁷

In the year 1542 Neill M'Neill, natural son of the deceased Neill M'Neill of Geya, was appointed by King James V. to the office of Tossochdoir of all Kintyre within the bounds above mentioned.⁸ In the same year King James V., for the good service rendered to him by Archibald Earl of Argyle in France and in Scotland in resisting his old enemies of England, granted to Archibald Campbell his son, among other offices, those of justiciar, sheriff, coroner, and chamberlain of the lordships of Knapdalis and Kyntyris, resigned by the Earl.⁹ In 1543 Queen Mary granted to Earl Archibald her lands of South Kyntire and North Kyntire, with the keeping of the castle of Dunavertie, for twelve years.¹⁰ In 1545 Queen Mary, for the good service done in her minority by James Makconnyll of Dunnyveyg and Glennys, especially in opposing the English the ancient enemies of the kingdom, granted to him the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, with remainder successively to his brothers Angus, Colin, Charles, Alexander, and Donald Gorme M'Connyll, and to his own male heirs whomsoever.¹¹ This grant included, besides various lands in the Isles and other parts of Argyle, the following lands in South and North Kintyre:—four marklands of the Mule of Kintyre, two marks of Karschaych, twenty shillings of Glennedull, one mark of Auchenasawile, half a mark of Lyall, half a mark of Forleyne, three marks of Carryne, one mark of Glenmowill, two marks of Bargadullmoir, four marks eight shillings and fourpence of Collynglongfort, Ballevenane, and Dalcrownacht, two marks of Leupenstrath, one mark of Mukloch, five shillings of Dalsmyrrell and Langnodaf, two marks of Corseyne and Barfarna, one mark of Aradull, one mark of Sokach, one mark of Gartnagarach, twenty shillings of Karranemoir, two marks of Kilcattane and Crysloch, four marks of Machirmoir, two marks of Ramwillis, two marks of Edyn, two marks of Fachog, one mark of Karrenbeg, one mark of Knokstapill, five marks and a half of Polmullene, three marks of Glenherwe, five marks of Kildawe, two marks of Glenmukloch, three marks of Kanloch, one mark of Kilmoir,

Traces of the old castle of Dunaverty, mentioned in the above grants, remain on a precipitous rock at the mouth of the Coniglen, overhanging and nearly surrounded by the sea, opposite the island of Sanda, on the south coast of Kintyre.⁵

Kintyre was a rural deanery of the bishoprick of Argyle, and occurs as such in records as early as the middle of the thirteenth century.⁶ 'In Cantyr,' says an old authority, 'are ten paroch kirks more than the abbay of Saidill.'⁷ modern parish of Campbelton, and Kilcolmkill and Kilblane are united under the modern name Southend.¹

The ancient parish of Kilcolmkill appears to have included that portion of Southend which lies west of the valley of the Coniglen, its coast-line commencing in the neighbourhood of the castle of Dunaverty, and terminating considerably to the southward of Inenbeg Point. The valley of Glenbrecky (the Glenbrack of Blaeu, and Glenbreagrie of Macfarlane), running parallel with the Coniglen, intersects the eastern part of the parish. On the west and south it is hilly, attaining its greatest height at Knockmoy near the southern termination of its rocky coast, the well-known Mull of Kintyre, the Epidium Promontorium of old historians. 'From the mountayne of this promontorie a man may discern the corneland and housis in Ireland.'²

Before the year 1326 the church of Saint Collomkill (dedicated to Saint Columba) in Kyntire was granted to the canons of Whithern by Patrick Makschillingis and Finlach his wife.³ In 1326 the grant was confirmed by King Robert Bruce,⁴ and in 1451 by King James II.⁵

The church stood on a sea-terrace in the south-east corner of the parish, a quarter of a mile from Keil House.⁶ Its walls are still nearly entire.⁷ It is seventy-two feet in length and only fifteen in breadth.⁸ In Glenadle there is a chapel with a cemetery and holy well.⁹

Between the years 1306 and 1329 King Robert Bruce granted to Sir John of Menteith the lands of Glenbeeriche and Aulisaye in Kintyre.¹⁰

The four marklands of the Mule of Kyntyre, the two marklands of Karschaych, the twenty shillinglands of Glennedull, the one markland of Auchenasawile, the half mark of Lyall, the half mark of Forleyne, the three marks of Carryne, the one mark of Glenmowill, the two marks of Bargadullmoir, the four marks eight shillings and fourpence of Collynglongfort, Ballevenane, and Dalcrownacht, the two marks of Leupenstrath, the one mark of Mukloch, and probably some other lands in this parish, formed part of the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, granted by Queen Mary to James Makconnyll of Dunnyveyg and Glennys in 1545, and again to the same person by Francis and Mary in 1558, and granted to Archibald his son and apparent heir by Queen Mary in 1564.¹¹

Sthrone of the old extent of one mark, Glinadill of the same extent, and perhaps some other lands in this parish, were in 1562 granted, and in 1563 and 1564 confirmed by Queen Mary to the same James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis.¹²

In 1549 there was a castle at Carrick Skeath (Carskay), apparently situated on an island.¹³ In the churchyard at Keil there are several tombstones commemorating the M'Neils of Caiskey.¹⁴

KILBLANE.

Kirkblane¹—Kilblane²—Kilblaas³—Kilblain.⁴ Deanery of Kintyre.

THIS parish appears to have included that portion of Southend which lies in and east of the Coniglen, together with the group of islets off its south coast, named Sanda, the Sheep Isle, and Glunamore.⁵ Its coast is low and sandy.

Of this church, dedicated to Blane, a saint of considerable note in the fifth century, we have no early notice. In the year 1527 Sir Morice Makneile rector of Kirkblane died, and was succeeded by Master James Haswell, the patronage being at that time apparently vested in the crown.⁶ In 1538 the rectory of Kilblane was resigned by Sir Robert Montgomery, and Sir James M'Gauchane was presented to the charge by King James V.⁷

The church stood on the right bank of the Coniglen, by which it has been washed away together with the greater part of the burying-ground.⁸ The church of Southend, built in 1774, stands near the spot.⁹ Near Ballishear on the lands of Machririach are the remains of a religious house dedicated to Saint Coivin.¹⁰ On the island of Sanda—named by the Danes Havin or Avona (which Buchanan interprets Portuosa, full of havens), by Fordun Isle Awyn, by other chroniclers Albania, by Pont Yl Avon or Sanda, and still called Aven by the highlanders¹¹—are the ruins of a chapel dedicated to Saint Ninian.¹² On the southern coast of Sanda there are traces of a building associated with traditions of Fingal; and on one of the neighbouring islands there are traces of another.¹³ Kilmachanach, Kildavie, Kilchattan, and Kilchalmanel, marked by Pont and Blaeu upon the mainland, seem to indicate the sites of ancient churches.¹⁴

The lands of Macquharrymore of Downnaverty, and others, granted in 1481 by King James III. to Tarlach Makalexander, with the stewardry of the lands of Kyntir, were nearly all within this parish.¹⁵ The same lands, together with those of Karranemoir, Kilcattane, and

In 1499 King James IV. granted to Colin Makauchern the two marklands of Killelan, two marks of Pennygogyn, two marks of Gartloskin, and two marks of Ellarg and Arynaskawsach in the lordship of South Kintyre, with the office of mayr of fee of that lordship, which were formerly held by him of John Lord of the Isles.² In 1511 King James granted the same lands and office to Malcolm Makaucherne the son of Colin, reserving to the latter the franktenement for life.³ In 1552 Queen Mary granted to James M'Conill of Donyveg and Glennys the non-entry and other dues of the four marklands of Kyleyland, the two marks of Gartleskane, and the two marks of Ellerik, in South Kintyre, which had been in the Queen's hands since the decease of Angus M'Cacharne the son of the deceased Malcolm M'Cacharne.⁴ In 1554 the same lands, formerly belonging to John Roy Makcachrane, were appraised, and afterwards sold to James Makconnell of Donyveg and Glennis, for a certain sum of money, including the sum of eighty-two marks as the fee of William Hardy, Unicorn Herald, the appriser.⁵

The two marklands of Kilblaine and others were in 1562 granted, and in 1563 and 1564 confirmed by Queen Mary to James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis.⁶

The bishops of Galloway or monks of Whiterne had anciently possessions in this parish. In the year 1584 Patrick commendator of Whitherne, with the consent of the convent, granted to Archibald Campbell, Lord of the fief of Argyll, the lands of Saint Ninian in Kintyre, namely, six marks of Machrerioch with its shealing (or shealings), five marks of Blastill and Edwin, twenty shillings of Knokmurriell, twenty shillings of Killoshourchran, one mark of Penlachna, one mark of Pennanshelach, twenty shillings of Auchroy, twenty shillings of the isle of Sanda, three marks of Belligrigan, two marks of Drummoire—extending in all to sixteen pounds.⁷ In 1619 Archibald Oig M'Connell was served heir to his grandfather Archibald M'Connell, alias Angus Elochoun, of Macrereache, in the same lands.⁸ In 1632 they were erected by Andrew bishop of Galloway, in favour of Archibald Earl of Argyll, into the tenantry of Machrerioch, the manor place of which was to be the chief messuage, for yearly payment of £20, and of twenty shillings in augmentation of the rental.⁹ In 1640 James Levingston, Keeper of the Privy Seal, had a nineteen years' lease of the lands and teinds of Saint Ninian, belonging to the bishoprick of Galloway, and in 1648 made a disposition of them in favour of Archibald Marquess of Argyll, which was in the same year confirmed by King Charles I.¹⁰

In the year 1547, when James M'Conaill of Dunnawaik and the Glinnis had joined the Earl of Lennox in the English interest, it was stipulated on his part, in a letter addressed to the Lord Deputy of Ireland, that his Lordship should send to his assistance along with Lennox a fleet and army 'to the Yll of Sanday besyid Kintyir at Sanct Patrikis day next to cown.'¹¹

KILKIVAN.

Kilkowan¹— Kilchoman, Kilchevan.² Deanery of Kintyre.

THIS parish, which appears to have been at one time annexed to the parishes of Kilcolmkill and Kilblane,³ has for a considerable period been included in the parish of Campbelton, of which it forms chiefly that portion lying between Machrihanish Bay and the old parish of Kilcolmkill. In 1624, after the union of Kilkerran, Kilmichael, and Kilchousland, it seems to have been a separate parish.⁴ From 1636 to 1671 it appears to have been united with the parishes first named.⁵ The date of its annexation to Campbelton is not known. Its general appearance is hilly with a sandy coast.

The early history of this church is unknown. Its name seems to indicate its dedication to Saint Coemgen or Keivin, who, about the year 600 is said to have founded the abbey of Glendalough in Leinster.⁶ It would seem to have been the property of the bishop. In the year 1539 the perpetual vicarage of Kilkowan in Kintyre was held by Sir John Hawik chaplain, in the event of whose demission the presentation was given by King James V., during the vacancy of the see of Argyle, to Sir John Flemyng chaplain.⁷ During the seventeenth century the teinds were in the hands of the bishop of Argyle.⁸ In 1636 they were valued along with those of Kilcolmkill and Kilblane.⁹

The church stood on the side of a lofty range of hills about a mile south from Machrihanish Bay.¹⁰ Part of the building, which in 1794 was in good preservation, still remains.¹¹

Before the year 1475 John Lord of the Isles, and Angus his son, granted to the Abbey of Sagadull the lands of Knochantebeg, and twelve unciate of land called Kellipull.¹² In 1508 the grant was confirmed by King James IV., who erected these lands and others in favour of David bishop of Argyle into the barony of Sagadull.¹³ In 1556 the two marklands of Knockantibeg, and eight shillings of Kellabill, along with the rest of the barony, were sold by James bishop of Argyle to James Duke of Chastellarault.¹⁴

In 1481 the five marklands of the two Tereferguse and Largbane, six marks of the two Knockantis and Calybole, five marks of Le Lossit and Glenhawindee, four marks of Ballegrogane and Cragok, one mark of Lagnaeraig, and other lands apparently in this parish, were granted by

 Kilkerane¹²—Lohead in Kintyre.¹³ Deanery of Kintyre. (Map, No. 4.)

In the year 1617 a parliamentary commission for the plantation of kirks united the parishes of Kilcharrane, Kilmichell, and Kilchusland, and in 1621 another commission was empowered to erect a church for serving the united parish.¹⁴ The church appears to have been opened only in 1638. At a subsequent period Kilkivan was added to the united parish, afterwards named Lohead, and at a later period Campbelton, but still locally known as Cean-loch-chille-Chiaran (the head of Loch Kilkerran.)¹⁵

The parish of Kilkerran appears to have included that part of Campbelton which lies between Loch Kilkerran and the parish of Kilblane, together with the island at the mouth of the loch, anciently termed the island of 'Sanct Barre,'¹⁶ and in modern times Davar or Devar.¹⁷ Its general aspect is hilly with a rocky coast.

Saint Kiaran or Queran, whose name this church bore, appears to have lived in the sixth century, and to have preached in Kintyre, where a cave on Loch Kilkerran still retains his name.¹⁸ In the year 604 or 605 Aidan King of the Scots is said to have died in Kintyre, and to have been buried at Kilcheran.¹⁹ Before the year 1250 a charter of Rotheric the son of Reginald is witnessed by Gilbert the parson of Kilchiaran.²⁰ Before the same year Malcolm was rector; and Engus the son of Douenald lord of Hyle, for the weal of the soul of King Alexander, granted to the monks of Paisley 'the church of Saint Queran in his land which is called Kentyir.'¹ In 1253 Alan bishop of Argyle confirmed to the monks for their proper uses the church of Kelkeran in Kentyir, 'granted to them by Engus the son of Douenald long before the said Alan was called and elected to the cure of the church of Argyle,' saving his fourth part, which was mensal, and all episcopal rights.² The charter granted by Engus was inspected and certified by James the Steward of Scotland, Sir Robert treasurer of the church of Glasgow, Master Thomas Nicholay subdean, and Master Alexander Kennidi one of the canons.³ In 1261 Malcolm rector of the church of Saint Queran in Kentyir—who with the consent of Engus the son of Douenald, the original patron, had in the time of Bishop Alan's predecessor (before A.D. 1250) bound himself to pay yearly from that church to the monks of Paisley a pension of a weight of iron commonly called a stone (petra)—having failed to pay, and being sued at law, and repenting of his disobedience, gave satisfaction for his non-payment, and together with the abbot of Paisley submitted himself to the determination of Bishop Alan, who ordained, that in order to his complete absolution from the payment of the said pension down to the day of the bishop's decision, he should pay to the monks from the said church one pound of wax or sixpence yearly at Paisley during the holding of Glasgow fair.⁴ In the year 1265 the church of Kylkeran with its chapels and lands was confirmed to the monks by Pope Clement IV.⁵ In 1269 Laurence bishop of Argyle confirmed to them 'the mother church of Saint Queran in Kintyir, which is called Kilkeran,' with its chapels and pertinents, granted by Engus the son of Douenald, and confirmed by Alan the bishop's predecessor.⁶ About the year 1294 Alexander of Hyle, the son and heir of Engus lord of Hyle, confirmed the grant of his father.⁷ In 1299, on Thursday after the feast of Saint Simon and Saint Jude, in a case litigated between the abbot of Passelay and Laurence bishop of Argyle, in the High Church at Glasgow, before Sir Robert the treasurer and Sir Robert Stampet a canon, commissioners of the bishop of Saint Andrews, who was constituted by the Pope sole judge in the matter, there appeared Master Nicholas rector of the church of Saint Modan, procurator for the bishop of Argyle, and Venald a monk of Paisley for the abbot, when the case was settled as follows:—The bishop's procurator admitted that the presentation to the vicarage of the church of Saint Querin in Kentyir belonged to the abbot of Paisley, and promised on his oath that Sir Angus, who acted as vicar, should resign the vicarage into the bishop's hands, and that the resignation, sealed with the bishop's seal, should be placed in the hands of the monks before the feast of Saint Andrew the apostle; and the abbot's procurator also promised on oath that on receiving the resignation the monks should present Angus the chaplain to the vicarage.⁸ The bishop's procurator further promised, that the bishop should grant to the monks a letter regarding the vicarage of the church of Saint Queran similar to that which he had granted them regarding the vicarage of Saint Finan in Kethromecongal.¹ In 1327 the church of Kylkeran was confirmed to the monks by Andrew bishop of Argyle.² In the year 1351 the monks of Paisley complained to John abbot of Dunfermelyn, and Andrew abbot of Neubotle, who in 1344 by a bull of Pope Clement VI. had been appointed conservators and judges for redressing the grievances and defending the rights of the Cluniac order in Scotland—that Martin bishop of Argyle occupied and usurped against their will their churches of Saint Colmanel, Saint Queran, and Saint Finan, within his diocese, and the tithes and fruits of the same, and was inflicting on them various other grievancés contrary to the privileges and liberty of the Cluniac order; and they petitioned the delegates in virtue of their office to redress these grievances.³ In the same year the delegates, considering the difficulties that bishop Martin would experience in appearing before them because of his distance from their residences and the dangers of travelling, and desirous of saving to all parties labour and expense, appointed as their commissioners in the case Master John Penny subdean of Glasgow, and Nigel of Carrotherys, Malcolm Kennedy, and Henry of Mundaville, canons.⁴ The bishop was accordingly cited to appear before the commissioners in the cathedral church of Glasgow on the 30th of May 1362, to answer to the monks or their procurator, and to submit to the law; but proving contumacious, even though present in Glasgow on the day appointed and for several days previous, he was forthwith suspended from his office by the commissioners, who then appointed Richard Daurog rector of Kyrkmichael, Walter Rwl vicar of Herskyn, and Thomas of Arthurly vicar of Dalysel, to wait on him within three days after receiving their mandate, to intimate his suspension, and to cite him anew to appear before the commissioners in the cathedral church of Glasgow on the 14th of the following June.⁵ On the 9th of that month however the matter was through the intervention of friends brought to an amicable arrangement.⁶ It was then agreed—That the bishop of Argyle should without delay cause to be delivered to the abbot or his procurator the sum of thirty-three shillings and fourpence, which he had ordered to be sequestrated because the abbot alleging his privilege of exemption had not attended his synod; that with regard to the church of Kylkeran he should cause to be relaxed the sequestration of its fruits which he had made on account of the default of its repair, and should duly answer to the monks for the same; that the monks, as bound, should repair the church, and the bishop should bind those who were engaged to the monks for repairing it to fulfil their engagement on pain of ecclesiastical censure; that the bishop should anew receive and admit to the church the present incumbent by virtue of the presentation of the monks; and that for the future he should not repel, but rather benignantly admit the presentation by them to the churches which they held within the diocese of Argyle, provided however that they presented to him as diocesan qualified persons within term of law—the bishop moreover protesting, that by the present agreement he did not in any way prejudice his successors, if and in how far they should think their interests concerned, and promising that he should cause the present agreement to be publicly expounded and proclaimed in the mother tongue in every church and place of his diocese in which there was any question concerning the things premised, the people being assembled either for that or for any other purpose.¹ In 1455 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, confirmed to the monks of Paisley the rectory of the church of 'Saint Kylkeran in Kyntire,' with liberty to set and dispose of it according to their pleasure.² In 1489 Robert bishop of Argyle sequestrated the fruits of the churches of Colmanell, Kylkeran, and Kyllelan, belonging to the monks of Paisley; and James abbot of Culros, being appointed by the Pope judge and conservator in the case, on the 1st of February commissioned John Drummond and Duncan Bulle, dean and archdeacon of Dunblane, James Broiss canon of Brechin, and Alexander Cant canon of Moray, as his sub-delegates.³ The bishop however proving contumacious, and failing to appear before the commissioners, on the 4th of February they relaxed the sequestration, and appointed the curates of Dunbartan, Donowne, and Kylmon, to enjoin the bishop, on pain of excommunication by bell, book, and candle, to obey the decision—which on the 9th of March was done in their name at the town of Dunbartan by Alexander Clugston notary public.⁴ In 1491, the bishop still continuing refractory, on the 17th of April, in presence of the people assembled for worship in the church of Glasgow, and of several clerical witnesses, he was publicly excommunicated by the some notary at the parochial altar.⁵ The whole proceedings as recorded were afterwards inspected by John abbot of Culros, the successor of James, and by him ordered to be reduced in the form of a notarial transumpt.⁶ In 1561 the church of Keilcheirran appears to have belonged to the abbot of Iona and the bishop of Argyle, in the respective proportions of two-thirds and one-third.⁷ In 1607 and 1614 the whole teinds of Kilkerran belonged to the bishop of Argyle;⁸ but in 1621 the parsonage teinds belonged to James Earl of Abircorne, Lord Paisley and Kilpatrick, as heir to his father Claud in the lordship and barony of Paisley.⁹ At the new erection of the chapter of Argyle by King Charles II. in 1662 the minister at Lohead in Kintyre was made one of the prebendaries.¹⁰

The church stood on the south side of Loch Kilkerran.¹¹ The burying-ground still remains.¹²

Of the lands granted by King James III. to John of Ila, Lord of the Isles, in the year 1481, the lands of Killewnane, Owgill, Auchnaslesok, Achenacork, Kenochane, the two Knokrenochis, Glenmorele, Glenranskill, and probably a few others, lay in this parish.¹³ In 1512 King James IV. assigned to David bishop of Ergile the 'fermes, bere, and aitis,' of the lands of Kilyownane and Loched, paid by the tenants before the last leasing (assedatio) made at Kilkerrane, to be held during the King's pleasure, for the maintenance of the bishop and the keepers of the castle built by him within Kintyre, until he should be 'better providit of vittalis' in other places.¹⁴ In 1513 King James renewed this grant.¹⁵ In the years 1545, 1558, and 1564, the three marklands of Kanloch, and perhaps a few others in Kilkerran, formed part of the barony of Bar in North Kintyre.¹ In the year 1562 the four marks and a half of Wgill, the four marks of Killiecrist and Seasgang, the two marks of Ballemeanach, the two marks of Killewnane, the two marks of Ballenabrahath, the one mark of Kildalaig, the two marks of Glenranskillmoir, the four marks of Knokreawnoch-moir, the one mark of Auchnaslisseg, the three marks of Knokreowch-beg, and others, were included in a grant by Queen Mary to James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis, which in 1563 and 1564 was confirmed to him by the same Queen.²

Before the year 1449 Alexander Lord of the Isles granted to the monks of Sagadull 'the island of Sanct Barre with its pertinents lying at Loch Kilkerane.'³ In 1508 King James IV. confirmed the grant in favour of David bishop of Argyle, erecting the whole of the abbey lands into the barony of Sagadull.⁴ In 1556 Elleindawar, of the old extent of half a mark, was sold as part of the barony by James bishop of Argyle to James Duke of Chastellaravlt.⁵ Lochkilcarayne, according to an authority before quoted, is 'a saif harbour for ships, having in mouth the iland called Iland Davar.'⁶

In the year 1597 an act of the Scottish parliament ordained, that three burghs and burgh towns should be erected in the Highlands and Isles, namely, in Kintyre, Lochaber, and Lewis, an act however which does not seem to have been carried into effect.⁷ In 1609 the Lords of Exchequer discharged Archibald Earl of Argyle from paying the fermes of the lordship of Kintyre for the years 1608-1612, on condition that he should within five years 'plant a burgh within the bounds of Kintyre, to be inhabited by lowlandmen and trafficking burgesses,' and also to be a royal burgh.⁸ This the Earl bound himself to do, and gave as cautioners for fulfilling his engagement Sir John Campbell of Lundie his brother, and Sir John Campbell of Calder.⁹ In 1614 an application by the Earl to have the term allowed for building a burgh extended for other three years was refused by the commissioners of the crown rents.¹⁰ In 1667 the town of Loch-head in the lordship of Kintyre, erected into a burgh of barony to be called the burgh of Campbelton, was granted to another Earl Archibald as part of the earldom which he had resigned into the hands of King Charles II.¹¹ In 1700 Campbelton was made a royal burgh by King William III. The charter of erection recites the statute of 1597, and states that Inverary, distant about sixty miles, was the only royal burgh in Argyleshire.¹² It fixes the boundary of the burgh thus — 'The Loch of Campbelton, formerly called the Loch of Kilkerran, on the east; the lands of Kilkerran and Corshill on the south; the lands of Moy on the west; and the lands of Ballingregan and Drumore on the north.'¹³

King James IV., in order apparently to subdue and keep in order the highlanders, built a castle, variously named his 'castle of Kintyre,' his 'new castle in Kyntire,' and his 'new castle of Kilkerane in Kintyre,' at which he resided for some part of the year 1498.¹ It appears to have been unfinished in 1503, when the parliament of Scotland appointed the justices-depute and sheriffs of the South Isles to sit either at Tarbart or at Louch Kinkerane.² In 1536 the castle was fortified by King James V., who left in it a garrison to overawe the Macdonalds, but before the King's ships had left the harbour the castle was retaken by the highlanders.³ In 1615 it was held by the same clan under their chief, Sir James Macdonald of Dunnyveg.⁴ Early in the last century the castle was standing,⁵ but the present parish church of Campbelton, built in 1780, now occupies its site.⁶

At the head of Loch Kilkerran stood a castle built by the Earl of Argyle, which in 1618 by an arrangement of the barons of Argyle for the good rule of the earldom, under direction of the Privy Council, was committed to the keeping of Hector Macneill of Carskeay.⁷ This castle was standing in the last century.⁸

In the centre of the burgh of Campbelton there stands an ancient cross, exhibiting some beautiful scroll-work, traditionally referred to the twelfth century, and said to have been brought from Iona at the Reformation. It bears the following inscription in Saxon character — *Hec est crux Domini Yvari M. H. (M: ?) eachyrna quondam rectoris de Kyrecan et Domini Andr. nati ejus rectoris de Kilcoman qui hanc crucem fieri faciebat.*⁹

KILMICHAEL.

Ecclesia Sancti Michaelis¹⁰—Kilmichell.¹¹ Deanery of Kintyre. (Map, No. 5.)

In 1617 Kilmichell was by an act of the Scottish parliament united to Kilcharrane and Kilchusland.¹²

This parish appears to have lain to the westward of Loch Kilkerran, and to have been mainly composed of the large plain called the Laggan of Kintyre, which stretches between that loch and Machrihanish Bay, and has an elevation of only forty feet above the sea.

In the year 1508 King James IV., compassionating the poverty of the bishoprick of Argyle, which was situated among wild and uncivilised people (sylvestres et indomitas gentes), granted in mortmain to that bishoprick for the honour and maintenance of its episcopal dignity, and

The church stood about two miles north-west from Campbelton.⁴ In the year 1794 it had been nearly destroyed by the removal of the material for building houses,⁵ and no vestige of it now remains.⁶

Between the years 1329 and 1380 John the son of Angus, Lord of the Isles, granted to the monks of Sagadull two marklands called Lesenmarg, and the grant was in 1508 confirmed by King James IV. to David bishop of Argyle, when he erected the barony of Sagadull in favour of that prelate.⁷ In the year 1481 King James III. granted to John of Isla, Lord of the Isles, the thirteen marklands of Cralekill, Macharhanys, Darbrekane, and Clagkeile.⁸ In 1539 King James V. granted to Alane M'Clane, the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, the nonentry and other dues of the sixteen marklands of Maucharrehanis, Clachkeill, Crailligille, Darraychane, and Lesnerk.⁹ In 1542 the same king granted these lands to Neill M'Neill, the natural son of the deceased Neill M'Neill of Geya.¹⁰ In 1552 the nonentry and other dues of the same lands were granted by Queen Mary to Hector M'Clane, natural son of the deceased Alane M'Clane the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, with remainder to the latter.¹¹ In 1553 by order of Queen Mary the same lands, formerly belonging to Malcolm Makneill of Geya, were appraised in favour of the same Hector M'Clane for the nonentry duties due to the Queen for sixty years, and the fee of the appriser.¹² In 1554 they were sold by Neill M'Neill of Geya to James Makconnell of Dunnaveg and Glennis, and Agnes Campbell his wife, with remainder to his brothers Angus, Coill, Alexander Og, and Sorell Boy Makconnell, and to his own heirs whomsoever, on which followed a crown charter by Queen Mary.¹³ In 1619 John M'Connell was served heir in the same lands to his father Archibald, who was a natural son of Angus M'Connell of Dunavaig.¹⁴

In 1481 King James III. granted to Tarlach Makalexander for life the two marklands of Auchnaglek (or Achalik), the two marks of Kilmichell, and the four marks of Le Crag.¹⁵ The same lands were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, granted by Queen Mary to James M'Connyll of Donyveg and Glennis in the year 1545, granted of new by Queen Mary and her husband Francis to the same James M'Connyll in 1558, and granted by the same

In the year 1617 Kilchusland was united to Kileharrane and Kilmichell.⁹

This parish seems to have extended in length from the north shore of Loch Kilkerran to the borders of Glensaddell, and in breadth about half way across Kintyre. Its general features are those of the district, a hilly interior with a rocky coast.

In the year 1499 the parsonage of Glenquhissilan became vacant by the death of Alexander M'Rannell Mor M'Donell, and Master Adam Colquhoun was presented to the cure by King James IV.¹⁰ In 1507 the same king granted a presentation to the rectory of Kilquhislane in favour of Michael Colquhoun, when it should be vacant by the demission of Master Adam Colquhoun.¹¹ This church appears to have been dedicated to a contemporary of Saint Columba who preached and was martyred in Kintyre,¹² and to be the church of Saint Constantine which in 1508 was together with the church of Saint Michael granted by King James IV. to the bishop of Argyle as a mensal church.¹³ In 1607 and 1614 the teinds of Kilchusland were leased to Archibald Earl of Argyle by the bishop Mr. Neill Campbell, and in 1618 the lease was extended to seventy-six years by the commissioners for the plantation of kirks.¹⁴

The church, whose walls are still entire, stands on a rocky eminence overhanging the sea not far from the mouth of Loch Kilkerran.¹⁵ There was probably a church or chapel at Kildonnell in the northern part of the parish.¹⁶

of Ardnamurchan for his good service done in taking John Lord of the Isles, his son, and their accomplices, and for renouncing the twenty-three marklands of Mid Kintyre with the office of steward and other lands.¹ In 1542, on the ground that the office of coroner of the island and bounds of North Kintyre belonged heritably to Ewir M'Cay More and his predecessors, being immediately held of the Lords of the Isles from time immemorial, and that their writs had been destroyed during the wars and commotions in that province, King James V. granted to the said Ewir the said office and four marks of Armegill and Vughedall in Myd-Kyntyre belonging to it for the usual dues, provided that Ewir and his heirs should be faithful to the King in all time coming.² In 1545, 1558, and 1564, the two mark lands of Uggadul-Mackay were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre.³

In the year 1545 Queen Mary granted to James M'Connyll of Dunneveyg and Glennys, as part of the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, the three marklands of Ballegregane, three marks of Ascomwlmoir, three marks of Ascomwlbeg, three marks of Barrascomwl, eight marks of Smarbe, four marks of Peyninvir, three marks of Laggane, three marks of Callebull, four marks of Rannochane, four marks of Drumgarroch, three marks of Gartgrellane, three marks of Kilkadame, four marks of Ardincrosch, two marks of Ballochgir, two marks of Kildonnen, and some other lands apparently in this parish.⁴ In 1558 Francis and Mary, King and Queen of Scots, renewed the grant on account of the destruction of M'Connyll's charters, and in 1564 Queen Mary gave the same lands to Archibald M'Coneill his son and apparent heir.⁵

KILCHENZIE appears to have been united to Killorow (or Kilmarrow) before or about the period of the Reformation.⁹ It was united to Killean before the year 1636.¹⁰

This parish seems to have included but a very small portion of the modern parish of Killean, of which it forms the southern extreme. It has the hilly interior and alluvial coast that characterize this part of Kintyre.

Of the parsonage of the church of Skeirkenze the monks of Iona had two-thirds and the bishop of the Isles one-third.¹¹ In 1561 the whole belonged to the bishop as commendator of Iona.¹² In 1609 Alexander, commendator of Ardchattan and heritable proprietor of the teinds of Skeirchenzie, with the consent of his wife Catharine M'Donald, granted to

Lachlan M'Lauchlan of Killorow, and to his son Charles M'Lauchlan V'Eachen, the parsonage of the kirk of Skeirchenzie, extending to three-fourths of the teinds, for yearly payment of twenty-six shillings and eightpence Scots, with six shillings and eightpence in augmentation, to be paid at the kirk of Kilmartine.¹ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Archibald in the tithes of the church of Skeirchenzie and Killorow.²

The church, dedicated to Saint Kenneth, Caineeh, or Kenny, an abbot in Ireland, stood near the southern boundary of the parish, about four miles from Campbellton.³ Some very imperfect remains of it are still to be seen.⁴

Of the lands composing the barony of Bar in North Kintyre in the years 1545, 1558, and 1564, the four marks of Clangart, four marks of Corphetauchane, four marks of the two Balmowllenis, two marks of Drummoir-Nawbodach, and four marks of Drummorelannaye, lay in Kilchenzie or in the neighbouring parish of Killorow.⁵ The forty marklands of Skeirkenze in Kintyre, formerly belonging to the monks of Iona, were in 1561 the property of the bishop of the Isles as commendator of that monastery.⁶ In 1576 the lands of Skeirchenzie including the four marks of Puttychan, four marks of Killemorich, three marks of Skeirblaen, sixteen shillings and eightpence of Cargleish, sixteen shillings and eightpence of Largbeg, Kilvorow, Kilmacroy, Laggalreif, and others, extending in all to a £30 land of old extent, with the heritable office of bailie of these lands and of the regality of the monastery of Icolmkill, lying within that regality and in the lordship of Kintyre, were granted by John bishop of the Isles to Colin Earl of Argyle and Dame Agnes Keith his Countess.⁷

John, and two of the church of Saint Mary, in honour of both these saints.¹ In the year 1507 the grant was confirmed to David bishop of Argyle by King James IV., on account of the singular devotion which he bore towards the blessed confessor Saint Moloc, patron of the cathedral church of Lismore.² There appears to be no farther record of this church till after the Reformation. In 1609 its teinds were probably included with those of Kilchenzie in a grant by Alexander commendator of Ardhattan to Lauchlan M'Lauchlan of Killorow.³ In 1631 John Campbell, the son of the commendator, was served heir to his father in the church, teinds, and advowson of Kilmaro in Kintyr.⁴ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Archibald in the teinds of the church of Skeirchenzie and Killorow.⁵ In 1697 John Campbell of Ardhattan was served heir to his father Archibald, 'fear' of Ardhattan, in the property of the church, parish, teinds, and patronage of Kilmarow in Kintyre.⁶

The church appears to have stood near the south end of the parish, nearly due north from the church of Kilchenzie.⁷

Deanery of Kintyre. (Map, No. 9.)

IN 1753 the district of Saddell was disjoined from the parish of Killean and united with Skipness into a new parish.¹³

The old parish of Killean appears to have extended across the whole breadth of Kintyre, and to have been bounded on the south by Glenbarr and Glensaddell, and on the north by a line stretching from near Runahuran Point on the west to the neighbourhood of Cour and Sperasaig on the east. Its western division gradually rises from a level alluvial shore to the height of 700 or 800 feet, the eastern being chiefly composed of heathy hills alternating with deep valleys. It has numerous small lakes and streams, and in the south between Glensaddell and Glenbarr rises the mountain Beinn-an-tuirk, 2170 feet above the level of the sea.

In the year 1243 King Alexander II., compassionating the poverty of the bishoprick of Argyle, granted to the bishop the church of Kilican in Kintyr with all its lands and other pertinents.¹⁴ Before the year 1251 Rotheric, the son of Reginald lord of Kyntire, granted in honour of Saint Mary and Saint John, for the service of the church of Saint John in Kyntire, five pennylands, namely, three from the same church of Saint John (Killean), and two from the church of Saint Mary (Kilmarow.)¹ In 1507 both these grants were confirmed to Bishop David by King James IV.² In 1545 a deed of Donald, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, is witnessed by Sir Archibald Macgillavray vicar of Killane.³

The church stood on the west coast opposite the island of Cara.⁴ Its remains, still nearly entire, are in the form of a cross.⁵ There appears to have been a church or chapel at Kilmichael in the district of Carradell, and another at Kilmory near the church.⁶ The walls of a chapel at Tyanloam, to the north of the church, remain entire.⁷

Before the middle of the thirteenth century the abbey of Sagadull, afterwards termed Sandale and Saddell, was founded for monks of the Cistercian order by Reginald the son of Sorlet (Somerled), who styled himself King of the Isles and Lord of Ergile and Kyntire.⁸ He granted to the monks the lands of Glensagadull and the twelve marks of Baltebeam in the lordship of Kyntire, and the twenty marklands of Cesken in the isle of Arane.⁹ Roderic the son of Reginald granted them the lands of Glentorsadull and Vgladull in the lordship of Kyntire.¹⁰ The abbey, it is said, became a house of no common repute for sanctity.¹¹ It is said also, that about the year 1257 Thomas Sandalius (apparently so named from his connexion with the abbey) became a monk of Saddell, that he was afterwards abbot, that he was famed for his austerity, and that he left many works which were preserved in the library at Saint Andrews.¹² It has been suggested that Saddell is to be identified with the 'cloister of grey monks,' who made their peace with Haco King of Norway in his descent upon Scotland in 1263, and gave Symon, apparently one of his chaplains, who died at Gudey (the isle of Gigha), sepulture within their church in Kintyre.¹³ About the same period, Nigel and Isobel, Earl and Countess of Carrik, granted to the monks the two pennylands of Kildonune and Creisboig in that earldom.¹⁴ Between the years 1329 and 1380 John Lord of the Isles, the son of Angus, granted them the two marklands of Lesenmarg.¹⁵ About the middle of the fifteenth century they received from Alexander Lord of the Isles two marklands called Cragvan in the island of Giga, and the island of Sanct Barre lying at Loch Kilkerane; from John Lord of the Isles and Angus his son the lands of Knochan-tebeg, and twelve unciate called Kellipull; and from Duncan Campbele of Lochquhow a halfpennyland called Barrandayb and Blairnatibrade in the lordship of Knapdale.¹⁶ The several grants of Reginald and others were confirmed respectively by King Alexander II. or III., King Robert Bruce, King David II., and King Robert II. or III.¹⁷ In the year 1508 King James IV., at whose instance Pope Julius II. had united the abbey of Sagadull to the bishoprick of Argyle, as tutor and governor of his eldest son James Prince of Scotland and of the Isles, and for his devotion towards the blessed confessor Saint Moloc patron of the see, confirmed all the above grants in favour of Bishop David.¹ At the same time he erected all the abbey lands into the barony of Sagadull, with power to build castles and other strongholds for the bishop's defence and the king's service, to fortify them with stone walls, ditches, ramparts, iron bars, drawbridges, and porteullises, with bulwarks and le machcoling and all other necessary fortifications above, and to make constables, janitors, sentinels, jailers, keepers, and other necessary officers.² In the same year King James IV. renewed his grant, with the power to build mills in any part of the bishoprick, with the multure, sequels, and other pertinents.³ In 1510 the same Bishop David, commendator of Sandale, and Sir Alexander Macloid his dean, official of the Isles, had a letter of protection from King James IV. addressed to the inhabitants of their lands, to the effect that none of them should disturb the bishop or his dean in uplifting the fruits of their lands and churches.⁴ The castle of Saddell appears to be that built by the same bishop within Kintyre, for the maintenance of whose keepers, as well as for his own, he received from King James IV. in 1512 the 'fermes, bere, and aitis' of Kilyownane and Loched.⁵ In 1537 there appears on record Adam Montgomery captain of Sagadell.⁶ In 1556 James bishop of Argyle, for certain sums paid to him by James Duke of Chastellarault, Earl of Aran and Lord Hammiltoune, namely, for £1200 paid him for various purposes, and £10,000 paid him to meet the tax granted to the Queen, and to augment his rental by the sum of thirteen shillings and fourpence, granted to the Duke for the yearly payment of forty-nine marks Scots the lands and manor or fortalice of Saddagall (or Saddell), including the four marklands of Saddell called the mains of Saddell, three marks of Corscadill, twenty shillings of Leffenchorraucht, twenty shillings of Leffenbeg, one mark of Vlladill, one mark of Kilmichell, two marks of Leffenmoir, two marks of Giristill, twenty shillings of Iffernan, twenty shillings of Bradiffernan, twenty shillings of Monychwill, two marks of Wggadill, two marks of Kildonane, one mark of Ormissary, eight shillings of Kellabill, two marks of Knokchantibeg, two marks of Lessewark, a half mark of Ellein-Dawar, two marks of Ballewahan, two marks and a-half of Knokingor, two marks and a-half of Drummaylay, one mark of Bordadow, four marks of Kilmory, three marks of Auchinleskin, and twenty shillings of Drumnamwkloche, extending in all to forty-eight marklands of old extent—seisin taken on the four marklands of Saddell to be sufficient for the whole.⁷ In the same year James M'Onele of Dounawik, on giving up his claim to certain lands in the Isle of Arran, received from the Earl of Arran the whole lands of Saddell and keeping of the place thereof, held by the Earl of his brother the bishop of Argyle, on condition of paying the dues, keeping open house for the bishop and the Earl as masters of the same, doing nothing to the prejudice of the Isle of Arrane, and binding himself to assist the bishop in levying his rents and teinds throughout Kintyre.⁸ In the Libellus Taxationum Sauledene (apparently intended for Saddell) is rated at £40.

The remains of the monastery stand on the banks of a small stream at the entrance to the valley of Glensaddell on the east coast of Kintyre.¹ The abbey church, which was in the shape of a cross, was 136 feet long by 24 wide, having a transept 78 feet by 24, and a nave 60 feet long, and south and west of the transept there is a square 58 feet wide, apparently the cloisters.² The burying-ground contains a few monuments of the Macdonalds and other clans.³

Near the same place stands Saddell Castle, the ancient stronghold of the bishops of Argyle, and still entire and inhabited.⁴

In the year 1498 King James IV. granted to his servitor Adam Rede of Sterquhite the fortalice of Ardcardane, and 100 shillinglands of old extent beside it, with the 16 marklands of old extent of Glencardane, adjacent to the former, in the lordship of North Kintyre, for payment of the usual dues, and for finding and maintaining six bowmen to serve the king in his wars with the Islesmen, the said Adam being bound to remain in the castle during these wars after the expiration of the terms during which the castle and lands might be held by Mathew Earl of Lennox or others.⁵ In 1500 the same king granted to the same Adam Rede for the same service as in 1498 the four marklands of old extent of Arkerdene with the fortalice of the same, and the 20 marklands of old extent of Glencardine, Auchinsaul, Ranydoch, Auchinbrek, Keironasche, Auchinreauch, Carrymakkonnan, and Cardoll, lying near the four marklands of Arkardine, forfeited to the king by Sir John of the Isles.⁶ In 1545 and 1558 these lands with 30 marks in the island of Rachre were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre.⁷ In 1564 Queen Mary granted to James M'Concill of Dunnyvaig and Glennis the nonentry and other dues of the £20 land of Rawchern on the coast of Ireland, together with the four marks of Ardcadadull, three marks of Duppeyne, four marks of Ranadull, two marks of Achnasawald, two marks of Kilmichaell, two marks of Schronogvan, one mark of Kerenacragy, one mark of Kerenasy, two marks of the two Duffthorrenis, and two marks of Aucharathie, in all 24 marks of old extent, corresponding to the grants of 1498 and 1500, and in the Queen's hands since the decease of John M'Concill, Donald Baldochsone, Adam Reid of Sterquhyte, or other lawful possessor.⁸ In 1605 Margaret and Jonet, daughters of Adam Reid of Barskymmyng, and Hugh Wallace of Auchinveil and John Spottiswode of Foular, his grandsons by the mother's side, were served his heirs in the same lands in Kintyre and the isle of Rauchric.⁹

From Ranald Bane, who in 1461 was a deputy from the Earl of Ross to King Edward IV. of England, there descended a family called the Clanranaldbane of Largie in Kintyre.¹ In 1510, at the instance of the Earl of Angus, King James IV. granted to Marion of Ylis, the daughter of Makranald Bayne, for life, the four marklands of Cortynvale in the lordship of Kyntire, free of all mails and dues.² It is probably one of the same family who in 1542 appears in record as Donald M'Alester of Largis in Kyntire.³ The lands of Ramharyne, Stelag (or Scelag), Downaschre, Gortnanofale, the two Narrachannis, Vlnadull, Ballochgarrane, Baiauchtir, Clacheg, and certain lands in Kilcalmonell, which in 1545, 1558, and 1564, were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, granted by Queen Mary to the M'Conceills,⁴ were in 1627 united with Blarie, Rannoohan, and Kallepuill, into the tenandry of Largie, in which Alexander M'Connel was in that year served heir to his father Archibald.⁵

In 1545, 1558, and 1564, the two marklands of Greynane, two marks of Sownadull, two marks of Coir, two marks of Sparsage, and four marks of Crossag (the latter two were perhaps in Kilcalmonell), were part of the same barony of Bar.⁶ In 1573 the two marklands of Corr and two marks of Sunadell were granted by John bishop of the Isles to Colin Earl of Argyle for yearly payment of four marks, and of forty pence in augmentation.⁷ In 1592 King James VI. granted to Archibald Campbell of Kilmun for the same yearly payment the same lands, which were part of the priory of Ardchattan, and had been annexed to the crown.⁸ In 1620 Archibald Campbell of Kilmun was served heir in the same lands to his father Archibald provost of Kilmun.⁹

In the barony of Bar were likewise included the four marklands of Trubastull, five marks of Mungastull, three marks of Balloch-Ogreichane, two marks of Glencardoch, six marks of Bar, two marks of Kilgregir, two marks of Kilmoloig, three marks of Amot, two marks of Stokadull, two marks of Arnegill, two marks of Bliarie, two marks of Achetaydowe, four marks of Barmogach, and one mark of Garwald.¹⁰

In the centre of the modern parish may still be seen the rude remains of Dundonald, the residence of the Macdonald when visiting the district.¹¹ The charters here granted by the island chief are said to have run thus—'I Macdonald, sitting upon Dundonald, give you a right to your farm from this day till to-morrow, and every day thereafter, so long as you have food for the great Macdonald of the Isles.'¹²

THE western half of this parish is now united with part of Kilberry, from which it is naturally divided by the isthmus of Tarbet. The date of their union is unknown. In 1753 the other half of Kilcalmonell was united with the eastern half of Killean into the parish of Saddell and Skipness.¹⁰

The old parish of Kilcalmonell extended on the west from Tarbet nearly to Runahuran Point, and on the east from Tarbet to the vicinity of Cour. From its sandy western coast it rises towards the centre with a gentle acclivity to the height of several hundred feet above the sea, and at one point towards the south-east reaches the height of 1500. The eastern side of the parish is chiefly composed of heathy hills of lower elevation than the central ridge, and the whole is diversified by some small streams and lakes.

In the year 1247 Pope Innocent IV. confirmed to the rector of the church of Saint Colmanel in Kentyr 'a certain portion of land commonly called a pennyland, which had been granted to that church by Dufgall lay patron of the same.'¹¹ In the year 1261 the same Dufgall, the son of Syfyn, with the consent of John his heir, granted to the monks of Paisley 'the right of patronage of the church of Saint Colmanel, which was situated in his land of Kentyr, with the chapel of Saint Columba which was situated near his castle of Schepelinche, after the death of Clement rector of the said church'—bequeathing at the same time his body to be buried in the monastery of Paisley.¹² In 1262 Alan bishop of Argyle confirmed to the monks the same church with its chapels, to be converted to their own use, saving the vicar's portion in that church as in other churches of the diocese, and saving to the bishop the fourth part of the church which was acknowledged to belong to the bishop's table, and the right of the bishop and other ordinaries in all things.¹³ In the same year Walter Steward Earl of Menthet confirmed to the monks 'the grant of Dufgall the son of Syfyn, made to them before he gave him (Walter Steward) his land of Schyphinche, regarding the church of Saint Colmanel situated within the said land, with one pennyland belonging to that church, and the chapel near the castle of Schyphinche.¹ In 1265 the church was confirmed to the monks by Pope Clement IV.² In the year 1269 Laurence bishop of Argyle confirmed to them the mother church of Saint Colmanel in Kentyir, granted by Dufgal the son of Sifyn, and confirmed by Alan the bishop's predecessor.³ Subsequently to the year 1272 the writs relating to this church were inspected and certified by Robert Wishart bishop of Glasgow.⁴ In the year 1284, on the Saturday immediately following the Decollation of Saint John the Baptist (29th August), at the church of Saint Finnan, Bishop Laurence issued his mandate to Oddo, dean of Christianity of Glasrod, to go in company with Maurice chaplain of the parish church of Saint Finnan to the church of Saint Colmanel in Kentyir, and there to give Brice and William, monks of Paisley and procurators of the abbot, corporal possession of that church and of the chapel of Chyphinche depending thereon, with all pertinents, and saving the rights of every one.⁵ In the same year, on the Lord's Day preceding the Nativity of the Virgin Mary (8th Sept.), the bishop's attorneys gave effect to his mandate, and on the eve of the Nativity within the abbey of Paisley reduced their proceedings to writing.⁶ In 1285, on Wednesday following the feast of the Assumption (August 15), they inspected and certified the Pope's bull relating to the same church.⁷ In 1327 the church of Kylecolmanel was confirmed to the monks by Andrew bishop of Argyle.⁸ It was one of three belonging to the monks, the fruits of which Bishop Martin in 1351 appropriated.⁹ In the settlement of the matter by the delegates of the Pope no particular decision regarding this church has been recorded.¹⁰ In 1455 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, confirmed to the monks the rectory of the church of Colmanel, with liberty to set and dispose of it at their pleasure.¹¹ In 1469 the bull of Pope Clement IV. was transcribed at Glasgow by order of Symon of Dalgless, precentor of Glasgow and the bishop's official.¹² In 1491 Robert bishop of Argyle, who since 1489 had contumaciously interfered with the fruits of the church of Colmanell and others, was excommunicated for his conduct by the delegates of the Pope.¹³ In 1581 William commendator of Paisley leased the parsonage and vicarage teinds of Kilcalmonell to Colin Earl of Argyle, Justice-General of Scotland, and Dame Agnes Countess of Argyle.¹⁴ In 1621 James Earl of Abircorne, Lord Paisley and Kilpatrick, was served heir to his grandfather Claud Lord Paisley in the parsonage teinds and patronage of Kileulmannell, as part of the lordship or barony of Paisley.¹⁵ In 1632 Sir Dugall Campbell of Achinbrek and Dame Issobell Boyd his wife, as having right from James Lord Paisley and Abercorn, titular of the teinds of Kilcalmanell, exchanged them with Archibald Lord Lorne for the teinds and patronage of the chapel at the head of Lochger called Kilmachumag.¹ In the same year Archibald M'Allester was served heir to his brother Hector M'Allester of Ballenakill in the two marks of old extent of the lands of Kilealmannell, called Ballenakeill, with the mill, the acre called Dallenaschenkill, and the acre lying around the chapel of Skibnische — apparently the old churchlands of Kilcalmonell and Skipness.²

The church, apparently dedicated to the Irish saint Colmanelo, a contemporary of Saint Columba, stood in the seventeenth century at Clachan on the west coast, and probably at an earlier period, at the adjacent place now known as Balnakeill, and marked by Pont and Blaeu as Balnaheglis.³ The present church, built in 1760, occupies the more modern site.⁴ The chapel of Saint Columba at Skipness, eighty-one feet long by twenty feet wide, is still in good preservation, its architecture resembling that of English buildings of the thirteenth century, the period at which it first appears in record.⁵ Other chapels dependent on the 'mother church of Saint Colmanel' appear to have been situated at Kilmichell and Kilehammak, both on the western coast, the former near the southern and the latter near the northern end of the parish.⁶

Before the year 1247, and down to 1262, the land of Schephehinche or Schypinche (afterwards Skipinche, and now Skipness) was possessed by Dufgall the son of Syfyn (or Sewen).⁷ In 1262 Dufgall granted to Walter Steward Earl of Mentheth 'his land of Schyphinche' in free barony, for payment to the king of two-thirds of the service of one soldier and other services.⁸ In 1495 King James IV. granted to his comptroller Sir Duncan Forestare of Skipinche the lands of Skipinche, with the castle, fortalice, and place of the same, extending to four marks; the lands of Lethorlee and Kilelee, two marks; Colintre, two marks; Le Altgalleras and Altwoware, two marks; Glenskipinche, one mark; Glenrestill, two marks; Clyneagir, four marks; Orgagir, four marks; Stronrestill, one mark; Garworle, one mark; Lagarowok, one mark; Allemore, twelve marks; in all thirty-six marks in the lordship of Knappdale, erected into the barony of Skipinche.⁹ In 1496 King James granted to Sir Duncan, still his comptroller, the ten marklands of Sclaristok and the eight marklands of Selafernane in Stirling, valued at £240, as part payment of the expenses of the king's household at the time of his passing to the Isles.¹⁰ In 1497 King James granted to Walter Forestare, son and heir apparent of his familiar knight Sir Duncan Forestare of Skipynch, the barony and fortalice of Skipynch, reserving the franktenement to Sir Duncan for life.¹¹ In 1499 the same king, after attaining his majority, confirmed to Sir Duncan the grant of 1495.¹² In the same year King James granted to Sir Duncan an acquittance for all sums entered in his 'comptis' during his comptrollership, namely, from 31st July 1492 to 10th November 1498.¹³ In 1502 the lands, barony, castle, fortalice, and place of Skipynche were resigned by Sir Duncan Forestare, and granted by King James IV. to Archibald Earl of

Argyle, with remainder to Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquha and his heirs, and to the Earl's heirs whomsoever bearing the Campbell surname and arms.¹ In 1511 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted, and King James IV. confirmed to Archibald the Earl's son the four marklands of Origage, two marks of Craggan, four marks of Clynage, two marks of Glenrysadill, one mark of Stronc, one mark of Garforling, one mark of Cullintraith, two marks of Aireour, four marks of Roage, two marks of Auchydownwoll, four marks of Airmor and Kynnacraig, two marks of Achingerryn, two marks of Bereddirtnaawyn (or Beddercuaawne), two marks of Achequois, one mark of Escarde, four marks of Skippinich, two marks of Glenskippail, two marks of Kilpayn, the keeping of the castle of Skippinych, and certain lands in Knapdale, all in the barony of Skippinych, for the usual services, furnishing two galleys, one of sixteen and one of fourteen oars, for the Earl's service when required, and paying yearly at the castle of Skippinych twenty-four bolls meal, twenty-four bolls bear, and thirty stones of cheese.² In 1515, 1522, 1531, 1536, and 1537, Archibald Campbell of Skipinche, apparently the receiver of the above grant, appears in record.³ In 1541 King James V. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the lands and barony of Skipinche, which he had resigned, and by a new erection included them in the barony and lordship of Lorne.⁴ In 1542 the same king granted an order under the Privy Seal to restore John Campbell the son and heir of the deceased Archibald Campbell of Skipinche to the property of his father, whose superior had alleged that he had no title to the lands, because his father had not died at the 'faith and peace' of the king, inasmuch as being in ward in the castle of Edinburgh he broke out of it and rendered null an order of the king for his enlargement.⁵ In the same year King James V. confirmed his grant of the previous year in favour of Archibald the son and heir apparent of Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁶ In 1549 Queen Mary confirmed to Donald Campbell of Ardyntynne a grant by the deceased Archibald Campbell of Skypinche of the ten marklands of Cullynnouche, Altgalwesrycht, Arreweir, Clonak, Quhylynoucht, Craiggane, Auchintydonald, and Garwoling, in the barony of Knapdale.⁷ In 1552 Archibald Master of Argyle granted the lands and barony of Skipinche to John Campbell of Skipinche as heir of his father Archibald, and in 1553 confirmed the grant.⁸ In 1556 the barony was still held by John Campbell of Skippynche.⁹ In 1564, in exchange for the lands of Craginch and others, Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Colin Campbell of Boquhan his brother the lands and barony of Skipinche with the castle, for the usual services, furnishing a galley of twenty-eight oars for the Earl's service when required, and the yearly payment of forty-eight bolts of oatmeal and thirty stones of cheese at the castle of Skipinche.¹ In 1620 Archibald Campbell of Kilmun was served heir to his father Archibald provost of Kilmun in the four marklands of Arievoir and Kamcraig in the parish of Skippeneische.²

Between the years 1306 and 1329 King Robert Bruce granted to Nigel Oge the lands of Killmychill, Drondrayllen, Dunnor, Keyllpoll, and Reythenan.³ In 1545, 1558, and 1564, the three marklands of Carnebeg, three marks of Carnemoir, four marks of Bramsheane, three marks of Carselloch, four marks of Sedurill, four marks of Kilmichell, and three marks of Largennhwnschon, were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre.⁴ In 1627 these lands with others in the parish of Killean were united into the tenantry of Largie, in favour of Alexander M'Connel the son and heir of Archibald M'Connel of Largie.⁵

In the year 1481 King James III. granted to John of Ila, Lord of the Isles, Arymore, of the extent of twelve marks; Owrageg, Achtydownegall, Scottomyl, Drummalaycht, Downynskeig, Le Lowb, Lemnamwk, Gartwaiche, and Tescard, twenty-one marks; Altbeith, one mark; Cragkeith, one mark; and Achetymlane, Dowynynvitoch, Renoehane, Kilcamok, Gartnagrauch, and Ormisay, twenty marks; lying in the lordship of Knappedale, and claimed by Makelane and Maknele.⁶

Of these lands Downanwltaeh, Rannaquhan, and Achatamvlen, forming together ten marklands of old extent, were in 1496 granted by King James IV. as part of the barony of Dowarde to Lachlan Makgilleone the natural son of Hector Makgilleone of Dowarde, with remainder to the latter, to his brother Donald, and to his own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleone.⁷ In 1510 King James IV. granted the same lands as part of the same barony to Duncan Stewart of Appin.⁸ In 1540 King James V. granted them to Hector the son and heir of Hector Makelane of Dowart, with remainder to the heirs male of Hector the elder, to his brothers Alan and John, and to his own heirs of the name and arms of Makelane.⁹ In 1558 Hector Makelane 'fear' of Dowart, with consent of Hector Makelane lord of the franktenement of Dowart, sold in life-rent to Jonet Campbell, daughter of Archibald Earl of Argyle, the six marklands of Dunnonlycht and Rannachquhen, and the four marklands of Auchitymlane, and the sale was followed by a crown charter of Mary Queen of Scots.¹⁰ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir in the same lands to his father Hector M'Clayne.¹¹

The lands of Loupe (named 'Le Lowb' in the above grant to the Lord of the Isles) are supposed to have been in the possession of the Macallisters in 1493.¹² In 1516 Angus Johnne Dowisoun (that is, Angus the son of John Dubh Macallister) of the Loupe was one of a number to whom a special protection was granted by the Regent Albany as familiars and servitors of Colin Earl of Ergile.¹³ Between 1593 and 1604 the tutor of Loup granted a bond of manrent to the house of Hamilton for himself and the rest of the clan Allister.¹ The descendants of John Dubh were in possession of the lands of Loupe till the present century.²

In 1539 King James V. granted to Alane M'Clane, the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, the nonentry and other dues of seven marklands in Knapdale, called Kilcammak, Gartnagreanach, and Muchtre.³ In 1542 the same king granted these lands, then of the extent of eight marks, to Neill, the natural son of the deceased Neill M'Neill of Geya.⁴ In 1549 Dugald Campbell the son and heir apparent of Archibald Campbell of Kilmichael, bound himself to resign to Archibald Earl of Argyle the lands of Auchageyll, Knokalloway, and Stronknok, as soon as the Earl should infest him in land within Tarbet and Avallegan of as much yearly value as the six marklands of Kilchammig, Gartnagrenoch, and Muckarich, formerly given him by the Earl.⁵ In 1554 Neill M'Neill sold, and Queen Mary confirmed, to James M'Connyll of Donyveg the eight marklands in Knapdale named as above.⁶ In 1619 John M'Connell was served heir to his father Archibald in the same lands, which in 1620 were held by Archibald Campbell of Kilmun as heir to his father Archibald provost of Kilmun.⁷

In 1568 Archibald Earl of Argyle, Justice-General of Scotland, granted to his brother Colin Campbell of Boquhan, the lands of Gartevaich in the lordship of Knapdail, with liberty to erect a mill.⁸ In 1620 Archibald Campbell was served heir to his father the provost of Kilmun in the same land of Gartavaich, of the old extent of two marks.⁹

'From the Terbart,' observes the topographer in Macfarlane, 'upon the west syd of Kynntyre, there is eight myles, and as much upon the east syd, perteyning of long tyme to the Earls of Argyl. They were purchased be them at the tyme of the forfaitour of Macdonald Lord of the Isles. Killmayaille upon the west and the castell of Skeipnes upon the east mark the marche. The place betwixt the Terbats and Skeipnes is called Borlum—that is, a playne land betwixt two countreys.'¹⁰

The ancient 'castle of Schepelinche,' if not the identical stronghold of Dufgall the son of Syfyn, occupies the same site near the point of Skipness, and is still nearly entire.¹¹

A more interesting ruin exists in the castle of Tarbert, situated on the southern side of East Loch Tarbert.¹² The neighbouring isthmus, about a mile in breadth, from which both lochs and castle take their name (a name said to be derived from two Celtic words, signifying 'draw-boat'), and across which it is alleged that in 1098 Magnus Berfaet King of Norway, in order to establish his claim to Kintyre as an island, caused himself to be drawn in a galley,¹³ witnessed a similar event in the time of King Robert Bruce by whom the castle was built. In the year 1315 that king, after the departure of his brother Edward for Ireland, visited the Isles, and on his way thither caused his galleys to be drawn across the isthmus of Tarbert.¹ The King, whose exploit wrought upon the superstition of the inhabitants, having thus 'dantit the Ilis' and procured their homage,² within the next ten years commenced to build the castle, in which in 1326 he seems to have resided for some time, and to have received the accounts rendered by several of the local stewards.³ In 1326 John de Lany was constable of Tarbart, and appears to have been also the King's chamberlain for the district.⁴ In that year he gave the following account of the expenses connected with building the castle, which is of much interest as the earliest account of any details of domestic architecture and modes of rural life in Scotland:—Paid to Robert the mason by indenture of bargain for building the walls of the castle of Tarbart, £282, 15s., and also of the King's gratuity (ex curialitate domini regis) because in the King's absence he had built the walls wider than agreed on, £106, 8s., and the price of a chalder of meal and a chalder of barley by agreement for the first quarter of the present account, £3, 4s.; to John the mason by bargain for building the said castle, £28, 7s. 8d., and as part payment for building a new 'pele' at Wester Tarbart, £4; to Adam the mason by covenant for building the said castle, £9, 10s., and for the burning of 760 chalders of lime for that building from Whitsunday (26th May) 1325 to Midsummer (24th June) 1326, £50; to two men for carrying lime from the kiln (thorale) to the castle both by sea and by land during twenty-nine weeks and three days, namely, from 18th April 1325 to the following Martinmas (11th November), each four shillings for every three weeks; to five men for the same service during the same period, each three shillings and sixpence for every three weeks, £13, 15s. 2d.; to seven men for the same service from Martinmas (1325) to Midsummer 1326, thirty-two weeks, each fourteen pence a-week, £13, 1s. 4d.; for the making of a moat below the castle by William Scott according to agreement made in presence of the King, on the testimony of William of Bonkil, and of a letter from William Scott, £7, 3s. 11d.; to William Scott for a mill-pond and mill-lead by agreement in presence of the King, on the testimony of the said William Bonkil and letter of the said William Scott, £3, 9s. 8d.; to William Scott for the making of a lime-kiln (torale) anew by agreement, 17s.; to William Scott as part payment of twenty marks agreed for with him for making a road from the one Tarbart to the other, £8, and as the price of half a chalder of meal bought and delivered to the said William Scott of the King's gratuity for making the said road, 16s.—in all £430, 10s. 5d.⁵ To Sir Maurice the chaplain for his half year's salary, £2; to James del More dwelling at Tarbart by the King's command from 18th April to 1st August, at fivepence a-day, £2, 2s. 4d.; to Neil the smith, as one year's salary to the Feast of Saint Peter ad vincula (1st August) 1326, £12; to Neil the plumber at eightpence a-day for thirteen days and a half, ending at the Feast of the Apostles Philip and James (1st May), and on to the 1st day of August, 1326, £3, 9s.; to John the carpenter, as salary from Martinmas to Midsummer, thirty-two weeks, at threepence a-day, £2, 16s., and for food monthly one boll meal and one codrus of cheese, at two shillings per boll, and sevenpence per codrus;⁶ for the service of Dofnald Blokker for twenty-seven weeks

It was at a later period included in the barony of Tarbert, the lands of which lay wholly on the Knapdale side.¹⁰

In the year 1328 Sir Robert of Peblis, chamberlain of Scotland, made a charge in his account for the making of a 'coket' at the burgh of Tarbard.¹ In 1329 the clerk of the late chamberlain accounts for £4, 8s. 10d., received as the contributio pacis of the burgh of Tarbard, a collection apparently for payment of the sum stipulated by the Treaty of Northampton, 1328.² In 1503 the parliament of Scotland appointed the justices-depute and sheriffs for the South Isles to sit either at Tarbart or at Loch Kilkerran.³ The village of Tarbert contains a population of 700 or 800.⁴

Near Clachan there is on the sea-coast a hill of considerable height, named Dunskeig, having on its summit a circular fort, 15 yards in diameter, composed of dry stones, and a little lower, at the distance of about 60 yards, a vitrified fort of 21 yards diameter, but of an irregular form.⁵

Kilbery, Kilberry⁶—Kilberheth⁷—Kilbary⁸—Kilbarren⁹—Kilberrie.¹⁰
Deanery of Kintyre (probably). (Map, No. 11.)

THE greater part of Kilberry is united to the western half of Kilealmonell, but the period of their union is unknown.¹¹

The ancient parish of Kilberry seems to have been co-extensive with 'the south half of Knapdale,' or Killislate, its northern boundary running from the head of Loch Killisport on the west to Inverneill upon the east, and thus including the modern parish of South Knapdale, which appears to have been erected about the year 1700 or 1730.¹² It is very hilly, and is crossed from east to west by a ridge of considerable height, whose highest point is Sliobh-ghoil. It has a bold rocky coast, which terminates at the south in Ard Patrick Point. It includes also several islands lying to the northwest.

In the year 1492 John of Ilay, Lord of the Isles and patron of the church of Kilberry in Knapdaill, with the consent of Thomas Flemyng the rector, for the benefit of the church of Lesmore, which was of slender revenue, for the benefit of the prelates, and for the relief of himself and his successors, who were unqualified (ignorantium) to present fit persons to the church, granted to Robert bishop of Argyle his right of patronage of the church of Kilberry, so that it should be lawful for him or his successors to annex it to the see as mensal or otherwise to dispose of it.¹³ In 1505 King James IV. granted the patronage of Kilberry to Archibald Earl of Argyle, as part of the barony of Tarbert.¹⁴ In 1507 the same king, for his singular devotion towards Saint

Moloc the patron of the cathedral church of Lesmore, confirmed to Bishop David the grant of John of Ilay.¹ The church had now been made a prebend of the cathedral. In 1531, on the decease of Sir Cornelius Man prebendary of Kilberleth in Knapdale, King James V. appointed Master Duncan Man to the benefice.² In 1541 the advowson of Kilbary was included in a grant of the barony of Lochow by King James V. to Archibald Earl of Argyle,³ which in 1542 was confirmed by the same king to Archibald his son and heir apparent.⁴ In 1629 M. Darroch was parson of Kilberrie.⁵ In 1667 the patronage was granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle in a new charter of the earldom by King Charles II.⁶ In 1695 the patronage was still in the hands of the Earl of Argyle.⁷

The church stood on the west coast on the right bank of the water of Kilberry.⁸ The present church, apparently on or near the site of the former, was built in 1821.⁹ There appears to have been a church or chapel at Kilmolowaig, a little farther to the north upon the same coast.¹⁰ In the modern parish of South Knapdale there are two churches, one at Achoish on Loch Killisport, the other at Inverneill in the north corner of the parish, both built in 1775.¹¹

In the year 1335 Edward Balliol granted to John of the Isles for his allegiance 'the land of Knappedoll' and other lands.¹² In 1376 King Robert II. granted to John del Yle and Margaret his wife half of his lands of Knapdale.¹³ In 1475 John, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, forfeited all his possessions to the crown, and on his restoration in 1476 the lordship of Knapdale was reserved to the crown.¹⁴ In 1481 King James III. granted to John of Ila, Lord of the Isles, the lands of Barmore, Garalane, Achnafey, Strondowr, Glenmolane, Glenraole, Largbanan, Barnellane, Kowildrinoch, Glannafoech, Ardpatrik, Ardmenys, Larnahowshyn, Forleyngloch, Crevyr, and Drumnamwkloch, extending to thirty-one marks; Kilmolowok, four marks; Drumdresok, two marks; Schengart, four marks; Bargawregane, four marks; Clachbrek, two marks; and Barlonkyrt, four marks—all claimed by Makelane and Maknele—in the lordship of Knapdale.¹⁵ In 1499 King James IV. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the keeping of the house of Tarbat, with the 'balyery and governans' of the lands of Knapdale, and all profits and dues belonging to the same, to be held during the King's pleasure.¹⁶ In 1505 the same king granted to the same earl the offices of justiciar and chamberlain of the lands and lordships of Knapdail and Kintyre, and of captain of the house and fortalice of Tarbert when it should be built, and also the lands of Kilberry and the south half of Knapdail, with the patronage of the church of Kilberry—all united into the barony of Tarbert—with one-half of the King's dues.¹⁷ In 1506 the same king granted to David bishop of Ergile all the 'unlawis' and other profits belonging to the King in the next justice air and other justice airs and sheriff courts within the bounds of Knapdale, to be held by him during the King's pleasure.¹ In 1511 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted, and King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Campbell, the Earl's son and heir, one markland of Glenkil, four marks of Torinturk, one mark of Glenfeach, four marks of Cragintagaich, two marks of Achinglachaich and Clachaig, four marks of Dovnmoir, one mark of Fewrlinlochan, four marks of Cras, one mark of Ardmenis, four marks of Larghunson, six marks of Teyredkyn, four marks of Coulgaltreif, two marks of Kilpayn, four marks of Creyr, four marks of Kilmalowaig, two marks of Drumdrysaig, four marks of Sengart, four marks of Orymsay, four marks of Dawargeworgane, two marks of Clachbrek, and four marks of Barlongort — all included in the barony of Skyppynych.² In 1515 Colin Earl of Ergile, Archibald Campbell of Skipinche, and their friends inhabiting Knapdale and other parts, had a remission from King James V. for all their crimes except treason.³ In 1526 the same king granted to Archibald Campbell, the son and heir of Earl Colin, the lands of South Knapdail with the keeping of the castle of Tarbart when built, 'called the barony of Tarbart and sheriffdom of the same.'⁴ In 1529 the same king granted to the same Archibald, on resignation by Earl Colin his father, the lands of South and North Knapdails with the keeping of the castle of Tarbert.⁵ In 1541 King James V. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle, on his resignation, the lands and barony of Terbert with the keeping of the castle when it should happen to be built, with the advowson of the church of Kilbary and the other churches and chapels of the district.⁶ In 1542 Earl Archibald resigned the barony and castle with the offices of justiciar, sheriff, coroner, and chamberlain of the lordship in favour of his son and heir Archibald Campbell, to whom they were then granted by King James V.⁷ In 1549 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted, and Queen Mary confirmed to Donald Campbell of Ardyntyne the lands of Larnahunschoche in the barony of Knapdale, of the old extent of four marks.⁸

In the year 1455 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, dates a charter to the monks of Paisley at Cleandaghallagan in Knapadal.⁹ In 1549 Dugald Campbell, the son and apparent heir of Archibald Campbell of Kilmichaell, became bound to resign certain lands to Archibald Earl of Argyle, as soon as the Earl should infest him in land within Tarbert and Avallegan, of a yearly value equal to that of the six marklands of Kilchammaig, Gartnagrenach, and Muckarich, formerly given him by the Earl.¹⁰

In the last century there was a castle at Kilberry near the parish church.¹¹

Chillmaedachormes¹—Kilmakcorme²—Kilmaharmuk³—Kirk of M'Harmik⁴
 — Kilmachormuk⁵ — Knapdail⁶ — Kilmacharmik⁷ — Kilmakcharmick.⁸
 Deanery of Kintyre (probably). (Map, No. 12.)

THIS parish consists of the northern portion of Knapdale, having on the west next the Sound of Jura a very irregular coast, stretching from Loch Crinan on the north to Loch Killisport on the south, and deeply indented about midway by Loch Swein. Its eastern boundary is a ridge of hills running parallel to that sea loch, and rising in Cruachlusach to the height of 2004 feet. On the north it is separated from Argyle proper by a line stretching from Loch Gilp to Loch Crinan. Its surface is diversified by hills, valleys, and lakes, its coast varying from the steep rocky shores of the Sound to the lower ledges of Loch Swein and the sandy beach of Loch Gilp. It includes also the islands of Dana, Ulva, Ellanmore, and others.

The church of Saint Charmaig, or M'Charmaig, belonged to the monks of Kilwinning in Ayrshire,⁹ to whom it is said (but apparently with no foundation) to have been granted by the family of Eglinton after the battle of Largs in 1263.¹⁰ About that period a charter of Rotheric the son of Reginald is witnessed by Maurice the parson of Chillmaedachormes.¹¹ There appears to be no farther record of this church till the very eve of the Reformation, when in 1551 Sir James Lindesay was presented by Queen Mary to the vicarage of Kilmakcorme, then vacant, or when it should be vacant by the demission of Sir Emenides Hendersoun.¹² In 1621 the parsonage and vicarage of Kilmachormuk were resigned by John commendator of Kilwinning, and annexed by parliament to the bishoprick of Argyle.¹³ In 1629 a tack of lands by the bishop of Argyle to William Sterling of Auchyle is signed among others of the chapter by Master Dugald Campbell parson of Knapdail.¹⁴ When the chapter of Argyle was restored by Charles II. in 1662, the minister at Kilmakcharmick was made one of the prebendaries.¹⁵

The church stood either on the island named Ellanmore, or at Keils on the headland west of Loch Swein, at each of which places there is an ancient church, bearing the name of Saint Charmaig (Cormac), by whom both are said to have been originally built.¹⁶ The island church, styled by Fordun and other chroniclers 'a sanctuary,' has two compartments, of which the western, supposed to have been the dwelling of the priest, has a vaulted roof, and in the walls several arched recesses, in one of which is a recumbent effigy, believed to be the image of Saint Cormac.¹ Near it are two ancient crosses, and a large cavity partly walled with masonry, and named M'Cormac's Grave.² The church at Keils, and another at Kilmory near Knap Point, are exactly of the same size, each forty-two feet by eighteen, and beside each is a cross of some antiquity.³ At Cove on Loch Killisport there is a chapel said to have been founded by Saint Columba, and in a neighbouring cave, from which it derives its name, are an altar, a font (or piscina), and a cross, cut in the rock.⁴ At Drimnaereige near Inverlussay there was a church or chapel.⁵ At Kilmalisaig and Glennakille are the remains of burying-grounds.⁶ At Kilduslan or Kildusklan on Loehgilp there was a chapel, which existed in 1790, and is said to have been served by the priest who officiated at the chapel of Kilmor on the opposite shore of the loch.⁷ At Kilmachunaig (anciently Kilmachummag or Kilchumnack) there was a chapel, whose burying-ground still remains.⁸ Near it there is a conical mound called Dundonald, on which one of the Lords of the Isles is said to have granted a charter in the following terms—'I Donald, chieftain of the clan Donald, sitting on Dundonald, give Mackay a right to Kilmachunaig from this day till tomorrow, and so on for ever.'⁹ In the year 1591 Duncan Campbell of Dannay granted to Donald Campbell of Obe a tack of the parsonage and vicarage teinds of one-half of the chapel of Kilmachummag in Knapdaill.¹⁰ In 1654 Archibald Marquis of Argyle granted to Neill M'Neill of Ardhonnan a tack of the parsonage and vicarage teinds of M'Neill's lands of Arichonnan, Leeknaban, Ardno, Eroorie, and Ariluge, extending to seven marks within the chapel of Kilmachummag.¹¹ The parish has now two churches, one at Kilmichael Inverlussay, built in 1820, and another at Tayvallich, built in 1827.¹²

The rental or fruits of the church of Kilmaharmuk, 'conforme to the chalmerlanis comptis giwin up to Gawin comendatour of Kilwynning, and extractit be him breiffie to be geivin in befor our souveraine Lady and my lordis commissaris' in 1561, and also as 'tain' by Sir William Murray of Tullibardin the Queen's comptroller in 1566, amounted to £16.¹³

Early in the thirteenth century, most of Knapdale seems to have been possessed by Syfyn or Swene of Argyle.¹⁴ In 1262 Walter Steward Earl of Menteth had a grant of land in Kintyre from Dufgal the son of Syfyn with the consent of John his heir, and apparently his brother,¹⁵ and in 1292 'the Earl of Meneteth's lands of Knapedal' were by an ordinance of King John Balliol included in the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle then erected.¹⁶ King Robert Bruce (apparently before the year 1310) is said to have granted Knapdale to John of Menteth.¹⁷

In 1310 King Edward II., in order that John the son of Swien of Argyle and Terrealnanogh and Murquoegh his brothers might render themselves more hateful (exosos) to John of Meneteth his enemy, and to others his enemies in Scotland, granted to them the whole land of Knapdale which belonged to their ancestors, provided they could recover it out of his enemies' hands.¹ In 1353 John of Meneteth, lord of Knapdaill and Arran, granted to Archibald Campbell lord of Lochaw that pennyland within which Castel Swine was situated, the lands of Apenad, the two pennylands of Danna called Barmore, the three pennylands of Ulva, the lands of Dal-lecheliha, Skondenze, and the lands of Dreissag, in Knapdaill, with the power of appointing and of dismissing sheriffs, and if condemned to death, 'with power to cause hang them upon ane gallows.'² At a subsequent date, which is not on record, John (or Robert) lord of Meneteth confirmed the same lands to Sir Archibald Campbell of Lochaw.³ In 1357 John of Meneteth was lord of Arane and Knapdall.⁴ Before the year 1445 Duncan Campbell of Lochaw granted to the monks of Saddell a halfpennyland called Barrandayb and Blairnatibrade in the lordship of Knapdale.⁵ In 1472 Hector M'Torquell M'Neill was constable of Castle Swyne,⁶ and it is said, possessed the greater part of North Knapdale.⁷ In 1481 King James III. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile and his heirs male, with remainder to Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquha, to Duncan Campbell of Kilmichell, to Archibald Campbell of Ottir, to Colin Campbell of Ormydale, to John Campbell of Ardkinglas, and to the Earl's heirs whomsoever, 160 marklands of the lordship of Knapdale, with the keeping of Castelsone, formerly in the sheriffdom of Perth, but newly annexed by parliament to the sheriffdom of Tarbart, namely—the lands of the islands of Danna, Ulwaa, Thivinche, and the lands of Knapdale within these bounds, namely, between Lochfyne on the east and the sea called Dura on the west, extending from the water of Dowkassich on the south to Kantraerenane on the north on one side, and from Garsolen (or Garfeorlin) on the south to Loch Gilb on the north on the other side — erected into a free barony, to be called the barony of Kilmichell.⁸ In 1513 King James IV. granted to Colin, afterwards Earl of Argyle, the barony of North Knapdaill, which was in the same year confirmed to him by King James V.⁹ In 1523 the same Earl granted to his kinsman and servitor Dugall M'Coull of Craignish the four marklands of Danna, the lands of Ardenavad, Glenansaule, one mark of Barmore, Contynich, and Corsaign, extending in all to 8 marks 10 shillings, in the lordship of Knapdaill, for yearly payment of 10 bolls meal, 10 bolls bear, 10 bolls oats, and one mark in money, at Castle Swine or elsewhere as the Earl should please, and of 40 shillings for the lands of Glennasaul.¹⁰ In 1526 King James V. granted to Archibald Campbell, the son and heir apparent of Colin Earl of Ergile, on his father's resignation, the lands of North Knapdale, with the offices of justiciar, sheriff, coroner, chamberlain, and lieutenant, and the advowson of the churches of the district.¹¹ In 1537 Dugall M'Coull of Craignish, as heir to his father received from Archibald Earl of Argyle seisin of the lands in Knapdail granted to the former by Earl Colin in 1523.¹ In 1541 King James V. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle, on his resignation, the lands and barony of Kilmychell with the keeping of the castle of Swyne, included in the barony and lordship of Lorne.² In 1542 the Earl resigned the same lands and castle in favour of his son Archibald Campbell, to whom they were then granted by King James V., with reservation of the liferent to the Earl.³ In 1564 the same Archibald Campbell, then Earl, granted to his servitor Hector M'Neill, the son of Neill M'Eachen M'Neill of Taynish, the two marklands of Galchylie in the lordship of Knapdail.⁴

Castle Swein, an irregular pile with round towers, and apparently neither window nor loophole, situated on the eastern shore of Loch Swein, is supposed to have been built in the eleventh century by Sweno Prince of Denmark, but more probably owed its origin to Swene of Argyle, who in the thirteenth century seems to have possessed the lands.⁵

On a rocky mount opposite Tainish, about 160 feet above Loch Swein, there is an ancient fort of an oval form, with a double rampart and various compartments, named Dun M'Huirick.⁶

Deanery of Glassary. (Map, No. 13.)

ABOUT the year 1650, a commission of parliament passed an act for dividing 'Kilmichael and Glassary,' which was not however carried into effect.¹² In 1697 and 1707 attempts were made to divide the parish, but no division took place.¹³

This parish, divided into 225 $\frac{1}{4}$ marklands, extends on the east along Lochfyne from the stream called Leochdan to the head of Lochgilp, and on the west from a point near the head of Lochcrinan to the south end of Lochaw, and thence along that lake to Brabhealach. Its surface is diversified by the valley of Glassary, from 200 to 600 feet above the sea, by Loch Ederlin and some other small lakes, by the river Ad running through it from north to south, and by an extensive tract of hill and moorland stretching on the north between Lochfyne and Lochaw.¹⁴ and 1285.¹ In 1394 the place appointed for paying the price of reversion to the lands of Hvyvil was the high altar of Kilnewir in the lordship of Glaister.² In 1490 James Scrymgeoure constable of Dundee granted to his brother Master John Scrymgeoure and Janet Ogilvy his wife the patronage of the church of Killenevir in the barony of Glaistre.³ Master James Scrymgeour, who in 1511 and 1530 is styled canon of Lesmor,⁴ in 1513 and 1531 was rector of Glaistre.⁵ In 1662, when the chapter of Argyle was revived by King Charles II., the minister at Kilmichaell in Glastric was appointed chancellor of the diocese.⁶

The church appears to have stood originally at Killevin or Killenewen near Craræ on Lochfyne,⁷ where a burying-ground still remains,⁸ and to have been afterwards removed to Kilneuair on Lochaw, where there is still a ruined church with an oratory beside it, which is said to have been held in great veneration long after it was disused as a place of worship.⁹ Kilmichael, the site of some ancient church or chapel, became afterwards (whether before or after the Reformation does not appear) and still continues the site of the parish church.¹⁰ The present church was built in 1827, another at Lochgilphead in 1828, and a third at Camlodden in 1841.¹¹

Between the years 1230 and 1246 Duncan the son of Fereher, and his nephew Lauman the son of Malcolm, granted to the monks of Paisley that pennyland of Kilmor which lay on Louchgilp, with the chapel of Saint Mary built on the same land.¹² In 1265 Pope Clement IV. confirmed to the monks the chapel and land of Kylmor at Kenlochgilpe.¹³ In 1268 Malmor called Hobolan, perpetual vicar of Kyllinan, being accused of having unjustly deprived the monks of the pennyland and chapel of Kylmor, of which they had been for some time in quiet possession and had levied the ferme, appeared at Glasgow on Monday before the Feast of Saint John the Baptist (June 24) before the dean and one of the canons of Glasgow, commissioners of the abbot of Kilwynyn the Pope's delegate, and submitted himself to their decision — on which the monks at the instance of the commissioners granted him the pennyland with all its pertinents for life for payment yearly of half a mark sterling of silver at the abbey of Paisley during the eight days of Glasgow fair.¹⁴ In 1270 Engus the son of Duncan confirmed to the monks the same chapel and pennyland, and gave them peaceable seisin of both.¹⁵ In 1362 it was arranged between the monks and Martin bishop of Argyle, who had encroached on their rights, that he should allow them freely and without imposing any burden to enjoy the land of Kylmor with the chapel of Loucgilp, notwithstanding an inquest which he alleged he had made for his own information without their knowledge; with this addition, that should any one sue them concerning the imposition of any burden on the land of Kylmor Louegilp, the bishop should do equal justice to both parties, or do his best to make peace between them.¹ The chapel of Kylmor and the chapel of Kildusklan on the opposite side of Lochgilp are said to have been served by one priest.² The foundations of the former are still visible, and the cemetery is still in use.³

In the year 1617 Mr. Neill Campbell parson of Kilmartine leased to Archibald Campbell of Kilmorie the teinds of three-fourths of the parsonage and vicarage of the chapel of Kilbryde at Lochgersyde, which was part of the patrimony of the parsonage of Kilmartine.⁴ In 1632 Sir Dugall Campbell of Auchinbrek and Dame Issobell Boyd his wife exchanged with Archibald Lord Lorne the teinds and patronage of Kilcalmanell for the teinds of the chapel at the head of Lochger called Kilmachumag, including the towns and lands of Gortinrannich, Minnart, the two Ardchastells, and others.⁵ In 1671 'the chapel of Kilmachumag and Lochger' was included in a tack of the teinds of Kilmartine.⁶

There seems to have been another chapel named Kilbride at the west side of the parish.⁷

In Baiamund's Roll the rectory of Glairster (or Glarister) is taxed at £6, 6s. 8d.⁸ In the Taxatio Sec. xvi. the rectory of Glassister is rated at £16, 10s. 3d.⁹ In 1671 the teinds of the parish of Glassary, Killenure, and Killenewen were leased to Archibald Earl of Argyle by Mr. Colin M'Lauchlan minister at Lochgoyllshead for £8, 13s. 4d.¹⁰

The Scrymgeours of Dundee appear to have held land in Glassary at an early period. In 1292 the lands of Master Ralph of Dundee formed part of the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle erected by King John Balliol.¹¹ About the same period a portion of the land was held by a family who received their surname from their property. In 1315 John of Glassereth was styled lord of that ilk.¹² Before the year 1371 King David II. granted to Gilbert Glacester the lands of Edderling, Cambysenew, Garvald, Canrenis, Craigneur, Oywalds, and Calkilkest, which were forfeited by John Ewinson.¹³ In 1374 King Robert II. granted to Gilbert of Glacestr all the lands of Glacestr and the castle of the same, which he had resigned, with remainder to Alexander Skyrmechur and his wife, and to Gilbert's own heirs.¹⁴ In 1460 King James II. granted to James Scrymgeoure, the son and heir of Sir John Skrymgeoure constable of Dundee, the lands of the barony of Glaster in the sheriffdom of Ergile, reserving the franktenement for Sir John's life.¹⁵ In 1488 David Hering of Lethindy and Margrete Maitland his wife pursued James Scrimgeour constable of Dundee 'for the wrangwis spoliacioun of twenty merkis yerely of twa yeris bigane of the malez of the landis of Glassister pertening to the said Margrete be ressoun of terce.'¹⁶ The Lords of Council, on the ground that the procurator of James Skrimgeour alleged that Master John Skrimgeour claimed a right to the lands, of which right he offered proof, appointed a day on which he should appear and give proof in person.¹⁷ In 1490 James Scrymgeoure constable of Dundee granted to his brother Master John Skrymgeoure and Jonet Ogilvy his wife the lands and barony of Glastre, with the patronage of the church of Killenevir in that barony, with remainder in succession to David Skrymgeoure of Ferdill, to Alexander Skrymgeoure of Henristoun, to Alexander's brother James, to Nycholas Skrymgeoure of Lillok, to James the son and heir of the deceased David Skrymgeoure burgess of Dundee, to John Skrymgeoure macer, and to the heirs whomsoever of Master John Skrymgeoure bearing the same surname.¹ In 1491 the grant was confirmed by King James IV.² In 1492, 1493, 1503, 1506-11, and 1513, the same Master John Skrymgeour of Glastre,³ and in 1521 John Skrymgeour of Glastir, the son and heir of the deceased Master John, appear in record.⁴ It is probably the latter who also in 1527, 1541, and 1542, appears as John Serymgeour of Glastre.⁵ In 1544 Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay made an agreement with John Serymgeour of Glostyre, and James his son and apparent heir, for the purpose of mutual friendship, and for supporting the Serymgeours with regard to a lease given by them of the lands of Glostyre.⁶ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to John Serymgeour, the son and heir of the deceased John Serymgeour of Glastre, the non-entry and other dues of the lands and barony of Glaistre, which were in the Queen's hands since the decease of the said John in December 1562.⁷ In 1643 James Viscount Dudhope, lord Serymgeour, was served heir to his father Viscount John, in the lands and barony of Glastrie, which were then included in the barony of Dundie.⁸ In 1644 John Viscount Dudhope was served heir to his father James in the same lands, of the old extent of 33 marks.⁹ In the same or the following century, Glasrie was held of the constable of Dundee by the laird of Achinbrek.¹⁰

In the year 1315 John of Glassereth lord of that ilk granted to Dugall Cambel, and to his wife the sister of John of Glassereth, in free maritage his lands of Knoenagullaran from the marches of Ardcastuff to the march of Kamestronireyth, together with the lake and island of the same, one pennyland of Derrenaneranach, one pennyland of Knoecalme, a great pennyland of Minenyerineh, the whole land of Karnefin, and five pennylands of Kylmyell M'Glenod¹¹—lands which appear to have been held by Dugall's father Sir Colin, and may have been included in the lands of Colin Cambel which in 1292 were part of the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle.¹² In 1342 King David II. granted to Gyllaspyk Cambell, the son and heir of the deceased Sir Colin Cambell, all the lands which by just title belonged to his brother Dugall, who died contra fidem et pacem regis.¹³ In 1357 the same king confirmed to the same Gyllaspyk the same lands, with their castles and the advowson of churches, all which had belonged to Sir Colin the father of Dugall Campbell.¹⁴ In 1368 King

David confirmed all grants, purchases, and impignorations of land in Argyle made to the same Gyllespyk the son of Sir Colin, with half the relief of his heir, if he should leave one.¹ In 1394 Duncan Kambaile, lord of Edderlyng and of Hwyle, granted 'til a nobil man and mychty Colyn Cambell lord of Lochaw' a wadset of the lands of Hvyvil (apparently Achageywill) in the lordship of Glaster, for the sum of 25 marks of silver, until he should pay that sum to the said Colin on one day on the high altar of the church of Kilnewir in the lordship of Glaster.² In 1471 King James III. granted to Colin Earl of Argyle, his 'masterhousehold,' in free barony the four marklands of Torblaren, resigned by Bahage M'Intouchirle (or Bahig Neuyntouchirly).³ In 1479 the same king granted to the same earl the lands of Garcaid, Craigenewir, and Tanglandlew, resigned by Duncan Makcane.⁴ In 1492 Master John Scrimgeour of Glassary granted to the same earl, for a sum of money paid to him in his necessity, the lands of Auchaleley, Feorlan, Lochie, Knokmaddie, and Dournadounan, in the barony of Glassary.⁵ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed the lands of Glasry, at that time yielding yearly 50 marks, to Archibald Earl of Ergil as heir to his father Colin.⁶ In 1495 Ewen Makcoreadill of Edderlin granted to the same earl his lands of Edderlin, Cammysien, and Carren, in exchange for the Earl's lands of Fanen and others.⁷ In 1497 King James IV. confirmed the grant.⁸ In 1498 the same king confirmed to the same earl the lands of Glassary.⁹ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Archibald Earl of Ergile in various lands and baronies, including the lands of Edderlyn, of the old extent of £5.¹⁰ In 1513 King James V. granted to the same Colin, then Earl, as legal heir to his father Archibald, the lands of Glasry and Edderling.¹¹ In 1526 the same lands were resigned by Earl Colin in favour of Archibald his son, to whom they were then granted by the same king.¹² In 1541 the same king granted anew to Archibald Earl of Argyle, who had resigned them, the lands of Glassery and Edderling, namely, Menard, Kilmichaelbeg, Garthenrannich, Knok, Ardecastell, Gallanache, Auchnabrek, Ballemoir, Kilmichaell, Hoyellow, Monencarnach, Knopalway, Tunnyne, Garwald, Cragnewyr, Thangenalyith (or Changenalryicht), Bairquholl, Torowlaren, Lag, Auchety, Tarilych (or Carlych), and Cragmvyill.¹³ In 1542 Earl Archibald again resigned the same lands to King James V., by whom they were then granted to Archibald the Earl's son and heir.¹⁴ In the same year the same king granted to Earl Archibald the superiority of the five marklands of the two Brayvallichis, which were resigned by Lauchlane M'Lauchlane of that Ilk, their hereditary possessor.¹⁵

In 1481 Duncan Campbell of Kilmichell, and in 1494 Archibald Campbell of Kilmichell or Kirkmichael (the same Kilmichael that is mentioned in several of the above grants), appear in record.¹⁶ In 1531 Archibald Campbell of Kirkmichael was one of a number appointed as arbiters in all disputes between Archibald Earl of Argyle and Duncane Campbell of Glenurquhy.¹ In 1549 Dugald Campbell, the son and heir of Archibald Campbell of Kilmichaell, became bound to resign to Archibald Earl of Argyle the lands of Auchageyll, Knockalloway, and Stronknok, as soon as the Earl should infeft him in land within Tarbet and Avallegan of as much yearly value as the six marklands of Kilchammig, Gartnagrenoch, and Muckarich, formerly given him by the same earl.²

In 1470 several precepts of seisin by the Earl of Argyle are addressed among others to Cristin M'Callar of Ardare.³ In the year 1476 King James III. granted to Gilchrist Makalere the lands of Ardare and Cragmurgile in the barony of Glastray, the former having been resigned by Mariot the daughter of Molmoria M'Kesek, and the latter by the said Gilchrist.⁴ In 1518 Duncan Makkellar of Ardare was one of the deputies of Colin Earl of Ergile within the sheriffdom.⁵ In 1528 Duncan M'Aulay of Ardorie had a grant of land from Dugall Campbell of Coruorran.⁶ In 1538 Gilleane M'Callar was one of the bailies of Earl Archibald.⁷ In 1553 a charter of Archibald Master of Ergile is witnessed by Duncan M'Ilpatrik V'Kellart.⁸ In 1555 Gilbert M'Kellar was served heir to his father Duncan M'Kellar of Ardare in the two marklands of Ardare in the bailerie of Glasso.⁹ In 1564 we meet with Gilbert M'Kellar of Ardorie and Malcome his son.¹⁰ In 1627 Alexander Campbell was served heir in the same two marklands to his father John bishop of Argyle.¹¹

Some lands in Glassary were included in the barony of Inveryne. In 1539 King James V., after attaining his majority, granted that barony to John Lawmond of Inveryne, and in the grant were enumerated the five marks and a half of the two Cerrikis, 23s. 4d. of Auchinboy, 50s. of Ardnehellery, 3 marks of Kilmichelbeg, 3 marks of Balmory, 3 marks of Lingartane, 4 marks of Duntelkane, 4 marks of Blarebow, 3 marks and a half of Dowpeyn, 4 marks of Moneydryane, 3 marks of Drumtecmick, 2 marks of Fernocht, and 3 marks of Auchinquhois, which with a few others were styled the lands of Ardcalmasaig.¹² In 1553 nearly the whole of these lands, which belonged to the deceased Robert Lawmont of Inveryne, and were in the Sovereign's hands for ninety years by reason of nonentry, were appraised as follows in favour of Master Archibald Lawmont the son of Sir John Lawmont of Inveryne, as Queen's donatar of the non-entry and other dues, namely, the two Carrikis, paying yearly £10, appraised for £900 as the ferme for ninety years while in the Sovereign's hands, and £45 as the sheriff's fee; Auchinbowe, paying yearly 6 marks, for £360 ferme, and £18 sheriff's fee; Auchinhalley, paying yearly 12 marks, for £720 ferme, and £36 sheriff's fee; Kilmouchaelbeg, 12 marks, for the same; Ballymoir, £10, for £900 ferme, and £45 sheriff's fee; Lingartane, 12 marks, for £720 ferme, and £36 sheriff's fee; Duncallane, £8, for the same; Blarbowe, 12 marks, for the same; and Dowpin, 10 marks, for £600 ferme, and £30 sheriff's fee.¹³ In the same year these lands, in default of movable goods that might be distrained on the soil of the property, were according to act of parliament sold with the rest of the barony to the same Master Archibald Lawmont.¹ In 1597 James Lawmont was served heir of entail to his eldest son Robert in the lands and barony of Inwiryn, including the lands granted to John Lawmond in 1539.²

In 1572 James Scrymgeoure of Dudhoip, constable of Dundie, granted to Margaret Scrymgeoure, widow of the deceased John M'Donald Glas, and to his son and heir Donald M'Ean V'Onill Glas, in liferent, the lands of Kilnewir, of the old extent of three marks.³

In the same year Finvall Nikean, the wife of Donald M'Alane V'Donile of Dunnad, resigned to James Scrymgeoure of Dudhope constable of Dundie the twenty shillinglands of Carnyame, the said Donald warranting the constable free of all harm in respect of the lands from the heirs of the deceased Lauchlane M'Donald V'Alane.⁴

In 1589 Archibald M'Walter Vic Donche Vic Persoun was served heir of entail to his brother Donald of Carrik in 16s. 8d. of Carrikbeg with the island called Glachillane, 3 marks of Carrikmoir, 3 marks and 10s. of Ardnaherer with the islands called Illanebeg and Illanemoir, and 3 marks of Achinala, in all 11 marks of old extent.⁵ In 1614 Elizabeth Campbell was served heiress to her father Dougald Campbell of Kilmorie in the same lands, with the exception of the Carriks, extending to 6 marks and 10s. of old extent in Ardcalmassage in Glastrie.⁶

The only village in the parish is Lochgilphead.⁷

There was formerly a considerable village at Kilmichael, where the Campbells of Auchnabrek, whose family mansion was at Lochgair, used to hold their baron courts.⁸

From the Campbells of Kirnan was descended Thomas Campbell, the author of the 'Pleasures of Hope.'⁹ It is said that in the manse of Kilmichael, after a visit to the old house and garden at Kirnan, he wrote his lines, 'On Visiting a Scene in Argyleshire.'¹⁰

In 1814, on the demolition of a ruined wall in this parish, there was discovered a fragment of an ancient bell of diminutive size, evidently one of those bells of frequent occurrence in Scotland, which were dedicated to some saint, and held in great reverence in connexion with his name. The case in which it was enclosed is of bronze, richly ornamented, and has attached to it a chain and small cross.¹¹

On a rocky conical mount, which rises abruptly out of Crinan Moss near the river Ad, is situated the ancient fort of Dunad, of an oval form, and measuring 90 feet by 45.¹²

THIS parish, stretching on the west for about fifteen miles along the shore of Lochfyne to the point of Ardlamont, and thence on the east along the Kyles of Bute to the mouth of Lochridon, has its surface diversified by numerous hills of no great height, and by a few small lakes. The western coast is low and sandy, indented by several beautiful bays.

Between the years 1230 and 1246 Duncan the son of Fercher, and his nephew Lauman the son of Malcolm, granted to the monks of Paisley the church called by the former Killinan, and by the other granter the church of Saint Finan which is called Kylfinnan, with the patronage of the same.²⁰ The charter of Duncan the son of Fercher is witnessed by Nechten rector of the church of Killinan.²¹ In the year 1250, on the day of Saint Cosmus and Saint Damian (27 September), Maurice the official of the bishop of Argyle and perpetual vicar of the church gave the monks of Paisley corporal possession of the church of Kyllinan, saving the fourth part of its tithes belonging to the bishop's table or to the archdeaconry, and all other episcopal dues, and saving his own vicarage taxed at one fourth of all the tithes, offerings, and other issues, the pasture of twelve cows, and forty rigs (sulcis) belonging to the vicarage.²² In 1253 Alan bishop of Argyle confirmed to the monks the church of Saint Finan in Kethromecongall, on con-condition that service should be duly performed therein.¹ In the same year Stephen bishop of the Isles (episcopus Sodorensis), appointed by the pope administrator of the church of Argyle, confirmed to the monks 'the church of Saint Finan commonly called Kylinan in Kethromecongall,' to be converted to their own uses, saving the bishop's fourth, the rights of the archdeaconry, the vicarage perpetually taxed by him as local diocesan at one-fourth of the fruits, and all the rights possessed by Maurice the vicar at the time of this grant.² In 1265 the church with its chapels and pertinents was confirmed to the monks by Pope Clement IV.³ In 1268 Malmor called Hobolan was perpetual vicar of the church.⁴ In 1269 Laurence bishop of Argyle confirmed to the monks the mother church of Saint Finan in Kethromecongall, granted to them by Duncan the son of Ferkard and his nephew Lauman the son of Malcolm, and confirmed by Alan the bishop's predecessor, with its chapels and pertinents.⁵ In 1270 the grants of Duncan and Lauman were confirmed by Engus the son of Duncan.⁶ In 1284 and 1285 Maurice was chaplain of the parish church of Saint Finan.⁷ In 1295 Malcolm the son and heir of Lauman confirmed to the monks of Paisley a halfpennyland belonging to the church of Kyllinan, and the patronage of that church, of which Fynlay, chaplain to Sir James the Steward of Scotland and witness to the deed, was then perpetual vicar.⁸ In 1299, in a case litigated at Glasgow between the monks and Bishop Laurence, the bishop's procurator promised in his name that he should give the monks a letter regarding the vicarage of Saint Queran similar to that which he had given them concerning the vicarage of Saint Finan in Kethromecongall.⁹ In 1327 the church of Kylyfyan was confirmed to the monks by Andrew bishop of Argyle.¹⁰ In 1351 the monks complained to the pope's commissioners that Bishop Martin had appropriated the fruits of the church of Saint Finan and their other churches within his diocese.¹¹ In 1362 an amicable arrangement was effected between the parties, when it was agreed that the bishop should cause to be relaxed the sequestration of the fruits of the church of Kylfelan which he had made on account of default of repair, and should duly answer to the monks for the same — that the monks as bound should repair the church — that the bishop should bind those who had engaged with the monks for its repair to fulfil their engagement on pain of ecclesiastical censure — that, if on lawful grounds he should judge the person presented by the monks to the church unworthy or unqualified, he should intimate to them as patrons the vacancy thus produced, that they might present a qualified person to him as diocesan, and that the monks should hac vice present to the church the person nominated by the bishop, the right of presentation in future vacancies remaining with them as before.¹² In other respects the arrangement was the same that was made in the case of the church of Kilkerran.¹³ In 1452 a charter of Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochawe is witnessed by Sir Robert Dewar, styled in the Record of the Great Seal 'vicar of Saint Seruan of Kylyfynane.'¹⁴ A controversy which for some years existed between the monks of Paisley and John Lawmond of that ilk regarding the right of patronage to the church of Saint Finan was in 1466, in virtue of a papal rescript obtained by the latter, and by mutual agreement, terminated as follows:—The monks exhibited to Lawmond all the charters granted to them by his ancestors relative to the church, and all the royal, papal, and episcopal confirmations of the same, on inspecting which he fully admitted that he had no right to the patronage, renounced all claim to it for himself and heirs, and confirmed all the deeds of his ancestors in favour of the monks.¹ In 1489 Robert bishop of Argyle sequestrated the fruits of the church, and in 1491 he was publicly excommunicated at the altar of the parish church of Glasgow for contumaciously refusing to appear before the sub-delegates of the pope's commissioner, the abbot of Culros.² In 1537 a charter of John Lawmont of Ardlawmont is witnessed by John Lawmont, the parish clerk of Killelane.³ In 1621 James Earl of Abircorne, Lord Payslay and Kilpatrick, was served heir to his grandfather Claud Lord Paislay in the lordship or barony of Paislay, including an annual revenue of 40 shillings from the kirklands of Killelane, and the parsonage teinds and patronage of the church.⁴ In 1669 Alexander Home was served heir to William Home his father, servitor to the Earl of Eglintoun, in the tithes and patronage of Killelan.⁵

The church, built in 1759, apparently on the site of an older, stands on Lochfyne near the head of Kilfinan Bay.⁶ In 1839 another church was built in the south end of the parish.⁷

There was at one period a chapel at Auchagoyle on Lochfyne to the south of the parish church. In the year 1537 John Lawmont of Ardlawmont granted to John Lawmont of Inuerrin the four marklands of Auchiquhill with the advowson of the chapelry of Auchingille, the grant being confirmed by King James V.⁸ In 1539 in a grant of the barony of Inuerin by King James V. to the same John Lawmont the four marklands and chapel of Auchingilze were included.⁹ In 1597 James Lawmound was served heir of entail to his eldest son Robert in the same barony, including the four marks of Achagyle, the patronage of the chapel of Achagyle, and the mill.¹⁰

The earliest landholders in this parish of whom there is any record appear to have been the family of Lamont, whose earliest known representatives were Duncan the son of Fereher and his nephew Lauman the son of Malcolm mentioned above.¹¹ These appear in record between 1230 and 1246, and in 1270 we meet with Engus the son of Duncan.¹² About the years 1270 and 1290 there appear in record Malcolm the son of Lauman, Malmor the son of Laumun (called also Malmory Maklaweman of Argyle), and John the son of Lagman, the son of Gilcom (or Malcolm) M'Fereher.¹³ In 1456 John Lawmond was bailie of Cowale, and in 1466, as we have seen, the monks of Paisley had a controversy regarding the church of Kilfinan with John Lawmond of that Ilk, who yielded his claim only on production of the charters granted by his ancestors.¹ In 1534, 1535, 1536, and 1537, John Lawmont of Ardlawmont appears in record, and in the first of these years dates a charter at Ardlawmont.² In 1554 a charter by Makneill of Geya is witnessed by John Lawmond of that Ilk.³

About the year 1463 the lands belonging to Lawmont of that Ilk fell to the crown by reason of nonentry,⁴ and for nearly a century were held of the crown by another branch of the family, who were subsequently known as the Lawmonts of Inverin. In 1472 King James III. granted to John Lawmond (who in 1481 is styled John Lawmanson of Inueryn) and his heirs by his wife 'Donaldis dochtir', with remainder to his brother Duncan Lawmond and his heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever the lands of Ardlawmond, Corowrowray, Kilbride, Ancletymony, Askak, Stewlag, Dragrouche, Glenne, Auchoquhorlomore, Auchoquhorlobeg, Auchnyschellouche, Cragnaveache, Demella-lauche, Auchinske, Drumglas, Invyryne, and other lands in Cowale, erected into the free barony of Invyryne.⁵ In 1515 John Lawmont of Inverin, together with Colin Earl of Ergile and others, had a remission for their crimes committed within Cowal and the neighbouring districts.⁶ In 1533, 1534, 1535, 1536, 1537, 1539, and 1540, John Lawmond of Inuerin appears in record.⁷ On the 3d of January 1539 King James V. granted to Archibald, the second son of Johne Lawmond of Inuerin, the nonentry and other dues of the 8 marklands of Inuerin, 6 marks of Drum-noglasne, 5 marks of Auchinske, 2½ marks of Malleloch, 2½ marks of Auchinsellich and Dowglen-nane, 3 marks of Cragneveoch, 6 marks of Stewlag, 8 marks of Ardlawmond, 4 marks of Glennane, and other lands in Cowale, in the King's hands since the decease of Robert Lawmond of Inuerin.⁸ On the 8th of the same month King James V. granted to John Lawmond of Inuerin the half of £2000 Scots due by him as a composition for a new infeftment in all his lands, which he had resigned to the King.⁹ On the 31st the same king granted to the same John Lawmond, for his good service rendered to the King in France and other parts, all the lands which he had resigned, united into the barony of Inveryne, including those above enumerated, and 20 shillings of Auchechorkbeg, 2½ marks of Auchechorkmore, 6 marks of Darbreuch, 4 marks of Askak, 4 marks of Auchintymalmory, 6 marks of Kilbridy, and £5 of Corrowe.¹⁰ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to Sir John Lawmond of Inueryn in liferent, and to his son and heir Duncan Lawmond in heritage, the lands and barony of Inueryn, with its castles, mills, and woods, which Sir John had resigned, to be held of the Queen as Stewardess of Scotland.¹¹ In 1553 Queen Mary caused to be appraised and sold to her donatar Master Archibald Lawmont, the son of Sir John, the lands of Ardlawmont, paying yearly £40, for the sum of £3600 as the ferme for 90 years while in the Queen's

The lands of Dragrouche or Darbreuich, included in the above grants of the barony of Inverin, and otherwise named Dunbroch, Dergrow, and Dergbruch, were in 1534 and 1537 held by Angus Lawmont.⁵

About the year 1290 John the son of Lagman, the son of Gilcom M'Fercher, granted in heritage to Sir Colin Kambel his two pennylands of Kamesnemuclach and Hacheteyhewyn, for payment of the King's forinsec service, and his aid, and a suit at John's court of Ardrorkynryke three times in the year, and finding for him at the gatherings (congregationibus) of Ergile two men with their victuals, as was customary in the country.⁶ In 1494 Elizabeth Menteth, lady of Rusky and widow of John Napar of Merchanistoun, with consent of her son Archibald Napar of Merchanistoun, sold to Archibald Earl of Argyle her half of the lands of Ardmarnok in the bailiary of Cowale, the sale being confirmed by King James IV.⁷ In 1513 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Argyle, as heir to his father Earl Archibald, the lands of Ardmarnog, Cammys, and Auchtyewin.⁸ In 1526 the same lands were resigned by the same earl in favour of Archibald his son and heir, to whom they were then granted by King James V.⁹ In 1541 they were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl, and were granted to him anew by the same king.¹⁰ In 1542 they were, on his resignation, granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.¹¹ In 1635 James Lamond of Inueryne was served heir to his father Sir Coill Lamond of Inueryne in the lands of Auchtekenns and Cames, respectively of the old extent of 6 marks and 4 marks.¹²

In the year 1475 King James III. granted to Robert of Bannachtyne, the son of Ninian Bannachtyne of Camys, certain lands in Bute, and also the lands of the two Auchquhrossanez in the bailiary of Cowale, with remainder to his brothers Alexander and Walter, and his own heirs bearing his surname and arms, reserving the liferent to Ninian, and the terce to his wife, if he should marry.¹³ In 1635 James Lamond of Inueryne was served heir to his father Sir Coill Lamond of Inueryne in the lands of Auchincrossanemore and Auchincrossanebeg in the lordship of Cowall, of the old extent of 5 marks.¹⁴

In the year 1431 Suffne or Swene son of Ewen (Sunicus or Suffnus Eugenii), lord of Oittyr, granted to Duncan the son of Alexander (Doncano Alexandri), his son Duncan, and all his other heirs, his lands of Stroynemayte and Barlaggan in the lordship of Oittyr, for yearly payment of 4 shillings Scots.¹ In 1432 Swene son of Ewen resigned to King James I. the barony of Ottirinerane in Cowale, which that King granted to him anew, with remainder to Celestine Cambel, the son and heir of Duncan Cambel of Lochaw.² By an indenture made in the same year at the Ottir it was agreed, that when Suffne M'Ewyn, laird of Ottirineran, should have an heir, he should pay to Gillaspay Cambel, the son and heir of Duncan Cambel lord of Lochaw, on one day or otherwise at Gillaspay's pleasure, 60 marks Scots and 25 sufficient marks at the Ottirineran, Incheonnil, or Innerayra, or give him the two Larragis and the lands of Killala in the barony of Ottir for yearly payment of half a mark; and, should his heir die before he should have another, that the agreement should remain valid, and Suffne should give Gillaspay the first offer of the land, if leased.³ In 1493 King James confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, as heir to his father Colin, the lands of Ottir, at that time yielding yearly 30 marks.⁴ In 1513 the barony of Ottir was confirmed by King James V. to Earl Colin as heir to Earl Archibald.⁵ In 1526 the barony was resigned by Earl Colin, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.⁶ In 1541 King James V. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle on his resignation the lands and barony of Ottirinerane.⁷ In 1542 the same Earl resigned them in favour of his son and heir Archibald Campbell, to whom they were then granted by King James V.⁸

The lands of Ottir were held of the Earls of Argyle by a family of Campbells. In 1481 and 1494 Archibald Campbell of Ottir appears in record.⁹ In 1501 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Colin Campbell of Ottir, the 40 marklands of Ottir and the stewardry of the same.¹⁰ In 1575 a charter of John Campbell of Calder is witnessed by Archibald Campbell 'apperrand of the Otter.'¹¹

In 1534 John Lawmont of Inueryne granted to John Lawmont of Ardlawmont the right of reversion to the lands of Derengyroch in Cowall, on payment of 120 marks Scots.¹² In the same year John Lawmont lord of Ardlawmont, for certain sums of money paid by Archibald Earl of Argyle, sold to him the lands of Derengyrochmoir and Glenchow, of the old extent of 5 marks.¹³ In 1535 or 1536 the sale was confirmed by King James V.¹⁴ In 1536 the same John Lawmond sold to the same earl his 10 marklands of Derengarychbeg and Linsag, and in 1537 King James V. confirmed the sale.¹⁵ In 1541 the lands of Lynsag, Glencaw, Derengyrochmore, and Derengyrochbeg, were granted anew by King James V. to Archibald Earl of Argyle on his resignation, and in 1542, on a second resignation, to Archibald Campbell,

THIS parish, which is said to have been known of old first as Glenduisk and afterwards as Glendaruell, consists mainly of the flat valley of the river Ruail, flanked by heath-clad hills, and terminating southward in the low sandy shores of Loch Ridon.

In 1250 there appears in record John the chaplain of Kilmodan.¹² In 1299 Master Nicholas rector of the church of Saint Modan was procurator for Laurence bishop of Argyle in a case between him and the monks of Paisley.¹³ The church was in the gift of the crown, and was at one time a prebend of the see of Argyle, but latterly annexed to the priory of Whithorn. In 1542 Master James Striveling was rector of the parish church of Kilmoden, and in that year, in the event of his resignation, Sir Robert Lawmond was appointed rector by King James V.¹⁴

In 1552 Master Robert Lawmonth (apparently the Sir Robert of the former grant) was presented to the chancellor of the Chapel Royal at Stirling, and in the event of his resignation Andrew Disert was presented by Queen Mary to the prebend of Kilmoden.¹ In 1554 Master James Striuling was still rector of Kilmoden.² In 1556 the rector was Master Robert Lamonth.³ In 1558 Master Robert Lawmond died, and his brother Walter Lawmond was appointed rector of Kilmvddane.⁴ In 1640 James Levingstoun keeper of the privy seal had from King Charles I. a lease for thrice nineteen years of the temporality of Argyle and the Isles, including the lands and teinds of the kirk of Kilmodden belonging to the bishoprick of Galloway.⁵ In 1648 he resigned it in favour of Archibald Marquis of Argyle, to whom it was confirmed by the same king.⁶ In 1671 James bishop of Galloway granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the parsonage and vicarage teinds of Kilmodden in Cowall, 'which paroch', as the deed bears, 'is part and pendicle of the priory of Whithorne.'⁷

The present church appears to occupy the site of the original one on the left bank of the river Ruail, near the mouth of the glen.⁸

In the year 1442 a grant of land to the collegiate church of Kilmun by Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochaw its founder, is witnessed by his son Nigel (or Neill) Campbell of Ormodul.⁹ In 1452 Colin Neilson (Nigelli) Campbell was lord of Ormodule (or Ardmodule), and had two sons Duncan and Celestine.¹⁰ Colin Campbell of Ormydale appears in record also in the years 1474, 1481, and 1494.¹¹ The heir and successor of Colin Neilson Campbell in 1553 was Colin Campbell of Ardmodule.¹² In 1574 Duncan Campbell was served heir to his father Colin Campbell of Ormadell in the lands of Ormadell and other lands in the lordship of Cowall.¹³ In 1609 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Duncan in the same lands.¹⁴ In 1634 Duncan Campbell of Ormadill was served heir to his father Colin in the same lands united into the barony of Ormadill.¹⁵

on the Feast of Saint John the Baptist (24 June).¹ In 1575 the vicar of Innerkelane was Sir John Lawmond.² On the restoration of the chapter of Argyle by King Charles II. in 1662 the minister at Innerchelane was appointed one of the prebendaries.³

The church stands on the east side of Lochstriven.⁴ The present building was erected in 1812 on the site of an older built in 1745, which, it is said, succeeded one of still older date.⁵ What appears however to have been the parish church before the Reformation remains with its burying-ground on a hill about 200 yards above the present church.⁶ The names Killenane or Killelane, Kilmichael, and Kilmarnock, places in the southern part of the parish, seem to indicate the former existence of churches dedicated to Saint Fillan (or Finan), Saint Michael, and Saint Marnok, though there is no other record known of such existence.⁷

Before the year 1371 Robert the Steward of Scotland granted the lands of Lochstrevinshead to Archibald, the son of Sir Colin Campbell of Lochaw.⁸ In 1407 the Regent Robert Duke of Albany granted to Colin Cambel of Lochaw, on his resignation, the lands of Lochstrevinshead, and all others in the bailiary of Cowale held by him of the Steward of Scotland.⁹ In 1493 Archibald Earl of Ergil as heir to his father Earl Colin was by a precept of King James IV. seised in the lands of Lochstrevinshead, which at that time, together with the lands of Strathache, yielded yearly 48 marks.¹⁰ In 1526 the same lands were resigned by Colin Earl of Ergile to King James V., who then granted them to Archibald Master of Ergile, with reservation of the life-rent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.¹¹ In 1541 the same king granted the same lands to Earl Archibald on his resignation.¹² In 1542 they were again resigned by the same earl, and granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.¹³

In the year 1376 King Robert II. granted to John the son of Alan all the land of Kyllenane in the barony of Cowall, for making common suit at his court of Cowall and other due services.¹⁴ In 1525 King James V. granted to John Lawmond of Inverin in free barony the three marklands of old extent of Killenane in the bailiary of Cowall, which belonged to Affrica Makpatrik, the daughter and heiress of Duncan Makpatrik of Killenane, and which she with the consent of her husband Gilbert Turnour had resigned to the King.¹⁵ In 1539 the four marklands of Ardyne and the three marks of Killenane were included in the barony of Inverryne then granted by King James V. to John Lawmond of Inverryne.¹⁶ In 1548 the same lands as part of the barony of Inueryn were resigned by Sir John Lawmond of Inueryn, and granted by Queen Mary as Stewardess of Scotland to him in life-rent, and to Duncan Lawmond his son and apparent heir in heritage.¹ In 1597 the same lands continued to be included in the same barony, in which James Lawmond was in that year served heir to Robert Lawmond his eldest son.²

The lands of Inverchaolan and some others in the parish were at one time held by a family named Lawmondson, and latterly by the Lawmonds of Inverin. The former were probably descended from one of the sons of Laumon, who have been mentioned above.³ In 1402 a grant of John the Steward, lord of Achagowyn, to the church of Dunoyng, is witnessed by Celestine Lawmanson (Lawmanni) the son and heir of Robert Lawmanson, and also by Cristin Lawmanson.⁴ In 1431 a charter of Swene son of Ewin, lord of Oitty, given at Innerkeylan on the Feast of Saint John the Baptist, is witnessed by Geoffry son of John son of Lamann lord of Innerkeylan, Doncan son of Celestine son of Lawman, and Ferchard son of John son of Cristin son of Lawman.⁵ From 1445 to 1450 Patrick Lawmondson was crowner of Cowale and receiver of the crown rents within the lordship.⁶ In 1448 he accounts for the sum of £15, 12s. 1½d. of the fermes of the lands of the deceased Duncan Laumondson which were in the King's hands by reason of ward, part of which, Macchorle, was held in tenandry.⁷ In 1449 his account of the same fermes amounted to £31, 4s. 3d.⁸ In 1450 his account of the fermes of the lands of the deceased Duncan Laumondson both in property and in tenandry for that year amounted to £32.⁹ In 1452 King James II., in part payment of the sum of 800 marks lent to him by the canons of Glasgow out of the offerings made in their church in the time of indulgences, granted to them all the crown rents of Bute, Arane, and Cowall, with the liberty of setting the lands and levying the rents.¹⁰ In 1472 King James III. granted to John Lawmond and to his heirs by his wife 'Donaldis dochtir', with remainder to his brother Duncan Lawmond and his heirs, and to John's heirs whomsoever, the barony of Inveryne, including among others the lands of Trowstir, Colstane, Strongerrick, Inverkellane, Kilmernak, and Kilmichell.¹¹ In 1539 King James V. granted anew to John Lawmond of Inveryne, on his resignation, the same barony, including 8 marks of Kilmichell, 2 marks of the two Brakleis, 2 marks of Kilmarnok, 2 marks of Knokdow, 4 marks of Inuerkelane, 4 marks of Stronyarig, 2 marks of Gartanelosk, 5 marks of Troister, and 5 marks of Colfstane and Strone.¹² In 1553 Knokdow, Innerquhallane, Colstane, and Strone, which with some other lands in Argyle had formerly belonged to the deceased Robert Lawmont of Inveryne, and which for 90 years had been in the Sovereign's hands by reason of nonentry, were appraised and sold to Master Archibald Lawmont, the son of Sir John Lawmont of Inveryne, the Queen's donatar, as follows: — the 2 marks of Knokdow, paying yearly 7 marks, for £420 of ferme due for nonentry, and £21 as the fee of the appriser; the 4 marks of Innerquhallane, paying yearly £10, for £900

ferme, and £45 appriser's fee; and the 5 marks of Colstane and Strone, paying yearly 20 marks, for £1200 ferme, and £60 appriser's fee.¹ In 1597 James Lawmound was served heir of entail to his eldest son Robert Lawmound in the whole of the above lands, then also included in the barony of Inwiryn.²

In 1404 John Stewart of Ardgowan, the natural son of King Robert III., resigned the lands of Innerdavigan and others, which the King then granted to Colin Campbell of Lochaw.³ By a charter of 1406 the same Colin appears to have purchased these lands and others from King Robert III. for the sum of 200 marks.⁴ In 1497 Archibald Earl of Ergile resigned the two marklands of Inneravagane, and King James IV. granted them to Gilerist Lawmond, with reservation of the franktenement to the Earl for life.⁵ In the same year Gilerist Lawmond agreed with Earl Archibald to resign the same lands and others into the King's hands, that he might procure a new infestment therein for himself and his heirs, with remainder to the Earl, who paid to him for the transaction 100 marks at five several terms.⁶ In 1498 the two marklands of Innerdaviggane were resigned by Gilerist Lawmond, and granted by King James IV. to the same Earl Archibald.⁷

In the year 1407 John Simple of West Pathwyle resigned to the Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, the lands of Innerneilbeg in Nether Cowall.⁸ In 1495 King James IV. granted the same lands to Gilcrist Lawmond.⁹ In 1473 King James III. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile, Lord Lorn and Campbell, the offices of justiciar, chamberlain, sheriff, and bailie, within the King's lordship of Kingis-Cowale, namely, from the water of Lindesay to the point of Towart in length, and from Aleskennay to Ardlawmond in breadth.¹⁰ In the same year William Haket of Beilsice was appointed the King's clerk of justiciary within the same bounds.¹¹ In 1497 Gilcrist Lawmond of Innerneilbeg, as before stated, agreed with Archibald Earl of Ergile to resign to the King certain lands, including Innerneilbeg and Glak, together with the office of crowner of Cowall, for the purpose of procuring a new infestment for himself and his heirs, with remainder to the Earl.¹² In 1498, on resignation by Gilcrist Lawmond, King James IV. granted to Earl Archibald the same lands, with the office of 'crounerschep' within these bounds, namely, 'from the water of Altnaskenne to the poynt of Toward, and from the poynt of Toward to the poynt of Ardlawmond, and thence to the water of Lynsaig, and from the water of Lynsaig to the well called in vulgari Tybberoyr.'¹³ In 1507 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Archibald Maklauchlane, the son and apparent heir of John Maklauchlane of Strathlauchlane, the lands of Innerneilbeg and Glak, of the old extent of 5 marks, the grant being confirmed by King James IV.¹ In 1513 the same lands were confirmed by King James V. to Colin Earl of Ergile as heir to his father Earl Archibald.² In 1526 they were resigned by the same earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir apparent, reserving the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.³ In 1541 they were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl of Ergile, and granted to him anew by King James V.⁴ In 1542 the same earl resigned the lands of Inverneill and Glak, which were then granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.⁵

In 1474 Colin Campbell lord of Ormadale granted to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, for their service and prayers, six shillings and eightpence of annual revenue from his lands of Ardgartricht lying within the sheriffdom of Cowale and the lands commonly called le Stroyne.⁶ In 1574 Duncan Campbell was served heir to his father Colin Campbell of Ormadell in the land of Stronkynknock, of the old extent of £20, 6s. 8d., and including Ormadell (in Kilmadan), Innerneilmuir, Ardgaltymbeg, Balloch, Ardintrayfe, Larachbey, Auchinteam, Fornachie, Cogache, Forlingmoir, and the island of Ellengreig.⁷ In 1609 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Duncan, and in 1634 Duncan Campbell of Ormadill was served heir to his father Colin in the same lands, united in the latter year into the barony of Ormadill.⁸

The island of Ellengreig (or Elländheirrig) is mentioned by Fordun (circa 1400) under the name Helingerik, on which he says there is an impregnable castle belonging to the lord of Lauquhaw.⁹ This island lies in the mouth of Loch Ridon (the Louchriane of Fordun) on the west of the parish.¹⁰ The ruins of the castle, which in 1685 was fortified by Archibald Earl of Argyle, are still in existence.¹¹

At Ardein in the south-eastern extremity of the parish there is an artificial mound, which has been thought to be the 'moothill' of some baron of the olden time.¹²

 No. 17.)

DUNOON and Kilmun appear to have been united into one parish before the year 1659.¹⁰

The old parish of Dunoon appears to have been separated from Kilmun by Loch Eck and the stream called Eachaig by which its waters are discharged into the arm of the sea called the Holy Loch.¹¹ Its whole aspect is hilly, and Benmore, the highest mountain in Cowall, is 2500 feet above the level of the sea.

In the year 1270 Sir Lambert was rector of the church of Dunhoven.¹² Between 1283 and 1303 Fynlay rector of the church of Dunhon is witness to a grant by James the Steward of Scotland.¹³ In 1402 Sir John the Steward of Achagowyn granted to the Virgin Mary and the parish church of Dunoyng and its rectors the farthingland (quadrentem terre) of Fynvaccan in the bailiary of Cowale.¹⁴ The grant is witnessed by Sir Donald the chaplain of Dunoyng.¹⁵ In 1432 an indenture made at the Ottir between Suffne M'EWyn 'larde of Ottirinweran' and Gillaspay Cambel the son of Duncan lord of Lochaw is witnessed by Sir Allesonder the parson of Dunnowyn.¹⁶ In 1453 Master David Reid rector of Dunnowyne is witness to a deed of Sir Duncan Campbell lord of Lochawe.¹⁷ In 1453 King James II., compassionating the poverty of the bishoprick of Argyle, granted to Bishop George the parish church of Dunnone with its tithes and churchlands as a mensal church for ever.¹⁸ In 1489 the curate of the church of Donwne was one of three appointed by the subdelegates of the pope to threaten Bishop Robert with excommunication for disobeying their order to relax the sequestration of the fruits of certain churches belonging to the monks of Paisley.¹⁹ In 1507 King James IV., for his singular devotion towards the blessed confessor Saint Moloc, patron of the cathedral church of Lismore, confirmed to Bishop David the grants of Sir John the Steward and of King James II.²⁰ In 1574 James bishop of Argyle, as parson of Dunoon, let to Archibald Earl of Argyle the teinds of that parish, reserving to himself 48 bolls 1 firloft victual, meal and bear, from the lands of Killennan.¹ In 1614 Bishop Andrew let the teinds to Earl Archibald for £160 and 32 bolls victual.² In 1662, when the chapter of Argyle was restored by King Charles II., the minister at Dunnoune was appointed treasurer.³

The church appears to have always occupied nearly its present site on the shores of the Firth of Clyde.⁴ The present church was built in 1816.⁵ There is said to have been a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary on the farm of Toward-an-uilt, of which the cemetery remains.⁶

In the year 1294 a grant of James the Steward of Scotland to the monks of Paisley is witnessed by Arthur of Donnon.⁷ The crown rents of the lands of Dunnovane, as stated by Patrick Lawmondson crowner of Cowale, amounted in 1445, 1446 and 1447 respectively to £14, 13s. 4d., and in each of the years 1448, 1449, and 1450 to £18.⁸ In 1454 Robert of Foullartoun of Dunnoune appears in record.⁹ In 1476 a deed of John of Ila Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Donald Balloch of Dunnovane.¹⁰ In 1506 King James IV. granted, and the Scottish parliament confirmed, to David bishop of Lismore and his tenants of Dunone the liberty of taking 'le hadder, petis, and turfis (genestam, petas, et glebas)' from all the moors and marshes within the lordship of Cowell.¹¹

The castle of Dunoon, a royal fortress, whose remains may still be seen on a hill commanding the junction of Loch Long and the Holy Loch with the Firth of Clyde,¹² existed early in the thirteenth century. Between the years 1230 and 1246 John the constable of Dunoon witnesses a charter of Lauman the son of Malcolm.¹³ In 1334 the castle of Dunhun was surrendered to Edward Balliol, in token of which the keys were delivered to him at Renfrew.¹⁴ Soon afterwards Dougall Campbel lord of Lochow, and Robert the Steward of Scotland, landed in Cowaill with their galleys and engines of war, and besieged and took the castle of Dounhone.¹⁵ In 1402 a grant by John the Steward, lord of Achagowyn, is dated at Dunoyng.¹⁶ In 1446 the sum of £14, 13s. 4d. was allowed to the King's chamberlain for payment made to Robert of Calentare for keeping the castle of Dunovane for the past year.¹⁷ In each of the years 1448 and 1449 the same Robert of Calentare received for the keeping of the castle £18.¹⁸ In 1450 he received the sum of £9 for keeping the castle for half the year, and the same sum was paid to Walter Graham as keeper for the other half.¹⁹ In 1460 the lordship of Cowalle and the castle of Dunnoune were annexed to the patrimony of the Prince of Scotland.²⁰ In the same year King James III. bound himself and his heirs to satisfy Colin Earl of Argyle or his heirs for the expenses incurred by him in repairing the castle.¹ The same king, before attaining his majority, granted to Colin Earl of Argyle, Lord Lorne, the heritable keepership of the castle of Dunnone with the lands of Bordland, extending yearly to 27 marks, with all fees belonging to the same, and the power of making constables and other necessary officers.² Early in the year 1473 the same king, after having attained his majority, confirmed the grant.³ In the end of the same year the Earl's infestment in the keeping of the castle was declared an exception from the King's general revocation of grants.⁴ In 1501 a precept of seisin of the lands of Ottir by Archibald Earl of Argyle is dated at Dunnon.⁵ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Archibald Earl of Argyle in the lands of Bordland, with the keeping of the castle of Donon.⁶ In 1511 a charter of the same earl is dated at Dunnwne.⁷ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to Colin Earl of Argyle, as heir to his father Earl Archibald, the lands of Bordland with the keeping of the castle of Dunnovne.⁸ In 1522 a bond of maintenance between the same earl and John Makquole of Raeray is dated at Dunune.⁹ In 1526 King James V. granted the Bordland and castle to Earl Colin's son and apparent heir Archibald Campbell.¹⁰ In 1541 the same Archibald, then Earl of Argyle, resigned the castle and lands to King James V., who granted them to him anew.¹¹ In 1542 he again resigned them to the same king, by whom they were then granted to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.¹² In 1544 the Earl of Lennox, with a number of Englishmen and Scotch Highlanders, landed at Dunoon, and attacked and defeated the Earl of Argyle, who held the castle and attempted to oppose their landing.¹³ In 1546 certain individuals received from Queen Mary a remission for assisting the English in besieging the castle of Dunnone.¹⁴ In 1550 Archibald, Master of Ergile, with consent of Earl Archibald his father, granted to his kinsman Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas — with remainder in succession to Archibald Campbell of Gawnane, to Duncan Campbell of Drumfad, to Colin Campbell's brother James, the son and heir of the deceased Dougal Campbell of Ardcallour (or Ardaillour), to his brother Alexander, to his brother William, to his brother Robert Campbell of Auchnitre, and to his own heirs whomsoever bearing the Campbell surname and arms — certain lands in the bailliary of Cowale, together with the keeping of the King's castle of Donone, the office of bailie of the 20 marklands belonging to that keeping, and the office of coroner alias 'thochisdoir (namely, toscheochdorachtie or toscheochdoirschip)' of all the lands of Cowale from Claychintoskyecht to the point of Toward and Ardlawmont, all belonging to the said Colin in heritage, and resigned by him to the said Archibald, who became bound to maintain the castle in necessary repair, and was to receive the half of the escheats accruing from the said office of bailie and from the

Bordland.¹ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.² In 1557 a sale of land by Hector Makclane fear of Dowart to Jonet Campbell, the daughter of Archibald Earl of Argyle, was transacted at Dunnone.³ In 1560 a contract between Earl Archibald and Tormod Macloid of Harris is dated at Dunune.⁴ In 1561 the same earl dates a precept of seisin there,⁵ and in 1563 on the 30th of July a charter of Queen Mary is dated at Dunnone.⁶ In 1571 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Archibald Campbell, keeper of the castle of Dunnone, that piece of land called 'the castell aiker,' lying near the castle of Dunnone, with the office of bailie or steward of the town of Dunnone, of the four marklands of Innellane, of the five marks of Garraris, of the four marks of Kilbryde, of the five marks of the two Dunloskynes, of the four marks of Ardnada, and of the twenty shillinglands of Finbauken, in the lordship of Cowell.⁷ In 1573 Archibald Campbell again appears as captain of Dunnoone.⁸

In the year 1479 Robert bishop of Argyle dates a charter at Dunnone, then apparently one of the episcopal seats.⁹ In 1544 the town of Dunoon was burned by the soldiers of the Earl of Lennox, and the church, into which the country people had removed their goods and ornaments, was plundered of every thing it contained.¹⁰ In 1546 Walter Macfarlane of Ardleische, Andro Macfarlane his son, John Maknewar, Robert Buchqulhannane Thomassone his servant, Johnne M'Henry, and Donald Hegy 'pypar', had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the town of Dunnone and besieging the castle.¹¹ In 1556 James bishop of Argyle dates several charters 'at our town of Dunnvne'.¹² After the Reformation it appears to have been the principal seat of the bishop, and latterly the place of meeting of the provincial synod.¹³ The old village of Dunoon is now nearly obscured by the modern watering-place.

Before the year 1362 Mary countess of Menteth granted to her kinsman Archibald the son of Sir Colin Campbell of Lochaw the lands which she held of the Steward of Scotland in the barony of Cowall, namely, Keanlochilmun, Correrkmore, Stronlonag, Correnlie, Bernicemore, and Stronahunsen, for payment yearly of one silver penny at Glasgow Fair.¹⁴ In 1362 the grant was confirmed by King David II.¹⁵ In 1566 Archibald M'Iver V'Allaster of Bernis resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle, in favour of John Campbell provost of Kilmun, the lands of Bernis in the lordship of Cowall and bailery of Strathachie.¹⁶

In 1404 King Robert III., on the resignation of Sir John Stewart of Ardgowan, his natural son, granted to Colin Cambel of Lochaw the lands of Ardinslatt, Dallingford, Innerdavegan, and Glenlein in the lordship of Nether Cowall;¹⁷ which lands and others were purchased by the same Colin Cambel from the same king for the sum of 200 marks.¹⁸ In 1407 the same

Colin Cambel of Lochaw resigned to Robert Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, the lands of Ardinsclat, Dallongforte, Glenkenich, and Glenlethane, and received from him a new grant of the same.¹ In 1530 the lands of Darelougart in the barony of Strathachie were held by John Smollett, burgess of Dumbartoun, who in that year granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the right of reversion to the same.² In 1541 the lands of Glenlacyne and Ardinslait were resigned by the same earl, and granted to him anew by King James V.³ In 1542 the same lands were again resigned by the Earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.⁴ In 1553 Ardinslatt and Glenfyne (Glenlacyne?) were resigned to Earl Archibald and Archibald Master of Argyle by Archibald M'Lauchlane, in whose favour they were in 1557 resigned by Helen Campbell of Kilburnie.⁵

In 1407 Robert Duke of Albany granted to Colin Cambel of Lochaw the two pennylands of Strathachie in Cowall, and other lands held of him in that barony.⁶ In 1493 the lands of Strathache and others were confirmed by King James IV. to Archibald Earl of Ergil the heir of his father Earl Colin.⁷ At that date Strathache and Lochstrevinshede together were rented to the crown at 48 marks.⁸ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Archibald Earl of Ergyle in the barony and lands of Strathache, of the old extent of 100 marks.⁹ In 1513 the lands of Strathache were confirmed by King James V. to the same Colin then Earl of Argyle.¹⁰ In 1526 the same king granted the same lands to Archibald Campbell, the son and apparent heir of Earl Colin.¹¹ In 1541 they were granted anew by King James V. to the same Archibald, then Earl, on his resignation.¹² In 1542 they were again resigned by the same earl, and granted by the same king to Archibald his son and heir.¹³

In 1429 Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw, by a deed dated at his manor of Strathachi, granted to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow twenty shillings Scots yearly out of his escheats.¹⁴ In 1481 Colin Earl of Ergyle, by a deed dated at Kylmun, and witnessed by Ivar Campbele of Strauchin (Strachur?), granted to the same Friars during his life twenty shillings Scots out of his escheats to be paid to them from his exchequer of Cowale.¹⁵ In 1559 Archibald Earl of Ergile directs Vyr Mac Cuir his 'officiar' of Strathache to pay to the 'Blak Freris of Glasgw' twenty shillings Scots for their 'annual rent' of the year 1558.¹⁶

The lands of Toward were divided into Toward, Easter Toward or Toward-Fleming, and Little Toward or Toward-Houston. In 1449 Patrick Lawmondsone crowner of Cowell accounted for 53 shillings and 4 pence of the fermes of Tollart, in the King's hands by reason of ward since the death of Gilbert of Galbrath.¹⁷ In 1450 he accounted for £5, 6s. 8d. of the same fermes.¹⁸ In 1472 King James III. granted to John Lawmond and his heirs by his wife

'Donaldis dochtir', with remainder to his brother Duncan, the lands of Tollart as part of the barony of Inveryne.¹ In 1479 John Flemyng sued before the civil court John Lawmondston, sheriff-depute of Ergyle, for serving a brief of inquest in favour of Agnes of Galbrath on the lands of Tollarbeg.² The lords of council, having heard the case, declared the brief and seisin and all that followed thereupon to be null, on the ground that the sheriff had without necessity put upon the inquest persons of other shires and suspected persons, and not the best and worthiest of the country.³ In 1498 King James IV. granted to Archibald Earl of Ergil the lands of Ester Towart, of the old extent of 40 shillings, which belonged heritably to Robert Flemyng, and had been resigned by him to the King.⁴ In 1509 the same king granted to the same earl the ward of the lands of Towart with the marriage of the heir, in the King's hands by the decease of Andro Houston.⁵ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the lands of Tollard-Flemyng to Colin Earl of Ergile as heir to his father Earl Archibald.⁶ In 1524 the same lands were held of Earl Colin by John Lamont of Inuereyne, who in that year granted to the Earl the right of reversion to them on payment of 180 marks Scots.⁷ In 1526 King James V., on Earl Colin's resignation, granted Tollort-Fleming to Archibald his son and heir.⁸ In 1535 King James V. granted to John Lawmont of Inuerin the lands of Litill Towert, resigned by Alexander Houston.⁹ In 1536 John Lawmond of Ard-lawmond dates a charter at Tollert.¹⁰ In 1539 Archibald Earl of Argyle paid to John Lawmont the above sum of 180 marks.¹¹ In the same year the barony of Inveryne, granted by King James V. to John Lawmond of Inveryne, included the 6 marklands of the two Tollertis, and the 3 marklands of Tollort-Houston.¹² In 1540 John Lawmont of Inuerin dates a charter at Tollert.¹³ In 1541 King James V. granted the lands of Tollard-Flemyng to Archibald Earl of Argyle on his resignation.¹⁴ In 1542 the same lands were resigned by Earl Archibald, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.¹⁵ In 1548 the grant of 1539 was confirmed by Mary Queen of Scots to John Lawmond of Inueryn in franktenement, and to Duncan his son and apparent heir in heritage.¹⁶ In 1597 James Lawmound was served heir of entail to his eldest son Robert in the barony of Inwiryng, including as before the lands of Toward.¹⁷

In 1451 Sir Duncan le Campbell lord of Lochaw granted to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, for the repair and maintenance of their buildings, the repair of the ornaments of their church, or other pious uses, twenty shillings Scots yearly from the fermes of the lands of Incherneusk lying within the lordship of Cowale beside his lake of Lochayk, the one half to be paid to them at

Glasgow Fair, and the other at Martinmas following, and Sir Duncan in the event of his failure to fulfil the grant became bound to pay a mark Scots to the fabrick of the cathedral church of Saint Moloak in Ergyle, and half a mark to the collegiate church of Saint Mund in Cowale.¹ In the same year there appears in record Margaret, the sister of Isabella Duchess of Albany, and widow of the deceased lord of Rusky.² In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, as heir of his father Earl Colin, the lands of Orchard, then of the yearly value of 20 marks.³ In 1494 Elizabeth Menteth, lady of Rusky, and widow of John Napar of Merchanistoun, with the consent of her son Archibald Napar of Merchanistoun, sold to Archibald Earl of Ergyle her lands of the half of Inchirnanrusky, Le Cor, Auchinglacht, Dargaucht, Innermassen, Garffray, Cragtarsynt, Glenmakmurch, Stronlonage, Glentarsynt, Stronafyne and Garfqhory, and Clauchage, extending in all, together with half her other lands in Ergyle, to 17½ marks of old extent.⁴ In the same year the sale was confirmed by King James IV.⁵ In 1511 the same king, on resignation by Earl Archibald, granted to him and to Elizabeth Stewart his wife the 5 marklands of Inchinnerosk, 5 marks of Orchard, 10 marks of Glenmassane, Glenmakmurche, and Glentassen, 2½ marks of Dargach, and 2½ marks of Gallecheyll, extending in all, with some other lands in the baronies of Strathauchin and Kilmwne, to £20 of old extent.⁶ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to Colin Earl of Argyle, as heir to his father Earl Archibald, the lands of Orchard and others.⁷ In 1526 the same lands were resigned by the same earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir.⁸ In 1541 the lands of Glenmassane were granted anew by the same king to the same Archibald, then Earl, on his resignation.⁹ In 1542 they were again resigned by the same earl, and granted by the same king to Archibald his son and heir, with reservation of the franktenement to the Earl.¹⁰ In the same year the same earl granted to Ewn Campbell M'Ean V'Ewne of Dergachie the lands of Ballochyll and Stronsaule in the barony of Strathachie.¹¹ In 1548 Archibald Master of Argyle, with the consent of Earl Archibald his father, and of Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas his kinsman, tutor, and curator, sold to Hugh Campbell of Lowdown, sheriff of Aire, for yearly payment of 20 marks Scots to the Earl during his life, and thereafter to the Master and his heirs, his lands of Incheinarousk, of the old extent of 5 marks, lying between the water of Straequhy and the water of Massen, and thence ascending to the wood of Calnewische, and thence outwards to Cragintur and the torrent passing into Lochhaik, saving one acre for the fishers on the water of Straequhy.¹² In 1563 Sir Mathew Campbell of Lowdown, sheriff of Aire and lord of the following lands, sold to his kinsman Robert Campbell in Kinzaneleuch the 5 marklands of Inchinarusk as above defined, his 4 marklands of Orcheart, and his half markland of Craik, in the barony of Straauchie, which he held in chief of Archibald Earl of Argyle, for payment to the Earl yearly of 20 marks Scots for

Mundus or Mund, whose original name was Fintain, a saint of Irish extraction, is said to have come into Scotland in the sixth or seventh century, to have received the monk's habit from Saint Columba at Iona, and to have founded a church or monastery at Kilmun, where also he is said to have been buried.¹ Between the years 1230 and 1246 Duncan the son of Fercher (or Ferkard), and his nephew Lauman the son of Malcolm, granted to the monks of Paisley those three halfpenny lands which they (Duncan and Lauman) and their ancestors had at Kilmun, with the fishings and all other just pertinents and bounds, and the whole right of patronage competent to them in the church of Kilmun.² In 1270 Engus the son of Duncan the son of Ferkard confirmed the grant.³

In the year 1442 Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochaw, the King's lieutenant for Argyle, founded at Kilmwne in Cowell a collegiate church for a provost and seven perpetual chaplains or prebendaries.⁴ In the same year he endowed the college with three marks of Achinlochir, six marks of Blarmore and Garonlettir, two marks of Craghawis, and two marks of Cafflade and Cloyne, in the barony of Kilmwne, one mark of Kilmolew in the barony of Lochaw, two marks of Dalmelocharde, one mark of Auchingare, and two marks of Creghane and Gawane.⁵ In 1450 King James II. confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1451 Sir Duncan, by a deed given at the collegiate church of Saint Mund in Cowalle, became bound in case of his failure to fulfil a grant to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, to pay half a mark Scots to the fabrick and repair of that church.⁷ In 1452 a charter given at the college of Kilmoune by the same Sir Duncan Campbell, styled 'Lord lie Campbell' and 'lord of Lochawe,' is witnessed by Master Peter the provost, and by Sir Thomas Spens, Sir Duncan Lyndesay, Sir Donald M'Aggrade, Sir John Baxter, Sir Duncan Macmolane, Sir Alexander Dewar, and Sir Duncan son of John Beg, chaplains of the college church of Kilmone.⁸ In 1489 the curate of the church of Kylmon was one of three appointed to intimate a sentence of the papal delegates to Robert bishop of Argyle.⁹ In 1495, 1507, and 1511, Sir John Dewar provost of Kilmun appears in record.¹⁰ Sir Archibald Leych was provost in 1522;¹¹ Master Archibald Makvicar (or M'Yvicare) in 1529, 1541, and 1548;¹² Master Robert Lawmond in 1557;¹³ and John Campbell in 1561, 1563, 1566, and 1571.¹⁴ In 1601 King James VI. granted to Master Duncan Campbell the provostry of Kilmun with the teinds, rents, and dues.¹⁵ In 1602 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted the same provostry to Master Duncan Campbell parson of Craignish (apparently the same person), who became bound to relieve the Earl of the war-randice specified in the charter, provided that Archibald Campbell of Kilmun should evict the lands of Blaremore and Carelets from the persons also therein specified.¹ In 1620 Archibald Campbell of Kilmun was served heir in certain lands to his father Archibald provost of Kilmun.² In 1637 Archibald of Kilmun assigned to Archibald Lord Lorn the tack of the whole teinds of Kilmun granted to him by Master Duncan Campbell the provost of Kilmun.³ In 1667 the patronage of the collegiate kirk of Kilmun was included in a new grant of the earldom by King Charles II. to Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁴ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the collegiate church of Kilmun, its prebends, and its chapels.⁵

The church seems to have stood originally close to the sea near the head of Loch Seant or the Holy Loch.⁶ The tower of the old collegiate church is still standing at Kilmun on the shore of the same loch, and in the vicinity of the present parish church built in 1841.⁷ The church of Kilmun, at least from the period of its collegiate endowment, has been the common burying-place of the noble family of Argyle. Earl Archibald who fell at Flodden, and Earl Colin who died in 1529 at Inveraray, were buried there.⁸

In Baiamund's Roll the provostry of Kilmun is rated at £4.⁹

In the year 1294 a charter is witnessed by Humfred of Kylmon.¹⁰ About the year 1363 Mary Countess of Menteth granted to her kinsman Archibald the son of Sir Colin Campbell of Lochaw the lands of Kilmun in Cowall for the yearly payment of a pair of Paris gloves at Glasgow Fair.¹¹ In the same year the grant was confirmed by King David II.¹² In 1373 Paull the son of William Glenn granted to Archibald Campbell of Lochaw the lands of Stronwhillen and Finnart in the barony of Kilmun, for the usual service, and for payment of three suits yearly at the court of Kilmun.¹³ Between the years 1390 and 1406 King Robert III. granted to John Stewart of Auchingowne the lands of Stron in the barony of Cowall.¹⁴ About the year 1474 King James III. granted to Sir John Colquhoun of Luse the lands of Strone, Kilmone, Invercapill, and Cayvelad, in Ergil, resigned by James Scrimgeour of Dudup.¹⁵ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, as heir to his father Earl Colin, the barony of Kilmun, at that time yielding yearly 24 marks.¹⁶ In 1497 John Culquhoun of Lus sold to the same Earl the lands of Innerquhapill, Glenfinfurd, and Caylat, which belonged to him in property—the lands and superiority of the two Ardinblathis, the two Cragquholdis, and a half markland in the territory of Innerquhapill occupied by a certain procurator with the staff of Saint Mund (eum baculo Sancte Munde) called in Scotch 'Deowray'—one markland which Euar Makanry held of the said John—and the lands of Stuke and Blarebeg, and of Ferry and Strone, of which the superiority belonged to him.¹⁷ In the same year the grant was confirmed by King

James IV.¹ In 1498 Sir John Scrimgeour of Glassary granted to Dormand Finnysonne the lands of Blairback (Blarebeg?) and Stouk lying in Stronwhillen, and the south half of Ardinblathis.² In 1511 King James IV. granted anew to Archibald Earl of Argyle and Elizabeth Stewart his wife, on resignation by the Earl, two marks and a half of Innercapill, two marks and a half of Weg, and other lands in the baronies of Strathauchin and Kilmvn.³ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the barony of Kilmone to Colin Earl of Argyle as heir to his father Earl Archibald.⁴ In 1526 the same king granted the barony to Archibald Campbell the son and apparent heir of Earl Colin.⁵ In 1541 the lands and barony of Kilmwn were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl, and granted to him anew by King James V.⁶ In 1542 the Earl again resigned the lands and barony, which were then granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir, reserving the liferent to the Earl, and a reasonable terce to Lady Margaret Graham his wife, or any other wife he might have.⁷ In 1599 Archibald Campbell was served heir to his father Charles in an annual revenue of 24 marks from the lands of Innerchappell in Cowell, of the old extent of 6 marks and a half.⁸ The lands included in the 'officiarie' of Kilmun extended to 58 marklands and 10 shillinglands.⁹

Before the year 1529 Colin Earl of Argyle alienated to Colin Campbell of Ardyntynne the lands of Ardyntynne in the bailiary of Cowell.¹⁰ Before the same year the same earl granted to Donald Campbell of Ardyntynne (apparently the successor of Colin) the lands of Glenfyfuird in the same bailiary.¹¹ After the year 1529 Archibald Earl of Argyle alienated to the same Donald two marks and a half in the same bailiary called the two Sliggrachanis.¹² In 1549 all these grants were confirmed by Mary Queen of Scots.¹³ Charters are witnessed by Donald Campbell of Ardintenny (or Ardintenne) in 1536, 1546, 1548, and 1550.¹⁴

In the year 1490 King James IV., for the services done by Colin Earl of Ergile to his predecessors Kings James II. and III., and for his own singular favour towards the Earl, erected the town of Kilmound with its bounds into a free burgh of barony for ever, granting to the inhabitants the full right of buying and selling within the burgh wine, wax, cloth both woollen marcate nuncupat. per dewry. The tenure of this land in right of the custody of the crosier of Saint Mund is not quite singular. A similar tenure existed in Glendochart and also in Lismore. It may be observed that the hereditary keepers of the relic of St. Fillan of Glendochart bore a name, running through Jore and Deor of the fifteenth century to the modern Dewar, which may bear some analogy to the title here applied to the lands or the tenure—'Deowray,' 'Perdewry.'—Miscel. of Maitland Club, vol. iii. p. 239, and original charter at Taymouth.

Stralachlane⁶—Kilmorie⁷—Kilmoir.⁸ Deanery of Glassary. (Map, No. 19.)

STRATHLACHLAN appears to have been united to Strachur about the year 1650.⁹

The figure of this parish is extremely irregular, and its surface entirely mountainous, attaining the height of 2000 or 3000 feet above the level of the sea. On the north-west it is bounded by Loch Fyne, and on the south by the parishes of Kilfinan and Kilmadan.

Tradition, supported by an extant custom, places a church here at the period of the Crusades,¹⁰ but there appears to be no record of the church before the year 1543, when Lauchlane Maklauchlane of that Ilk and Katherine Tayt his wife granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the right of reversion to certain lands, when he should pay them in one day the sum of 200 marks 'upon Sanct our Ladye alter situat within the kirk of Stralachlane,' due warning to be given to the earl by Maklauchlane 'othir pertly, or at our dwelling-place for the tyme, or at our parische kirk on ane solempnit day.'¹¹ In 1593 King James VI. granted to Lauchlane Maklauchlan of that Ilk the patronage, parsonage, and vicarage of the kirk of Kilmorie.¹² In 1631 Archibald Campbell of Kilmorie was served heir to his father Donald in the four marks of the kirklands of Kilmorie in the parish of Kilmorie and lordship of Glastric.¹³ In 1633 King Charles I. confirmed his father's grant of 1593.¹⁴ In 1663 Archibald Maklauchlane of that Ilk was served heir to his father Lachlan in the lands of Kilmoir with the advowson of the parish church of the same.¹ In 1680 King Charles II. granted anew to Archibald Maclachlan of that Ilk the lands of Kilmory, with the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the church.²

The church stood on Lochfyne, apparently at some distance from the present parish church built in 1792.³ Its ruins remain, and its cemetery continues to be the burying-place of the M'Lachlans.⁴ The remains of the chapel of Kilbride, now grassed over, lie within half a mile of the old castle on the shore of Lochfyne.⁵

The M'Lachlans of that Ilk are believed to have possessed the lands of Strathlachlan before or about the eleventh century.⁶ In the year 1292 the lands of Gileskel M'Lachlan were included in the sheriffdom of Argyle or Lorn erected in that year by King John Balliol.⁷ In 1296 Ewin Maclachlan (Eugene filz Loghlan) swore fealty to King Edward I.⁸ In 1305 or 1306 Gillescep M'Loghlan requested from that king the barony of Molbride the young, which was called Strat, Molbride having been taken in arms against the King's allegiance.⁹ Between the years 1306 and 1322 Gillespi M'Lachlan had from King Robert Bruce a grant of the ten pennylands of Schyrwaghtyne and other lands.¹⁰ In 1309 his name appears on one of the sealtags of the well known letter of the Scotch Barons to King Philip of France, but the seal which was attached to that tag is gone.¹¹ In 1314 Gilaspec Maclouchlan in Ergyle, by a charter dated at his castle in Ergyle which was called Castellachlan, granted to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow forty shillings sterling yearly from the fermes of his pennyland of Kylbryd beside Castellachlan.¹² Gilaspee was dead in 1322.¹³ In 1456 the above grant was confirmed by his descendant Donald Maclachlane lord of Ardlawan (Ardlachlan, or Castallachlan), who at the same time granted to the Friars six shillings and eight pence yearly from the fermes of the same pennyland of Kylbryde beside his castle of Castellachlane.¹⁴ In 1474 Donald Makelachlane witnesses a grant to the same Friars by Colin Campbell lord of Ormadale.¹⁵ In 1507 Archibald Maklauchlane, the son and heir apparent of John Maklauchlane of Strathlauchlane, had a grant of land from Archibald Earl of Ergile.¹⁶ In 1511 there appears in record Archibald M'Lachlan of Stralachlan,¹⁷ in 1529, 1542, 1543, 1544 (in which year Archibald fear of Argyle dates a charter at Castellachlan), 1546, and 1557, Lauchlane Maklauchlane of that Ilk,¹⁸ in 1546 Archibald M'Lauchlane his son,¹⁹ and in 1570 Archibald M'Lauchlane.²⁰ In 1621 James Earl of Abircorne, lord Paislay and Kilpatrick, was served heir to his father Claud lord Paislay in an annual revenue of 40 shillings from the lands of Stralachlane, which was included in the barony of Paislay.²¹ In

1635 King Charles I. confirmed to Archibald Maclachlan of that Ilk the lands of Kilbride, Kilmorie, Portandryen, Letterkekan, and others.¹ In 1680 King Charles II. granted anew and erected into a barony, in favour of Archibald Maclachlan of that Ilk and his heirs bearing the same surname and arms, the lands of Kilbryde with the castle and fortalice, the lands of Kilmory with the advowson of the church, and many other lands, with their mills, woods, and fishings, in the lordship of Cowal and Glassrie, with a yearly market to be held at Kilmory in October, changing the holding from simple to taxed ward, and appointing Castle Lachlan to be the principal messuage of the barony.²

In 1557 Lauchlan M'Lauchlan of that Ilk granted to Sir John Lawmont of Inuereyne the five marklands of Enachan in the bailiary of Cowall, for making three suits at the head courts of Stralauchlan.³ In 1570 the same lands (or probably the superiority of them) were resigned by Archibald M'Lauchlan to Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁴ In 1597 James Lawmound was served heir of entail to his eldest son Robert in the same five marklands of Eynachan in the barony of Strathlauchlan and lordship of Cowall.⁵

In 1627 Thomas M'Cawis was served heir to John M'Cawis his granduncle's son in two marks and a half of Leanach in the barony of Straithlaffin with the mill of the same, half of the dry multure, and the house, and glebeland, with pasture for two cows on the lands of Garvalt belonging to that mill, extending in all to 10 marks, and also in the office of bailie or seneschal of the 40 marklands of Straithlaffin, of the old extent of 6 shillings and 8 pence.⁶

On the death of the laird of Strathlachlan or the laird of Strachur it has long been the custom that the survivor lays his neighbour's head in the grave.⁷ Its origin is dated by tradition at the period of the Crusades, when it is said the heads of these two families went together to the war, and each solemnly engaged with the other to lay him in his family burying-place if he should fall in battle.⁸

In the burying-ground at Strathlachlan there is a large cross, supposed to have been erected as a monumental stone by some of the M'Lachlans, but not long ago used as a market cross.⁹

Castle Lachlan, a high square tower of the usual form, which, as we have seen, appears under its present name in the reign of King Robert Bruce, stands on a peninsula in Lochfyne half a mile from the modern mansion.¹⁰

There exist also the remains of the old fortalice of Kilbride on the shore of the same loch.¹¹

STRACHUR.

Kilmalash¹—Kilmaglass.² Deanery of Glassary. (Map, No. 20.)

STRACHUR and Strathlachlan appear to have been united about the year 1650.³

The old parish of Kilmaglass forms the northern part of the united parish, lying chiefly on the north-east of Glen Eachaig and Loch Eck, and south-east of Loch Fyne. Like Strathlachlan it is high and mountainous.

This church is supposed to have existed and to have been in the patronage of the proprietors of Strachur about or before the era of the Crusades, an incident connected with which gave rise to the custom described above, but of this there exists no evidence in charter or record.⁴ There appears to be no notice of the church in any known record previous to the Reformation. It is marked as Kilmalash in the etchings of Timothy Pont and Gordon of Straloch.⁵ 'There is,' says a writer in Macfarlane, 'one church in Strathgur, not far from the ferry of Lochfyne called Kilmaglass.'⁶

The church appears to have always stood as thus described.⁷ The present church was built in 1789.⁸ There was another church called Kilcatherin on Loch Fyne not far from Glengoil.⁹

The lands of Strachur are said to have been possessed by the oldest branch of the Campbells at a very early period.¹⁰ In the year 1368 King David II. confirmed the lands of Strachore to Gyllespyk the son of Colin Cambell.¹¹ In 1374 the lands of Strachur were resigned by Ewar Campbell, and granted by King Robert II. to Arthur Campbell his son.¹² In 1442 Sir Duncan Cambell of Lochaw granted to the collegiate church of Kilmun, which he had just founded, two marklands of Crechane and Gawane.¹³ In 1448 Sir Duncan of Lochaw, 'lord le Cambell,' dates a charter at Strachur.¹⁴ In 1450 the grant of 1442 was confirmed by King James II.¹⁵ In 1500 Ewer Campbel of Strouquhor granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle two marklands of old extent of the west part of Strouquhor lying next to Innerglyn in the barony of Strouquhor.¹⁶ In the same year the same Ewer Campbel granted to the same earl his lands of Craggan in the same barony.¹⁷ In 1512 John Campbell of Arkinglas granted to a chaplain officiating in the parish church of Lochgoill one mark of old extent of Stokylewnan, the grant being confirmed by King James IV.¹⁸ In 1541 the lands of Straquhoure, of the old extent

THERE appears to be no record of the union of Lochgoilhead and Kilmorich. Early in the seventeenth century and also near its conclusion they were distinct parishes.⁹

Lochgoilhead includes the southern portion of the united parish, being principally composed of the deep romantic valleys of Glengoil and Glencroe, and bounded on the south-east by the steep shores of Loch Goil and Loch Long. The surface is diversified by many smaller valleys, and many of the hills attain a considerable height above the sea level.

In the year 1430 George Cambell lord of Lowdon, for the friendship shown towards him by his kinsman Duncan Cambell lord of Lochaw, and to be shown by the same Duncan as chief 'to all his kin and surname,' resigned to him all the right which he had to any lands within the parish of Lochgoyl.¹⁰ In 1456 Sir William Bykatone was vicar of Lochgoyll.¹¹ In 1512 John Campbell of Ardkinglas granted to a chaplain, who should officiate at the altar of the Virgin Mary in the parish church of Lochgoill for the prosperity of the King and Queen, one mark of Stokylewnan, four marks of Knockenkaynocht, and pasture for eight cows on the lands of Ardkynglas.¹² In the same year the grant was confirmed by King James IV.¹³ In 1528 Master Lauchlan M'Cawis was vicar of Lochgoyl.¹⁴ In 1541 the vicar of Lochgollysched was Master Gilbert M'Kalchallum.¹⁵ In 1553 Sir William Drummond, chaplain, vicar of Lochgoyll, gave a tack of the vicarage to Archibald Earl of Argyle, and in the same year he witnesses an agreement respecting the benefices in Lorn between that earl, his son Archibald, and Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, on one side, and Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhair on the other.¹⁶ In 1662, on the restoration of the chapter of Argyle by King Charles II., the minister of Lochgoylsheid was appointed archdeacon.¹⁷ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the parish church and parish of Lochgoylshead.¹⁸

The church appears to have always stood as at present at the head of Lochgoil, from which the parish derives its name.¹

In 1368 King David II. confirmed to Gyllespyk the son of Colin Cambell the lands or barony of Over Cowall, which included the parish of Lochgoilhead.² In 1407 the barony of Over Cowall was resigned by Colin Campbell of Lochaw, and granted to him anew by the Regent Albany.³ In 1493 it was confirmed by King James IV. to Archibald Earl of Argyle as heir to his father Earl Colin.⁴ At that time Ovircowal together with Lochaw and Glenvrquhay yielded yearly to the crown 690 marks.⁵ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Archibald Earl of Argyle in the barony and lands of Uver Cowell, then of the extent of 200 marks.⁶ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the same barony to Earl Colin as legal heir to his father Earl Archibald.⁷ In 1526 Earl Colin resigned the barony, which was then granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir, reserving the liferent to the earl and the terce to his wife.⁸ In 1541 the lands and barony of Ouir Cowell were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl of Argyle, and granted to him anew by King James V.⁹ In 1542 the Earl again resigned them to King James, who then granted them to Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.¹⁰

In 1529 (or previously) the lands of Penny of Innermuk in Cowell were resigned by Archibald Campbell the son and heir apparent of Colin Earl of Argyle, and in that year granted by King James V. in liferent to Helen Hammyltoun the daughter of the deceased James Earl of Aran.¹¹ In 1541 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted the 24 marklands of Penny of Innermuk with the mill in liferent to Margaret Grahame the daughter of William Earl of Menteith, and to her heirs by himself or by any other.¹² In the same year the grant was confirmed by King James V.¹³ In 1550 Archibald Master of Ergile with consent of Earl Archibald his father granted, and Queen Mary confirmed to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and his heirs male, with remainder to his brother Archibald Campbell of Gawnane and others, the office of bailie of all the Earl's lands in Straquhir and Penne-Innermuk.¹⁴

In the same year the Master of Argyle granted, and the Queen of Scots confirmed to the same party, with remainder also to the same parties, three marks of Glencro, five marks of the two Glenferneis, four marks of Polcrockyran, four marks of Innerronich, two marks of Craghawes, three marks of the three Stokkis, two marks of Baith, 20 shillings of Killesan, and other lands, extending in all to 94 marks of old extent, resigned by Earl Colin in favour of Archibald Campbell his son and apparent heir.¹⁵ In 1629 Archibald M'Niell was

In 1511 a grant of Archibald Earl of Argyle is witnessed by Robert Campbell of Carrik.² In 1529 (or previously) the castle and place of Carrik were resigned by Archibald Campbell the son and heir of Colin Earl of Ergile, and in that year granted by King James V. in liferent to Helen Hammyltoun the daughter of the deceased James Earl of Aran.³ In 1532 Duncan Campbell was captain of Carrik.⁴ In 1541 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted, and King James V. confirmed the castle and fortalice of Carrik to Margaret Grahame the daughter of William Earl of Menteith.⁵ In 1550 a grant by Archibald Master of Ergile is witnessed by John Campbell in Carrik.⁶ In 1551 Johnne Campbell (apparently the same person) was captain of Castell Carrik.⁷ In 1558 John Campbell of Carrik appears in record.⁸ In 1562 John Campbell of Carrik witnesses a grant of land by Archibald Earl of Ergyle.⁹ In 1594 a paper written by Duncan Campbell of Glenurchy, denying that he had any participation in the measures connected with the slaughter of 'the Bonnie Earl of Moray,' is dated at the Castle of Carrick in Cowal.¹⁰ Castle Carrik, a lofty square building without turrets, is still to be seen on a small rocky peninsula on the west shore of Lochgoil.¹¹

In 1562 a grant of Archibald Earl of Ergyle is dated at the town of Lochgolishede.¹² A village still exists on the spot.¹³

Kilmorich¹—Kilmoriche²—Kirkmoriche³—Killmoirch.⁴

Deanery of Glassary. (Map, No. 22.)

THIS parish forms the northern portion of the united parish of Lochgoilhead and Kilmorich, including chiefly the valleys of Glenfyne and Glenkinglas, being indented on the south west by the head of Loch Fyne, and rising on the north east to the summit of the lofty ridge that separates Argyle from Dunbarton and Perth. The coast around the head of Loch Fyne is rather flat.

The church of Kilmorich, of which we have no early record, is said to mean the church of Saint Maurice, who is believed to have been sent by Saint Columba about the year 600 to preach in the island of Mull.⁵ Latterly it belonged to the abbey of Inchaffray.⁶ In the year 1501 a precept of seisin by Archibald Earl of Argyle, dated at Dunoon, is witnessed by Sir John Finlosoun notary public.⁷ In 1511 and 1519 Sir John Finlosoun (styled also Sir John Finlosoun Alan M'Kewilla) was vicar of Kilmorich and notary public.⁸ In 1618 James lord of Madertie, commendator of Inchaffray, leased to Alexander Macnaichtane of Dundaraw for nineteen years 'the teind schavis, and utheris teindis callit the brokis, fruitis, and rentis baithe great and small of the peroche kirk of the perochein of Kilmoriche, personage and vicarage thairof, lyand within the diocie of Argyll, sa far as the fruitis of the said kirk ar ane pairt and pertinent of the abbacie of Inchaiffray,' for the yearly payment of £8 Scots to the commendator, and to the minister 'the hail dewties assignit or to be assignit be the comissioneris of parliament to be payit to the minister for owre (the commendator's) part of the said kirk for thair stipend and for furnessing the elementis to the communioun.'⁹ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the parish church and parish of Kilmorich.¹⁰ In 1698 William Viscount Strathalland, Lord Madertie, was served heir to his father William in the kirklands, tithes, and patronage of the church of Kilmorich.¹¹

The old church stood at the head of Loch Fyne, apparently on the right bank of the river Fyne.¹ The modern church stands at Cairndow near Kilmorich, on the eastern shore of the loch.²

In the year 1630 the teinds of Kirkmoriche, leased to Macknaughtane of Macknaughtane, were valued at £166, 13s. 4d., and, after deduction of £8 paid as duty to the lord of Madertie, were taxed at £4, 6s. 9d. for the relief of benefited persons from their part of the tax granted to King Charles I. by the three estates of the realm.³

In the years 1442, 1481, 1493, and 1494, John Campbell of Ardkinglas (Ardchinglase, or Ardquhonglas) appears in record.⁴ In 1493 the Lords Auditors ordered that Johne Campbele of Ardkynglas should pay to George Stewart of Morphy the sum of 100 marks Scots for which he had given him his bond, and that his lands and goods should be distrained for the debt, reserving his right to prosecute those who failed to fulfil the contracts or promises by which he had been induced to grant the bond.⁵ There appear in record, in 1501, 1511, 1512, and 1513 John Campbell of Arkinglas, probably the son of the former⁶—in 1526, 1528, 1529, 1530, and 1531, Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas⁷—from 1534 to 1552 Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda or Mauld Montgomery his wife⁸—in 1553, 1554, 1558, and 1562, Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas⁹—and in 1564 James or John Campbell of Ardkinglas.¹⁰

In 1526 King James V. granted to James Stewart of Ardgowane the 'assise herring' on the west coast of Scotland, 'notwithstanding the pretendit assedatioun maid to Coline Campbell of Ardkinglass tharupon of before, quhilk our Souerane Lord for certane ressonable causes and considerationis moving him reuokis and dischargis for eur.'¹¹ In 1536 the same king granted to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda Montgomery his wife the 'assise herring' (assise alleca, assisas halices, or assisam halecum) of the Western Sea from the Pentland Firth to the Mwie of Galloway, and within all the Isles, and far and near as the tide (flumen maris) flows into the water of Clide, extending yearly in the King's rental to six lasts of herrings, for payment yearly of six lasts and two barrells of herrings at the bridge of Glasgow between Martinmas and Candlemas (in augmentation of the rental by two barrels).¹² In 1542 the same king renewed the grant to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Mauld Montgomery his wife.¹³ In 1562 Mary Queen of Scots granted the 'assise herring' for the same yearly payment to James

In 1498 John Campbell of Achreach appears in record.³ In the year 1510 a charter by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenurchy is witnessed by John Campbele of Acharewach.⁴ In 1550 Archibald Master of Ergile, with the consent of Earl Archibald his father, granted to his kinsman Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and his heirs male, with remainder to Colin's brother Archibald Campbell of Gawnane and others, five marks of Auchrewicht, five marks of Auchdowane, three marks and a half of Glasken, six marks of Stronbaddow-Kynnaye (or Stronbod, Dow, Kynnaaye), nine marks of Ardkinglas, four marks of Bawchbawin, six marks of Ardno, two marks of Carrin, five marks of Ardnandane, five marks of the two Dunloskynniss with the mill, four marks of Kilbride, and other lands, in the bailiary of Cowale, extending in all to 94 marks old extent, and resigned by the said Colin, he giving homage and personal service (retinentia), with a ship of eight oars and one of six oars of the ancient capacity for the service of the said Archibald when required, half the ward and relief of the lands, and the whole marriage when it should occur—the mill of Dunloskynniss to be shared between the granter and the holder in profits, construction, and multure.⁵ In 1599 Alexander Campbell was served heir to his father Charles Campbell of Kylbryd in a yearly revenue of twelve marks from the four marklands of Ardnadam in Cowell.⁶

In 1513 a precept of seisin by Colin Earl of Argyle is witnessed by Gilbert M'Nachtane of Dundarawe.⁷ In 1563 Alexander M'Nachtin of Doundaraw gave seisin in name of Earl Archibald of certain lands in the bailiary of Glenara.⁸ In 1618 James lord of Madertie, as above stated, leased the teinds of Kilmoriche to Alexander Macnaichtane of Dundaraw.⁹

There are castles at Dundarrow (Dunduramh) and Ardkinglas, both on the east shore of Loch Fyne.¹⁰ 'Upon the south syd of Lochfyne,' observes a writer of the seventeenth century, 'is the castle of Ardinglairs perteyning to Mack-ran-riogh of the surname of Campbell.'¹¹

Kylmalduff¹—Kilmalew²—Kilmolew³—Kilmaliew.⁴ Deanery of Glassary.

THIS parish, divided into 116 marklands, is in general mountainous. Its northern and larger portion is traversed by the valleys of Glenshira and Glenaray, which converge towards the south. Its highest mountain is Benbuy, 2800 feet above the sea. Others attain an elevation of 700 or 800 feet. The river Shira, which, it has been said, 'is impetuous, and falling throch roch ground runneth swyftly,' after forming the Douloch within about a mile of Lochfyne, assumes the name Gearamhuinn (or Garron). In the south of the parish a stream called the Douglas Burn runs eastward into Lochfyne, whose generally sandy but towards the north rocky shores form about half of the eastern boundary of the parish.

In the year 1304 a grant by Ewen of Argyle lord of Lorn to Andrew bishop of Argyle is witnessed by Gilbert rector of Kylmalduff.⁵ In 1529 Master Niel Fischear rector of Kilmalew is witness to a deed of Archibald Earl of Ergile.⁶ Sir Niel Fischer was rector in the year 1541.⁷ In 1561 and 1563 Niunus Makvicar was rector of Kilmolew.⁸ In 1570 Archibald Earl of Argyle presented Donald Makvicar to the rectory and vicarage of Kilmolew, reserving the liferent of the same to Ninian M'Vicar, apparently the same as Niunus, and whose signature to charters shows him as rector in 1574.⁹ The 'kirk of Kilmalew' appears in record in connexion with the burgh of Inveraray in 1595.¹⁰ In 1629 its parson was Master Donald Makolvorich.¹¹ In 1651 a parliamentary commission divided the old parish of Kilmalew into the parishes of Kilmalew (or Glenaray) and Inveraray.¹²

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Lupus or Leu,¹³ stood on the left bank of the Aray, where its site is still marked by a green mound between that stream and the present burying-ground.¹⁴ There are now two parish churches under one roof situated in the burgh of Inveraray on the right bank of the river.¹⁵ They were built in 1794.¹⁶ Anciently there appear to have

In the year 1403 Margaret the daughter of Gyllecrist called Macgillegeachin, with the consent of her son and heir Fynlay Macawaran, resigned to Colin Cambell lord of Lochaw, her overlord, the sixth part of the lands of Glenserw and of other lands which heritably belonged to her, and which had formerly belonged to Alexander M'Neachden lord of the same lands.² In 1513 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to Niel Campbell M'Alexander the lands of Glenserow and Glenaray in the barony of Lochaw.³ In 1526 the same lands were confirmed by King James V. to Archibald Campbell the son and apparent heir of Earl Colin.⁴ In 1529, or previously, the lands of Bailze, Mawm, Stukschardane, and Drumle, in the barony of Lochow, were resigned by the same Archibald Campbell, and in the same year King James V. granted these lands to Helen Hammyltoun the daughter of the deceased James Earl of Aran.⁵ In 1538 Archibald Earl of Ergile confirmed to Archibald Campbel, the son of the deceased Angus Campbel captain of Dunstafnich, the office of steward of all the lands of Glenyra between the water of Lekane and the marches of Lochaw, in which office his father had died seised.⁶ In 1541 King James V. granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle on his resignation the lands of Glenyra and Glenshero, then as formerly included in the barony of Lochhow.⁷ In 1542 the same lands were resigned by Earl Archibald, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.⁸ In 1553 Archibald Master of Ergile, fear of the earldom and of the lordship of Lorne, with the consent of his father the Earl, and of his curator Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, confirmed to Colin the son of the deceased Archibald Campbell captain of Dunstefniche the lands of Killechane and Lealt in the stewardry of Glenaray, with the office of steward as in the grant of 1538.⁹ In 1558 Duncan M'Iver of Stronshera was seised in the lands of Blarowne in Glenshera, of the extent of two marklands and a half.¹⁰ In 1561 John Campbell captain of Dunstafniche resigned to Archibald Earl of Ergyle the lands of Killeane and Lealt in the stewardry of Glenyray, of the old extent of six marks, six shillings, and eight pence.¹¹ In 1562 the same Earl granted these lands to Duncan Campbell or M'Keuir of Stroneschero and Katherine Campbell his wife.¹² In 1561 the same Earl granted to Niunus Makvicar rector of Kilmolew, and to John Makvicar his natural son, the lands of Sallychary in the bailiary of Glenara, of the old extent of three marks, and in 1563 they received seisin of the same.¹³ In 1599 Alexander Campbell was served heir to his father Charles Campbell of Kilbryd in a yearly revenue of eight bolls of oatmeal and 28 marks from the six marklands of Ellerigmoir in the barony of Glensero, and of 24 bolls of oatmeal from the six marklands and a half of Killeane in the county of Ergyle.¹ The lands of Glenaray extended to 80 marklands, and those of Glenshiro to 30 marklands.²

In 1482 Colin Earl of Ergile granted to Duncan Campbell of Glenvrehard the lands of Kilbride, with the exception of the half markland of the ferry of Cragane, for quitclaiming to the Earl one-third of the lands of Dolare in Clakmanan, and one-third of the lands of Auchierneside in Perth.³ In 1514 Colin Earl of Ergyle confirmed the same lands to Colin Campbell the son and heir of Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhai.⁴ In 1523 the same earl confirmed to Duncan, the son and heir of Colin Campbell of Glenorechy, the lands of Kilbryde in Innerdouglass.⁵ In 1536 the same lands were confirmed by Earl Archibald to John Campbell the heir of Colin Campbell of Glenorechy.⁶ In 1550 Archibald Master of Argyle, and fear of the earldom, with the consent of his father Earl Archibald and of his curators, confirmed Kilbride to Colin the brother and heir of the deceased John Campbell of Glenorechy.⁷ In 1561 Archibald M'Allester V'Euir resigned the lands of Kilbryde to his superior Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, who then granted them anew for life to the same Archibald, and in heritage to his son John M'Allester V'Euir, for yearly payment of six cadis ('lie barralis') of good and sufficient herring of Lochfyne, of which, instead of two large barrels, there should be two small barrels called 'rubbouris,' and one large barrel of red herrings containing 1000, with 6 shillings and 8 pence in augmentation of the rental, and doubling of the feuferme at entry, and also with their own services in time of war, or the services of another sufficient person hired and contented at their own expense, the ward of their heirs during their minority to remain with the superior, who further granted them the hereyelds of the tenants for yearly payment of two marks Scots for each hereyeld.⁸ In 1572 the same Colin granted the same lands, resigned by John M'Archibald M'Ewer, to Charles Makewer Makalester, with remainder to his brother Alexander Makewer Makalester.⁹ The lands of Kilbryde were included in the barony of Glenaray, and were of the old extent of four marks.¹⁰

In 1509 Ewne Maccorquodill of Edderlin was served heir to his father Ewne Maccorquodill of Phantelans in the lands of Auchindrayne in the earldom and sheriffdom of Argyll.¹¹ In 1518 King James V. confirmed to Ewen Makcorquidill the son of the deceased Ewen Makcorquidill the one markland of Acheindrien in the lordship of Ergile.¹² In 1542 the same King granted to Malcolm Makcorkill the son and apparent heir of Ewen Makcorkill of Fantelen, with remainder in succession to his brothers Duncan and Lauchlan, and to Malcolm's heirs whomsoever, the same markland of Auchindryne, and the four marklands of Auchinthra, in the lordship of Lochow, which Ewen Makcorkill had resigned.¹³ In 1556 Auchindryne of the old extent of

In 1513 Ewer M'Ewyr of Penmor witnesses a precept of seisin of Colin Earl of Argyle.² In 1529 Euar M'Ewir of Pennimor (apparently the same person) witnesses a charter of Earl Archibald.³ Pennymor is said to have been subsequently held by a family named Clerk.⁴

In 1573 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Michael the smith in Glenraray, in heritage, the markland, old extent, of Coulechapillane, and 40 pennies of land yielding fuel (terrarum carbonariarum) within the messuage of the mains of Innerraray, lying in the bailiary of Glenurquhay.⁵

In 1595 Duncan M'Iver resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle the four marklands of Inveraray, with the houses, biggings, crofts, orchards, fishing, and fisherland—the 10 shillinglands of Aucharioch, with the other two Auchariochs, of the old extent of 30 shillings—the lands called the brewsterland, maltland, and peatland, with the offices of brewing the earl's ale and making his malt—the offices of chamberlainry and martyrship (mayrship?) of Inveraray, and keeping of the place and fortalice thereof—with the fishings of the water of Aray, 'as weil high as laigh,' all the other fishings between Auchinbreik and the water called Gerrone, the fishing of Linniequech, and the salmon fishing of Portinstonich near the kirk of Kilmalew.⁶

In 1596 Archibald Earl of Argyle appointed Alexander M'Naughtan, the son and heir of John Macnaughtan of Dundaraw, keeper of the forest of Benbuy for 19 years, for the yearly payment of £80, and on condition that he should not keep 'oversoumes' in that forest.⁷

In 1474 King James III., for his singular favour towards Colin Earl of Ergile, Lord Campbell and Lorne, master of his household, and for the Earl's gratuitous and faithful services to the King's late father and to himself, erected his town of Innowreyra into a free burgh of barony, with the usual liberties, a weekly market on Saturday, and two yearly fairs, one on the Feast of Michael the Archangel (29 September), the other on the Feast of Saint Brandan (16 May), and during the octaves of these Feasts.⁸ In 1513 a charter by King James V. to another Earl Colin is dated at the burgh of Inverara.⁹ In 1541 the burgh of Innerara, included in the barony of Lochhow, was resigned by Earl Archibald, who received from King James V. a new grant of that barony.¹⁰ In 1542 the same barony, including the burgh of Innerara, was resigned by the Earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.¹¹ In 1546 William M'Vicar of Brencyllie resigned the land of Coule in the burgh of Inveraray, of the old extent of 40 pence, to Archibald Earl of Argyle and Archibald Master of Argyle, who then granted the land in liferent to Margaret M'Kinn.¹² In 1629 the same land was resigned to

Archibald Lord Lorne by John M'Vicar of Stronmagach.¹ In 1554 Queen Mary, 'for policie to be hade within this realme, and increasing of vertew within the samyn,' created the burgh of Innerrara a free royal burgh for ever — appointed Archibald Earl of Ergile customer of the burgh for life, with power to make deputies, granting him also a tack of the customs for seven years for the yearly payment of 40 shillings — and gave power to the provost, bailies, councillors, community, and inhabitants, to build a pretorium for the administration of justice, to buy and sell various commodities, and to have a market cross, weekly markets on Mondays and Saturdays, and yearly fairs on Saint Kessog's day (10 March), Saint James's day (25 July), and Saint Michael's day (29 September), and during their octaves.² An entry in the records of the Scottish Parliament, dated 23 October 1639, is entitled 'Erectioun of the burgh of Inneraray into ane brugh royal.'³ In 1641 King Charles I. and the parliament of Scotland confirmed to Archibald Lord Lorne the erection of Inveraray into a burgh of barony by King James III. in favour of Colin Earl of Argyle in 1474, changed the weekly market from Saturday to Friday, and, instead of two yearly fairs at Michaelmas and on Saint Brandan's day, appointed three, one on the 16th of September, one on the 16th of May (Saint Brandan's day), and one on the 15th day of July.⁴ Notwithstanding these enactments Inveraray was erected a royal burgh by King Charles II. in 1648.⁵ Its boundaries as then fixed were 'The burn called the Cromalt at the south — the green and yard dykes of the Duke of Argyle's House of Inveraray, the lands of Kilmalew, the burn of Auchareoch, respectively on the north — Lochfyne on the east — and the said Duke's park-dyke and the common muir respectively on the west.'⁶ In 1742 the old buildings of the burgh were taken down, and new houses partly erected by the Duke of Argyle for the inhabitants at a merely nominal rent.⁷ In 1769 the new town was incomplete, and the old not wholly removed.⁸ The council by charter consists of a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors.⁹ For 40 years previous to 1835 it had been the usage to elect only two bailies, and the Reform Bill fixed the same number, with a provost and 16 councillors.¹⁰

In the year 1432, the castle or manor of Innerayra, built or rebuilt by Sir Colin Campbell first laird of Glenurquhay, then tutor to his nephew the Earl, and who died in 1480, appears to have been a residence of the lords of Lochaw, and one of their two principal messuages.¹¹ In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle dates charters at his manor of Inveraray.¹² In 1529 Colin Campbell, third Earl of Argyle, died at Inueraira.¹³ In the same year Earl Archibald granted a charter at Inneraray.¹⁴ In 1532 King James V. visited and perhaps resided a short time at the castle.¹⁵ In 1538 a bond of maintenance between Earl Archibald and Niniane Bennaecht of the Cammis is dated at Inverary.¹ Charters are dated at Inneraray in 1542 by Malcolm Makcorquidill fear of Phantelane, and Ewen Makcorquidill his father²—in 1543 by Lauchlane Maklauchlane of that Ilk and Katherine Tayt his wife³—and in 1547 by Archibald Master of Argyle and Earl Archibald his father—the chief messuage in the last case being the manor of Inneraray.⁴ In 1595, as before stated, Duncan M'Iver resigned to Earl Archibald the offices of chamberlain and mair of Inveraray, and the keeping of the place and fortalice of the same.⁵ In a new grant of the earldom to Earl Archibald by King Charles II. in 1667 the castle of Inveraray was appointed the chief messuage.⁶ The old castle stood near the site of the new on the right bank of the Aray.⁷ It was taken down in 1760.⁸ It is figured by Pennant in his 'Tour' of 1769, and at that time its remains were not wholly removed.⁹

There still exist the remains of an old fort at Dunchuaich; of the castle of the Macnaughtens on the Douloch; and of the chapels of Kilbryde and Achantiobairt.¹⁰ A standing stone on the castle lawn is said to mark the old march between the M'Ivers and M'Vicars.¹¹ In the town of Inveraray is a stone cross with a Latin inscription in Lombardic characters, commemorating a family named M'Eichgyllichomghan.¹² A bridge of one arch over the water of Douglas has been supposed to be of Roman architecture.¹³

KILMARTIN.

Killmarten¹ — Kilmartin² — Ecclesia Sancti Martini³ — Ecclesia Sancti Martini in Ardscoadinis (or Ardszkodinche)⁴ — Kilmartyn⁵ — Kilmertyne⁶ — Kilmertin⁷ — Kilmartyne⁸ — Kylmartin⁹ — Kilmartine¹⁰ — Kilmerteine.¹¹ Deanery of Lorn¹² (or of Glassary). (Map, No. 24.)

THIS parish, which is nearly co-extensive with the ancient barony or lordship of Ardskeodnish, presents in its northern portion the appearance of a narrow valley flanked by steep hills, the highest of which is about 1200 feet above the sea. The middle and southern portions of the parish consist chiefly of a wide plain watered by the river Skeodnish. On the west is an arm of the sea named Loch Craignish, in which are the islands Righ, Macasken, and others belonging to the parish.

In the year 1304 a grant by Ewen of Argyle, lord of Lorn, is witnessed by Martin the vicar of Killmarten.¹³ In 1323 an agreement (of what nature is not on record) was made at Scone, between Dugall Campbell the son of Sir Colin Campbell and Dugall Macneil, concerning the 20 marklands of Ardsonicne and the advowson of the church of Kilmartin.¹⁴ In 1361 two charters by Cristina of Craginis, dated on the 16th of August and on the Feast of Saint Martin (11 November) at the church of Saint Martin in Ardscoadnis, are witnessed by Adam the rector of that church.¹⁵ In 1414 Sir John Cambell, the brother of Sir Duncan Cambell lord of Lochaw, was rector of the church of Saint Martin.¹⁶ In 1456 Master John Cambell rector of Kilmartyn witnesses a charter of the lord of Castallachlan.¹⁷ In the year 1475 Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay died, and was buried in Kilmartyne.¹⁸ In 1498 Gilbert M'Kincardy was vicar of

Kilmertyne.¹ In 1508 John Campbele was rector.² Gilbert Duncanson (perhaps the same as Gilbert M'Kincardy) was vicar of Kilmertin in 1510 and 1511, and died in the latter year.³ In 1541 and 1543 the rector of Kilmertyne was Master John Campbell, who died before the 13th of February 1544.⁴ The vicar in 1541 was Master Niel Campbell, who is styled also dean of Lochow.⁵ In 1546 Master Gilbert Makelchallum (or Malcolmsoun, and apparently rector of Craginche) officiated as chaplain in the parish church of Saint Martin in Ardszkodinche, and a grant of certain lands was given by Archibald Earl of Argyle to him or any suitable chaplain chosen as his successor.⁶ In 1547 and 1551 Master Niel Campbell (probably the vicar of 1541) was rector of Kilmertyne.⁷ In 1553, 1556, and 1562 the rector was Master John Carsuell, formerly treasurer of the diocese.⁸ In 1572 Master Donald Carsuell, vicar (or rector) of Kilmartine, resigned the rectory in the hands of Archibald Earl of Argyle the patron,⁹ and in 1581 he appears as vicar. In 1574 Neil Campbell was parson of Kilmartine and chanter of the diocese of Argyle.¹⁰ In 1587 Christian the sister of Archibald Carswell of Carnasserie and John Campbell her son had a tack of the bishop's quarter of Kilmartine from Neill bishop of Argyle.¹¹ In 1617 Master Neill Campbell parson of Kilmartine leased to Archibald Campbell of Kilmorie and Catharin Campbell his wife the teinds of two-fourths of the parsonage and vicarage of the chapel of Kilbryde at Lochgersyde, which were a part of the patrimony of the parsonage of Kilmartine.¹² In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the church and parish of Kilmartine.¹³

The church, built in 1835, is situated at the village of Kilmartin about four miles from the south west extremity of the parish.¹⁴ A former church, built in 1601, had a pulpit of stone and lime.¹⁵ There are several burying-grounds in the parish, but apparently no remains of the churches or chapels to which they belonged.¹⁶

In Baiamund's Roll the church of Saint Martin is rated at £2, 13s. 4d.¹⁷ In 1671 the teinds of Kilmartine, including the chapels of Kilmachumag and Lochger, were leased to Archibald Campbell in Invercraray for 64 bolls oatmeal, 8 bolls bear, and 200 marks Scots with 3 shillings and 4 pence in augmentation.¹⁸

In the year 1296 King Edward I. issued certain orders to Nicholas Cambel bailie of Leghor and Ardescothyn (apparently Lochaw and Ardskeodnish).¹⁹ In 1315 King Robert Bruce granted to Sir Colin the son of Niel Cambel, for his loyalty, the land of Louchaw and the land of Ardscoodyneche, to be held ward, he furnishing on his own charges, when required, a ship of 40 oars with sufficient men and furniture for 40 days, and the other service went to be paid by the barons of Argyle.¹ In 1323, as before stated, an unexplained agreement was made between Dugall the son of Sir Colin Campbell and Dugall Macniel concerning the twenty marklands of Ardseoniche and the advowson of the parish church.² In 1448 Sir Duncan, lord le Cambell, lord of Lochaw, appears to have had the barony of Ardseodniehe.³ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to Colin Earl of Argyle, among other lands, the lands of Ardscoodineche.⁴ In 1526 the same King granted to Archibald Campbell, the son and apparent heir of Earl Colin, the lands of Ardschodynech which with others the earl had resigned, reserving the liferent to himself, and the terce to his wife.⁵ In 1541 the same Archibald, then Earl, resigned the same lands to the King, and had his grant renewed.⁶ In 1542 they were again resigned by the Earl, and granted by the same King to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.⁷ The Earl's lands within the 'officiarie' of Ardskeonishe extended to 100 marklands.⁸

In the year 1448 one of the stewards of Ardskodniehe under Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochaw was Duncan Yong Cambell of Duntrone.⁹ In 1470 a precept of seisin by Colin Earl of Argyle is addressed to John Campbell of Duntroon and others.¹⁰ In 1511 Donald Campbell of Duntroon was one of the local bailies of Archibald Earl of Argyle.¹¹ In 1513 a precept of seisin by King James V. in favour of Earl Colin is witnessed by John Campbell of Duntrone.¹² In 1531 John Campbell of Duntrwn was one of several to whose arbitration all disputes between Archibald Earl of Argyle and Duncan Campbell of Glenorehy were submitted by the parties.¹³ In 1565 there appear on record Duncan Campbell of Duntrone and Donald Campbell his brother.¹⁴

In 1510 and 1513 precepts of seisin are witnessed by Duncan Campbell of Innerlewir.¹⁵ In 1557 a charter of Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay is witnessed by John Campbell of Innerlewir.¹⁶ In 1572 the rectory of Kilmartine was resigned by Master Donald Carsuell in hospitio de Innerliver.¹⁷ In 1575 Jhone Campble of Innerleuir was one of a number of sureties for Jhone Campble of Calder, that he should pay the heritable fews of Ardchattan.¹⁸ In 1621 Duncan Campbell of Innerliver was served heir to his grandfather Duncan Campbell of Innerliver in the lands of Innerlivermoir, Innerliverbeg, and others, with the mill of Innerliver, together of the old extent of 16 marks.¹⁹

Archibald, the second Earl of Argyle, having in 1495 obtained the ward of Morella, Muiriel, or Marion, the posthumous and only child of John, the son and apparent heir of William thane of Calder in Nairnshire, by Isobel the daughter of Hugh Rose of Kilravock, in 1499 had her removed to Inveraray. To effect her removal the Earl sent Campbell of Innerliver to Kilravock with sixty men. Having received her from the Lady Kilravock her grandmother, and departed for Inveraray, Campbell was pursued by her uncles Alexander and Hugh Calder with

In 1529 King James V. granted in liferent to Helen Hammyltoun, daughter of the deceased James Earl of Aran, the lands of Carnastre, Tibberchit, Slauchcaure, Craiginterrif, Correinbeg (or Torreinbeg), Innerbeg, Awrenachtane, and Awrecammise, and other lands in the barony and sheriffdom of Ergile, resigned in her favour by Archibald Campbell Master of Ergile.¹ In the same year Archibald fear of the earldom of Argyle, and Earl Colin his father, granted to John Campbell of Calder and his heirs male the lands of Mckill Torrane, and the lands of Ormage, each of the old extent of four marks, in the barony of Lochchow.² About the period of the Reformation the lands of Carnasary appear to have been held by John Carsuell rector of Kilmartin.³ In 1585, 1587, 1604, and 1605 there appear in record Archibald Carswell of Carnaserie, Christian his sister, and Neil his son.⁴ In 1621 Duncan Campbell of Innerliver was served heir to his grandfather Duncan Campbell of Innerliver in the lands of Arevekanereich, Corredowlachane, Arechames, and Arenachtoun, which with the lands and mill of Innerliver were of the old extent of £16, and in the lands of Toranbeg of the extent of 40 shillings.⁵

In 1546 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted, and Queen Mary confirmed to Master Gilbert Makelehallum, and to his successor as chaplain in the parish church of Saint Martin in Ardscondinche, seven marks and a half of the earl's lands, namely, three marks of Glenkermane, three marks of Farnoch, and twenty shillings of Laggane, in the lordship of Ardscondinche.⁶ In 1627 Alexander Campbell was served heir to his father Master Niel Campbell in the lands of Aucheynd in the barony of Ardskeonis, of the old extent of three marks, with the office of bailie — in the lands of Kilmartein in Ardskeonis, of the old extent of five pounds, namely, three marks of Glencairnan, three marks of Fernach, twenty shillings of Laggan, with the office of baillie of these lands — the glebe land called The Clerk's Aiker — all the tenements, as well houses as gardens, of the town called the Clachan of Kilmartein in Ardskeonis, of the extent of 24 bolls victual — and the lands of Ormag in Ardskeonis, of the old extent of four marks.⁷

In 1564 Gilbert M'Kellor of Ardorie and Malcome his son resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle the four marklands of Glendan in the barony of Ardskeodnish.⁸

In 1599 Angus Campbell Vic Angus Vic Conche was served heir to John his father in the six marklands and a half of the Kandtrais Uffir and Neddar with the mill and aqueduct, and the twenty shilling lands of Leacha in the bailiary of Ardskeodness, together of the old extent of eight marks.⁹

He immediately sent off the child with an escort of six men, and having dressed a sheaf of corn in some of her clothes, placed it in the rear of his detachment while he engaged the Caldars, whom he thus kept at bay till he thought that the child was beyond their reach. After a sharp conflict, and the loss of six or eight of his sons and several of his men, he retreated and left the fictitious child to the Caldars. For this achievement he received a grant of the £20 land of Inverliver. It is said that in the heat of the conflict he had exclaimed in Gaelic, 's fhada glaoth o Lochow, 's fhada cobhair o chlann dhaoine ('Tis a far

Cambel, on pain of a similar penalty to be paid at Hynisconnill, her barony in the land of Cragyniss.¹ In a confirmation made by King David II. in 1368 of all the lands granted to Gyllespyk the son of Colin Cambell, or otherwise acquired by him, are included the lands of Craginche.² In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil as heir to his father Earl Colin the lands of Craginche, at that time yielding to the crown yearly 65 marks.³ In 1510 the same king confirmed the lands of Craginche to the same earl.⁴ In 1513 the same lands were confirmed by King James V. to Earl Colin the son and heir of Earl Archibald.⁵ In 1526 they were resigned by the same earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir, with reservation of the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.⁶ In 1541 they were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl, and granted to him of new by the same king.⁷ In 1542 they were again resigned by Earl Archibald, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.⁸ The lands of Crygnish and Glendoan extended to 90 marklands.⁹

In the year 1412 Colin Cambell of Lochaw granted to Reginald (or Ronald) Malcolmson of Cragynis, his kinsman, the five pennylands of Barrelbrachan, the five pennylands of Corwarran, the five pennylands of Gartcharran, the pennyland of ArdmygyNSE with the island of Rysa Macpaden, the five pennylands of Soropa with the island Maenewen, and three pennylands of the nether lands of Ardechragynis, together with certain lands in Lochaw.¹⁰ In 1414 the grant was confirmed by Duncan Cambell lord of Lochaw, with the consent of Celestine his son and heir, with a reddendo of the usual services and a ship of twelve oars, with the farther provision that, if Reginald Malcolmson or his heirs should build the castle of Cragynse, they should be constables of that castle for Duncan and his heirs.¹¹ In 1432 Reginald Malcolmson of Cragginche and Reginald his son witness a charter by Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw.¹² In 1434 Reginald Malcolmson (Malcolmi) of Cragginch witnesses a charter by Ewen Makeorquydill of Phantelan.¹³ In 1447 Sir Duncan Cambell, then styled 'lord le Cambell, lord of Lochaw,' and the King's lieutenant within the parts of Argyle, granted to the same Reginald Malcolmson of Craginche, lord of Corbarran, and his heirs, the offices of steward, tosachdor, and mair of the whole land of Craginche, and the office of tosachdor ex parte regis within the same bounds; where the heir was under age, to be held by the tutor, with consent of his clan, namely, Clandowilcraginche.¹⁴

In 1448 the same Sir Duncan confirmed the lands of Corbarran to John, the son and heir of the deceased Reginald M'Molcalum who died last vest and seised therein.¹ In 1528 Dugall Campbell or M'Coull of Coruarran appears in record.² In 1537 and 1541 Archibald Earl of Argyle confirmed to Ronald M'Coull of Craignish the lands of Arderaignish, Barrichbyan, Gartcharren, Barbreekan, Corruoranmore, and Soroba, in the barony of Craignish.³ In 1548 Archibald Campbell, fear (dominus feodi) of the earldom of Ergile and of the lordship of Lorne — on the narrative that, in order to put an end to the innumerable spoliations, reifs, insults, injuries, and horrible homicides, perpetrated between his father Earl Archibald and Hector M'Clane of Doard, the Earl had married the lady Katherine M'Clane daughter of the said Hector, and had before his marriage bound himself and his heirs to infest her in the following lands — in fulfilment of the contract, and for certain sums of money paid him by Hector M'Clane, and with consent of Colin Campbell of Arkinglas his curator, granted to the Earl and to his lady Katherine M'Clane, with remainder to Colin Campbell, the Earl's son by his former wife Margaret Grahame daughter of William Earl of Menteith, and to Archibald himself and his heirs, three marklands of Ardchraginche, one mark of Pennycastel, five marks of Gartcharrane, five marks of Barwrakkane, three marks of Corwerranemoir, one mark of Corwerranebeg, five marks of Sorobay with the island M'Newen and the lands of M'Cuile Craginche near Lochawich, all in the lordship of Craginche.⁴ In 1562 Earl Archibald bound himself to infest his brother Colin Campbell of Boquhan in the lands of Craignish, Barbreekan, Corruoran, Arderaignish, Gartcharren, Barrichibryan, and others in the barony of Craignish, in exchange for certain lands in the lordship of Balwhidder.⁵ In 1564 the same earl granted to the same brother the lands of Skipinch in exchange for Craginche and for other lands not in Argyle.⁶

In 1448 Celestine Angusson Cambell of Barbrek was one of the stewards of Ardsko-dinche for Sir Duncan Cambell of Lochaw.⁷ In 1493 Barbrek, as before stated, was the principal messuage of the lands of Craginche.⁸ In 1510 a seisin of the same lands in favour of Archibald Earl of Argyle is witnessed by Colin Campbell of Barbrek.⁹ In 1572 Archibald Earl of Argyle, liferenter of the earldom, and his brother Sir Colin Campbell of Buquhane, lord of Lorne and fear of Argyle, granted to Colin Campbell of Barbrek in liferent, and to Colin Campbell of Craginche, the Earl's natural son, and Katharine Campbell his wife, the eldest daughter of Barbrek, in heritage, with remainder to John Campbell the natural brother of Colin of Barbrek, and to Dugal Campbell, the son of the deceased Alexander Campbell

In 1570 John M'Illechanzich vicar of Craginche, with the consent of Archibald Earl of Argyle and patron of that vicarage, granted to Malcolm Carsuell and his wife Katharine Nicvicar in heritage, with remainder to Malcolm's heirs male whomsoever, to Master John Carsuell of Carnasterie, and to the nearest heirs whomsoever of the said Malcolm and John, the markland, old extent, of Pencle (or Pennykill) in Craginche, otherwise named Kilmorie, the piece of land called Darrak, and four acres of land belonging to these lands, in the barony of Craginsche.⁴ In the same year the same Malcolm, for certain sums of money paid to him by the vicar of Craginche, sold to him and his heirs titulo oneroso the markland of Pennykill.⁵

In 1572 Coline Campbell of Barbrek became bound to resign to Archibald Erle of Argyle the lands of Barmullane in the bailliary of Craginsche, on payment by the Earl of certain sums of money mentioned in the writs relating to them.⁶

In 1572 Colin Campbell of Craginche, with the consent of his curators Archibald Earl of Argyle his father, and James Campbell of Ardkinglas, granted as jointure to his future wife Katharine Campbell, the daughter of Colin Campbell of Barbrek, the five marklands of Barbrekane, and the markland of Davaig, and in special warrandice of them the lands of Cammismagowne, Ereden, and Durien, in the sheriffdom of Argyle.¹

In the same year Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Duncan M'Coule M'Ean, alias Campbell, the son and heir of the deceased Dugall M'Ean V'Neill, or Campbell, the five marklands of Sorobay, and the islands Makneaveane and Quingeik, in the lordship of Craginche.²

In 1609 Master John Campbell was served heir to his uncle Niel Campbell rector of Creginis in the twenty shillinglands of Largalane in the barony of Creginis.³

In 1572 Malcolm Carsuell constable of Craginsche appears in record.⁴ The modern castle of Craginsh is built on the foundations of the old castle.⁵ In the northwest of the parish there is a stronghold of an oblong form, 260 feet long by 90 in width, with walls 10 feet in thickness.⁶ 'Barbreck's Bone,' a tablet of ivory, long preserved in the family, and held to be a cure for insanity, is now in possession of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland.⁷

Loyng⁸—Kilchattan⁹—Kilchattan.¹⁰ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 26.)

THIS parish is united to Kilbrandon, but there appears to be no record of their union.

The old parish of Kilchattan consisted of the islands of Luing, Shuna, and Torsay, with a number of smaller adjacent isles.

The earliest extant notice of this church appears to be that by Archdeacon Monro, who in 1549 describes the island of Lunge as being 'three myle of lengthe, twa pairt myle of breadthe, with a paroch kirk, guid mainland inhabit and manurit, guid for store and corn.'¹¹ In 1571 and 1572 Niel Campbell was rector of Loyng, and in 1574 rector of Craigneis and Loyng.¹² In 1667 a new grant of the earldom of Argyle to Earl Archibald by King Charles II. included the patronage of the church of Kilchattan.¹³ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle granted to Earl Archibald a tack of the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the church of Kilchattan.¹⁴ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the same church and parish.¹⁵

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Cathan the Bishop, the uncle of Saint Blane, stood near the south end of the island of Luing.¹⁶

In 1313 King Robert Bruce granted to Dugall Campbell of Lochaw the island of Toresay and other lands in Lorn.¹ In 1321 or 1322 he seems to have confirmed the grant.² In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Archibald Earl of Argyle in the 42 marklands of Loyng, four marklands of Torsa, and seven marklands of Swna, together 53 marklands.³ Among the lands of Ewine Allansoun and Duncan Steward of Appin, appraised in 1511 in favour of Archibald Earl of Argyle, were included four marklands of Shuna.⁴ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to Colin Earl of Argyle, as heir to his father Earl Archibald, the lands of Loyng, Torsa, and Sowna, in the lordship of Lorn.⁵ In 1526 the same Earl resigned the lands of Loyng and Suna, which were then granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir, with reservation of the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.⁶ In 1541 the same Archibald, then Earl of Argyle, resigned the lands of Loyng, Torsay, and Swna, and had a new grant of them from King James V.⁷ In 1542 the same lands were resigned by the Earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir, with the liferent to the Earl.⁸ In 1545 the same Earl Archibald obtained from John M'Coull of Dunnolich and John M'Coull of Ragray power to dispose of Loyng, Torsay, and Shuna, and the lands belonging thereto.⁹ In 1549 the island of Lunge was held of the same Earl by M'Gillayne of Doward.¹⁰ In 1629 Archibald Campbell of Kilmelphord, with the consent of his son Colin Campbell parson of Craignish, resigned to Archibald Lord Lorne the six marklands of Kilehattan, the lands of Leekbowy and Ardloyng in the isle of Loyng, and the stewardry, coronership, and sheriffdom of the lands and isles of Loyng, Torsay, Shuua, and others.¹¹ In 1630 Archibald Campbell was served heir to his father James Campbell of Croachan in the eight marklands of Ardloyng in the county of Argyle, with the offices of bailie, sergeant, and coroner, of old belonging to them.¹²

In Luing there are three villages, Toberonochy, Millbay, and Colipol.¹³ Archdeacon Monro describes it as having 'a havin sufficient for highland galeyis in it, layand from the southwest to northeast in lenthe.'¹⁴ There is one of the old forts so common in the highlands in Luing, and another in Torsay called the Castle of Dogs, and supposed to have been a hunting-seat of the Macdonalds.¹⁵

Kilbrandan in Sele¹ — Kilbranden² — Kilbrennen.³ Deanery of Lorn.

THIS parish, now united to Kilchattan, consisted of a portion of the mainland, and the islands of Seil, Iniscapel, Easdale, and others of smaller size. The hills rise to the height of 600 or 800 feet above the sea, and the coast has numerous bays.⁴

About the year 532 there is said to have flourished in Scotland Saint Brandan, a man of great abstinence, of illustrious virtues, 'and the father of nearly 3000 monks.'⁵ The Aberdeen Breviary informs us that Saint Brandan, having sailed to the west coast of Scotland, fixed his residence on the top of a hill whose base stretched into the sea, on the spot which is called Sedes Brandani, where only one ship could enter.⁶ This appears to be Kilbrandon, but previously to the Reformation we have no known record of the church. In 1599 Alexander Campbell commendator of Ardochattan granted to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eacharachan, for the term of his own life, the life of his next heir, and 19 years more, the teinds of the churches belonging to the priory, including Kilbrandan in Seil.⁷ In 1602 the same Alexander resigned the priory, including the teinds and patronage of the same church, which were then granted to him by King James VI. as a part of the temporal tenantry of Ardochattan.⁸ In 1631 John Campbell was served heir to his father Alexander Campbell of Ardochattan in the parish church, teinds, and patronage of Kilbranden in Seil.⁹ In 1632 Andrew bishop of Argyle gave John M'Dougall of Ragray a tack of the teinds of the same church and parish.¹⁰ In the same year the teinds of Ballechoan, Oban, and other lands in the parish, were valued in favour of the same John M'Dougall.¹¹ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Earl Archibald the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the church of Kilbranden.¹² In 1697 John Campbell of Ardochattan was served heir to his father Archibald, fear of Ardochattan, in the property, teinds, and patronage of the church of Killbranden in Seil.¹³

The present church, built about the year 1740, stands at the south end of the island of Seil, close to the ferry of Cuan, on or near the site of the original church.¹⁴ In the south of the mainland part of the parish is the site of the old church of Kilchoan, dedicated to Saint Congan the abbot.¹⁵ At Kilbride in the island of Seil there was another church or chapel.¹⁶

In 1313 King Robert Bruce granted to Dugall Campbell of Lochaw the lands of Kilcongen, Deginsh, Caddiltoun, Ardineaple, and others, for the service of a ship of 26 oars furnished with men and victual for the King's army.¹ In 1451 John Stewart lord of Lorne granted to John Allan of Lorne called Maedougall, and to John his eldest son, the eight marklands of Dowach, ten marklands of Melrog, and twenty-two marklands of Deginsh, and others, with the office of baillie of all his lands, for payment of one-third of all the rents.² In 1541 King James V. granted of new to Archibald Earl of Argyle, on his resignation, the lands of Saill in the lordship of Lorne.³ In 1542 the Earl again resigned the island, which King James V. then granted with the rest of the lordship to Archibald his son and heir.⁴ In 1590 Archibald Earl of Argyle confirmed a grant, by Allan M'Dougall of Ragray to John his eldest son, of the lands of Kilbryde in Seile, and Oban in Seilebeg, with the bailiary of all his lands in Seile, for the usual services, and a ship or 'birlen' of twelve oars for Kilbryde.⁵ In 1615 Master Patrick M'Lauchlane was served heir to his father Niel M'Lauchlane in the lands of Kilbrydbeg in the parish of Kilbrandon in Sele, of the extent of six shillings.⁶ In 1617 John Maedougall of Ragray was served heir to his brother Alexander in a yearly revenue of 100 marks, another yearly revenue of the same amount, a yearly revenue of 70 marks, and a yearly revenue of £83, 6s. 8d. from the six marklands of Dowacha in the lordship of Lorne.⁷ In 1632 the four marklands of Caddiltoun were resigned to Archibald Lord Lorne by Duncan M'Eanduy Mulieh V'Dugall, and Sorle M'Dougall his son.⁸ In 1637 John M'Dougall of Deginsh granted to John M'Donachie V'Ean V'Ewne, alias M'Dougall, in Knipoch, for 1200 marks, a wadset of the two marklands of Darrenachleavewich in the parish of Kilbrandon, and also of one markland of the land of Deginsh and part of its croft, the whole of Deginsh being of the old extent of twelve marks.⁹ The lands of the 'officiarie' of Seil extended to 34 marklands.¹⁰

In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy his uncle various lands in Lorn, among which were six marklands of Barrangerre, and four marklands of Barnacarry.¹¹

In 1502 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy, under reversion to the Earl, four marklands of Cambuslayieh; four marklands of Ardineaple, and two marklands of Carnbayne, for which together with the six marklands of Sorroba in Kilbride he was to pay yearly one penny Scots at Whitsunday on the soil of Sorroba.¹² In 1510 the same lands were granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay to Archibald Campbell his son, afterwards of Glenlyon, for the usual services, and also for the service of a ship of eight oars when required, and with reservation of the liferent to Sir Duncan.¹³ In 1552 they were confirmed by Colin Campbell of Glenorchy to Duncan Campbell of Glenlyon, the son and heir of Archibald Campbell.¹⁴

In the island of Seil there is a village called Balvicar,¹⁵ evidently named from the vicar's residence. In Easdale there is another village, with a population of 800.¹⁶

KILMELFORT.

Melferth¹ — Melfurde² — Kilmelfort.³ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 28.)

THIS parish, now united to Kilninver, may be described as lying mainly between Loch Tralig (a fresh-water lake) and Loch Melfort (an arm of the sea). It is hilly, abounds in small lakes, and has a considerable extent of sea-coast.

In 1403 Cilestine rector of Melferth witnesses a deed of resignation by Margaret the daughter of Gyllecrist Macgillegeachin.⁴ In 1414 a grant by Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw is witnessed by Sir Celestin M'Gilleichael his clerk, rector of Melfurde.⁵ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Earl Archibald the bishop's quarter of the kirk of Kilmelford.⁶ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the rectory, vicarage, and advowson of the same church.⁷

The present church, apparently built about the year 1790, stands near the head of Loch Melfort.⁸

Between the years 1319 and 1326 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alan the lands of Louchaby, the water of Loch, and half the lands of Tulachard, in Argyle.⁹ In 1449 John Stewart, Lord Lorn, on account of a marriage-contract between his daughter Janet and Sir Colin Cambell of Glenvrquhay, granted to Sir Colin certain lands in Lorn, among which were a pennyland of Elarga and Blara, a pennyland of Corelarne, a pennyland of Cluchaich, a pennyland of Pollandowich, a pennyland of Aeynyh, Lochaty-leod with the loch of Lochaty-leod, and a pennyland of Drumnaschealge and Blaranedyn.¹⁰

In the year 1343 King David II. granted to Gyllaspyk (or Archibald) Cambell, the son of the deceased Sir Colin Cambell, the lands and barony of Melfirthe, which had been forfeited by the rightful heirs.¹¹ In 1368 the same King confirmed to Gyllaspyk all the grants, purchases, and impignorations of lands previously made to him, including the lands of Melfyrde.¹² In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, the son of Earl Colin, the lands of Melport, at that time yielding yearly to the crown 40 marks.¹³ In 1510 the same King again confirmed the lands of Melport to Earl Archibald.¹⁴ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the same lands to Earl Colin the son and heir of Earl Archibald.¹⁵ In 1526 Earl Colin resigned them, and they were granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir, reserving the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.¹ In 1541 Archibald Campbell, then Earl, resigned the same lands, and received a new grant of them from King James V.² In 1542 he resigned them in favour of Archibald his son and heir, to whom they were then granted by the same king.³ The lands of Melphert extended to 39 marklands and 40 shillinglands.⁴

In 1529 King James V. granted to Helen Hammyltoun, daughter of the deceased James Earl of Aran, the lands of Tullaich, Dowag, Barbay, Awreluke, Glenmore, Glenbeg, and Auchlone, in the barony and sheriffdom of Ergile, which had been resigned in her favour by Archibald Campbell, the son and heir of Colin Campbell Earl of Ergile, to whom they heritably belonged.⁵ In 1621 Duncan Campbell was served heir to his father Duncan Campbell of Inverliver in the lands of Tulloche, Glenmoir, Aryloisk, Doweg, Glenbeg, and Barbey, in the lordship of Melphort, with the offices of bailie (or seneschal) and mair of the lands of Melphort between the marches of Lorne and Cregins.⁶

In 1561 the four marklands of Camasanesserin in Melphort belonged to the abbot of Iona.⁷

On an island in Parson's Lake, the Loch-na-Pherson of Blaeu, there is an old building said to have been either a monastery or a castle, its name however merely indicating the residence of the parson.⁸

Kyllivonor⁹ — Kynlynvir¹⁰ — Killychmynewyr¹¹ — Killyninvir¹² — Kilninnware¹³ — Kilminnur¹⁴ — Killininver.¹⁵ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 29.)

THIS parish, united to Kilmelfort, lies chiefly between Loch Tralig on the south and Glenfeochan and the arm of the sea called Lochfeochan on the north. It is in general hilly, and in its centre lies Loch Scamadale, from which the river Euchar flows westward through Gleneuchar into Lochfeochan.

In the year 1250 there appears in record George the parson of Kyllivonor.¹⁶ In 1558 a charter is witnessed by John M'Paul (Pauli) rector of Kynlynvir and portioner of Ardhattan.¹⁷ In 1580 a grant by Angus M'Conill of Donyvaig is witnessed by Alexander Campbell parson of Killychmynewyr.¹ In the same year King James VI. appointed the same Alexander commendator of Ardochattan.² In 1581 as rector of Killinnynvir he took seisin of the priory, and in 1599 he granted to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eachtrachan, a lease of the teinds of Kilninvir and the other churches of the priory during Duncan's life, the life of his next heir, and 19 years more.³ In 1602 he resigned the priory and its churches, including Killininwar, which King James VI. then erected in his favour into the temporal tenantry of Ardochattan.⁴ In 1632 Andrew bishop of Argyle granted to John M'Dougall of Ragray a lease of the teinds of the church and parish of Kilninvir in Lorne.⁵ In 1671 the bishop's quarter of the church of Kilninvir was leased by Bishop William to Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁶ In 1697 John Campbell of Ardochattan was served heir to his father Archibald fear of Ardochattan in the property, tithes, and patronage of the church and parish of Killininver in Nether Lorne.⁷

The church, built about the year 1790, stands on the right bank of the Euchar, near the southern shore of Loch Feochan.⁸

In the year 1313 King Robert Bruce granted to Dugall Campbell of Lochaw the lands of Auchinsaule, Auchinaeloch, Garpynging, Ragray, Kilninvir, Esgeallan, Clachanseilach, Leternacoch, Scamadill, a pennyland of Kilveran, and a pennyland of Leternamuck, with other lands, for the service of a ship of 26 oars, furnished with men and victual, for the King's army.⁹ In 1545 there appears in record John M'Coull of Ragray.¹⁰ In 1590 Archibald Earl of Argyle confirmed a grant by Allan M'Dougall of Ragray to his eldest son John of the lands of Barrindroman, Kilninvir, Baracheregill, Hyralthat, Dallerevat, Lagganmore, Lagganbeg, Barcaleg, Mongenat, Assegill, Bargarsna and Lethin, Baradlegein, Garpeyng, Pennylochan, Ragray, Drumanmukloch, Barnasaull and Row, Drumnardmadag, and Auchateachig, in the lordship of Lorne and sheriffdom of Perth, for the usual services and a ship or 'birlen' of sixteen oars.¹¹ In 1564 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Colin Campbell of Glenurquhy a letter, to the effect that, notwithstanding the Earl had granted him the marriage of Alane M'Dowgall the grandson and heir of the deceased John M'Dowgall of Ragara, and son of the deceased Alexander M'Dowgall his eldest son, it should be without prejudice to Colin's own right to the said marriage, if he had any.¹² In 1633 John M'Dougall of Ragray, as before stated, had a lease of the teinds of Kilninvir from Andrew bishop of Argyle.¹³ In 1633 Archibald Campbell of Dunstafnage resigned to John M'Dougall of Ragray the four pennylands of Auchinsaull in the parish of Kilninvir.¹⁴ In 1636 Donald Ewing was served heir to his father William Ewing in Barindronan in the lands of Laganmoir of the old extent of six marks, the lands of Barindronan of the extent of four marks, the fishing of salmon (lie salmond-draught) on the coasts of Kilninwar and Barnacarie, with the fishing on the water of Ewchir, of the old extent of fourteen marks, and the half of eight marklands in warrandice of that fishing, all in the parish of Kilninware and lordship of Argyle.¹ M'Dougall of Ragray had in all 34 marklands in Nether Lorn.²

Before the year 1329 King Robert Bruce granted to Gillaspyk the son of Walter the pennyland of Fynglennan, and other lands.³ In 1449 the pennyland of Finglen was included in a grant of lands in Lorn by John Stewart, Lord Lorn, to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy.⁴

In 1451 John Stewart lord of Lorn granted to John Macalan of Lorn called M'Cowle, and to John Keir his eldest son and heir, and to the heirs male of the latter, eight marks of Ardnoliow, and eight marks of Dowanchowe.⁵

In the year 1493 Knokansay in Glenewchir was the chief message of the barony and lordship of Lorne.⁶ In 1507 King James IV. granted to Colin Campbell, the son and apparent heir of Archibald Earl of Ergile, and to his wife Jonet Gordoun, the 22 marklands of Glenewchir, and the 22 marklands of Stronquhornick and Glenfuquhane, and other lands resigned by the Earl, to be held as parts and pendicles of the lordship of Lorne and earldom of Ergile.⁷ In 1597 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay the lands of Braglenismoir and Braglenisbeg of the old extent of ten marks.⁸ In 1614 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy granted to Sir John M'Dougall of Ragray a nineteen years lease of the ten marklands of Braglenbeg and Braglenmore in Glenewchir.⁹ In 1628 the same lands were granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy to his nephew Alexander Campbell, the son of the deceased John Campbell of Auchenryer.¹⁰

KILBRIDE.

Ecclesia Parochialis Beate Brigide Virginis in Lorn¹ — Kylbride² —
Kilbrid.³ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 30.)

THIS parish appears to have been united to Kilmore soon after the Reformation, at latest before the year 1636.⁴

The old parish of Kilbride included a part of the mainland between Lochnell and the coast in the direction of east and west, and between Lochfeochan and Lochetive in the direction of south and north, together with the island of Kerrera and several smaller isles. It does not at any part attain a great elevation above the sea-level.

In the year 1249 King Alexander II. granted to the see of Argyle the parish church of Saint Bride the Virgin in Lorn, as a mensal church, with its lands and other pertinents.⁵ In 1324 or 1325 the grant was confirmed to Bishop Andrew by King Robert Bruce.⁶ In 1470 a precept of seisin of the lands of Lorne is witnessed by Syr Patryc the vicar of Kylbride, whose seal is appended to the deed along with that of Alan Stewart the sheriff of Perth.⁷ In 1507 the grant of King Alexander II., and the confirmation of King Robert Bruce, were confirmed by King James IV. to David bishop of Argyle.⁸ In 1671 Archibald Earl of Argyle had from Bishop William a lease of the bishop's quarter of the kirk of Kylbride, and of the parsonage teinds of the same, excepting the minister's stipend.⁹

The church, built in 1740, stands at Kilbride to the westward of Lochnell in the south of the parish.¹⁰ Traces of an older church are still visible.¹¹ At Oban on the coast there is a quoad sacra church built in 1821.¹² Near Kilbride there is a well called Tober-an-Easbuig, the bishop's well.¹³

Near the castle of Dunstaffnage there is an ancient chapel, 72 feet by 24, apparently of the thirteenth century, and said to have been once an elegant building.¹⁴ Near it there 'is a high precipice ending abruptly and turning suddenly towards the south east,' with a recess, words uttered from which are with distinctness re-echoed from the chapel.¹⁵

Among a number of documents found in Edinburgh Castle in the year 1292, and ordered by King Edward I. to be delivered to King John Balliol, there was one entitled, 'A letter of the abbot and monks of Cupar, binding themselves to build a chapel at their own expense in the isle of Karuelay in Arkadia (evidently Kerrera in Argyle), and to find three monks to perform divine service there for the soul of the deceased Alexander King of Scots, for a certain sum of money which they had beforehand received from that king.'¹ There appears to be no farther record on the subject.

Sir Ewin, the son of Duncan of Erregeithel, and the grandson of Somerled, styled also King Ewin, who in 1251 granted certain lands in Lesmor to the bishop of Argyle, appears afterwards as the lord of Lorn.² In 1284 Alexander de Ergadia, the son of Sir Ewin, attended in the Scottish parliament that settled the crown on the Maiden of Norway.³ In 1290 the same Alexander was one of those who in name of the community of Scotland assented to King Edward's proposal for marrying the Maiden of Norway to Edward his son.⁴ In 1291 John de Ergadia, the son of Alexander, swore fealty to King Edward, and about the same period Alexander appears as one of the auditors in the controversy between Bruce and Balliol.⁵ Among the documents found in Edinburgh Castle in 1292 there was one entitled — 'A letter of M. Earl of Fif, W. Earl of Mar, and M. Earl of Asteles (Atholl), and others, engaging for Sir Ewin de Argadia that he should pay to King Alexander yearly 320 marks as a certain landrent (pro quadam firma terrarum).'⁶ By an ordinance of King John Balliol, dated in 1292, the lands of Kinnelbathyn, Ardenmurich, Bothelne, of Alexander of Argadia, of John of Glenurwy, of Gilbert M'——, of Malcolm M'Iuyr, of Dugall of Cragins, of John M'Gilerist, of Master Ralph of Dundee, of Gileskel M'Lachlan, of the Earl of Meneteth in Knapedal, of Angus the son of Douenald of the Isles, and of Colin Cambel, constituted the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle.⁷ In 1293 Alexander de Ergadia appears to have held some office in Argyle under the same king.⁸ In 1296 King Edward I. ordered Alexander Earl of Meneteth to seize all the lands of Alexander of Ergyl and John his son.⁹ In the same year Alexander of Ergayl, chevalier, and Maucolum his brother, swore fealty to King Edward.¹⁰ In 1304 Ewin of Ergadia (apparently the father of Alexander) was lord of Lorn, Menderaloch, and Lesmor.¹¹ In 1308 Alexander of Argile, who about that period was one of the council of John of Bretagne King Edward's lieutenant for Scotland, returned to the allegiance of King Robert Bruce, while his son, best known as John of Lorn, remained the inveterate enemy of that king.¹² In 1310 Alexander was again in the English interest. King Edward II. ordered his treasurer to pay to John, Alexander, and Dulkan of Argail, £100 each, which were due to them by the King before last Lent, and also to furnish victual for the maintenance of themselves and their followers who were about to go to Scotland in the King's service.¹ In the same year John of Ergayl was empowered by the same king to receive to his peace the men of Argyle and the Isles.² In 1314 and 1315 he had a similar commission, and was besides appointed admiral of King Edward's fleet for the western parts of England, Wales, Ireland, and the Isles of Scotland.³ He appears to have soon afterwards fallen into the hands of King Robert Bruce, and to have undergone a somewhat long imprisonment, first in the castle of Dunbarton, and latterly in the castle of Lochleven, in which he is said to have died.⁴ The house of Lorn having thus forfeited their lands, these seem to have been bestowed by King Robert upon Roderic of Ylay (called also Roderic Macalan) between the years 1315 and 1325.⁵ In the latter year Roderic of Ylay was attainted by a parliament held at Scone.⁶ The lands of Lorn appear to have thenceforth remained in the hands of the crown till the year 1346, or later, when King David II. granted to John of Lorn (the son of the former John) all his lands within Lorn which had belonged to Alexander of Lorn (his grandfather).⁷ In 1354 John of Lorn lord of Argyle quitclaimed to John Lord of the Isles certain lands of which the latter had grants from King Robert Bruce or King David II.⁸ In 1357 the latter king granted to John of Lorne all the lands which belonged to Sir Alexander of Lorne in the lordship of Lorne and elsewhere, with the castles and other pertinents, which were in the possession of John of Islay.⁹ In 1366 the lands of John of Lorn in the sheriffdom of Argyle were of the old extent of £420.¹⁰ In the same year John of Ergadia, lord of Lorn, sat in a parliament held at Perth regarding a treaty with England.¹¹ In the same year and in 1368 he sat in various parliaments held at Scone and Perth.¹² In 1369 King David proposed personally to hold courts in Argyle for the purpose of regulating the crown rents of the lands, among which were specified the lands of John of Lorne.¹³ In 1374 the crown rents of Lorn amounted to £40.¹⁴

Before the year 1388 Jonet, the daughter and heiress of John of Lorn, appears to have carried the lands of Lorn to her husband Sir Robert Stewart.¹⁵ In 1388 the lands of Lorne, Benechirdeloch, Aphane, and Lesmore, in the county of Perth, were resigned by Sir Robert the Steward and Jonet his wife, and were then granted by King Robert II. to John the Steward of Innermeth.¹⁶ In 1394 John Stewart 'lard of Loryn' appended his seal to a charter by Duncan Kambaile lord of Edderlyng and Hwylvile.¹⁷ In 1416 the lord of Lorne, a Stewart, witnesses

a charter by Robert duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland.¹ In 1451 the lands of Lorn were held by John Stewart the fourth lord of Lorn of that surname.² In 1452 King James II. granted to John Lord Lorne the lordship of Lorne and the barony of Innermeth in the sheriffdom of Perth, and the barony of Redcastle in Forfara, with remainder successively to his brothers Walter, Alan, David, and Robert Stewart, to his uncle Archibald, to Sir James Stewart, to Lord Lorne's kinsman Thomas Stewart, and to his own heirs whomsoever.³

In the year 1469, by an indenture dated 30th November, Colin Earl of Ergile, Lord Cambel, agreed to exchange with Walter Lord Lorne the lands of Baldonyng, Innerdonyng, and Kildonyng in the sheriffdom of Perth, the lands of Colindrane and the Maw in Fif, the lands of Calcarny in Kynros, the lands of Balnagowne and Laidboith in Perth, the lands of Latheris in the barony of Kynedward in the sheriffdom of Aberdene, and the lands of Rothybrisbane in Perth, with the office of 'crownareschip' of that sheriffdom, for the lordship of Lorne.⁴ By this indenture it was provided, that the Earl should cause the King (James III.) to continue Walter Stewart as a lord of parliament, his style to be 'of Innermeith,' or of any other honourable place — that he should remit to him 'the soume of the terces pertenyng to the ald lady of Lorn,' formerly either taken up by him or paid to the Earl, making him defender and maintainer of the tenants and inhabitants of the lands of these terces — that the arrangement should be completed by both parties by the 1st of May following under a penalty of £3000 Scots to be paid by the failing party, of which £1000 should be paid to the King, £1000 to the 'werk of the kirk of Glaseo,' and £1000 to the party ready to fulfil the engagement — that the lands should not be alienated by either party under the same penalty — that the arrangement should not be violated by either under a penalty of 6000 marks Scots, of which one-half should be paid to the king, and the other to the other party — and that both parties should be 'ilkane for vthir in all thar richtwis causis and querellis, and tak ane afald part ilkane with vthir.'⁵ On the 1st of December 1469 Lord Lorne granted the Earl a bond, that he should immediately take possession of the lordship of Lorne for the purpose of resigning it into the King's hands in the Earl's favour, on the ground that the Earl had become bound to resign in his favour the lands above specified, and that in event of his failure to fulfil the compact he should pay the stipulated penalty of 6000 marks Scots.⁶ On the 28th of March 1470 Alan Stewart sheriff of Perth gave seisin of the lands of Lorne 'be yerde and stane' to Dugall Stewart procurator for Lord Lorne.⁷ On the thirteenth of April of the same year Walter lord of Innermeith became bound not to contravene the resignation and infeftment made to Coline Earl of Ergill and Lord Lorne of the lordship of Lorne with 'donyng of kirks' and other pertinents, or to move any process of law thereanent, under a penalty of 6000 marks Scots to be paid within forty days after it should be known that he or his heirs had so moved, 1000 to be paid to the King, 500 each to 'the kirkis of Glasgwg and Ergile,' and the remaining 4000 to the Earl or his heirs.¹ On the following day (14th April 1470) the lord of Innermeith formally resigned the lordship of Lorne to King James III., who on the 17th of April granted it to the Earl for yearly payment of a plaid (clameden), with remainder in succession to Sir Colin Cambel of Glenvrquha, to Colin Cambel Neleson, to Glenvrquha's brothers Duncan and Archibald Cambel, to Colin Cambel of Ardquholace (or Ardquholare), to his brother's Archibald and Robert, and to the Earl's nearest heirs bearing the surname and arms of Cambel.² On the 20th of April Sir Colin Cambel of Glenurquha, with the consent of Duncan Cambel his son and heir, became bound not to contravene his resignation of the lands exchanged for Lorne, under a penalty of 6000 marks to be divided as above between the King, the churches of Glaseo and Ergile, and the Earl or his heirs.³ In 1471 King James III. granted to the same earl the offices of justiciar and sheriff within the lordship of Lorne, together with the half of the royal dues.⁴ In 1475 the same king appointed Earl Colin lieutenant of Ergile, Lorne, and other parts.⁵ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, the son and heir of Earl Colin, the barony and lordship of Lorne, at that time yielding yearly 549 marks, together with the offices of sheriff, justiciar, chamberlain, and coroner of Ergil and Lorne, and the office of lieutenant of the sheriffdom of Ergil.⁶ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the lordship and lands of Lorn, of the extent of 600 marks, and the sheriffship of Ergile, of the extent of £10.⁷ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the lordship and lands of Lorn to the same Colin then Earl of Argyle.⁸ In 1526 he resigned the same lordship, which was then granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir, with reservation of the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.⁹ In 1541 the same Archibald, then Earl of Argyle, resigned the lordship and barony of Lorne, of which he then received a new grant from King James V., for payment of a cloak (le mantill), a red rose, a pair of gloves, and two silver pennies, yearly on the Feast of the Nativity of Saint John the Baptist (24 June) at the castle of Dunstaffage, which was to be the chief message of the lordship.¹⁰ In 1542 the Earl again resigned the lands, lordship, and barony of Lorne, which were then erected anew by the same king in favour of Archibald Campbell his son and heir, for the same yearly payment, and with reservation of the liferent to the Earl, and of a reasonable terce to his wife Lady Margaret Grahame or any other

he might have.¹ In the same year King James, on the Earl's resignation, granted to his son and heir the offices of justiciar and sheriff of Lorne, with half of the wards, reliefs, marriages, escheats, and fines, that he might justly raise within these bounds.² In 1552 or 1553 the same Master of Argyle, fear of the lands of Lorne and Menstre, with the consent of his father the Earl, who was liferenter of the same lands and one of his son's curators, and also with the consent of his other curator Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, sold to Johanna or Jonet Stewart in liferent the lands of the lordship of Lorne in the sheriffdom of Argyle, and the lands of Menstre in Clakmannan.³

In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy one third of the lands of Upper Lorn, one third of Middle Lorn, one third of Nether Lorn, and one third of their pertinents, in the lordship of Lorn and sheriffdom of Perth.⁴ In the same year he granted to the same Sir Colin and Duncan his son for life the third 'gift and advowson' of all the kirks and benefices of Lorn, and one third of all the escheats and other parts of the baron courts of the lordship.⁵ In 1481 the same earl confirmed the grant of one third of Lorn to Duncan Campbell of Glenurquha, the son and heir of Sir Colin, and his charter explains a clause regarding the tenandries in a former grant to mean, that one third of all the lands of Alexander M'Dowell and Alan Yhounge in the lordship of Lorn, and of all other tenandries in that lordship, that should thereafter in any manner fall in the Earl's hands, should be given to the said Duncan and his heirs, and in the event of their failure should revert to the Earl.⁶ In 1485 the same earl, then Lord Chancellor of Scotland, granted to his kinsman Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy one third of the fishing on the water of Awe belonging to the lordship of Lorn, one third of all the escheats and other dues of the baron courts, and one third of the advowson of all the benefices in the lordship of Lorn.⁷ In 1510 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy a written declaration, to the effect that, although Sir Duncan had consented that the Earl should give Alexander Young and Alexander M'Awel seisin of their lands in the lordship of Lorn, that consent should not prejudice him in his right to the third of these lands in future — and in consideration of that consent the Earl became bound to fulfil to Sir Duncan all the gifts, contracts, and bonds, made by Earl Colin his father to Sir Duncan and his father concerning the lands and lordship of Lorn.⁸ In 1514 Colin Earl of Argyle confirmed to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy, the son and heir of Sir Duncan lately deceased in the expedition to Northumberland (Flodden), the former grants in the lordship of Lorn, with the addition to the fishings of Awe 'of the other fresh and salt waters and isles thereof' in that lordship.⁹ In 1523 Earl Colin confirmed the third of Lorn to Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy, the son and heir of the deceased Sir Colin.¹⁰ In 1536 Earl Archibald confirmed it to John Campbell, the son and heir of the same

Sir Colin, to whom in the same year he granted the dues of ward, relief, and nonentry, of the lands of Lorn and other lands.¹ In 1538 the same earl directed Archibald Campbell captain of Dunstapheinsche to deliver to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay the escheats and emoluments of the courts in Lorne according to his infeftment therein.² In 1550 Archibald Campbell fear of Argyle, with the consent of his curators Earl Archibald and Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, confirmed the third of Lorn to Colin Campbell, the brother and heir of John Campbell of Glenorchy.³ In 1553 all disputes about the presentation of benefices in Lorn were amicably settled by an indenture between Archibald Master of Argyle, and 'heir fear' thereof, with consent of his curator Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, on the one part, and Colin Campbell of Glenorchy on the other.⁴ In 1574 Colin Campbell of Glenorchy, in implement of a contract between himself and his son Duncan on the one part, and John Earl of Athole and Jean Stewart his daughter on the other, granted to his son the third of Lorn and other lands.⁵ In 1576 the grant was confirmed by Colin Earl of Argyle, and in 1601 by King James VI.⁶ In 1629 Dame Margaret Campbell Lady Lowdown, and Lady Elizabeth her sister, daughters of the deceased George Master of Lowdown, and heirs portioners of their ancestor Sir Hugh Campbell of Lowdown, who was ancestor to Sir George Campbell of Lowdown, who was ancestor to Sir Matthew Campbell of Lowdown their ancestor, quitclaimed to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy and Sir Colin his son the third of Lorn and other lands which they held of the Earl of Argyle as heirs to their said ancestors.⁷

In 1321 or 1322 King Robert Bruce granted to Sir Arthur Campbell a pennyland of Dunollach, and three pennylands of Ardstofniche near Dunollich.⁸ In 1451 John Stewart lord of Lorn granted to John Macalan of Lorn called M'Cowle, and to John Keir his eldest son and heir, and to the heirs male of the latter, 29 marklands of the island of Caruvray, six marks of Dunollych, eight marks of Glensellach, ten marks of Gallawnoche and of Colgyn, and ten marks of Melleag, together with the office of bailie of all his lands of Lorn, which he then had or might in future have, and also the guardianship and pupilage (alumniam et nutrimentum) of all his heirs, for their service and homage to be rendered with their might to him and his heirs against all except his sovereign lord the King, so however that he should have of them the third part of the casualties (obventionum) of the lands granted, and that they should have of him the third part of all the casualties of the land of his lordship of Lorn.⁹ Before 1512 Dunnolych was held by Alexander M'Cowle, whose son and heir Duncan was slain in that year.¹⁰ In 1536 John M'Coule of Dunollach was one of the cautioners of John Campbell of Glenorchy in a contract between him and Archibald Earl of Argyle.¹¹ In 1541 the lands of Carfora (Kerrera) were resigned by Archibald Earl of Argyle, and granted to him anew by King James V.

as part of the lordship of Lorne.¹ In 1542 they were again resigned by the Earl, and granted by King James to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.² In 1545, 1557, and 1558, John M'Coule of Dunolycht appears in record.³ In 1576 Archibald M'Lauchlan and others, tenants of the property lands of the lordship of Lorn, obtained a decret of the Court of Session against Dougall M'Dougall of Dunollach, discharging him from laying any farther impositions or taxations on those lands, and from molesting or distraining them for such impositions, or for the mails and dues.⁴ In 1591 King James VI. granted to Duncan M'Dougall of Dounolich the town and lands of Ardconnell, with the mills and fishings, in the lordship of Lorne, formerly belonging to the priory of Ardchattan, and annexed to the Crown by act of parliament, for yearly payment of eight marks and three fourths, two marks for reaping grass in harvest, the usual service to the priory or two marks at his option, and ten shillings in augmentation of the rental.⁵ In 1599 Duncan M'kdougall of Dounolich confirmed to John M'Ean V'Ewin of Dunach, the son of the deceased John M'Ewin V'Dougall V'Aprioure, the two marklands, old extent, of Meleag, otherwise called Clyquhyrne, and in special warrant of them the two marks, old extent, of Galdanachbeg.⁶ In 1624 Sir John M'Dougall of Dounolich granted to Donald Campbell commissary of Lorne the lands of Ardeconnellaltrich with the mill, and Croftwarran, in the lordship of Lorne, in special warrandice of the lands of Glenshelving in the parish of Kilbryde, to be redeemable at £1000 Scots, for yearly payment to the prior of Archattan of thirteen marks Scots for the principal lands.⁷

Between the years 1306 and 1329 King Robert Bruce granted to Gillespie the son of Walter the lands of Dereagis, Lachkerchen, Ardowran, and others.⁸ In 1470 Colin Earl of Ergile granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorehy one third of the two marklands of Auchihieych, one third of the twelve marklands of Soropa, and one third of the four marklands of Ardoran easter.⁹ In 1478, Coline Earl of Ergile being sued before the civil court by Alane Sorleson M'Coule for warrandice of the lands of Lereage and Wouchtrouch in the lordship of Lorn in terms of the Earl's charter thereanent, against Duncan Cambell and Dugall Cambell who claimed a lease of the lands, the Lords of Council decided that the Earl was not bound in warrandice of the lands, because he had not been called in the action where the lease was recovered and obtained before the same court.¹⁰ In 1502 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Duncan Campbell of Glenorehy, with reversion to the Earl, six marklands of Sorroba.¹¹ In 1507 King James IV. granted to Colin Campbell the son and apparent heir of Archibald Earl of Ergile, and to Jonet Gordoun his wife, the lands of Ardorane, of the extent of 4 marks; the two le Roikis, 16 marks; Barra, 6 marks; Achevaik, 6 marks; Sorropa, 6 marks; and Kilbride, 5 marks; with certain other lands, resigned by the Earl, and to be held as parts and pendicles of the earldom of Ergile and lordship of Lorne.¹ In 1510 Sorroba was granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy to Archibald Campbell his son, afterwards of Glenlyon, to whose son Duncan Campbell of Glenlyon it was in 1552 confirmed by Colin Campbell of Glenorchy.² In 1563 Duncan Campbell of Lorags granted to John M'Alpin V'Coull the mill of Lorags in Over Lorne.³ In 1565 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted to Colin Leiche of Craigintarif the third part of the four marklands of Ardorane Ovir, and of its woods and fishings, for the usual services, and a quart of aquavite at the Feast of the Nativity of our Lord.⁴ This charter is witnessed by Douggall Campbell of Soroba. In 1599 John Moyle M'Dugall, fear, and his father Alan M'Dougall, liferenter of Kilbryde, with consent of Alan's wife Margaret Campbell, granted for life to Margaret Nikdougall, the eldest daughter of Duncan Makdougall of Dunnollich and the future wife of John Moyle, two of the six marklands of Kilbryde, then occupied by Duncan Ewer M'Donoquhy V'Allane.⁵

In 1491 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy, for yearly payment of one penny Scots, the eight marklands of Dunaach in the lordship and shire of Lorn.⁶ In 1510 the same lands were granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay to Archibald Campbell his son, afterwards of Glenlyon, to whose son Duncan Campbell of Glenlyon they were in 1552 confirmed by Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay.⁷ In 1598 Allan M'Dougall of Raggary and Alexander his son granted to Duncan M'Dougal of Dunollach the right of reversion to the lands of Dunaach, on payment of 1000 marks.⁸

In 1536 there appears in record John Campbell of Lochnell, and in 1550 John Campbell of Lochnell, the brother-german of Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁹ In 1557 a charter by Hector Makelane fear of Dowart is witnessed by John Campbell of Lochnanell.¹⁰ In 1594 Archibald Campbell of Lochnell, who had made several attempts to get possession of the earldom of Argyle by the slaughter of the Earl, was slain at the battle of Glenlivat by the enemy's canon which he had treacherously directed them to aim at Argyle's standard.¹¹ From 1615 to 1625 Alexander Campbell of Lochnell took an active part in carrying out the measures of the government for the pacification of the Highlands.¹²

In 1617 John M'Dougall of Ragray was served heir to his father Allan in a yearly revenue of 300 marks from the eight marklands of Ballegown in the lordship of Lorne.¹³

The only village in the parish of Kilbride is Oban.¹⁴ It was created a burgh of barony in 1811, and, the charter of erection having been set aside by the Court of Session on grounds arising out of the titles of the Argyle estates, it was newly erected in 1828.¹⁵

The castle of Dunstaffynch or Dunstaffage (now Dunstaffnage), a square of 87 feet within walls, having round towers at three of the corners, is situated on a perpendicular mass of conglomerate, from 10 to 20 feet in height, near the extremity of a low peninsular flat at the entrance to Loch Etive, projecting from the north coast of the parish.¹ The original fortress is supposed to have been built by one of the kings of the Scots named Eugenius or Ewin.² It is said also to have been the residence of the Scottish kings down to the reign of King Kenneth II., who is believed to have removed thence to Scone the celebrated coronation stone or chair.³ In authentic records it first appears in the reign of King Robert Bruce, who in the year 1308 or 1309 defeated the men of Argyle under Alexander of Argyle and his son John of Lorn, took the castle of Dunstaffynch, which had been held by them, and placed in it a garrison and warden of his own.⁴ In 1309 the same king dates a charter at Dunstaffynch.⁵ In 1321 or 1322 he granted to Arthur Campbell the constabulary of Dunstaffage and the mains thereof 'whilk Alexander Argyle had in his hands.'⁶ At another date, which is not recorded, he granted the keeping of Dunstaffage to Archibald Campbell.⁷ In 1455 James Earl of Douglas after his defeat in Annandale took refuge at Dunstaffage, where he met with Donald Lord of the Isles, and incited him to war with the king in his favour.⁸ In the year 1460 the parliament of Scotland recommended to the King (James II. or III.) that he should besiege the castle of Dunstaffynch for the purpose of punishing Alane M'Coule, who had slain the King's kinsman John Lord Lorn.⁹ In 1479 a charter by Duncan Campbell lord of Glenvrquhay to his kinsman John M'Dowgall is dated at Dunstaffnage.¹⁰ In 1502 Archibald Earl of Argyle dates a charter at Dunstaffynich.¹¹ In 1538 Archibald Campbell was captain of Dunstaffynsch.¹² In 1541 and 1542 the castle of Dunstaffage was appointed by King James V. to be the chief message of the lordship of Lorne.¹³ In 1542 Archibald Campbell captain of Dunstaffage was one of a number appointed by the same

king to give seisin of the same lordship to Archibald Master of Argyle.¹ In 1575 Jhone Campbele was captain of Dvnstafniche.² In 1631 Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy claimed by protest from Archibald Lord Lorn, heritable justice-general of Argyle, Tarbet, and the Isles, his third part of the fines and unlaws of the justice court held by his lordship at Dunstaffnage.³

On a precipitous and almost insulated promontory on the west coast, and within one mile of Oban, stand the remains of the castle of Dunolly, consisting chiefly of the donjon or keep.⁴ It is supposed to be the same as Dunolla, built in 714 by Selbac or Selvac King of the Dalriads.⁵ It was probably included in the grant of the lands of Dunnolich given in 1451 by John Stewart Lord Lorn to John Macalan or Macdougall.⁶ In 1557 Archibald Earl of Ergile, and Archibald lord of Lorne his son, by a contract dated at Stirling, agreed to release John M'Coull of Dunollycht from ward in Castle Campbell, on condition that he should cause his castle and place of Dunollycht to be kept free of traitors and rebels — that in the case of a siege he should give information of it to the Earl and his son — and that in the case of no new agreement between them he should, if alive, return to ward in Castle Campbell at the following Martinmas.⁷

The celebrated 'Brooch of Lorn,' supposed to have been taken from the person of King Robert Bruce by John of Lorn at the battle of Dalree, and stated by Sir Walter Scott to have been lost or destroyed in a fire which consumed a temporary residence of the Macdougals, passed at the time of that fire into the hands of a neighbouring family, by whom about 25 years ago it was given to the late General Campbell of Lochnell, who immediately restored it to the chief of Macdougall.⁸ A model of it may be seen in the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland.

In the year 1249 King Alexander II. having proceeded to Argyle for the purpose of quelling his rebellious subjects, in the course of his expedition was taken ill and was landed on the isle of Kerrera.⁹ His grant of the church of Kilbride to the see of Argyle, before mentioned, is dated at Keruerhey in the same year.¹⁰ On the 8th of July he died on the island, at a place, as tradition bears, still known as Dalree (the King's field).¹¹ In the year 1263 Haco King of Norway met

Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 31.)

THIS parish, said to have been united to Kilbride soon after the Reformation, lay chiefly or wholly to the eastward of Lochnell. In general appearance it resembles Kilbride.

In the year 1304 a charter of Ewin of Ergadia lord of Lorn is witnessed by Michael the rector of Kylmoor.¹¹ In 1449 the kirk of Kylmor was the place appointed for payment of the reddendo of certain lands in Lorn, granted by John Stewart, Lord Lorn, to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy.¹² In 1553, at the settlement of a dispute between the Earl of Argyre and Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhair regarding the patronage of the benefices in Lorn, the patronage of Kylmore was resigned with others to the Earl.¹³ In 1554, 1556, and 1557, charters are witnessed by Master Patrick Grahame rector of Kilmoir, who appears to have been rector also in the year 1570.¹⁴ In 1603 the patronage of Kilmore belonged to Archibald Earl of Argyre.¹⁵ In 1667 it was included in a new grant of the earldom to another Earl Archibald by King Charles II.¹⁶ In 1671 William bishop of Argyre leased to Earl Archibald the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the kirk of Kilmore.¹⁷ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyre was served heir to Earl Archibald his father in the rectory, vicarage, and advowson of the same church.¹

The church, said to have been built about the period of the Reformation, stands near the head of Loch Feochan, on the right bank of a stream which flows from a small fresh water lake, and falls into the loch.² A writer of the seventeenth century says, 'In the church town there is a spring of fresche water, which hath therein a kynd of small black fishes not found elsewhere, which fishes the townsmen doe observe never to encreass in number or in quantitie, but still to remain small ones; therefor the people do call them esh saint, that is, the holy fishes.'³

A grant of land in Lorn by King Robert Bruce to Sir Arthur Campbell in 1321 or 1322 included two pennylands of Kilmore.⁴ In the year 1507 a grant of lands in Lorne, given by King James IV. to Colin Campbell the son and heir of Archibald Earl of Ergile, and to Jonet Gordoun his wife, included the eight marklands of Kylmor.⁵

In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy certain lands in Lorn, including one third of the six marklands of Barnacarry, and also one third of the five marklands of Kilbryde in Auchicogna (probably Kilbride in this parish or Kilbride in the parish of Kilbrandon.)⁶

THIS parish lies on both sides of the large fresh water lake named Lochaw, from the shores of which the land rises gradually, on the east to the summit of a high range called the Muir of Leckan, and on the west to the summit of a similar range called the Midmuir. From both these ranges numerous small streams discharge their waters into Lochaw. On the west of that lake there is a smaller one named Lochavich (anciently Lochaffy), and both lakes are studded with a number of islands.

In the year 1361 charters of Cristina of Craginis are witnessed by Sir Nicholas rector of Kildachmanan, or of the church of Saint Peter the Deacon.¹ In 1394 and 1403 Sir Fynlawis or Fynlay was parson of Lochaw.² In 1430 the rector of the church was Master Dougall of Lochaw, who in 1442 and 1453 appears as archdeacon of Argyle.³ In 1434 Ewen M'Ewen Makecorquyduill, lord of Maintelan (Phantelane), quitclaimed to Sir Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw, his overlord, all right which he had to the patronage of the parish church of Saint Peter the Deacon of Lochaw.⁴ In 1485 a charter is witnessed by Sir John Dewar rector of Lochaw.⁵ In 1495 several charters of Ewen Makecoreadill of Edderlin were given at the same church.⁶ In 1530 and 1531 Master John Campbell was rector of Lochow.⁷ In 1536 and 1542 Master Donald Broun appears as rector.⁸ In 1541 Master Niel Campbell is styled dean of Lochow and vicar of Kilmertyne.⁹ In 1547 the rector was Master Lachlan M'Caus.¹⁰ In 1556 Nigel M'Petrie (Petree) or M'Viccar was rector of Lochaw, and Sir Dougall M'Kellar was vicar.¹¹ In 1570, 1572, and 1574, Niel Macolm (or Malcolmson) was rector of Lochaw.¹² In 1605 Neill Campbell bishop of Argyle granted to Archibald Carswell of Carnaserie a lease of the bishop's 'quarter kirk' of Kildachrenan.¹³ In 1607 Archibald Earl of Argyle was patron of the same church.¹⁴ In 1667 the patronage was included in a new grant of the earldom by King Charles II. to another Earl Archibald.¹⁵ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the parish church of Saint Peter of the deanery of Lochow.¹⁶

The church stood at the north end of the parish near Lochaw.¹⁷ The present church, which appears to occupy the site of an older, and another church at Dalavich between Lochavich and Lochaw, were both built about 1770.¹⁸ On the island of Inch-Errich in Lochaw are the ruins of a chapel, the cemetery of which is still in use.¹⁹ On Eilean-an-tagart (the priest's isle) in the same lake are traces of a building supposed to have been the residence of the priest.²⁰

In Baiamund's Roll the rectory of Lochaw is taxed at £2, 13s. 4d.²¹

In the year 1292 the lands of Colin Cambel, probably the lord of Lochaw, were included in the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle, then erected by King John Balliol.²² In 1293 Lochaue appears to have been in the hands of that king.²³ In 1296 Nicolas Cambel was bailie of Leghor and Ardescothyri (apparently Lochaw and Ardskeodnish) under King Edward I., by whom he and others were in that year commanded to assist Alexander Earl of Meneteth as warden of the castles of these and other lands.¹ In 1315 King Robert Bruce granted to Sir Colin the son of Neil Cambel, for his loyalty, the land and barony of Lochaw and Ardscoodynche, to be held ward, the grantee furnishing at his own charge for the king when required a ship of forty oars with men and furniture sufficient forty days, and for the other service wont to be paid by the barons of Argyle.² In 1342 King David II. granted to Gyllaspyk Cambell, the son of the deceased Sir Colin Cambell, all the lands which by just title belonged to his brother Dugall Cambell who died while against the King's faith and peace.³ In 1357 he renewed the grant, including the same lands together with their castles and the advowson of their churches, all which are there narrated to have belonged to Sir Colin Cambell the father of Dugall.⁴ In 1361 Gillespic Cambel was still the lord of Lochaw, and Colin Cambel was his son and apparent heir.⁵ In 1366 the lands of Ghillaspic (probably the lord of Lochaw) and of other barons in the sheriffdom of Argyle were of the old extent of £600, but in real value only £133, 6s. 8d.⁶ In 1368 King David II. confirmed to Gyllespyk the son of Colin Cambel all the grants, purchases, and impignurations of lands made to him, including all lands and revenues whatsoever within the parts of Argyle, and also all the liberties and customs belonging to the deceased Duncan M'Downe his progenitor in the barony of Lochaw and other lands belonging to the said Duncan in the free tenants or barons of these parts and elsewhere, with half the relief of his heir, if he should leave one.⁷ In 1375 Gyllaspic Cambale lord of Lochaw, and Colin Cambale his son and heir, again appear in record.⁸ In 1394 and 1403 Colyn Cambell was lord of Lochaw.⁹ In 1407 the Regent Albany granted to Colin Cambell of Lochaw the lands of the barony of Lochaw, and other lands in Argyle, which he had resigned.¹⁰ In 1412 the same Colin was lord of Lochaw.¹¹ In 1413 the Regent Albany granted to Duncan Cambell of Lochaw the whole of his relief due to the Regent by the decease of Duncan's father Colin Cambell.¹² In 1414, 1430, 1432, and 1434, Duncan Cambell appears as lord of Lochaw,¹³ and apparently the same person is in 1447, 1448, and 1452, styled Sir Duncan, lord le Cambell, lord of Lochaw.¹⁴ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergil, as heir to his father Earl Colin, the barony of Lochaw, which with Glenvrquhay and Ovircowal yielded at that time yearly 690 marks.¹⁵ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the barony and lands of Lochow, which with Glenwrehay were of the old extent of 200 marks.¹⁶ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to the same Colin, then Earl of Argyle, as heir to his father Earl Archibald the barony of Lochaw and lands within the same, including Ardscoadinche, Glenserow, Glenaray, Letter, and the barony of Glenvrquhay.¹ In 1526 the barony of Lochehow with other lands was resigned by the same earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald his son and heir, reserving the liferent to the Earl and the terce to his wife.² In 1529 Sir John Campbell of Calder became bound to resign to Earl Colin the £40 land of Lochaw, which he held of him, in exchange for any other lands which the Earl might assign to him in the sheriffdom of Argyle.³ In 1536 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to John Campbell of Glenorchy the ward, relief, and nonentry dues of the lands and barony of Lochow, and other lands, of which the dues belonged to the Earl by the decease of Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy, of Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy his son, and of Duncan Campbell the son of Sir Colin and brother of the said John, for payment of 1400 marks.⁴ In 1541 King James V. granted to the same earl on his resignation the lands and barony of Lochow, the castle of Incheconnel to be the chief messuage.⁵ In 1542 the barony was again resigned by the same earl, and granted by King James V. to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.⁶ In 1667 the lands and barony of Lochaw were included in a new grant of the earldom by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald.⁷

In the year 1383 King Robert II., with the consent of his son John Earl of Carrick and Steward of Scotland, granted to Guillaspic Campbell and Colin his son and heir the offices of lieutenant and special commissary in the sheriffdom of Argyle, from Carndrome to Polgillippe (Lochgilp?), and from Polmalfeithe (Lochmelfort?) to Lochlong, with the half of all the wards, reliefs, and other royal dues within the same bounds.⁸ In 1479 the grant was confirmed by King James III. to Colin Earl of Ergile, to whose progenitors the charter of confirmation states the grant to have been made.⁹ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed to Archibald Earl of Ergile, as son and heir of Earl Colin, the offices of sheriff, justiciar, chamberlain, and coroner of Ergile and Lorne, and the office of lieutenant within the sheriffdom of Ergil.¹⁰ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the sheriffship of Ergile, of the extent of £10.¹¹ In 1513 King James V. confirmed to the same Colin, then Earl, the above offices within Argyle.¹² In 1515 the same king appointed him justice-general of Scotland on both sides of the Forth.¹³ In 1526 the same earl resigned the offices within Ergile, which were then granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.¹⁴ In 1528 Earl Colin was again appointed by King James V. justice-general of Scotland, and also master of the King's household.¹ In 1542 the offices in Argyle with half the royal dues were resigned by Earl Archibald, and granted by the same king to Archibald his son and heir, on account of the good service rendered to him by the Earl both in France and in Scotland in resisting his old enemies of England.² In 1559 Queen Mary and Francis the Dauphin appointed Archibald Earl of Argyle justice-general of Scotland on both sides of the Forth.³

Three individuals besides the successive lords of the barony of Lochawe appear in record bearing the surname, or rather the agnomen, 'of Lochaw,' namely, Master Dougall of Lochaw, rector of that ilk, and also archdeacon of Argyle, already mentioned—in 1442 his brother Donald Cambell—and in 1547 John Campbell of Lochawe.⁴

Among the lands confirmed by King David II. to Gyllespyk Cambell in 1368 were included the lands of Kyldachanane.⁵ In 1434 Ewen the son of Ewen Makcorquydill was lord of Maintelan (Phantelane), in which Kyldachanane (Kilchrenan) appears to have been included.⁶ In 1470 there appears in record Malcolm M'Corquidill of Fantellan.⁷ In 1495 Ewen M'Coreadill of Edderlin (apparently the same person that in 1496 appears as Ewen M'Corquiddill of Fanthelane) granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile his lands of Edderlin, Cammysien, and Carren, in the earldom and sheriffdom of Ergile, in exchange for the Earl's lands of Fanen, Schillahane, Craginterf, and Corywraunaran.⁸ In 1497 the exchange was confirmed by King James IV.⁹ In 1509 King James IV. granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the ward of the lands belonging to the deceased Ewin Makcoreadell of Fantelane, extending to 10 marks, aye and until the entry of the legal heir, with the marriage of the same.¹⁰ In the same year Ewen Makcorquidill, the son of the deceased Ewen Makcorquidill, was served heir to his father in the five marklands of Fanthelan, three marks of Barchanwore, five marks of Fanyne, two marks of Sellechan, six shillings and eightpence of Correwraneran, four marks of Achneerewe, one mark of Killeknanan, and one mark of Acheindrien, in the lordship of Ergile.¹¹ In 1518 he received seisin of the lands from Colin Earl of Ergile.¹² In 1542 Ewen Makcorkill of Fantelene resigned, and King James V. granted to Malcom Makcorkill his son and heir, with remainder in succession to his brother Duncan and his heirs, to his brother Lachlan and his heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever, the five marklands of Fantelene, three marks of Barrychhandoure, four marks of Auchinchra, one mark of Killycheranene, one mark of Auchindryne, five marks of Fanen, twenty shillings of Schalochane, ten shillings of Auchincreif, and half a mark of Colewranaren, in the lordship of Lochow, together of the old extent of 21 marks 10 shillings, and then erected into the barony of Fantelen,

In 1412 Colin Cambell of Lochaw granted to Ronald Malcome of Craignish the four pennylands of Lochaffir.⁴ In 1414 Duncan Cambell lord of Lochaw, with the consent of his son and heir Celestine, granted to his kinsman Reginald Malcolmson of Cragynis certain lands, including the four pennylands of Lochaffy on the north of the same, namely the pennyland of Dvaga, the pennyland of Naarachan, the pennyland of Killemona, and the pennyland of Druminucran, lying in the lordship of Lochaw, for payment of the usual serviees and a ship of twelve oars, and with the provision that, if Reginald or his heirs should build the castle of Lochaffy, they should be constables thereof for the overlord and his heirs.⁵ In 1528 Dugall Cambell of Coruorran granted to Duncan M'Aulay of Ardorie the markland of Kilmun lying near Lochavich and (in?) the lordship of Middle Lochaw.⁶ In 1537 and 1541 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Ronald M'Coull of Craignish, the son and heir of Dugall M'Coull of Craignish, the lands of Kilmun and Druminveran in the barony of Craignish.⁷ In 1548 Archibald Campbell, fear of the earldom of Ergile and of the lordship of Lorne, in fulfilment of a contract between his father Earl Archibald and Hector M'Clane of Doard, granted to his father and Katherine M'Clane his wife certain lands in Craginche, and also the markland of Dewaig, the markland of Narachan, the markland of Kilmun, and the markland of Dunynveran, in the lordship of Lochaw.⁸ In 1627 Alexander Campbell was served heir to his father John Campbell bishop of Argyle in the three pennylands and a half of Kilmwne, Downynveran, and Narrachan, in Glendoan on Lochawichsyd.⁹

In 1529 Archibald Campbell fear of the earldom of Argyle, and of the lordship of Campbell and Lorne, and Earl Colin his father, granted to Sir John Campbell of Calder and his heirs male 11½ marks of Eichterachin, 4 marks of Kylmon, 3 marks and 10 shillings of Sonoquhan Lower, 3 marks of Barbhey, 4 marks of Mekill Torrane, and 4 marks of Ormage, all of old extent, in the barony of Lochehow.¹⁰ In 1548 Archibald Campbell fear of Argyle appears to have confirmed the grant.¹¹

In 1542 Malcolm Makeorquidill fear of the lands and barony of Phantelanc, and his father Ewen Makeorquidill liferenter of the same, with the consent of Master Gilbert Makolehallum rector of Craginche, Malcolm's curator, sold to Duncan Makarthur of Therowedich and Jonet Campbell his wife, and to their son John Makarthur and his heirs, with remainder to the heirs

In 1597 the same Sir Duncan granted to the same Colin the bailiary and stewardry of the same lands, and the Earl in 1598 confirmed the grant.¹ The lands held by Glenurquhay in Middle Lochaw extended to 26 marklands.² The rest of Middle Lochaw extended to 60 marklands.³

In 1554 Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy granted to his servant Allan M'Allan V'Lauchlane the lands of Auchakynnay, Achnamady, and Kalyeag, in Lochow.⁴ In 1557 Colin Campbell of Glenorchy granted to his servant Allan M'Allane V'Allane M'Douil V'Lauchlan the markland of Auchnamadde, which he had resigned.⁵ In 1580 the same markland was confirmed by Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay and Duncane his son to Lauchlane M'Allane V'Allane the son of the deceased Alane M'Allane V'Allane V'Couil V'Lauchlane.⁶ In 1586 Lauchlan M'Allan V'Donald, the son and heir of Allan M'Allan V'Couil, and in 1607 Allan M'Lauchlan V'Allan V'Innes V'Lauchlane, were seised in the same lands.⁷

In 1573 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, and Duncane Campbell his son, fear of Glenvrquhay, with the consent of Duncane's curators, granted to Donald Campbell of Lergys, with remainder to his nephew John Campbell alias M'Patrik, and his heirs male and their subtenants 'of nay hiear degre nor thameself,' the four marklands of Innerynan Estir, and the markland of Cragbamory, then occupied by Duncane M'Couil V'Rannald, in the barony of Glenvrquhay; for yearly payment of four bolls bear, four bolls oats for 'aitmale,' and four stoness cheese, at the castle of Glenvrquhay, a mail mart, a cayn wedder, and 40 shillings in money at the usual terms, for Innerynan — and two markis (marts?) mail at the same terms for Cragbamory — 'with his awin leill, trew, and afald seruice at all tymes in the hieland vpoun his awin expenss, and in the lawland vpoun the expenss of ws and our airis,' with service of manrent of his subtenants in the same manner as the other inhabitants of the lands; on condition that Duncane and his heirs should make their principal dwelling on the lands, occupy as much of them as possible with their own 'gudis' (cattle) during their lease, and defend and not in any way oppress the other tenants of Lochow; the lease to be forfeited if the dues should remain unpaid for two terms.⁸ In 1574 Duncan Campbell, with the consent of Colin Campbill of Glenvrquhay his father, leased for 19 years to his servitor Gillecreist M'Conoquhy Duy V'Nocarde, to Katherine Nyen Douile V'Conoquhy his wife, to Duncane M'Gillecreist their eldest son, and Archibald M'Gillecreist his brother, the two marklands of Innerynan Wester in the barony of Lochaw, then occupied by the said Gillecreist, the lease to commence at Whitsunday 1575, for payment yearly of 20 shillings 'standand male' at the usual terms, two stoness of cheese, one boll bear, and one boll oats, to be delivered at the castle of Glenvrquhay, half a mail mart, and half a wedder, with their service at all times during the lease.⁹ In the same year the same Duncan Campbell granted a 19 years' lease of the two marklands of Innerynan Wester on the same terms to his servitor Alane Makconoquhy V'Corquidill, with remainder to his eldest son Lauchlane M'Allane V'Conoquhy V'Corquidill, and his brother german Duncane M'Allane V'Conaquhy V'Corquidill.¹⁰ In 1576 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhy, with the consent of his son Duncane, leased for nineteen years to his servant Duncane Makdouill V'Oynill, the lands of Nether Fernych in the barony of Lochaw, of the old extent of four marks, the lease to commence at Whitsunday 1577, for yearly payment of two bolls bear, two bolls oats 'that wil be ait male,' four stoncs cheese, a mail mart, a kane wedder, and 3 marks Scots at the usual terms, with all ducs and services, the said Duncan and his subtenants being astricted to the mill of Lochaw in payment and service for their land like the other tenants of the lands of Lochaw, and being bound to reside chiefly on the lands.¹ In the same year the same Colin, with consent of his son Duncane granted to his servant Johnc Makellair a nineteen years' lease of the lands of Over Fernoeh, then occupied by the said Johnc and his subtenants, to commence at Whitsunday 1578, for yearly payment of 40 shillings Scots, two bolls bear, two bolls oats, a mail mart, four stoncs of cheese, and a kane wedder, with all other ducs and service, the tenant being in this case also astricted to the mill of Lochaw and bound to reside upon the lands.²

In 1630 Archibald Campbell was served heir to his father James Campbell of Croachan in the lands of Crochan-Lochaw called Crochanmiddill, Derrimoldonych, Ardquhilkechan, Barmaddie, and Corribowis, in the barony of Lochaw, together of the old extent of eleven marks and a half.³

On Incheconnel, an island near the eastern shore of Lochaw, stand the fine ruins of the castle of Incheconnel, the ancient seat of the lords of Lochaw, and subsequently of the earls of Argyle.⁴ In 1361, in the case of a sale of certain lands by Cristina of Craginis to her kinsman Colin the son and heir of Gillaspic lord of Lochaw, the penalty for contravention of the sale was to be paid at the castle of Ynischonnil (or Hynisconnill).⁵ It is apparently one of the three castles in Louchquhaw mentioned by Fordun about the year 1400.⁶ In 1414 a charter by Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw was given at his castle of Innyschonill.⁷ In 1432 Inchechonnill was one of three places at which, by an agreement between Suffne M'Ewyn lord of Ottirinweran and Gillaspay Cambel the son and heir of Duncan Cambell lord of Lochaw, the former, when he should have an heir, was to pay to the latter a certain sum of money and a number of marts.⁸ In 1493 Inehonyl was the chief message of the baronies of Lochaw, Glenorchy, Ovircowale, and Kilmon, and of the lands of Orchart, Strathache, Glasry, Ottir, Melphort, and Craginche, then belonging to Archibald Earl of Ergil.⁹ In 1541, when the barony of Lochow was erected anew by King James V. in favour of another Earl Archibald, the castle of Incheconnel was appointed to be the chief message.¹⁰

In the churchyard of Kilchrenan there is a narrow old tomb with sculpture much defaced, universally known in the district as the tomb of Colin More, who was lord of Lochaw in the thirteenth century, and from whom his descendants have the name Mac Chaillien More.¹¹

Insalte¹ — Inchesalt² — Inchald³ — Inchalt⁴ — Inchalde⁵ — Inisaill⁶ — Inchecheall⁷ — Inshail⁸ — Inshaell⁹ — Inchaill.¹⁰ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 33.)

IN 1618 this parish was united to Glenorchy, and having been disjoined from it in 1650, was again united by the Act Rescissory in 1662.¹¹

The old parish of Inishail comprehended the island of that name and several smaller islands lying in Lochaw, and also some of the land on each side of that lake, extending on the west as far as Loch Etive, and thus including all the land between the rivers Awe and Neant.

Fordun, writing about the year 1400, says, 'In Louchquhau is the isle of Inchesalt, in which is a parish church.'¹² In 1542 and 1543 Master Roland Makawis was vicar of Inchalt.¹³ In 1572 Master Donald Carswell was presented by Archibald Earl of Argyle to the vicarage of Inchalde, and in 1585 with the consent of the patron granted to Archibald Carswell of Carnasarie the whole teinds of the vicarage.¹⁴ In 1618 James lord of Madertie, commendator of Inchaffray, leased to Patrick M'Artoir of Torvadiche for nineteen years the teind sheaves and other teinds called 'the brokis frutis,' and the rents both great and small of the parish church and parish of Inchald, the parsonage and vicarage thereof, so far as the fruits of the church were part of the abbey of Inchaffray and of its patrimony, the grantee paying £12 Scots yearly to the commendator, and to the minister the dues assigned to him by the commissioners of parliament, with the exception of the teinds of Barbreklochow which were held by Donald Campbell of Barbreklochow.¹⁵ In 1630 the teinds of Inchecheall, leased to Patrick M'Kairtour of Tullierodiche, were valued at £238, 6s. 8d. yearly, and, with the exception of £12 paid as duty to 'my lord of Madertie,' were taxed at £6, 1s. for the relief of beneficed persons.¹⁶ In 1662 Elizabeth Murray, the widow of Thomas Menzies of Tigermach, as the heir of her brother, who was the heir of their father Master Patriek Murray commendator of Inchaffray, and with the consent of her mother Mrs. Magdalen Murray, leased to Duncan Campbell captain of Dunoon for £12 Scots yearly the parsonage and vicarage of the church and parish of Inshald, being a kirk of the abbey of Inchaffray.¹⁷ In 1667

the patronage of Inshaall was included in a new grant of the earldom of Argyle by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald.¹ In 1669 Lieutenant-general William Drummond, a privy councillor of King Charles II., had a charter under the great seal ratified by the Scottish parliament of the kirklands and teinds of Inshaill and other parish churches in the sheriffdom of Argyle, with the exception of the manses and glebes.² In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to Earl Archibald his father in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the parish church of Inshaell.³ In 1698 William Viscount Strathalland, Lord Madertie, was served heir to his father the former viscount in the kirklands, teinds, and patronage of Inchaill.⁴

The church stood upon the island which gave name to the parish, and continued to be the parish church till 1736.⁵ There are still to be seen a fragment of the wall and other ruins.⁶ The present church was built about the year 1750.⁷

On the island of Inishail are the remains of a building said to have been a Cistercian nunnery, the temporalities of which, it is also said, were at the Reformation granted to Hay the abbot of Inchaffray, who embraced the reformed doctrines.⁸

In 1529 Archibald Earl of Argyle, for the honour of God, of the Virgin Mary, of Saint Fyndoc, and of all the saints, granted to Duncan Makcaus, with remainder in succession to his brothers Ewen and Alexander, and to his own heirs whomsoever, the lands of Barindryane in the lordship of Lochaw, of the old entent of twenty shillings, to be held of the Earl in heritage and charitable alms, on condition that the grantees and their heirs should at their own expense becomingly maintain the chapel of Saint Fyndoc founded in the island of Inchald, and cause one mass to be celebrated there every week for the weal of the souls of King James V., of his predecessors and successors, of the Earl's deceased father Colin and mother Jonet, Earl and Countess of Ergyle, of himself, his predecessors, and his successors, and of all the faithful dead.⁹ In 1556 the grant was confirmed by Queen Mary.¹⁰

On the Priest's Isle are the remains of a building supposed to have been the dwelling of an ecclesiastic.¹¹

In the year 1375 John of Prestwyche, the son and heir of the deceased Mariot Garrechel, for a certain sum of money paid to him beforehand, sold to Colin Cambale, the son and heir of Gyllaspic Cambale lord of Lochaw, the half of fifteen pennylands, with the half of the island of Insalte, lying in the upper barony of Lochaw, namely, the half of the five pennylands called Terwhedych, the half of the five pennylands of Selechan, and the half of the five pennylands of Dalyen, in which Duncan M'Naethane lord of that ilk had died vest and seised.¹² Between the years 1390 and 1406 King Robert III. granted to Maurice M'Naughtane various lands in Over Lochow.¹³ In 1403 Margaret the daughter of Gyllecris called Macgillegeachin, with the consent of her son and heir Fynlay Macawaran, resigned to Colin Cambell lord of Lochaw, her overlord, the sixth part of Upper Lochow and other lands, which belonged to her in heritage, and formerly belonged to Alexander M'Neacden lord of the same lands.¹ In 1604 Archibald Carswell of Carnassary and Neil his son resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle and his son the forty shillinglands of Ardathyne, with the isle of Inshald and bailiary of the same, in the barony of Lochaw.² It was probably after 1604 that Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, who was lord from 1583 to 1621, acquired the island of Inshesail, for the 'rights' of which he paid 1000 marks.³ The 'officiarie' lands of Ovir Lochaw extended to 60 marklands.⁴

Terwhedych, mentioned in the above transaction in 1375, was afterwards held by a family of M'Arthurs. Of these there appear on record, in 1513 and 1518 Charles Makarthour of Theravadich (or Terowadich)⁵—in 1529 and 1542 Duncan M'Carthur of Terridowedich (or Thero-wedich)⁶—in 1569 John Makfinla M'Arthur of Terowadych⁷—and in 1599 Patrick M'Arthur of Terivadain, Torvadiche, or Tullierodiche.⁸

In 1510 Sir Duncan Campbele of Glenwrquha granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the right of reversion to the lands of Barbreck and Pollindowich, alienated to him by the Earl, on payment of £100 Scots in gold and silver on one day on the high altar of the parish church of Glenwrquha, on condition that Sir Duncan or his heirs should be warned by the Earl or his heirs forty days before payment either personally or at the church of Glenwrquha by open proclamation on a Sunday, and providing that, if Sir Duncan or his heirs should evade the receipt of the reversion money, the Earl should notwithstanding have access to the lands, and the money should be put into the hands of the vicar of Glenwrquha and the constable of the place of Glenwrquha for the use of Sir Duncan and his heirs.⁹ In 1604 Master Donald Campbell, the son of the deceased Sir John Campbell of Calder, resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle the six marklands of Barblek-lochaw lying on Lochawside.¹⁰ Donald Campbell of Barbrek-lochow (the same Donald) held the lands of Barblek-lochow in 1615 and 1618, and probably till 1629, when he was created a baronet and held the lands of Ardnamurchan.¹¹

In the year 1615 the Earl of Argyle, who had appointed Sir Duncane Campbell of Glenvrquhay his forester of the island of Inshsail, granted warrant to Robert Campbell of Glenfalloch to seize in his name any 'gudis or bestiall' found upon the island, of which two thirds should be appropriated to the Earl's use, and the remaining third to the use of his forester.¹²

Mocarne¹ — Mocarn²—Killespickerrill³ — Kilespik Kerrill.⁴ Deanery of Lorn.

THIS parish was in 1637 united by act of parliament to Ardochattan.⁵

The parish of Muckairn or Killespickerrill lay along the south side of Loch Etive, between the stream called Lusragan on the west and the loch and stream called Neaunt or Naunt on the east, the ground rising from its generally low and indented shore to a hilly range which in some parts attains the height of 1100 feet above the level of the sea.⁶ It included the ancient barony of Kilmaronag, a ploughgate of land call Auchnaclloch, and the island called Elinanabb (the abbot's isle) lying in one of its numerous creeks.⁷

The church of Muckairn belonged to the bishop of Dunkeld.⁸ In 1527 Sir John Leiche vicar of Mocarne died, and John Makgregour was presented to the vicarage by King James V.⁹ In 1553 a charter by Archibald Master of Ergile is witnessed by Master Niel M'Arthur vicar of Mocarne.¹⁰ In 1640 James Levingstoun, keeper of the privy seal, had from King Charles I. a fifty-seven years' lease of the temporality of Argyle and the Isles, and of the lands and teinds of the kirk of Killespick-kerrell belonging to the bishoprick of Dunkeld.¹¹ In 1685 a confirmation of the marquissate of Huntly to George Duke of Gordon by King James VII. included the patronage of the church of Kilchyrill or Kyllacherall (Killespickerrill?), with a yearly fair on the 20th of November.¹²

The church appears to have stood originally at Kilmaronag in the west of the parish, where the ruins of a church may still be traced, and was probably dedicated to Saint Ronan.¹³ The church of Killespickerrill, situated on the left bank of the Neaunt, and said to have been built shortly before the Reformation, and to have been dedicated to Saint Cyril the bishop, was latterly the parish church.¹⁴ There still remains part of its walls, which seem to have undergone modern alterations.¹⁵ There was also a church at Kilvarie (apparently dedicated to Saint Mary) near the western boundary of the parish, of which no trace remains.¹⁶ At Killespickerrill there is a modern church built in 1829.¹⁷

In the year 1532 Farchard bishop of the Isles, and perpetual commendator of the abbey of Icolmkill, for the augmentation of the revenues of the abbey, and for certain sums of money paid to him beforehand, and other favours frequently shown to him by Sir John Campbell of Cadar, granted to Sir John the following towns and lands of Muckearn, namely, the town and lands of Lyild, extending to 5 pennylands; Kilmaconag, 5 pennylands; Coulmadallicht, 7 pennylands; Clagarrache, 5 pennylands; Farnicht, 6 pennylands; Ardnaske, 5 pennylands; Killinaise, 5 pennylands; Ballyndeor, 7 pennylands; Ardagaw, 10 pennylands; Kilespickerril, 10 pennylands; Ardynoir, 6 pennylands; Skowle, 3 pennylands; Barhigillene, $4\frac{1}{2}$ pennylands; Duntawinthane, $4\frac{1}{2}$ pennylands; Barglas, 5 pennylands; Drumyturne, 9 pennylands; Clynemakry, 10 pennylands; Achneocossinde, 6 pennylands; and Kilnukowe, 5 pennylands — together with the office of bailie of the lands — extending in the rental to the sum of £78 Scots, 5s. for each of 125 bolls of black oatmeal, and 6s. 8d. for each of 25 bolls bear; to be held in heritage for yearly payment of £81, of 5s. 6d. for each of the 125 bolls, and of 7s. 8d. for each of the 25, in Scots money, in equal portions at the feasts of Saint John the Baptist (June 24) and Saint Andrew the Apostle (Nov. 30) — thus augmenting the rental in victual by the sum of £4, 7s. 6d., and the whole augmentation in money and victual being £7, 7s. 6d.¹ In 1533 the grant was confirmed by Sylvester Darius the legate of Pope Clement VII.² In 1546 Roderic Maclean archdeacon of the Isles, and vicar general during a vacancy, confirmed the land of Moukcarne to Archibald Campbell of Calder, the son of Sir John who died vest and seised therein.³ In 1561 the abbot of Iona had one pennyland in Muckearn.⁴ In 1564 John commendator of Ardochattan appears to have confirmed the land of Muckairn to Master Alexander Campbell.⁵ In 1573 the grant of Bishop Farchard was confirmed by John bishop of the Isles.⁶ In 1584 it was confirmed by King James VI.⁷ In 1606 John Campbell was infeft by King James VI. in the barony of Kilmachronage or Muckairne.⁸ In 1633 Sir John Campbell granted the same barony to John Campbell his son.⁹ In 1636 Donald Ewing was served heir to his father William Ewing in Barindronan in the fifteen pennylands of Kilmachronage and Auchalemonie in the barony of Kilmachronage and parish of Killespickerrill.¹⁰ In 1661 King Charles II. confirmed to Sir Hew Campbell of Calder the grants of 1606 and 1633.¹¹ The barony or regality of Kilmaronag included twenty-five ploughgates,¹² and was of the extent of 60 marks.¹³

Auchnaeloich was held by the abbots of Inchaffray. In 1563 the lands of Auchineoich in the lordship of Lorne and sheriffdom of Ergile were held of the abbot by James Drummond of Inchaffray.¹⁴ In 1628 Archibald Campbell of Crochan was served heir to his grandfather Archibald

In 1601 John Campbell of Calder granted to his wife Jane Campbell, the daughter of Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, for life, the six pennylands of Auchanacossin, and the six pennylands of Kilmolruy, in the barony of Muckarne, in special warrant of the ten marklands of Eichtrianchin, and the two marklands of the same named Barrafailis, in the barony of Lochaw.⁴ In the same year he granted her a liferent of five pennylands of Lacalte, five pennylands of Glascarraig, fifteen pennylands of Kilmochronaig, seven pennylands of Coulnadallach, seven pennylands of Balliedewar, ten pennylands of Clynamakrie, and four pennylands of Dountanachane, in the same barony.⁵

THE parishes of Glenorchy and Inishail were united in 1618, disjoined in 1660, and again united by the Act Rescissory of 1662.¹³

The large and mountainous parish of Glenorchy may be described generally as lying between the confines of Perthshire on the east and a line uniting the northern extremities of Lochawe and Lochetive on the west. Its three principal valleys are Glenstrae, Glenorchy, and Glenlochay, watered by the streams from which they are named. Near the centre of the parish lies Loch Tulla, while on the north it is indented by Loch Lydon, and on the south by Lochawe.

In the year 1390 and subsequently the church of Dysart appears in record as the burying place of the Macgregors.¹⁴ In 1449 a charter of John Stewart lord of Lorne is witnessed by Sir Gavin

the curate of Dysert.¹ In 1498, 1510, and 1523, Gilbert Borach (or Borricht) was vicar of Disart.² In 1510 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenwrquha granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the right of reversion to certain lands, on payment of £100 Scots on the high altar of the parish church of Glenwrquha, and on condition that Sir Duncan or his heirs should be warned either personally or at the church of Glenwrquha on a Sunday by open proclamation, and, that if they should evade receipt, the money should be lodged in the hands of the vicar of Glenwrquha and of the constable of the place of Glenurquha.³ The church seems to have had an altar called the high altar of Glenstray.⁴ In 1614 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay paid the sum of £1000 for two liferents and a nineteen years lease of the teinds of the kirk of Dysert in Glenurquhay.⁵ In 1616 he paid to Mr Neill Campbell parson of Glasrie £333, 6s. 8d. for the bishop's quarter of the parsonage and vicarage of the same church.⁶ In 1629 Master N. Cameroune was vicar of Dysart.⁷ In 1637 Archibald Campbell of Kilmun assigned to Archibald Lord Lorne a lease of the whole teinds of Dysart in Glenurchay which had been granted him by Master Duncan Campbell provost of Kilmun.⁸

In the year 1586 the church stood 'on a certain island naturally formed and surrounded by the water of Vrquhay.'⁹ In the following century Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay 'gaif for the building and reparinge of the kirk of Glenvrquhay callit Clachandysert, being altogidder rowinus and decayit in anno 1615, and compleit in Maij in anno 1616 zeiris, ane thowsand pundis money.'¹⁰ 'The church,' says Pennant in 1769, 'is seated on a knowl in a large isle formed by the river.'¹¹ The present church was built in 1811 on the same island.¹² Near Dalmally is the well of Saint Conan.¹³

The sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle, erected by King John Balliol in 1292, included the lands of John of Glenurwy.¹⁴ In 1296 John of Glenurchy, who is ranked among the nobles of Scotland, was taken by King Edward I. at the battle of Dunbar, and afterwards had his lands restored to him on condition of serving that king in his wars in France.¹⁵ Before the year 1335 King David II. granted the lands of Glenurchy to Margaret Glenurchy (alleged to be the daughter of John of Glenurchy) and to her husband John Campbell (the son of Sir Neil Campbell of Lochaw, and afterwards Earl of Athole in right of his mother the sister of King Robert Bruce).¹⁶ Their issue, the heir of the earldom of Athole, must have died between the years 1335 and 1341,¹ and the lands of Glenvrquhay next appear in the hands of John M'Gregor of Glenvrquhay who died in 1390.² Before the year 1407 they were held of the crown by the Campbells of Lochaw.³ In that year they were resigned by Colin Cambel of Lochaw to Robert Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, who gave the same Colin a new grant of Glenurchay and of all other lands in the sheriffdom of Argyle which he held of the king in chief.⁴ In 1415 died Gregor M'Anecham, the son of John M'Gregor, who from his designation 'in Glenvrquhay' appears to have been a tenant on the lands.⁵ In 1493 King James IV. confirmed the barony of Glenvrquhay to Archibald Earl of Ergile as heir to Earl Colin his father.⁶ At that time Glenvrquhay together with Ovircowal and Lochaw yielded yearly 690 marks.⁷ In 1503 Colin Campbell was served heir to Archibald his father in the lands of Glenwrchay, of the old extent of 200 marks.⁸ In 1513 King James V. confirmed the barony of Glenvrquhay, included in that of Lochaw, to the same Colin, then Earl of Argyle.⁹ In 1526 the barony of Vrquhay was resigned by the same earl to King James V., who granted it to Archibald his son and heir apparent, with reservation of the liferent to the Earl, and of the terce to his wife.¹⁰ In 1541 the lands and barony of Glenvrquhay were resigned by the same Archibald, then Earl of Argyle, and granted to him anew by the same king.¹¹ In 1542 he again resigned them into the hands of the King, who then granted them to Archibald Campbell his son and heir, and united them and other lands into the free barony of Lochow, with reservation as in 1526.¹²

In 1432 Duncan Campbell lord of Lochaw granted to his son Colin in heritage the lands of Glenurchay, with the annexed islands called Elanewyr, Elanduffeir, Elankylquhurne, and Elanlochtollyff, and other lands in the barony of Lochaw, with reservation of the liferent to the granter, for the usual services, and a ship of sixteen oars to be furnished for the king and the lord of Lochaw when required.¹³ In the same year King James I. confirmed the grant.¹⁴ In 1442 a charter of Sir Duncan Cambel of Lochaw is witnessed by Sir Colin Cambel of Glenurquha.¹⁵ In 1467 Colin Cambel of Glenurquha appears in record.¹⁶ In 1470 Sir Colin Cambel of Glenurquha bound himself not to contravene his resignation of the lands exchanged for Lorne, and he and his brothers Duncan and Archibald were among the heirs of remainder in the grant of that lordship to Colin Earl of Ergile.¹⁷ In the same year Colin Earl of Argyle granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, and Sir Colin's son Duncan, the stewardry of his own lands of Glenvrquhay, and of Maklauchlane's lands of Glenvrquhay, on condition that they should agree with

John M'Gregoure anent the stewardry of the lands which he held of the Earl; and granting them also that they should not pay him more than 40 marks for the relief of all the lands which they held of him in Glenvrquhay and Lochow.¹ In various years between 1478 and 1513 Duncan or Sir Duncan Cambell of Glenvrquhay appears in record.² In 1481 he was one of the heirs of remainder in a grant of lands in Knapdale by King James III. to Colin Earl of Ergile.³ In 1494 he gave his lands of Glenvrquha in the barony of Lochaw, and the lands of Menstre in Clakman-nane, in warrandice for the payment of 16 marks sterling in gold and silver to be paid yearly for the lands and castle of Campbel, Dolar, or Glovm, in the barony of Dunkeld, which were granted by Bishop George to Archibald Earl of Ergile, with remainder to the same Duncan and others.⁴ In 1514 Colin Earl of Argyle confirmed the lands and islands of Glenvrquhay to Sir Colin Campbell as heir to Sir Duncan Campbell his father.⁵ In 1523 the same earl confirmed to Duncan Campbell, the son and heir of Sir Colin, the 80 marklands of Glenvrquhay with the fortalice of the same.⁶ In 1536 King James V. granted to John Earl of Athole the ward of all lands both in property and tenandry that belonged to the deceased Duncan Campbell of Glenurquhay his kinsman, or to Duncan's father the deceased Sir Colin Campbell of Glenurquhay.⁷ In 1536 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay the ward, relief, and nonentry dues of all the lands that belonged to the Earl by the decease of Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay his son, and Duncan Campbell Sir Colin's son and the brother of John Campbell.⁸ In the same year Earl Archibald confirmed the lands of Glenvrquhay to the same John Campbell, who was one of the Earl's particular friends taken under the King's protection during his stay with the King beyond sea.⁹ He appears in record in 1539, and in 1549 he had a grant of the lordship of Braidalbane.¹⁰ In 1550 Archibald Campbell fear of Argyle, with the consent of Earl Archibald his father, liferenter of the same, and of Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas his curator, confirmed the lands of Glenvrquhay to Colin Campbell the brother and heir of the deceased John Campbell of Glenvrquhay.¹¹ In 1558 or 1559 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay reversion on payment of 1000 marks to the lands of Glenvrquhay, which he had wadset to the laird of Lus for payment of 100 marks yearly.¹² In 1561 the same earl granted the lands of Glenvrquhay to Duncan the son and heir of Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, with remainder to the heirs male and of entail contained in the King's infestment of the barony of Finlarg granted to Colin's predecessors and to the Earl.¹³ In 1585 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted the same lands to Colin his son and heir apparent, to be held of the superior the Earl of Argyle, who in 1587 confirmed the grant, with the consent of Dame Annas Keith his mother, tutrix testamentary, of James Campbell of Ardkinglas, and of Mr. Neill Campbell bishop of Argyle.¹ In 1597 Sir Duncan granted to the same Colin, in addition to the lands of Glenvrquhay, the stewardry of the same.²

The lands of Stronmelachane in Glenstrae appear to have been held by John Dow M'Anecham V'Gregar, who was the grandson of John M'Gregor of Glenvrquhay, and who died in 1415.³ In 1449 a charter of John Stewart lord of Lorne is witnessed by Patrick M'Gregour of Stronmelachan.⁴ In 1461 Patrick M'Gregor lord of Glenschray (apparently the same person) died at Stronmelochane.⁵ In 1470 a precept of seisin by Colin Earl of Argyle is witnessed by John M'Gregoure of Stronmeloquane, who at that period held lands of the Earl in Glenvrquhay.⁶ In 1498 died Malcolm Makgregor, the son and heir of John M'Gregor of Glenschray.⁷ In 1519 John Dow M'Patrick M'Gregor of Glenschraye died at Stronmelochane.⁸ In the same year Colin Earl of Ergile granted to John M'Ewin M'Gregor the four marklands of Stronmelachane, one mark of Moyan in Glensray, two marks of Tullich in Glensray, two marks of Castill in Glensray, two marks of Dowlettir in Glensray, one mark of Correchworan in Glensray, three marks of Ydyndonich, one mark of Largachful, three marks of Crag, and two marks of Kantrochat, in the lordship of Ergile.⁹ In 1526 died Gregor, the son of John M'Gregor, alias M'Evine M'Allester of Glenschray, and in 1528 John M'Evine, captain of the Clan Gregor of Glenschray.¹⁰ In 1536 John M'Gregor of Glenstrae was one of the friends of the Earl of Ergile taken under the protection of King James V. during the Earl's absence with the King beyond sea.¹¹ In 1554 Archibald fear of Ergile, with consent of his father Earl Archibald liferenter, and of his curator Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas, sold to Colin Campbell of Grenvrquhay, with remainder to Duncan Campbell of Glenlyon, James Campbell of Laweris, John Campbell of Murthlie, and to the fear himself and his heirs as specified in the ancient writs of entail of the earldom, the four marklands of Stronmeloquhan with the manor, mill, fishings, and woods; three marks of Edindonich with the mill and fishings; one mark of Larocheuilze with the fishing; and three marks of Craig, two marks of Candrochat, two marks of Castell, two marks of Tulloch, two marks of Dulater, and one mark of Myane, with their woods and fishings—all lying in Glensthra, and to be held of the crown.¹² At the same time (26th April 1554) and with the same consent the Master of Argyle granted to Colin Campbell younger of Glenvrquhay the ward, relief, nonentry, and marriage of the lands of Glenstrae, which were in his hands as superior through the decease of John M'Gregoure of Glenstrae, and also the marriage of Gregour M'Gregour.¹³ On the 7th of May 1554 Katherine Lady Glenvrquhay, the wife of Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, paid on his behalf to Earl Archibald a certain sum of money which he had promised to pay for the superiority of Stronmeloquhan, and for the ward and marriage of Gregour M'Gregour.¹ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to Colin Campbell of Glenwrquhair the escheat of the goods of Gregour Makgregour of Glenstray, alias laird Makgregour, and of other persons, named in the grant, who had been denounced rebels for the slaughter of certain others also named.² In 1570 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted to his son Duncan Campbell fear of Glenvrquhay the same lands, to be held of the granter.³ In 1584 the same Duncan was served heir in the same lands to his father Colin, seisin being taken on the soil of the lands, in the manor of Stronmeloquhan, and in the mill of Edindonich.⁴ In 1585 he granted the lands to his son Colin, to be held in the first instance of the crown, and also of the granter.⁵ In 1591 King James VI., on the narrative that all deadly feuds and other controversies between Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay and his kinsmen on the one hand, and Alexander Roy M'Gregoure, his surname, and his abettors, on the other, had been removed, and that peace had been established in these parts, granted his special license to Sir Duncan to infest or seise M'Gregoure in the 20 marklands of Stronmelaquhane in the barony of Glenvrquhay, or to grant him long leases of the same, without being in any way answerable for him or his kinsmen.⁶ In 1603 was fought the battle of Glenfruin in the Lennox, in which the Macgregors defeated the Colquhouns, but the consequences of which were the execution of Alister M'Gregor the chief and a number of his clan, and the forfeiture of all their lands, including Glenstrae, to the crown.⁷ In the same year the Scotch parliament passed an act abolishing the name Macgregoure, ordering all of that name to assume another, and forbidding them or their posterity to resume it on pain of death.⁸ In 1604 King James VI., with the consent of Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, by a deed under his quarter seal granted to Robert Campbell of Glenfalloch the 20 marklands of Glenstrae, formerly held in heritage of Sir Duncan or his predecessors by Alexander M'Gregoure of Glensthray, or by the deceased Gregoure M'Allaster his father, or by the deceased Alexander or Allaster M'Gregoure the father of Gregoure, or by some of them or of their predecessors, and then in the King's hands by the forfeiture of Alexander M'Gregoure of Glensthray for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.¹ In 1607 Archibald Earl of Argyle had from King James VI. a grant of 20 chalders of victual out of the feufermes of Kyntyre for his diligence in repressing the insolence of the barbarous people and broken men of the highlands, 'and specialie againis that insolent and wicked race and name of the Clangregour, notorious lymberis and malefactouris, and in the inbringing of the laird of M'Gregour with ane great number of the principall of that name, wha were worthilie execute to the death for their transgressiounis.'² In 1612 Robert Campbell, in virtue of the grant of 1604, obtained a decreet of removal against the tenants of the lands of Stronmeloquan and the other lands of Glenstrae.³ In 1613 he granted the lands of Glenstrae to John Campbell, his son by Isobel M'Intosh, and the grant was confirmed by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay and his son Colin.⁴ In the same year the Scotch parliament ordained that none of the Clangregour who were at Glenfrone, or who took part in the fire-raising and slaughters committed on Lus, Glenurquhie, and Colin Campbell of Aberuquhill, should wear any armour 'bot ane pointles kniff to cutt thair meate,' and that none of the clan who had renounced their names should be found together in greater numbers than four persons on pain of death.⁵ In 1617 the parliament confirmed the Acts of 1603 and 1613, and reordained that any of the Clangregour who should resume their names, or any of their posterity who should assume the name of Gregoure or Macgregoure, or hold trysts or meetings with any calling themselves by that name, should forthwith be put to death.⁶ In 1624, by a contract between Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay on the one side, and Gregor Murray or M'Gregor the son of John Dow M'Gregor, brother of the deceased Alexander M'Gregor of Glenstrae, and several of his kinsmen, the sons of the deceased Alexander M'Gregor of Glenstrae, on the other, Gregor Murray as the heir of his grandfather Alexander M'Gregor, who died last vest and seised in the 20 marklands of Glenstrae, resigned these lands ad perpetuam remanentiam to his superiors Sir Duncan Campbell and Colin his son for the sum of 15,000 marks, of which 10,000 were lodged in the hands of David Livingston of Dunipace at Whitsunday 1624 as security to Sir Duncan and his son in case of any decreet of eviction against them through any former disposition of Gregor or his predecessors, with power to him to uplift the money at the end of six years; and the remaining 5000 marks were paid at the same term to Gregor Murray himself, Sir Duncan discharging him from all action civil or criminal intended against him previously to that date.⁷ For security to Gregor Murray of the money thus lodged in his hands David Livingston by a contract with the same parties sold the town, mill, and moor of Sibeggs in the sheriffdom of Stirling to the same Gregor, and in special warrandice also to the same Colin Campbell fear of Glenvrquhay.⁸ In 1632 Sir Colin Campbell procured an inhibition against David Livingston's proceeding on the said contract.⁹ In 1637, on the petition of Robert Campbell of Glenfalloch, King Charles I. granted a commission under his quarter seal to inquire whether the M'Gregors of Glenstrae and Brackley were in possession of these lands for five years preceding their forfeiture, in order to strengthen the grant of their forfeited lands in his favour.¹ In 1640 Sir Robert Campbell of Glenurquhy, Baronet, was served heir male to his brother Sir Colin Campbell of Glenurquhy, Baronet, in the lands of Stronmeloquhane, Edin-doniche with the mill, Larachfulzie, Craige, Candroquhat, Castell, Tulloche, Dulleter, and Mayne, together of the old extent of £13, 6s. 8d.² In 1642 the same Sir Robert Campbell as heir to his brother Sir Colin was seised by Sir Robert Spotiswood of Dunipace in the lands of Sibeggs in warrandice and security of Glenstrae.³

The clan Macnaughtane, whose chief in the year 1267 was Gillecris M'Nachdan, held lands in Glenorchy and Lochaw.⁴ The 'baroun Macnaughtan,' who in 1306 expressed to John of Lorn his high admiration of the prowess of King Robert Bruce, was probably the chief of his day.⁵ About the year 1343 King David II. granted to Alexander Macnaughtane all the lands which belonged to the deceased John the son of Duncan the son of Alexander of Yle, and all the lands that belonged to the deceased John M'Dugal (Dungalli) the parson.⁶ In 1361 Christina, the daughter and heiress of the deceased Dugald of Craginis, resigned to Colin Cambel, the son and heir of Gillaspie Cambel of Lochaw, her part of the barony of the deceased Alexander M'Nach-tane, which heritably belonged to her.⁷ In 1375 John of Prestwyche, the son and heir of the deceased Mariot Garrechel, sold to the same Colin certain lands in Upper Lochaw, in which Duncan M'Naughtane lord of that ilk died vest and seised.⁸ Between the years 1390 and 1406 King Robert III. confirmed to Maurice M'Naughtane a grant by Colin Campbell of Lochow in heritage of various lands in Over Lochow.⁹ In 1403 Margaret the daughter of Gyllecris called Macgillegeachin, with the consent of her son and heir Fynlay Macawaran, resigned to Colin Cam-bell, lord of Lochaw, her overlord, the sixth part of the lands of Acharne and Leatwea, and of other lands belonging to her in heritage, and formerly belonging to Alexander M'Neacden lord of the same lands.¹⁰

The death of Patrick M'Gregor at Aychinchallane is recorded by Dean M'Gregor in his Chronicle under the date 1518.¹¹ In 1537 Gregoure M'Patrik V'Gregoure in Glenvrquhay sold to Duncan Campbell M'Ean V'Ean in Bradalbin, and to Catharine Nien Donichie M'Gregor his wife, his lease of the lands of Auchanichalden in Glenvrquhay, which he held of the laird of Glenvrquhay.¹² In 1547 the three marklands of Auchanichalden were resigned to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay by Gregoure Paterson his servant (apparently the same as Gregoure M'Patrik).¹³ In the same year Duncan Glas resigned an annual revenue of 60 marks which had been granted to him (it does not appear by whom) out of the lands of Auchanichalden.¹⁴

In 1537 Gregoure M'Patrick held, under right of redemption by John M'Connaquhie V'Gregor, the three marklands of Boquhelys, one mark of Drumliert, a half mark of Corryowaran, and a half mark of Glenkynglas, in the barony of Glenvrquhay.¹ In 1547 Gregoure Paterson (or M'Patrick), servant to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay, resigned to him the lands of Auchanafanieh, Boquhiles, the markland of Glenkinglas, the markland of Ardbraitnyeh, two marks of Drumleard, one mark of Corrieoran, three marks of Lettirdoquhart, 20 shillings of Innerveyich, and a half mark of Glenkatillin.² In the same year the lands of Boquhyles and Glenfinglas appear to have been redeemed by John M'Conquhy V'Gregoure, each for the sum of 44 marks.³ In 1569 Colyne Campbell of Glenvrquhay, with the consent of his son Duncane, and of William Lord Ruthven his son's curator, granted to his servitors Gregour M'Ane V'Conachy and Catherine Campbell his wife, and to their heirs and subtenants, a nineteen years' lease of the two marklands of Blairkirk in the barony of Glenvrquhay, occupied by Gregour M'Ane, for yearly payment of six marks at the usual terms, and of 20 stones of cheese, at the castle of Glenvrquhay; half stent to the King's host; and the 'leal and trew' service of Gregour and the other inhabitants of the lands; with the provision, that if he should die and his widow marry again, she should be excluded from the lease, and the other heirs should take possession.⁴ In 1596, in conformity with a decreet arbitral pronounced by mutually chosen arbiters, Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, and Colin Campbell his son, granted to Gregour M'Ean for life a lease of the four marklands of Kincrackin, with the mill and multures, two marks of Blaircheone, one mark of Arenabir, and 40 shillings of Boquhillis, in the lordship of Glenvrquhay, excepting 'the turnouris croft' belonging to the castle of Glenvrquhay, 'with the medo and quosche adiacent tharto,' for payment of the usual dues and gressume of Boquhillis when they should happen; and promised to pay yearly to Gregour's wife Katherine for life 10 bolls meal, 6 bolls bear, 2 wedders, and 40 shillings of the readiest of the fermes of Kincrackin, in lieu of her claim to the lands of Auchre in Glendoquhart.⁵ In 1611 John Graham, the son of the deceased Gregor M'Ian in Brackley, resigned the lands of Boquhillis to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay.⁶ In 1614 Colin Campbell fear of Glenvrquhay obtained a decreet of the Lords of Session ordaining the same John Graham to remove from the lands of Kincrackine, Blaracherine, and Arrynabee.⁷ In 1671 King Charles II. granted to John Earl of Atholl, in special warrandice of certain other lands, the four marklands of Auchanafanieh, and twenty shillings of Boquhillie, in the parish of Dysart and Glenurquhie, and included in the earldom of Atholl then granted.⁸

In 1547 the lands of Braiklais were resigned to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay by Gregour Paterson his servant.⁹ In the year 1565 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to his servitor Malcolm M'Gillequhonill chaplain, and at his death to Archibald M'Gillequhonill his son, with remainder successively to John, Malcolm, and Duncan, the brothers of Archibald, the two marklands, old extent, of Brakly in the barony of Glenvrquhay, then occupied by him, for yearly payment of £8 scots at the usual terms.¹ In 1569 Duncan Campbell fear of Glenvrquhay, with the consent of his father Colin liferenter, and of his curator William lord of Ruthven, leased the same lands to Archibald M'Gillequhonil, with remainder to his brothers John, Malcolm, and Duncan, for the same yearly payment with double at entry, and reserving to the granter the hereyelds of the grantee and his heirs.² In 1573 the same Duncan Campbell, with the same consent, and for the same yearly payment, granted the two marklands of Braiklie in heritage to Gregor M'Ane or M'Gregor, with remainder to his son and heir apparent John M'Gregor, and to John's brothers Duncan, Patrick, Alexander, and Gregor.³ In 1604 King James VI. by a deed under his quarter seal, and with consent of Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, granted to Robert Campbell of Glenfalloch the same lands of Braiklie, which had been heritably held of Sir Duncan by Alexander or Allaster M'Gregour V'Ean of Braiklie, and were in the King's hand through his forfeiture for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.⁴ In 1637 Brackley was held of the same Robert Campbell by John Graham or M'Grigor.⁵ In the same year, on the petition of Robert Campbell, a commission was appointed under the quarter seal of King Charles I. to inquire whether the M'Gregors of Glenstrae and Brackley had been in possession of these lands for five years preceeding their forfeiture, in order thereby to strengthen the grant of their forfeiture to Robert Campbell.⁶

In 1567 Colyne Campbell of Glenvrquhay leased for nineteen years to Archibald Campbell the four marklands old extent of Auchalladour with the keeping of the house thereof, the lands of Canderrybyg, and two thirds of Oillay with the keeping of the forest of Beindoran, in the barony of Glenvrquhay, for yearly payment of 20 stones of cheese, 4 wedders, and 8 bolls of bear, for Auchalladour, of 4 shillings for Canderrybig, and of 47 shillings for Oillay, with the 'lele, trew, and afald' service of himself and his subtenants, and on condition that he should always have under him a sufficient 'servantman' in the keeping of the forest, and 'to norice and hald sa mony deir in it as it may resonabillie sustene, nay falt being in the forestership,' but remitting to him the payment of the 8 bolls of bear for the first year, as the lands were waste, and also the gersum of the lands extending in the rental to eight 'nveald ky' every five years.⁷

In 1571 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, with the consent of his son Duncan fear, and of William Lord Ruthven his son's curator, granted to Archibald Campbell one mark of Claschegour, a half mark of Lettirothir, a half mark of Craggan, 20 shillings of Innervegir, one mark of Knokynty, and one mark of Dowmark, in the barony of Glenvrquhay, for yearly payment of a male mart at Martymes in winter (11 Nov.) for Claschegour, of two marks at Andermes in winter (30 Nov.) for Lettirothir, of 20 shillings at Midsummer (24 June) and Andersmes for Craggan, of 10 stones of cheese 'in tyme of mail-cheis,' and 33 shillings and 4 pence at

Midsummer and Andersmes, for Innervegir, of two marks 'maill' at Midsummer and Andermes for Knokinty, and 33 shillings and 4 pence 'maill' at the same terms for Dowmark.¹ The grant included also the liberty of having and using a saw for sawing 'fallin and failitt tymmer of the growth and without crop;' but, if Archibald Campbell or his heirs or subtenants, or their servants in their name, should 'cut of the root any grein tymmer with laif and grein crop,' especially fir, without license from the granter or his heirs, the lease should be null and void; and they were prohibited also from making iron without license under the same penalty; but, if they should obtain license, and the woods 'nominat tharto,' all the iron they should make should be free to them without payment to the granter or his heirs.²

In 1586 John Campbell of Laweris granted to his wife Beatrix Campbell the lady of Laweris, and to Colin Campbell their second son, the lands of Catniche and Larg, of the old extent of £5, with the fishings in the water of Vrquhay, and a house built upon a certain island naturally formed and surrounded by that water in the Kirktown of Dysert, in the lordship of Glenvrquhay.³

In the year 1437 Anthoninus bishop of Urbino, papal legate in Scotland, granted to Sir Colin Cabel of Glenhurcha in the diocese of Argyle license to have a portable altar (altare portatile), on which in places suited for the purpose he might cause mass and other divine services to be performed in presence of himself and of his family.⁴ In 1483 Colin Earl of Argyle and Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay had a remission for taking part in the Raid of Lauder.⁵ In 1513 Sir Duncan 'was slane at the field off Flowdane with King James the ferd, and was bureit with his cheiff Archibald Campbell, then Erle of Ergyle, in Kylmwn, because in the foirsaid feild thay deit valiantlie togidder.'⁶ In 1515 Colin Campbell of Glenurquhar took part with Gavin Douglas, newly consecrated bishop of Dunkeld, against the adherents of Andrew Stewart, bishop postulate, who held the palace and the steeple of the cathedral.⁷ Dean Macgregor in his 'Chronicle' records that in 1519, on the day on which John Dow M'Patrick M'Gregor died or was buried, there was great mourning in Glenvrquhay.⁸ In 1531 Archibald Earl of Argyle and Duncane Campbell of Glenurquhy submitted to the arbitration of Donald abbot of Cowper (the Earl's uncle), Sir John Campbell of Lundy, Archibald Campbell of Skipynche, Sir John Campbell of Cawder, Archibald Campbell of Kirkmichell, Dowgale Campbell of Corverran, Coleyn Campbell of Ardquhingas, James Campbell of Laweris, John Campbell of Duntrwn, and Archibald Campbell of Glenlyon, or of any five of them, all the 'displeasours' moved between them, and especially where the Earl 'hes nocht hed hym to his said cousing Duncane Campbell as ane ourlord and cheiff aucht to haiff him to his kynnisman and tennand in the defendance of him or any otherways—and siclyk quhar the said Duncan has nocht had hym to the said Earl as ane kynnyisman and tennand aucht to haiff hym to his cheiff and ourlord in his service or any otherwise.'⁹ Their differences about the lands of Lochynnale and Ardyntallane were submitted to the arbitration of Sir John Campbell of Lundy, James Campbell of Lawars, Gilbert Gray of Buttergask, Sir John Campbell of Cawder, Master John Lethem, and Master Robert Galbraith.¹ In 1552 an act of the court of Argyle was passed in favour of Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay against Gregoure M'Conoquhy V'Gregoure, declaring the latter at the will of his pursuer for destroying his woods, but the pursuer, having declared his will, accepted 300 marks instead of a 1000 as compensation for his loss.² The same Colin, who died in 1583, 'was ane great justiciar all his tyme, throch the quhilk he sustenit thee deidlie feid of the Clangregour ane lang space, and besydis that he caused executt to the death mony notable lymmaris; he beheiddit the laird of M'Grigour himself at Kandmoir in presens of the Erle of Atholl, the justice clerk, and sundrie vther nobillmen.'³ His successor Sir Duncan in 1588, in granting a lease of some lands in Lorn to Donald and Dougall M'Carlich, bound them to commit slaughter on the Clangregor till he should be fully satisfied with their diligence in the matter.⁴ The forests of Glenwrehay in the seventeenth century were Coryba in Braglenerevirne, Maim Laerne in the King's forest lying upon Brae Wrehay, Brae Lyon, Brae Lochy, Bin Dowran in Bra Glenwrehay, and part of Binlhuy.⁵

On a small island or peninsula at the north end of Lochawe stand the ruins of the castle of Fraoch-Elan, a stronghold of the Macnaughtans.⁶ In the year 1267 King Alexander III. granted to Gillicrist M'Nachdan and his heirs the keeping of his castle and island of Frechelan, so that they should cause it to be built and repair it at the King's expense as often as needful, and keep it safely for the King's necessity, and that, as often as he should come to it, the castle well furnished (honeste paratum) should be delivered to him to lodge and dwell there at his pleasure.⁷ Its subsequent history seems to be unknown.

On a rocky peninsula, at one time probably an island, on the eastern shore of Lochawe stands Kilchurn or Caolchurn castle, a square tower surrounded by a high wall with battlements, and with round towers at the angles.⁸ The island appears in record in 1432 and subsequently as Elankylquhurne.⁹ The castle appears to have been built in 1440 by Sir Colin Campbell the first lord of Glenvrquhay, or, as some say, by his lady in his absence.¹⁰ In 1523 Sir Colin Campbell the third lord of Glenvrquhay died at Ilan-Keilquhirn.¹¹ Colin the sixth lord, who died in 1583, built 'the four kinnellis' and 'the north chalmeris' of the castle, and it was repaired by his immediate successor Sir Duncan.¹ In 1643 Sir Robert Campbell of Glenvrquhay repaired the high tower and the 'laich hall' of Castelkylchorne at the cost of 2000 marks.²

There was a castle at Glenvrquhay, but there seems to be no record of its foundation. In 1449 a grant of Lorne by John Stewart to Sir Colin Campbell was given at the castle of Glenvrquhay.³ In 1502 Archibald Earl of Argyle dates a charter at Glenvrquhay.⁴ In 1510 a sum of money agreed on for the redemption of Barbrek and Pollindowich was, in case of the evasion of the receipt, to be lodged in the hands of the vicar of Glenvrquha and of the constable of the place of Glenurquha.⁵ Sir Duncan Campbell, who died at Flodden in 1513, 'biggit the laich hall off Glenvrquhay.'⁶ In 1518 died Duncan M'Gregor keeper of the castle of Glenvrquhay.⁷ In 1523 the fortalice of Glenvrquhay was confirmed along with the lands by Colin Earl of Argyle to Duncan the son and heir of Sir Colin Campbell.⁸ In 1524 Neil the son of Duncan M'Gregor in Glenvrquhay died in the castle.⁹ In 1536 a charter of Earl Archibald is witnessed by John M'Conquhye VicGregor, captain of the castle of Glenvrquhay.¹⁰ In 1569, 1571, and 1573 the fermes of various lands in the barony of Glenvrquhay were appointed to be paid at the castle.¹¹ In 1570 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay dates a precept of seisin at the same place.¹² In 1574, 1575, and 1576, charters are witnessed by Gregoure M'Ane captain or constable of Glenvrquhay.¹³ Between 1583 and 1631 the house of Glenvrquhay underwent various repairs and additions by Sir Duncan Campbell the seventh laird.¹⁴ The 'turnouris croft,' and the 'medo and quosche' near the castle have been already mentioned.¹⁵ In the year 1610, while Sir Duncan Campbell was residing in Edinburgh with his sons and other kinsmen, attending the Privy Council, the Clan Gregor burned the 100 marklands of Glenvrquhay and other lands, 'and in the Cosche of Glenvrquhay they slew fourtie great mearis and thair followaris with ane fair cursour sent to the said Sir Duncane from the Prince out of Londoun.'¹⁶ Sir Duncan having returned from Edinburgh and despatched his son Robert and Colene Campbell of Abirruquhil in pursuit of the depredators, they overtook and slew a number of them, and captured six, 'quhom they hangit at the Cosche quhair they slew the mearis.'¹⁷ There appear to be no remains of the ancient fortalice of Glenvrquhay.

There was a manor house on the lands of Stronemeloquian, which in 1554 was granted by the Master of Argyle to Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay along with the lands.¹⁸ In 1584 Sir Duncan Campbell received seisin of the lands in the manor of Stronmelaquhan.¹⁹ It was probably the residence of the M'Gregors of Glenstrae during the whole time they possessed the lands.²⁰

In the seventeenth century it is styled 'a towne wherein the MackGregoris sumtymes dwelt,' and also 'MackGregoir his hous,' and is described as situated 'at the east end' of Lochawe two miles from Kileburn Castle.¹ The tradition of the district assigns as the residence of the M'Gregors two different places in Stronmelochan, one of which is on the top of the hill of Tullich.²

In 1528 John M'Evine, captain of the Clan Gregor of Glenshray, died at Achachalladur.³ In 1561 Archibald Earl of Argyle dates a charter at Auchalladour.⁴ In 1567 the keeping of the house of Auchalladour was granted with the lands by Colyne Campbell of Glenvrquhay to Archibald Campbell.⁵ Between 1583 and 1631 Sir Duncan, seventh lord of Glenvrquhay, built the tower of Achalladoure at an expense of 1000 marks.⁶ In 1603 or 1604 the house of Achalladar was burned by the M'Gregors.⁷ The castle or its ruins still remain.⁸

There was a small castle at the head of Loch Tulla.⁹

In the parish are several forts built of dry stones.¹⁰

Of the Clan Gregor buried in the church of Dysart there are recorded by Dean M'Gregor, in 1390 John M'Gregor of Glenvrquhay, in 1415 Gregor M'Anecham and John Dow M'Anecham V'Gregor, in 1440 Malcolm the son of John Dow M'Gregor, in 1461 Patrick M'Gregor lord of Glenshray, in 1494 Terloch Keir the son of Duncan M'Gregor, in 1498 Malcolm Makgregor the son and heir of John M'Gregor of Glenshray, in 1518 Patrick M'Gregor, and Duncan M'Gregor keeper of the castle of Glenvrquhay, in 1519 John Dow M'Patrick M'Gregor of Glenshraye, in 1526 Gregor the son of John M'Gregor, alias M'Evine M'Allester, of Glenshray, and in 1528 John M'Evine, captain of the Clan Gregor of Glenshray.¹¹ Several of them are stated to have been buried in stone coffins and on different sides of the high altar.¹² In the churchyard of Glenvrquhay in 1769 were 'several grave-stones of great antiquity, with figures of a warrior, each furnished with a spear or two-handed sword; on some' were 'representations of the chase, on others elegant fret work, and on one, said to be part of the coffin of a M'Gregor, a fine running pattern of foliage and flowers.'¹³ In taking down many years ago the old church of Dysart several stone coffins were found at the north side of the east end, where the M'Gregors appear chiefly to have buried, and some of their tombstones, much defaced, are still appropriated by persons of the name that bury in the churchyard.¹⁴ One of the gravestones existing in 1769 was said to be the oldest of those belonging to a family of blacksmiths named M'Nabb, the first of whom was employed by the lady of Sir Duncan Campbell in 1440.¹⁵ In this churchyard there are also tombs of M'Intyres, M'Naughtons, and Campbells.¹⁶

Ardchattane¹ — Ardchattan² — Balliebodane in Bendaraloch³ — Ballebadin and Bendraloche⁴ — Ballibodan or Kilbodan in Bendaraloch⁵ — Kilbedan.⁶ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 36.)

In the year 1637 the parishes of Ardchattan and Muckairn were united by act of parliament.⁷

The former, anciently named Balmhaodan (the town of Saint Modan),⁸ includes the district called Benderloch (the hill between the lochs)⁹ which lies between Loch Creran on the north and Lóch Etive on the south and east, and also a considerable tract on the east of Loch Etive lying in the angle formed by that loch and the river Awe, together with the island Eriska at the entrance to Loch Creran, the island called Elanduinish in Loch Etive, and several others. On the east of Loch Etive are the mountains Ben-Cruachan, 3669 feet above the level of the sea (the highest in Argyle, and by Barbour in the fourteenth century stated to be as high as any other in Scotland), Buachail-mor and Buachail-beg, each about 3000 feet, Ben-starive, above 3000, and several others of considerable height.¹⁰ The principal valleys are Glennoe, Glenkinglas, and Glenetive, and the southern extremity of the parish is bounded by the river Awe, which issues from Lochawe at the romantic pass of Braindir, and falls into Loch Etive at Bunawe.¹¹

This church, dedicated to Modan the saint of Rosneth, belonged to the prior of Ardchattan,¹² but its history previously to the Reformation seems entirely lost. In 1575 a deed by John Campble of Calder, and in 1580 a deed by Angus M'Conill of Donyvaig, are witnessed by Duncan Campbell minister of Ardchattane.¹³ In 1603 the price of reversion to the lands of Barcaltin and Corrieblicaik was appointed to be paid in the kirk of Balliebodane in Bendaraloch.¹⁴ In 1631 John Campbell was served heir to his father Alexander Campbell of Ardchattan in the teinds and patronage of the church of Ballebadin and Bendraloche.¹⁵ In 1697 John Campbell of Ardchattan was served heir to his father Archibald fear of Ardchattan in the teinds and patronage of the same church, then styled Ballibodan or Kilbodan in Bendaraloch.¹⁶

measures 57 feet by $22\frac{1}{2}$, and has only three windows, flat topped, and placed one in each end, and the third on the south side.¹ Its cemetery is still in use, and near it is a spring named Saint Modan's Well.² The present church of Archattan, also situated on Loch Etive, was built in 1836 at the distance of three miles from the church of Balmhaodan.³

At the west end of the parish, about a mile from the ferry of Connel, are vestiges of the small chapel of Kilcolmkill (or Gilchallumkill), now Kiel, with a cemetery which is still used.⁴ 'In this town ther ar abundance of punick stonis, floating upon the water if they be throwne in the same, not elsewhere in thir quarters to be found but in this chappell town called in English St. Colme's Chappell.'⁵

Between the church of Balmhaodan and Loch Etive stand the remains of the priory of Archattan, founded in 1230 or 1231 for monks of the order of Vallis Caulium by Duncan Maccoull, who is said to have been one of the family of Lorn.⁶ Very little of its history is known, but, like Iona, it seems to have acknowledged some early dependence upon the bishopric of Dunkeld.⁷ In the year 1296 Pieres the prior of Ercattan, and the whole convent, swore fealty to King Edward I. of England.⁸ In 1470 the seisin of Lorne in favour of Walter Lord Lorne is witnessed by Kenneth (Kenitus) a monk of Ardekatan.⁹ In the same year a reddendo of one penny Scots, payable for lands in Lorn granted by Colin Earl of Argyle to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, was appointed to be paid at the monastery of Ardehatten.¹⁰ About the end of the fifteenth century the priory seems to have been ruled in succession by Somerled or Somherle Macdougall and his two sons Duncan and Dougal, the last of whom died in 1502, and who are all buried within the church.¹¹ In 1506 James, prior or general of the order of Vallis Caulium, commissioned the prior of Beauuly to visit Archattan, and to make such regulations as he should find necessary.¹² In 1512 Duncan M'Cowle, the son and heir of Alexander M'Cowle of Dunnolych, was buried in Archattane.¹³ John Campbell, of the house of Cawdor, was commendator of Archattane in 1552, 1557, 1558, 1562, and 1564, in several of which years deeds given by him at the priory are witnessed by Sir John M'Paul rector of Kilnynvir and portioner of Ardehatten, and by Sir William Mershell, Sir David Thomsone, Sir David M'Paul, and Alexander Fergusson, monks of the priory.¹⁴ In 1558 John commendator of Archattan and his convent, for a certain sum of money paid by Jonet Gordoun lady of Appyn for the repair of their church and monastery, granted to her in heritage the two marklands of Yriskay and Dyrrananech in the lordship of Lorne, for yearly payment of £4 Scots instead of 14 bolls of black oatmeal and 2 bolls of bear as the ancient ferme wont to be paid for the lands, at 5s. per boll, and of 20 pennies Scots for grassums and augmentation of the rental—the grantee giving three suits at the three head courts (placita) of Ardochattan.¹ In 1562 the same lands were resigned by Jonet Gordoun, and granted by the same commendator to his natural son John Campbell and his heirs male, with remainder to John's brother Alexander and his heirs male, and to John's heirs whomsoever bearing the Campbell surname and arms.² In 1564 the same commendator and convent, for the sum of £3000 Scots paid to them by Master Alexander Campbell of Flines Moir the commendator's brother, granted to him and to his heirs male, with remainder to the heirs whomsoever of John Campbell of Calder bearing the Campbell surname and arms, 4 marklands of Ardache, 3 marks of Tillercheran, 4 marks of Kilbrandan, 8 marks of Ardochatten and Inzeone, 4 marks of Inviresragane with the mill, 2 marks of Wuir Caddirle, 2 marks of Caddirlemoyr, 1 mark of Caddirlebeg or Caddirlenamanaht, 2 marks of Cregdurenis, 3 marks of Blaircreyne and Cancregge, 2 marks of Creagan, 3 marks of Culte and Beallycht, with the islands of Ellannamaynd and Ellandurrynche, with the salmon fishings, 'lye stellnettis'—the grantee paying for Ardache 20 bolls of black oatmeal and 4 bolls of bear; for Tillercheran 32 bolls bear; for Kilbrandane 24 bolls black oatmeal and 6 bolls bear; for Ardochattan and Inzone 48 bolls black oatmeal and 8 bolls bear, namely, for each markland 6 bolls black oatmeal and 1 boll bear; for Inviresragane with the mill 20 bolls black oatmeal and 4 bolls bear, or 3s. 4d. Scots for every boll of oatmeal, and 5s. Scots for every boll of bear, at option; for Wuir Caddirle 26s. 8d. Scots; for Caddirlemore 53s. 4d. Scots; for Caddirlebeg or Caddirlenamanaht 40s. Scots; for Cregdurenis 40 stones of cheese, or for each stone 40 pence, in all £6, 13s. 4d.; for Blaircreyne and Cancregge £6, 13s. 4d. Scots; for Creagan 53s. 4d. Scots; for Culte and Ballycht 40s. Scots; and for the islands of Ellandurrynche and Ellannamane 26s. 8d. Scots; in all 112 bolls of black oatmeal, 54 bolls of bear, 40 stones of cheese or the price aforesaid, £19, 13s. 4d. of old ferme, and £3, 6s. 8d. in augmentation of the rental—together with the usual services in carrying stones, tiles, lime, and timber, for the maintenance and repair of the monastery, its houses, and offices (officine), as used to be done by the husbandmen (coloni) and occupiers of these lands and islands, with other services, and three suits yearly at the three head courts of Ardochattan—the granter reserving to himself and successors only the monastery of Ardochatten, with the gardens, orchards, green, and their pertinents.³ In 1575 John Campble of Calder paid to the bishop of the Isles as commendator of Ardochattan the sum of 1600 marks as the 'heritable fewis of certain landis' of the priory.⁴ In 1580 King James VI. constituted Alexander Campbell, the rector of Killininvir, commendator and prior of Ardochattan, and granted him for life the benefice and priory of the same, with all its lands, mansions, castles, towers, fortalices, manor places, woods, mills, salmon fishings, rents, churches, parson's teinds, and other teinds and emoluments whatsoever both of the spirituality and of the temporality, all which had been resigned by John bishop of the Isles and commendator of the priory, and were now to be held and leased by Alexander Campbell as he pleased, with power to bestow the inferior benefices, chaplainries, or altarges, when vacant.⁵ In 1581, in the choir of the priory, in presence of John bishop of the Isles and other witnesses, Niel bishop of Argyle gave seisin of the priory according to the grant of King James to the same Alexander Campbell by delivering to him the Bible and the key of the great door of the church.¹ In 1584, by a deed dated at the Canongate in Edinburgh, Alexander commendator of Ardehattan, the son of John, confirmed his father's grant of 1564.² In 1599 the same Alexander Campbell commendator of Ardehattan granted to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eachtrachan, for his life and the life of his next heir and 19 years more, the teinds of the 8 marklands of Ardehattan, and of the parishes of Balivedan, Kilninvir, Kilbrandan in Seil, Kirkapol in Tiree, Kilmanivaig in Lochaber, and Kilmarow in Kintyre, reserving the teinds payable to the ministers of these parishes, for which Duncan and his heirs should pay £75 yearly.³ The deed is subscribed by the commendator, who affixes the seal of the chapter in supplement of the 'convent and conventual brethir,' who were then all 'depairtit.'⁴ In the same year the grant was confirmed by King James VI., and the lease was resigned by Duncan Campbell in favour of Catherine Nic Donald the wife of Alexander Campbell commendator of Ecolmkill and her heirs.⁵ In 1602 Alexander Campbell prior of Archattane resigned to King James VI. the manor or place of Archattane called the priory, with the houses, mansions, buildings, greens, officehouses, gardens, and orchards, lying within the inner precinct of the monastery, and also within the outer precinct or hedges of the priory, together with all the privileges, liberties, and services, used and wont and 'addetit' to the manor place for its repair and upholding, such as leading of stone, lime, slate, and timber, with the building of the officehouses, leading of peats, shearing and leading of corn, and other services expressly excepted from the act of annexation — also the parish churches above specified, with the teind fishings of Lochetive and of the water of Aw as part of the patrimony of the priory — appending to the deed of resignation along with his own subscription 'the comoun seill of the said priorie in supplement of the consent of the convent thairof alreddie deceissit.'⁶ In the same year King James VI. by a deed under his great seal dissolved the monastery, and crected it into a temporal tenandry in favour of Alexander Campbell commendator of Ecolmkill and formerly prior of Ardehattan, granting to him and to his heirs male the monastery with services for building officehouses, leading stone, timber, slate, and turf, and cutting and leading corn, with the fishings of the 'priorschotts' at the mouth of the water of Aw, and of Portverran at the head of Lochetive, the teinds and patronage of the churches of the priory, and the teinds of the salmon and herring caught between the Connel and the head of Lochetive, or in the water of Aw.⁷ In 1605 John Campbell of Calder granted to Alexander commendator of Ecolmkill the 4 marklands of Inviresragan, 2 marks of Blarerein, and 1 mark of Kandnaeraig, in Bendraloch, and in 1613 granted to the same Alexander and Katharine M'Donald his spouse the 8 marklands of Ardehattan and Inzeoun, and the 2 marklands of Craigdurinehe, with their islands, namely, the islands of Illanmean and Ilandurinehe.⁸ In 1615 King James VI.

by a deed under his privy seal annexed the priory of Ardochattan, together with the abbacy of Icolmekill, to the bishoprick of the Isles.¹ In 1617 the deed was ratified by the Scotch parliament.² In 1624 the lands of Glensheling in the parish of Kilbryde were granted by Sir John M'Dougall of Dounolich to Mr. Donald Campbell commissary of Lorne, for yearly payment of 13 marks Scots to the prior of Ardochattan.³ A report by Thomas Knox bishop of the Isles, dated 1626, bears, that 'it is to be considerit that to the bishoprik ar annexit the abbacie of Icolmikill and priourie of Ardochattan, and yit remaneth in the priour of Ardochattan his possessioun be vertew of ane lyfrent gift undir his Majesteis greit seall before the act of annexatioune to the bishoprik, so that nather I nor my father culd evir enjoy any pairt thairof bot Icolmikill, which by compositioun with Sir Johne Campbell, assignay to the said priour, I possess.'⁴ In 1631 John Campbell was served heir to his father Alexander Campbell of Ardochattan in the manor or place of Ardochattan, the monastery or priory of Ardochattan, with the houses and other pertinents, together of the extent of 13 shillings and 4 pence, and 3 shillings and 4 pence in augmentation—in the church, teinds, and patronage of Ballebadin and several other churches, and the fishing of salmon and herrings in the waters of Loch Etive and Aw, together of the extent of £4—and in the fishing called 'the steil net of the Pryoreshottis on the water mouth of Aw,' and the fishing called 'the steill net of the Keanlochitive called Port Verran,' together of the extent of 13 shillings and 4 pence, and 3 shillings and 4 pence in augmentation—all united into the tenandry of Ardochattan.⁵ In 1636 Neil bishop of the Isles confirmed the tenandry to the same John Campbell.⁶ In 1644 the charter of 1602 was confirmed to the same John by the Scotch parliament.⁷ In 1652, in terms of a contract between John Campbell of Ardochattan and John Campbell of Calder, dated in 1638, the former, with the consent of George Campbell tutor to Calder, and acting for him on account of his infirmity, granted to Archibald Campbell, his eldest lawful son, and to his heirs male, with remainder to his own heirs and to the family of Calder, the lands of Ardochattan, Inzein, Craigdurrinish, with Island-na-mean and Island Durrinish, and the keeping of the woods of Craigdurrinish, the lands of Over Cadderly, Cadderlymore, and Cadderlybeg or Cadderlynamanycht, and Ardachy—for yearly payment of a certain feu duty in meal, bear, cheese, and money, amounting in all, at 3s. 4d. for the boll of meal, 5s. for the boll of bear, and 3s. 4d. for the stone of cheese, to £34, 13s. 4d.—on condition that he should relieve the laird of Calder of all the services that were wont to be paid from these lands to the priory, and that he and his heirs should receive into the house and the society of their family of Ardochattan the heirs or heirs apparent of the family of Calder whenever they should come thither, and should bring them up, educate them, and provide them in food, drink, clothes, and other necessaries suitable to their rank, till ten years of age and ready for school.⁸ In 1654, while John Campbell of Ardochattan was absent on the King's service, his houses of Ardochattan and Ardrey, and all his household goods, were burned by a party of English soldiers, and his loss on the occasion amounted to 8000 marks.⁹

In 1661 these facts were proved before the Scotch parliament, and were ordered to be put on record.¹ In the same year King Charles II. confirmed his grant of 1602 to the same John Campbell, the son and heir of Alexander commendator of Ecolmekill and prior of Ardehattane.² In 1697 John Campbell of Ardehattan was served heir to his father Archibald fear of the same in the property of the whole free and temporal tenantry of Ardehattan, including the manor or place of old called the monastery or priory of Ardehattan, with the buildings, greens, office houses, gardens, and orchards, as well within the inner precinct or stone fence of the said former monastic place as in those other gardens within the outer precinct and fence commonly called the Thornedykes and Hedges of the said monastery of Ardehattan, of the extent of 13 shillings and 4 pence with 3 shillings and 4 pence in augmentation—together with the church of Ballebodan, or Kilbodan, and other churches.³

The priory is now a mere ruin. The church, of which the outline may still be traced, was 66 feet by 29 within walls.⁴ There remain also a piscina surmounted by three unequal early English arches with a round arch above and various mouldings, and several arches and other fragments of the monastic buildings.⁵ Part of the prior's residence on the south west of the priory is still used as that of the proprietor.⁶ Between the priory and the adjacent hill there is a wide extent of pasture called 'the monk's garden'.⁷

In Baiamund's Roll the priory is taxed at £20.⁸ In the Libellus Taxationum it is rated at 300 marks, and in the Taxatio Sec. XVI. ad rationem triginta millium librarum at £62.⁹

The lands of the priory, as held in 1665, their yearly value, and the taxation to which they were subjected for the relief of beneficed persons at the rate of £9, 16s. 10d. per cent., were as follow:—The lands and teinds of Ballibaddan, Killindevan, Killibraiden, Kilchumich, and Kilmanevag, held by John Campbell of Ardehattan, valued at £510, taxed to the amount of £54, 13s. 10d.; lands of Airdronnell, held by the Earl of Argyle, valued at £76, taxed to £8, 3s. 1d.; lands of Innersragane, Blairchirayn, and Bendaeraig, held by Sir Hewgh Campbell of Caddell, valued at £140, taxed to £15, 0s. 5d.; lands of Ardehattan, namely, Eon and Craighuchreneis, held by the same Sir Hewgh, valued at £140, taxed to £15, 0d. 5d.; the lands of Calderleis, Ardacha, and Kilbrannan, held by the same Sir Hewgh, valued at £240, taxed to £25, 14s.; lands of Ardchonnell, Shallen, and Killcherran, held by the same, valued at £164, taxed to £17, 11s. 10d.; the same Sir Hewgh's lands in Appein, valued at £90, taxed to £9, 13s.; and the lands of Eriska and Darrenanech, held by Campbell of Eriska, valued at £40, taxed to £4, 5s. 8d.; the whole valued rent of the lands and teinds amounting to £1400 Scots, and the whole tax to £150, 2s. 3d.¹⁰

In the year 1304 Ewen of Argyle was lord of Lorn, Menderaloch, and Lesmor.¹ About the year 1315, after the forfeiture of Alexander of Argyle the son of Ewen and his son John of Lorn, King Robert Bruce granted to Sir Donald Campbell the lands called Benderloch with their pertinents, for the service of one ship of forty oars for the King's fleet as often as necessary.² In 1321 or 1322 the same king granted to Sir Arthur Campbell for the service of one fourth of a soldier certain lands in Lorn, including three pennylands of Inidaw, three pennylands of Achnaba, five pennylands of Fearlochan, five pennylands of Achnacreach, and five pennylands of Achenekath, within the bounds of Benderloch.³ In 1355 King David II. granted to Sir Duncan Campbell, for the service of a 'birling' with twenty oars, the lands of Benederdaloch, with the tenantry of Gillecallum M'Gillevuan, and the rest of the pertinents, except the lands which Arthur Campbell his father held there by a grant from the crown; which lands (of Benederdaloch) were resigned by Duncan before the nobles of the King's council and barons of Argyle for infestment to himself and his heirs.⁴ In 1388 Sir Robert the Steward and his wife Jonet (the daughter of Macdougall of Lorn) resigned the lands of Benechirdeloch, together with those of Lorn, in the sheriffdom of Perth, to King Robert II., who granted them to John the Steward of Innermeth.⁵ The same lands appear to have been resigned in 1470 as part of the lordship of Lorn by Walter Lord Lorn to Colin Earl of Argyle.⁶ In the same year that earl granted to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay his uncle one third of his lands in Beanederdaloch in the sheriffdom of Perth, a grant which appears to have included six marks of Barcaltin, four marks of the two Culehaoranis, six marks of Fearloquhanis, six marks of Auchiaracle, six marks of Auchianagir, four marks of Innerdergan, two marks of Condalych, two marks of Letterdowaltane and Dareanlochan, two marks of Glentenle, two marks of Blaireroske, eight marks of Auchinaba, two marks of Cadderliemore, two marks of Barnadeas and Barsalean, two marks of Corryboe, two marks of Drumavoke, two marks of Gleneffern, two marks of Balloch, two marks of Corryblychage, and perhaps some other lands.⁷ Their subsequent history down to the seventeenth century, as confirmed by successive earls of Argyle to the family of Glenorchy, is the same as the history of the third of Lorn.⁸ In the year 1626 Mistress Elizabeth Campbell, and Margaret Campbell lady Loudon, daughter of the deceased George Master of Loudon, and heirs portioners of Sir Duncan Campbell (who died at the allegiance of King David Bruce), ancestor of Sir Hugh Campbell of Loudon, ancestor of Sir George Campbell of Loudon, ancestor of Sir Matthew Campbell of Loudon, ancestor of these ladies, were served heirs to Sir Duncan in the lands of Bendirdaloch with the tenantry of Gilcalme and Gilleavin, of the old extent of £46, 16s. 3d.⁹ In 1629 the same ladies, as the heirs of the same predecessors, resigned the lands of Benderloch to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy and Sir Colin his son.¹⁰

In 1449 John Stewart lord of Lorne, on account of a marriage contract between his 'derrest cousing and mach' Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay and his daughter Jonet Stewart, granted to Sir Colin the five marklands of Lettirbean, and half a markland between Leakansummar and the rivulet called Altmothlé, with the isle of Incheonnan and all other isles thereto annexed, and other lands in the lordship of Lorn and sheriffdom of Perth.¹ In 1456 the same John Stewart gave Sir Colin seisin of the lands.² In 1514 Colin Earl of Argyle confirmed the lands of Letterbean to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, the son and heir of Sir Duncan who died at Flodden.³ Their subsequent history is the same as that of the third of Lorn down to the year 1629, when they were resigned by the ladies Campbell of Loudon to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorehy and Sir Colin his son.⁴

In 1479 Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted to John M'Dowgall two pennylands of Culcharran, one markland of Caddirlimoir, and one pennyland of Glencomach, in the lordship of Lorn.⁵ In 1507 King James IV. granted to Colin Campbell, the son and apparent heir of Archibald Earl of Ergile, and to Jonet Gordoun his wife, certain lands resigned by the Earl, and to be held as parts and pendicles of the earldom of Ergile and of the lordship of Lorn, including the twelve marklands of Glenkinglas, the six marklands of Glentich with the forest, and the ten marklands of the two Auchincrais.⁶ In 1524 Colin Earl of Argyle confirmed to Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, the son and heir of the deceased Sir Colin Campbell, the lands of Barchaltane, Auchaca, Auchinryre, Condalich, Gleneffern, Arreryne, Dowhaw, and Glenno, in the lordship of Lorn.⁷ In 1541 John Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted to Alexander M'Dugall and Issabella Campbell his wife, for Alexander's service and homage except in so far as they were due to Glenvrquhay's superior Archibald Earl of Ergile, the following lands resigned by John M'Dugall, and with remainder to him, namely, two pennylands of Cylecharran, one pennyland of Glentarne, six marklands of Barryngyrricht, three pennylands of Innerirgan, one pennyland of Cadderlymore, one markland of Tonferna, two pennylands of Barnacarrig, one pennyland of Awchtyheych, and two marklands of Semballauch, in the lordship of Lorn, reserving to John M'Dugall the liferent of Cadderlymore, Tonferna, Barnacarrig, Auchtyheych, and Semballaucht.⁸ In 1557 there appears in record John M'Dunslaif of Auchnachre.⁹ In 1566 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to his son Patrick six marklands of Auchynrere, four marklands of Drumnavokey, and two marklands of Condolych, all of old extent.¹⁰ In 1575 Duncan Campbell fear of Glenvrquhay, and Colin Campbell liferenter, leased for 21 years from Whitsunday 1576 to their servitor Dougall M'Eane V'Illemichaell, and to his son John Makdougall V'Eane V'Illemichaell, the two marklands old extent of Gleneffern in the lordship of Lorn, then occupied by Dougall, for payment of 40 shillings Scots at the usual terms, with other dues and their own faithful service, with power to sublet the land to tenants of no higher rank than themselves, on condition that they should make their chief residence on the land or forfeit their lease; granting them also the keeping and maintaining of the woods within the bounds of the land, in the event of their cutting or destroying of which the lease should be null.¹ In 1576 the same Duncan Campbell, with the consent of his father Colin, granted to his servitors Johne M'Conoquhy Roy V'Coule, to Alané M'Ean V'Conoquhy Roy V'Coule and Ewin M'Ean V'Conoquhy Roy his sons, and to each of them in succession, a nineteen years' lease from Whitsunday of that year of the six marklands of Barcaltin, four marklands of Corrieblicaik, six marklands of Ferloquhane, and four marklands of Glentendill, old extent, in the lordship of Lorn.² In 1585 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted for life to John Campbell his third son the lands of Auchynrere, Drumnavoke, and Condolyeh, respectively of the old extent of six, four, and two marks.³ In 1588 Donald M'Carlich and Dougall M'Carlich his brother, before entering on a lease for life and one heir male of either of the two marklands of Glenevern, and one markland of Elir—and Dougall, before entering on a similar lease of the half markland of Glenkatille—all in the lordship of Lorn, and granted to them by Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay—'understanding the Clangregour to be manifest malefactors and his Majesty's declared rebels for sundry slaughters, evil turns, and oppressions done by them upon divers persons his Majesty's lieges,' became bound with all the forces they could command to enter into deadly feud with the Clangregour, and to 'indure and continew thairin and in making of slauchtir vpon thame and thair adherentis baith privelie and oppinlie,' and by no means to desist therefrom till the said Duncan 'find himself be our travellis and diligence satisfit and contentit with the slauchtir we sall do and commit vpon thame, and in speciall abstract and withdraw ws thairfra be himself, as alsua quhill he find the way to mak ane agreement and pacificatioun betuix ws and the Clangregour for the slauchtir we sall commit vpoun thame, sua that thaireftir we may posses and bruk the saidis landis to be dispoit to ws in maner forsaid according to the tennour of the said assedatioun.'⁴ The yearly payment for the lands was fixed at 40 shillings for each, with service in hosting, hunting, and stenting, and in all other things, and the tenants M'Carlich were also to have the keeping of all the woods on the property, and of the black fish on the water of Etive within the lands—were bound to prevent all persons of their own rank from cutting or destroying the woods, and in the event of their being cut or destroyed by persons of higher rank, to give notice within 24 hours to Duncan Campbell or his officers in Lorne or Glenvrquhay—and were also to submit without appeal to the decreet pronounced by Duncan or his heirs in their own courts anent their failure in any of the conditions of their lease.⁵ In 1589 the same Duncan granted to Ewin M'Ean V'Onoquhe Roy, and to his heirs by his wife Margaret Nien Allester V'Lauchlane, a 21 years' lease of the ten marklands of Ferloquhan and Glentendill in the lordship of Lorn from Whitsunday of that year, for yearly payment of 22 bolls of oat meal and 8 bolls of bear 'to be brocht to the Downan of Inneraw betwix Yule and Candilmes,' with 6 marks at the usual terms, 'ane braid hewit caddo, and, failzeing of ane hewit caddo, ane fyne braid quhyte caddo' twice in the year, and their service in hosting, hunting, and other things.⁶ Other conditions of the lease were, that 32 bolls of oats and two bolls of bear 'of teilbo' [steelbow], belonging to Duncan Campbell and then in Ewin's hands, should be left as sufficient at the end of the lease as at entry, and that, in case of his death before the expiration of the lease, his heirs, if minors, should 'hald ane habil man within and vpon the saidis landis during thair minoritie, quha with the hail subtenentis thairof for the tyme' should be ready for the service of Duncan and his heirs.¹ In 1596 the same Duncan, then Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, granted in heritage to his third son John Campbell of Auchinryre the lands of Auchynrere, Drumnavokey, and Condolyeh, respectively of the old extent of six, four, and two marks, for the yearly payment of £10 Scots at the usual terms, and one gallon of sufficient aquavite 'et optimam chlamidem coloratam, vulgo ane fyne hewed brakane' at Martinmas, together with sufficient 'lie cuddeich.'² In the same year Sir Duncan, on account of the incursions of 'brokin men' upon his lands and tenants in Lorn, and their distance from him, appointed the same John Campbell for life bailie of these lands, namely, Barchaltin, Corrieblichaig, Ferloquhane, Auchanaba, Auchaca, Barnamuk, Auchinryre, Drumnamuk, Gleneverne, Barnandische, Barchallaquhane, Candechly, Innergusagan, Glenno, Condalich, and others.³ In 1599 Alan M'Dougall of Ragaray, and John Moyle M'Dougall his eldest son and heir apparent, with the consent of Alan's wife Margaret Campbell, granted to Margaret Nikdougall the eldest daughter of Duncan M'Dougall of Dunnolich the four marklands of Coulecharrane, four marks of Innerdergane, two marks of Lettirdowaltane and Derrickochane, and six marks of Barragarrich, in the lordship of Lorne.⁴ In 1603 Sir Duncan granted to the same John Campbell, his third son by the deceased Jane Stewart, the six marklands of Barcaltin with the tower, and the four marklands of Corrieblichaik, under reversion on payment of 3000 marks in the kirk of Balliebodane in Bendaraloch.⁵

In 1507 Inneraw was the place appointed by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay for payment of the rent of certain lands granted by him to Dugall M'Dougall M'Ane.⁶ In 1558 and 1567 there appear in record Archibald Campbell of Innerraw and Margaret Campbell his wife.⁷ In 1575 we meet with Dougall Campble of Ineraw.⁸ In 1589 and 1596 payments in grain for certain lands in Lorn granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay were to be delivered at 'the Downan of Inneraw.'⁹ 'The laird of Inneraw is called Macdonachie, alias Campbell, who hath sum lands upon the east syd of this river (the Aw), and upon the south syd of Lochetiff.'¹⁰

In 1558 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, for services rendered to himself and his predecessors, for sums of money to be paid and service to be rendered to him and to his heirs, and for a certain sum of money paid to him at the time of the grant, by Ewen M'Duncane M'Carne, granted to him for life, and to Arnald M'Ewin M'Duncane V'Carne his son, and his heirs male, being 'rymouris (joculatores),' in heritage, the two marklands of Barnulloch in the lordship of Lorn, then occupied

Two miles north from Connel Ferry on the bay of Ardnamucknish stand Dunmacsniochan (the hill of Snachan's son), by some supposed to be the Selma of Ossian, and the ridge named Dun Bhail an Righ (the hill of the king's town), alleged to be the site of the Pictish capital termed Beregonium.² The former is an isolated volcanic eminence, abounding in pumice stones, and having two flattened summits separated by an interval of 120 yards, and each girt with a vitrified wall, measuring respectively about 160 and 100 yards in circumference.³ In the seventeenth century it is described as 'a hie hill round and playne about, levell above, a spring of water upon the top thereof.'⁴ Dun Bhail an Righ is a conglomerate ridge about 400 yards north from Dunmacsniochan, composing the terminal face of the hills which skirt Loch Etive, and overhanging the sea.⁵ From the foot of the ridge there runs along the beach towards Dunmacsniochan a mound named Straidmharagaid (market street), ten feet in height and the same in width, said to have been at one time paved, and fancied to have been a street connecting the fort with the town.⁶ Behind this mound there were in 1772 two erect columns, about six feet high, and nine and a half in girth.⁷

The pass of Braindir is said to have been the scene of a battle gained by Sir William Wallace over an Irishman named Macfadzen, to whom the lordship of Lorn had been granted by King Edward I.⁸ Coins of that king have been found in several parts of the parish.⁹

About the year 1309 King Robert Bruce defeated the Macdougalls at the pass of Cruachan.¹⁰

The proprietor of the farm of Dalness retains the hereditary office of keeper of the King's forest.¹¹

On a rising ground near the sea between Loch Creran and the bay of Ardmucknish stands Barcaldine Castle, styled about the time of its foundation a great house of four 'hows' height, the lowest 'hows' woltit.'¹² It was built by Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, apparently begun about 1594, and finished in 1609, at an expense of £3000.¹³

— Kilmaluage in Lismoir.⁶ Deanery of Lorn. (Map, No. 37.)

THIS parish included the district of Appin (exclusive of Glencoe), the island of Lismore; and the district of Kingerloch in Morvern. Appin (of old Aphane, and probably, like Appin of Dull indicating the territory of an old Celtic monastery) is in general mountainous, is studded with numerous small lakes, and intersected by numerous streams, and has various level tracts along its shore; Lismore is comparatively low; and Kingerloch is a hilly district, in which Beinn-an-scriodain attains the height of 3500 feet.⁷

The church of Lismore was dedicated to St. Moloc or Moluach, who is recorded to have sojourned in the island.⁸ It is said that at the instance of that saint, who flourished according to some authorities in the sixth or seventh century, and according to others in the eleventh, the King endowed the island and church of Lismore with various possessions free of every exaction.⁹ The subsequent history of the church till it became the cathedral church of Argyle is unknown.¹⁰ Afterwards the parish seems to have been served by a vicar, who was also dean of the cathedral. In 1497 Sir Malcome Salmond resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle all right which he had to the deanery and vicarage of Lesmore.¹¹ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro says, 'This yle is four myle lang, with ane paroch kirke in it.'¹² 'The paroch church,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'of that ile whair the bishops had thair residence is called Kilmaluag.'¹³ In 1629 Master Donald M'Calman was vicar of Lismoir.¹⁴ In 1667 the patronage of the church was included in a new grant of the earldom of Argyle by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald.¹⁵ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the advowson, rectory, and vicarage of the church and parish of Kilmaluag.¹⁶

When the bishoprick of Argyle was erected, Lismore was chosen as the bishop's seat, and the bishops were generally styled Episcopi Lismorenses.¹⁷ Till the end of the twelfth century

Argyle was included in the diocese of Dunkeld, from which about the year 1200 it was at the request of John bishop of Dunkeld separated by Pope Innocent III.¹ The bishop is said to have sent his chaplain Harald to the Pope, with a request that the bishoprick of Dunkeld should be divided, and that Harald should be appointed first bishop of Argyle.² The Pope admired the conscientiousness of the bishop, quoted the adage, rara avis in terris nigroque simillima cyano, granted the request, and consecrated Harald to the new see.³

In the year 1314 Gilaspec Maclouchlan in Argyle, in a grant to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow from the fermes of his land, became bound in the event of his failure in payment to give one mark sterling to the fabrick of the cathedral church of Argyle.⁴ In 1451 Sir Duncan le Campbell lord of Lochaw, in a grant to the same house, bound himself in case of failure to pay one mark Scots to the fabrick of the cathedral church of Saint Moloak in Argyle.⁵ In 1470, when the lordship of Lorn was exchanged for other lands by Walter Lord Lorn with Colin Earl of Ergile, among the penalties to be paid by the parties in case of failure in fulfilling the conditions were several of 500 marks Scots to the 'kirkis of Glasgw and Ergile.'⁶

In 1506 King James IV. granted to David bishop of Ergile all the 'vnlawis, compositionis, and eschaetis,' and other profits belonging to the King in the next justice air of Ergile, Lorne, Cowall, and other parts, and of all other justice airs and sheriff courts within the same bounds, to be held during the King's pleasure.⁷ In 1507 the same King, for his singular devotion towards the blessed confessor Saint Moloc patron of the cathedral church of Lismore, confirmed to the same bishop all the grants of his predecessors and father Kings of Scotland, of the lords of Ergile and Lorn, and of others.⁸ In 1508 he confirmed to him all the grants made to the abbey of Sagadull, and erected the abbey lands into the barony of Sagadull.⁹ In 1510 he addressed a letter, in favour of the same bishop and of Sir Alexander Makloid his dean and official of the Isles, to the inhabitants of the bishop's lands, enjoining them 'that nane of yow tak upon hand to inquiet the said bischop and Schir Alexander in the vplifting, bruiking, and josing of the teinds and other fruits of his and their landis and kirkis quhatsumeur,' or intromit therewith in any wise without license of the bishop, and charging them under all pain to pay the mails.¹⁰ In 1515 King James V. granted to the same bishop a letter of protection, that he might remain at any of his benefices and do his 'lefull and honest besynes he hes thare ado.'¹¹ In 1540 the same king granted bishop William a commission to present to all the benefices within his diocese of which the patronage belonged to the crown.¹

In 1553 a dispute which arose between Archibald Earl of Argyle, Archibald Master of Argyle, and Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas the Master's curator, on one side, and Colin Campbell of Glenorquhair on the other, concerning certain benefices in Lorn, the latter party asserting that the third presentation belonged to him, was settled as follows:—that Campbell of Glenorquhair should thenceforth present to the chancellor and chantry of Lismore, and that the Earl and Master should present to the deanery and treasurer'ship, and to the rectory of the parish church of Kilmore.² In 1596 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay, principal tacksman of the teinds and fruits of the chantry and chancellor of Lesmoir granted to John Campbell, his son by the deceased Jane Stewart his wife, a life lease of these fruits and the annexed lands, for yearly payment of forty single ells of 'quhite pleading, tua fyne hewit caddois, and tua gallonis of sufficient aquautie' at Martinmas, and of the stipend of the minister of Lesmoir which was drawn from these fruits.³

In 1662 King Charles II. restored the chapter of Argyle, on which occasion John Campbell younger of Glenwrwhie, a commissioner to parliament, protested that the act should in no ways be prejudicial to his interest in the lands or teinds held of the bishop or of the members of the chapter, or in the patronage of any of their churches.⁴ In 1663 the Scotch parliament, on the petition of the bishop, and for the purpose of supplying the shire of Argyle with ministers who had 'the Irish tounge,' appointed to be paid yearly out of the vacant stipends of the bishoprick 200 marks to each of eight expectants who had passed their courses of philosophy, and 100 marks to each of eight scholars to be trained at school and college.⁵

Of the dignitaries and canons of the cathedral we have on record—Deans, in 1251 Sir Gillemel-noc, who along with the whole chapter and Sir Daniel the official of Argyle and other ecclesiastics witnesses a charter of Sir Ewin the son of Duncan; in 1494 Sir Malcolm Makylker; in 1497 Sir Malcolm Salmond; in 1510 Sir Alexander Makloid; in 1514, and apparently also in 1558, Sir James Macgregor, the author of a Latin chronicle relating to the highlands, which ends in the year 1542; and in 1564 Master Nicholas Campbell⁶—Precentors, in 1470 Sir Bean David; in 1507 and 1511 Sir Donald Makfadzane; in 1556 Dugall M'Onill; in 1574 Neil Campbell; in 1622 Colin Campbell; and in 1629 Master J. Campbell⁷—Treasurers, in 1551 Master John Carswell; in 1556 John Campbell; in 1573 John Campbell; and in 1574 Ewen Campbron⁸—Chancellors, in 1511 Sir Archibald Leich; in 1556 Neil M'Gillespyc; in 1574 Dowgal M'Gregor; in 1578

Gavin Hammiltoun; and 1623 Mr. Niel Campbell¹ — Archdeacons, in 1251 Sir Cristin; in 1304 Sir Maurice; in 1403 and 1432 Sir Niel Campbell; in 1442 and 1453 Master Dugall of Lochaw; in 1479 Master William of Elphinstone, who in that year exchanged the archdeaconry for the prebend of Erskyn with John of Bickerton canon of Glasgow; in 1486 John Campbell; in 1489 Master David Cunynghame; between 1489 and 1531 Master Robert Barry; in 1531, 1538, and 1554, Sir John Makcaw; in 1554, 1556, and 1574, Master Robert Montgomery; and in 1629 Adam Boece (Boetius)² — simple Canons, in 1250 David; in 1530 Master James Scrymgeour; and in 1556 Master Cornelius Omeych and Malcolm Steynson.³ When the chapter was restored in 1662 by King Charles II., the minister of Lochgoylsheid was appointed archdeacon, the minister at Kilmaluage in Lismoir dean, the minister at Dunnoune treasurer, the minister at Kilmichaell in Glastrie chancellor, the minister at Kilmolrew in Craigness chanter, and the ministers at Kilmakcharmich in Knapdail, at Innerchelane, and at Lochead in Kintyre, were appointed prebendaries.⁴

Father Hay furnishes the following account of the dress worn by the canons of Lismore:— ‘Their usual habit reached to the ancles. At divine service in the church they wore a rochet with an amice (almutium) placed upon the shoulders, and a surplice with open sleeves, from Easter Eve to the Feast of All Saints (1 November); and from Hallow Eve (31 October) to Holy Saturday they wore a linen surplice reaching to the ancles, and by peculiar privilege and custom violet-coloured capes, as appears from the Iconice Canonicorum Imagines, printed in 1400, which was to be seen in the choir. They afterwards wore black capes open in front, and under the cape, which was lined with red cloth of silk or silk and wool (holoserico seu heteromallo), a linen tunic (cotta seu phelone) without sleeves. On the head they wore an amice made of grey fur (ex griseis pelliculis), and above it a hood (capuceum seu mosettam) which covered the shoulders, with a collar of ermine attached. To the cape was attached behind a train (cauda repens) of the same material and colour, which they carried on the left arm. This change was introduced pro tempore by Pope Nicolas III. (apud Raynald. Annal. Eccles., an. 1278, no. 79.) By a decree of the council of Narbonne (A. D. 1043) purple vestments were strictly forbidden to clerical persons, lest they should make a boast of worldly pomp. Yet the dignitaries (senatores) of this cathedral church were distinguished by the purple, that the memory of the blood shed by them for the gospel of Christ might not perish.⁵

The church of Saint Moluac appears to have originally stood at Portmaluag (apparently the Lismorensis Ecclesie portus of the Breviary) on the sea-coast, at the point where the saint or his relics were first landed, and where the remains of a building said to be a church are still shown.⁶

The present church, which stands inland, and about three miles from the northend of the island, was the choir of the old cathedral church.¹ About the year 1749 it was repaired, and from 6 to 10 feet taken from its height.² Its length is 56 feet, and its breadth 28.³ There remain within the church the piscina and sedilia, and on the north east on the outside are traces of a small enclosure supposed to have been a chantry (chapter-house?).⁴ The dimensions of the whole building appear to have been 137 feet by 29 feet 4 inches over walls.⁵ Its architecture is said to fix its date not earlier than the middle of the fourteenth century.⁶

A small freehold, originally of twelve acres, but latterly of only six, has for centuries been held by a family named Livingstone (locally known as the barons of Bachuill) as custodiers of the bishop's crosier styled the bachuill more.⁷ In 1544 Archibald Campbell, fear of the lands of Argile, Campbell, and Lorn, with the consent of his father and tutor Archibald Earl of Argile, lord Campbell and Lorn, liferenter of the same lands, in honour of the Blessed Virgin and of his patron Saint Moloc, mortified to his signifer John M'Molmore Vic Kevir and his heirs male, whom failing, to return to his own gift, half of the lands of Peynachalla and Peynachallen, extending to half a markland in the island of Lismor and lordship of Lorin, with the keeping of the great staff of Saint Moloc, as freely as John's father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and other predecessors, held the same of Archibald's predecessors.⁸ The bachuill more is a plain curved staff, 2 feet 10 inches in length, formerly covered with copper, perhaps gilt, which is now mostly torn off.

In Lismore there appear to have been churches or chapels at Killen, Kilcheran, and Kilandreyne.⁹ The present glebe land, which surrounds the cathedral, is believed to have been a sanctuary, and to have had a number of buildings into which in troublous times the proprietors of the parish transferred their valuable effects; near the church there is a font cut in a rock, and beside it a stone with the rude figure of a cross known to the inhabitants as the black cross (a chrois dubh); and on a small knoll behind the church lies the old burying-ground with the remains of a cross, at which the banns of marriage used to be proclaimed.¹⁰ There was a chapel on the small island of Bernera on the west of Lismore.¹ In Appin there were the chapel of Kilchallumkill at Duror, the chapel of Anaid, and the chapel of Claghchuriollan (or Craikwherreellan) on Loch Creran side.² 'Ther (at Craikwherreellan) ar springis of fresche water, and the opinion of the wholsomnes of the water draweth many people thither upon St. Patrick's day yearlie in hopes of health from diseases be drinking therof. The toun or village of Ardnacloich is hard by, renouned for a well also, wher they alledge if a diseased person go, if he be to dye he shall find a dead worm therein, or a quick one if health be to follow.'³ There is a church at Strath in Appin built in 1749, and at Duror there is a government church to which are attached the districts of Duror and Glencoe.⁴

In Baiamund's Roll the tithes of the whole bishoprick of Argyle is given at £51, 13s. 4d., including the archdeaconry £6, 6s. 8d., and the deanery, chantry, chancellor, and treasurer, each £2, 13s. 4d.⁵ In the Libellus Taxationum the diocese is rated at 440 marks, and in the Taxatio Sec. XVI., together with the monastery of Sagaddell, at £103, 6s. 6d., the archdeaconry being rated in the latter at £16, 10s. 3d.⁶ The bishoprick is not entered in the chamberlain rolls till the year 1365, when its contributio cleri to the crown was £3, 6s. 8d., the smallest of all the dioceses in Scotland, but probably only an instalment.⁷ In 1366 the bishoprick paid to the crown an arrear of £9, 13s. 4d.⁸

By a deed dated at Lesmor in the year 1251 Sir Ewin the son of Duncan of Erregeithill granted to William bishop of Argyle (Episcopus Ergadiensis) 14 pennylands in Lesmore, namely, Barnaray, 2½ pennylands of Achacendune, 5 pennylands of Tyrehulen, 2 pennylands of Tyrknannen, 3 halfpennylands of Tenga, one pennyland of Drumchulochir, and one pennyland of Craganas, free of all dues, including 'cain, concueth, feact, slagad, and ich.'⁹ In 1295 King Edward I. ordered King John Balliol to appear before him in England, to answer for withholding part of the land of Lysmor from Alexander of Islay and Juliana his wife.¹⁰ In 1304, by a deed dated at Achichendone, Ewin of Argyle, lord of Lorn, of Menderaloch, and of Lesmor, granted to Bishop Andrew for maintenance of the episcopal table 5½ pennylands in the island of Lesmor of his land next to the castle or manor of Achychendone, namely, the pennyland called Penningscanhach, the pennyland called Tyrfeirlach, the two pennylands of Achychnahunsen, and the pennyland and a half of Geyle.¹¹ In 1507 these grants were confirmed to Bishop David by King James IV.¹²

In 1388 King Robert II. granted to John the Steward of Innermeth the lands of Lesmore in the sheriffdom of Perth, which had been resigned by Sir Robert the Steward and his wife Jonet.¹³ In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay one-third of his lands in Lesmore, consisting apparently of the twenty shillinglands of Portcarran, the three marklands of Balleveolane, the two marklands of Castell of Chaben, the two marklands of Ballemakkilliechan, the five marklands of Ballegrounvolne, and the forty pennylands of Keanaclachane.¹ In 1511 the lands of Ewine Allansoun and Duncan Stewart of Appin, namely, three marks and a half of Keilandeist and Portcarran, Kenlochan, and four marks of Shuna, together extending to twelve marks, and declared to be worth 250 marks 'according to the eustom of sett lands,' were appraised in favour of Archibald Earl of Argyle as part payment of 500 marks.² In 1536 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay the ward, relief, and nonentry dues of the lands of Lesmoir and others.³ In 1541 the lands of Lesmore were resigned by Archibald Earl of Argyle, who then received a new grant of them from King James V.⁴ In 1542 they were again resigned by the Earl, and granted by the same king to Archibald Campbell his son and heir.⁵

In 1501 Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart, the son of the deceased Dugall Stewart of Appyn, with remainder to his brothers Robert and Allan, the twenty shillinglands of Portcarrane in Lesmore in the lordship of Lorn.⁶ In 1562 the same lands were resigned by Alan Stewart, and were then granted in heritage to John Stewart his nephew and apparent heir, with reservation of the liferent to the uncle.⁷ In 1595 they were confirmed by Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay to Duncan Stewart of Appin, the son of the deceased John Stewart.⁸

In 1507 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to Dugall Makdugall M'Ane five marks of Balegrwnelee, with the islands of Ilannecloiche, Ilanebeach, Ilangawna, and Grawilan, in the lordship of Lorne, for the usual services and payment of 10 bolls bear, 10 bolls oatmeal, and half a gallon of good aquavite, at Inneraw on the Feast of Saint Patrick the Martyr (in festo Patricii in martir, 28 April).⁹ In 1585 Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay confirmed the five marks of Balligrundill in Lesmoir to John Roy M'Ean V'Ewin V'Dougall V'Ean, the son of the deceased John M'Ewin V'Dougall V'Ean.¹⁰ In 1603 the five marks of Ballegrwnelee with the islands were resigned by John M'Donald V'Ean alias M'Lauchlan, heritable fear, to Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay the superior.¹¹

In 1567 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay leased for 19 years to Archibald Campbell of Inneraw and his wife Margaret his four marklands old extent of Ballekillechan in the island of Lesmore, for yearly payment of 28 bolls victual, 20 in meal and 8 in bear, at Inneraw, together with 4 marks; but, as the lands were waste, he should pay for the first year only one-third, for the second two-thirds, and thenceforth yearly the whole payment, unless the lands should again lie waste — the holder of the lease also to have half of the hereyelds.¹²

In 1573 John Campbell provost of Kilmon and treasurer of Lesmore, with the consent of James bishop of Argyle, of the chapter, and of Archibald Earl of Argyle patron of the lands, granted to Margaret Campbell, widow of John bishop of the Isles, the markland of Teirfour, and the three marklands of Teirlagane, in the island of Lesmoir.¹ In 1574 Dugall M'Gregour chancellor of Lesmore, with the consent of Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay and Duncan his son fear of Glenvrquhay, patrons of the chancellery, and with the consent of Bishop James and the chapter, granted to Patrick, Glenvrquhay's third son, with remainder to his brother Archibald, the lands of Auchnaerosche in Lesmoir, of the old extent of four marks, annexed to the chancellery.² In the same year Niel Campbell rector of Kilmartine and precentor of Lesmoir, with the same consent, granted to the same Patrick, with remainder to the same Archibald, the two marklands of Killen, the markland of Teirewin, and the markland of Pennyfurt, in Lesmoir, annexed to the chantry.³ In 1575 both these grants were confirmed by a deed under the great seal of King James VI.⁴ In 1596 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to his third son John Campbell the four marks of Auchanacrose, and the four marks of Killen, Pennyfurt, and Teirewin, for payment yearly of 40 bolls oatmeal between the Feast of the Nativity (Christmas) and the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin (Candlemas), to be delivered at his own expense at the Downan of Inneraw, to be there meted with the measure of Glenvrquhay, with £5, 13s. 4d. at the usual terms—granting him also the usual liberties, but reserving to the superior all the oaks within the bounds, the principal hereyeld of John Campbell and his heirs male, and the liferent of the lands.⁵

In 1576 Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay, with the consent of his son Duncan, leased for 19 years from Whitsunday 1577 to his servitor Dougall Makchonochoy V'Prior his three marks of Balleveolayne in the lordship of Lorn, then occupied by Dowgall M'Allaster V'Allane Stewart and his subtenants, for yearly payment of 24 bolls 2 firlots meal, and 4 bolls 2 firlots bear, to be delivered at the town of Innerawin, and 40 shillings mail at Martinmas, with the other dues and service, as the other tenants in Benderloch and Lesmoir; but, should the island in which the land lay be burned and 'hereit be onfrindis,' the superior should demand no mails or dues till he and Dougall should again labour and manure the land, and the time during which it might lie waste should not be reckoned in the lease.⁶

In 1596 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay appointed his third son John Campbell of Auchinryre bailie of all his lands in Lorn, including Balliemakkelaquhane, Balliewewlane, Balliegrundel, Candelachan, Auchanacrose, Killen, Pennyfurt, and Teirewin.⁷

In 1698 Alexander Campbell of Barcaldine resigned to John Earl of Breadalbane the four marks of Auchnacroish with the teinds, and the mill and mill-lands of Auchnacroish with the astricted multures, in the parish of Killmaluag in the lordship of Lorn, together with 8 bolls of teind victual payable yearly out of the Earl's six marklands of Ballegrundell and Tirewen.⁸

In 1388 King Robert II. granted to John the Steward of Innermeth the lands of Apthane in the sheriffdom of Perth, which had been resigned by Sir Robert the Steward and Jonet his wife.¹ In 1470 Colin Earl of Argyle granted to his uncle Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay one-third of the lands of Appin in the lordship of Lorn and sheriffdom of Perth, including eight marks of Candlochlagane, two marks of Auchichoskrachan, two marks of Finaltin, four marks of Auchnagen, three marks of Innenahawle, one mark of Corrylorne, and perhaps some other lands.² In 1501 Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart, the son of the deceased Dougall Stewart of Appyn, with remainder to his brothers Robert and Allan, the same lands (including the island of Island Stalker), together of the old extent of 20 marks and a half.³ In the same year Archibald Earl of Argyle and Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay became bound to infest Duncan Stewart in the £40 land held in heritage by his deceased father Dugall Stewart of Appin, and on the other hand Duncan Stewart bound himself and his 'folks' to be obedient to the King's laws, and not to trouble the vassals or tenants of the Earl and Duncan Campbell, or else to pay £200 to the King, and £200 to the other party for the 'coost and skaith.'⁴ The same Duncan Stewart of Appin appears in record in 1502, 1510, 1511, and 1512.⁵ In 1536 Archibald Earl of Argyle granted to John Campbell of Glenvrquhay the ward, relief, and nonentry dues of the lands of Appin and other lands.⁶ In 1562 the 20½ marklands of Appin, granted in 1501 to Duncan Stewart, were resigned by Alan Stewart of Appyn, and granted by Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay in heritage to Alan's nephew and apparent heir John Stewart, with reservation of the liferent to Alan.⁷ In 1595 Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay confirmed the same lands to Duncan Stewart of Appin, the son of the deceased John Stewart.⁸ In 1633 Mary, the wife of Dougald M'Dougal of Dounhauch, and second daughter of John Stewart of Lettirschewney, and her sisters Catherine the eldest, Margaret the third, Isobel the fourth, Jonet the fifth, and Agnes the sixth, were served heirs portioners to their father in the lands of Achachosragane, of the old extent of two marks, in the barony of Appin and lordship of Lorne.⁹

In 1518 Allan Stewart of Dorgowar granted to Colin Earl of Argyle the right of reversion to the lands of Glasdrum and Fasnacloch, redeemable for the sum of 180 marks.¹⁰ In 1539 the same lands, of the extent of eight marks, were redeemed by Earl Archibald from the same Allan Stewart.¹¹

In 1595 Duncan Stewart of Appin granted in heritage to Gillimichaell M'Ewin V'Illemichaell in Annat the domus bruerii of Annat in Appin in the lordship of Lorne, with the croft annexed to it, with pasture for six great cows and their followers, three cows of one year and of two years, and one horse and one mare for the labours of the said croft and the necessity (necessarie) of the said house, and with all their privileges, commodities, and pertinents, as Gillimichaell and his predecessors bruerii dicte domus possessed them in times past—the house and croft being bounded by 'the rivulet of Annat on the west, the pule called the Lyn Rweagh on the south, the

In 1343 the lands of Durdoman (Duror) were granted to John of Yle Lord of the Isles by King David II.² The same lands seem to have been subsequently held of the same John of Yle by John of Larin, and to have been resigned by the latter in the year 1354.³ In 1475 they were forfeited by John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, together with the rest of his possessions, which in 1476 were, with some exceptions, restored to him at the request of the Queen and parliament of King James III.⁴ In 1478 the same King, on attaining his majority, confirmed the restoration.⁵ In 1494 King James IV. granted the lands of Durgwin in the sheriffdom of Perth to John M'Gillean of Lochbowie.⁶ In 1499 King James IV. granted ten marklands of Durror and other lands to John M'Ean of Ardnamurchan, for his good service in taking John of the Isles, his son, and their accomplices, and for renouncing certain other lands and privileges.⁷ In 1500 King James IV. granted to Duncan Stewart the lands of Dourrour, extending 'yerly eftir the raknen of the lawlandis' to £20, together with the lands of Glencoyne, 'for service aucht and wont, and to haf ane galy with 24 airis to do the kingis serwys bayth in pes and wer.'⁸ In 1501 the same king granted to Duncan Stewart (apparently the Duncan of the former grant), the son and heir of the deceased Dungall Stewart of Appin, the £20 lands of Durroure, namely 7 marks of Coule and Glencallachane, 7 marks of Ardsell and Lagynhall, 5 marks of Auchindarach, 3 marks of Auchycarne, 5 marks of Auchychare and Auchinblare, and 3 marks of Bellecaulis, in the lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Perth, which all formerly belonged to John Makcoule by a grant of the King in his minority, and were now legally in his hands.⁹ In 1517 the Regent Albany appointed Colin Earl of Ergile his lieutenant of the lands of Durrour and others for the space of three years or longer according to the Regent's pleasure, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants.¹⁰ In 1528 the barony of Durgwin and Glencole, of the old extent of 53 marks, lying between the lordship of Lorn and Lochabir, and in the sheriffdom of Perth, was resigned by John Campbell of Calder, and granted by King James V. to Colin Earl of Ergile.¹¹ In 1529 it was confirmed by the same King to Archibald the Earl's son and heir.¹² In 1538 King James V. granted the same lands and barony to his kinsman and servitor Alan Stewart in Lorne, for yearly payment of £40, to increase the rental by ten marks.¹³ In 1547 the £20 lands of Durror were resigned by Alan Stewart in Lorne, and granted by Queen Mary to Archibald Earl of Argyle.¹⁴

In 1545 Donald Maclane of Kengerrloch was one of the barons and council of Donald Lord of the Isles.¹ In 1546 Donald M'Clane of Kingarloch and others had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.² 'The inhabitants (of Keangarloch) are called Siell Eachin. They are descended of Maclean of Lochbuy.'³

There are villages at Clachan and Portramsay in Lismore, and at Portappin, Tayribbi, and Portnacraoish, in Appin.⁴

At Tirefoor in Lismore there is an ancient castle or fort, supposed to be Danish, and consisting of two concentric circles of dry stones.⁵ At Achindown (Achichendone), where there was a castle or manor in 1304, there is still a ruin consisting of a large square, about 28 paces wide, with walls forty feet high, situated on a large rock rising in front of a terrace of some extent, and said to be the palace of the ancient bishops.⁶ On the west side of the island stands Castle Coeffin, named in 1470 in a grant to Sir Colin Campbell of Glenvrquhay the Castell of Chaben, and by Blaeu Castel Kaven.⁷

In Appin 'ther is a hie hill upon the west syd therof hard by the sea over aganis the ferry to the Isle of Lismor. Upon that hill, a craig great and big, is a great palace. Therin is a great hole quyt throch. This they do call Cloicholl, or the stone hollowed throch. There is a pretie tour in the Appin not far from this stone, built on a rock in the sea very near the land, called Iland Stalker.'⁸ This castle, a square tower placed on a small rock between Appin and Lismore, and named from the island Elein-an-stalcaire (the island of the falconer), is said to have been built by Duncan Stewart of Appin for the accomodation of King James IV. on his hunting expeditions, and appears to have been erected subsequently to the year 1501.⁹ On the island of Shuna on the same coast is a building called Castle Shuna.¹⁰

In Kingarloch in the opening of Glensanda there is a square keep nearly entire, variously named Castell Nagair, Castle-en-Coer, Castle Mearnaig, and the Castle of Glensanda.¹¹

The quern, or ancient handmill, is still used in some parts of the parish.¹²

THIS parish, which lay partly in Argyle and partly in Inverness, and is now divided between Lismore and Kilmalie, included the valley of Glencoe and the rest of Upper Appin, the arm of the sea named Lochleven with the island on its north side named Elanmunde, the districts of Mamore and Onich, and seven marklands and a half of the lands of Glennevis.⁸ Its northern boundary appears to have followed nearly the courses of the streams Aultkieran, Treig, and Nevis. The whole parish is mountainous, the hills rising over the valley of Glencoe to the height of 3000 feet, and Ben Nevis on the northern border, though not within the parish, being 4380 feet above the sea.

In the year 1304 a grant of land by Sir Ewin of Ergyle to Bishop Andrew is witnessed by Michael the vicar of Elanmunne.⁹ In 1354, when John of Larin resigned to John Lord of the Isles various lands in that lordship, he retained the free lands of the church of Glencoean (Elanmunde?), which were then granted to him anew.¹⁰ In 1510 Master John Campbell was rector of Ilamoun, and in that year King James IV. presented Sir Donald Makstalkar to the rectory, when it should be resigned by Master John Campbell.¹¹ In 1558 Sir Laurence Galt was rector of Ilanmoun, and in the event of his resignation the rectory was granted by Queen Mary to Sir Ninian Galt.¹² 'In that loch or bay (Lochleven),' says an authority of the seventeenth century, 'is ane island called Iland Moune, which hath the paroch church therein; this church hath 70 merkland perteyning therto.'¹³ In 1623 Master Adam Boyd archdeacon of Lismore granted to Allan Dou M'Eanduy or M'Donald of Larch, and Janet Stewart his wife, a lease of the archdeacon's quarter of the kirk and paroch of Ilamound in Glencoean, extending to five marklands.¹⁴ In the same year Master Duncan M'Calman minister at Ilamound granted to John Campbell, the son of Mr. Donald Campbell of Barbleck-Lochaw, a lease of the teinds of two fourths called the parson's teinds of the church, 'within the bounds of the lands of Glencoean allenarly.'¹⁵ In 1685 a confirmation of the marquisate of Huntly to George Duke of Gordon by

The church, dedicated, as its name implies, to Saint Mund, stood on the island in Lochleven already mentioned.² Its ruins remain, and its cemetery, still in use, consists of two knolls, one of which is appropriated to Glencoe, and the other to Lochaber.³ It has sometimes been styled a monastery. Father Hay says that it was a monastery of obscure cenobites, who declined intercourse with society, and preferred the quiet of a solitary life to all temporal privileges.⁴

In the year 1343 the lands of Glenchomyr (Glencoe) were granted by King David II. to John of Yle Lord of the Isles.⁵ They appear to have been afterwards held of the same John of Yle by John of Larin, and to have been granted to him anew in 1354.⁶ In 1475 the lands of Glencoill were forfeited by John of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, and in 1476 were restored to him by King James III. together with many of his other possessions.⁷ In 1478 the restoration was confirmed by the same king on attaining his majority.⁸ In 1494 King James IV. granted to John Makgilleon of Lochboye the 53 marklands of Durgwyn and Glencole in the sheriffdom of Perth, which he had formerly held of the Lord of the Isles.⁹ In 1500 the same king granted the same lands to Duncan Stewart of Appin.¹⁰ In 1501 he seems to have repeated the grant.¹¹ In 1503 the lands of Glencoe were by act of parliament formally annexed to the sheriffdom of Perth.¹² In 1517 Colin Earl of Ergile was appointed by the Regent Albany lieutenant of the Isles, and of other lands including Glenquhoin.¹³ In 1528 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Argyle the lands of Glencole, which with the lands of Duror were resigned by Sir John Campbell of Caldor.¹⁴ In 1529 the same king granted the lands of Glencole to Archibald the son and heir of Earl Colin.¹⁵ In 1538 he granted the 20 marklands of Glenkovne, together with the £20 lands of Durrour, in the sheriffdom of Perth and lordship of the Isles, to his kinsman and servitor Alan Stewart in Lorne, for yearly payment of £40, to increase his rental by the sum of 10 marks.¹⁶ In 1547 the same lands were resigned by Alan Stewart in Lorne, and granted by Queen Mary to Archibald Earl of Argyle.¹⁷

Between the years 1307 and 1314 the lands of Maymer were included in the grant of the earldom of Moray by King Robert Bruce to Thomas Ranulph.¹⁸ About the year 1343 King David II. granted the lands of Morimare to John of Yle.¹⁹ The same lands were probably forfeited by John Lord of the Isles in 1475, and restored to him in 1476, as part of the lordship of Lochaber.²⁰

In the year 1502 a commission under the privy seal of King James IV. was issued to Alexander Earl of Huntlie, Thomas Lord Fraser of Lovate, and William Monro of Fowlis, or any two of them, the Earl always being one, to let on lease for five years from Whitsunday the King's lands of Lochabre and Mawmor in the sheriffdom of Inverness 'to trew men for the plenysing tharof and expelling of brokin men furth of the sammyn.'¹ In the same year King James IV. granted to Duncan Stewart, the son and heir of the deceased Duggall Stewart of Appin, during the King's pleasure, the lands of Mawmor with the isle of Dundabray in the sheriffdom of Inverness, extending in all to 50 marks.² In 1503 the lands of Mawmor and Louchabir were by act of parliament formally annexed to the sheriffdom of Inverness.³ In 1504 King James IV. granted to Alexander Earl of Huntlie the lands of Mammore in the lordship of Lochaber and sheriffdom of Inverness, of the old extent of 50 marks.⁴ In 1520 Ewne Allanson of Lochiell granted to Colin Earl of Argyle the right of reversion on payment of 400 marks Scots to certain lands in the lordship of Lochabir, of the old extent of 20 marks 2 shillings and 6 pence.⁵ In 1522 Alexander Earl of Huntlie, Lord Badzenoch, and lord of the lordship of Loychabir, for money paid beforehand by Earl Colin, sold to him the same lands, namely, 36 shillings and 8 pence of Ballecheles, 10 shillings of Sallauchgall, 16 shillings of Offanyeh, 25 shillings of Culkenan and Stronahumsyne, 25 shillings of Interrwe, 15 shillings of Corechrechane, 33 shillings and 4 pence of Blarnaglerauch, 25 shillings of Drumarbane, 33 shillings and 4 pence of Blarmakfeldauch, Corean, and Dundawra, and 50 shillings of Callartmoir.⁶ In 1536 King James V. granted to George Earl of Huntlie license to sell and alienate all his lands in Lochabir.⁷ In 1546 Queen Mary granted the same earl the escheat of certain lands which belonged heritably to Ewin Allansoun of Locheill, including one half of Malmore with the place and fortalice of Torcastell (in Kilmalie) in the lordship of Lochquhabir.⁸ In 1553 Queen Mary granted to the same earl the same lands and castle, which had been forfeited by Ewen Allansoun of Locheill for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.⁹ In 1669 Robert Earl of Southesk was served heir to his father Earl James in the lands of Maimoire in Lochaber.¹⁰

In 1456 John of Yla, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to his esquire Somerled the son of John the son of Somerled for life, and to his eldest son for five years after Somerled's death, a davach of his lands of Glenyves, with the office commonly called Tocheachdeora of all his lands of Lochaber except those belonging to his alumpnus Lachlan Makgilleon of Doward.¹¹ In 1536 King James V. granted to Donald Camroun, the son and heir of Ewin Allanesoun captain of the Clan Camroun, the nonentry and other dues of the twenty pennylands of Glenneves in the sheriffdom of Innernys, which belonged to the deceased Sorill M'Kane.¹² In 1537 the same king granted to the same Donald Cameroun, the son and apparent heir of Ewin Alansoun captain of the Clan Cameroun, the same 20 pennylands of Glenneves, which had been

The only village is Maryburgh, generally known as Fort William from the contiguous fort of that name, an irregular work with ditch, glacis, and ravelin, built in the reign of King William III.⁸ The village owes its origin to an act of the Scottish parliament in 1597 for erecting burghs in Kintyre, Lochaber, and Lewis, which was not however carried into effect as intended.⁹

Oinich at the opening of Lochleven is said to have been an ancient resting-place for the dead when being conveyed to Iona.¹⁰

Glencoe, of which the lower portion is covered with rich verdure, and the upper exhibits rock and mountain scenery of the wildest description, has long been noted as the scene of the massacre of the Macdonalds by the troops of King William in 1692.¹¹ The laird of Glencoe, styled Mhic Ian Vohr, a man of uncommon size and strength, who was killed on that occasion, was buried in the Lochaber portion of the Elanmunde cemetery, but about forty years ago his remains were removed to the Glencoe division by some of his descendants.¹²

of Lorn (or of Morvern). (Map, No. 39.)

THIS parish, which lay wholly in the county of Inverness, included the portion of Lochaber which lies east of Loch Lochy and the river Lochy, and north of the river Nevis, and consisted of three marklands and a half of Glennevis, the districts named Gargavach, Glenspean, Glenroy, and Daughnassie, and six marklands of Glenluy.⁹ It is mountainous throughout, but especially in its southern parts, and in Bennevis attains the height of 4380 feet above the sea. It is watered by various streams, chiefly by the rapid Spean, which nearly traverses its centre, and by Loch Treig, Loch Ouchan, and Loch Gulbin, in its higher parts, and Loch Lochy on its western border. Its deep valleys, such as Glenluy, Glenfontaig, Glenspean, and especially Glenroy, exhibit very distinct specimens of those terraces known as 'parallel roads,' the highest of which in Glenroy are 1266 feet above the level of the sea.¹⁰

In the year 1449 a charter of John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, is witnessed by his secretary Thomas of Monro rector of Kilmanawik.¹¹ In 1515 Kenneth Makchannacht, chaplain, rector of Kilmonawag, died, and John Cameroun was presented to the rectory by King James V.¹² In 1599 Alexander Campbell commendator of Ardochattan granted to Duncan Campbell the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eachtrachan, during his life and the life of his next heir, and for 19 years more, the teinds of the churches of the priory, including the church of Kilmanivaig in Lochaber.¹³ In 1602 the same Alexander Campbell resigned the teinds and patronage of the same churches to King James VI., who then gave him a new grant of the same.¹⁴ In 1631 John Campbell was served heir to his father Alexander Campbell of Ardochattan in the teinds and patronage of the church of Kilmanavag in Lochaber.¹⁵ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle a lease of the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the same church.¹⁶ In 1685 a confirmation by King James VII. of a grant of the marquisate of Huntly to George Duke of Gordon included the patronage of the church of Killmanevock, with a yearly fair, called the 'Ruidfair,' to be held there on the 2nd of September.¹⁷ In 1697 John

The church seems to have always stood on the site which it still occupies in the angle formed by the junction of the Spean and the Lochy.²

‘Thair is a small town whair a chappell was built of old not two myl from Kilmanevack, wherein the oldest men declare they did sic in this chappel, which is called Achanathatinait, many housis and inhabitants of that town selling wine, ail, and aqua vitæ—the Scots quart of wine for 18 pennies Scots—a quart of ail, a quart of hasill nutts, and a quart of oatmeel, for three pennies Scots—and that this place was a sanctuarie among the countrie people; this town now is desolat without inhabitants.’³

Between the years 1307 and 1314 the lands of Louchabre were included in a grant of the earldom of Moray by King Robert Bruce to his nephew Sir Thomas Ranulph.⁴ In 1309 the same king granted the lands of Lochabre to Angus of Yle.⁵ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted to John of the Isles for his allegiance the ward of Loghabre during the minority of the son and heir of David of Strabolgy last Earl of Atholl.⁶ In 1336 King Edward III. confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1343 King David II. granted the lands of Lochaber to the same John of Yle Lord of the Isles.⁸ In 1367 the same lands, still held by John of the Isles, were of the old extent of £200.⁹ In 1376 the same John resigned the lands of Lochabre to King Robert II., who then granted them to him and Margaret his wife, the King’s daughter.¹⁰ In 1394 and 1398 Alexander of the Isles, said to be the third son of the same John and Margaret, is styled lord of Louchabre.¹¹ In 1475 John of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, forfeited all his possessions, including the lordship of Lochaber, which was along with some other lands restored to him in 1476 by King James III.¹² In 1478 the restoration was confirmed by the same king on attaining his majority.¹³ In 1501 Alexander Earl of Huntly was appointed by King James IV. his commissioner for levying the King’s mails in Lochquabir.¹⁴ In 1502 the same earl, together with Thomas Lord Fraser of Lovate, and William Monro of Fowlis, had a commission under the privy seal of the same king for leasing his lands of Lochabre and Mawmor for five years from Whitsunday of that year.¹⁵ In 1503 the lands of Louchabir were by act of parliament formally annexed to the sheriffdom of Inverness.¹⁶

In 1336 John of Isla, afterwards Lord of the Isles, granted to William Macintosh chief of the Clanchattan the lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig in Lochaber, a grant which appears to have included the lands in Kilmonivaig afterwards occasionally styled the lands of Glenluy-Glenspean.¹⁷

Between the years 1443 and 1447 Malcolm chief of the same clan is said to have received from Alexander Lord of the Isles a confirmation of his lands in Lochaber, and a grant of the bailiary of that district.¹ In 1466 John of Yla, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to Duncan Makkintoische captain of Clanchattane, and to his heirs, the lands of Keppach, Inneroygur, Auchnacrose, the two Bointynnis, Bohene, Murvalgane, Tullach, Daildonedarge, Achderre, Inneroybeg, Nucomer, Leachturynrich, Cloyncallich, Stronenabay, Tornesa, Blarrovir, the two Ratullichys, Achmesk, Innerglie, and Achrone, in the lordship of Lochaber, and the office of bailie of the same lands, and of the Earl's hereditary lands, including Letterfinlai, and the lands of the two towns of Lannachynniss.² In 1476 King James III. granted to Duncan Makintoische captain of the Clanquhattane, and his heirs male, the lands of Daldundarg, Branachane, Tula-charde, Inverany, Murlagane, Glenglastoun, Kilkarall, Botheny, Botheasky, Achadir, Tollicharaine, Bothintone, Blarenofingone, Bothintonmor, Crannachane, Kappache, Achnamady, Auchnamacroise, Bragache, Inneroybeg, Bochlaine, and Innerroymore, in the lordship of Lochabire, which had been forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, and had been held of him by Duncan Makintoische, who resigned them to the King.³ In 1494 King James IV. confirmed to the same Duncan the grant made in 1466 by the Lord of the Isles.⁴ In 1500 King James IV. granted to Alexander Lord Gordoun the lands of Mogomar, the two Rathullachis, Inwergleith, Agherome, Stronabay, the two Blairouris, Ternenadrissieich, Hanchannach, the two Fersenais, Inuerlair, Auchancheithin, Munesse, Clanach, Enche, Kilchonade, Innachane, Braklater, Kilmonyvaig, Lindalle, the two Lanachquhanis, Auchmaschene, and Lettirfyndlay, with the forests and woods belonging to them, in the lordship of Lochquabir, all which had been forfeited by John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles.⁵ In 1505 Ferquhard Makintosche of Capoch granted to William Makintosche of Dun-nachtan the lands of Glenloy and Lochquharcaige, including the lands of Bochintinmakille, Capoch, Auchnaroise, Inuerroymore, Inuerroybeg, Murvalgan, Bochyne, Auchlochrach, and Kilkawelle, and the superiority of the lands of Cullach, Dallindunderge, Achadere, and Bohindinbille, in the sheriffdom of Innernys and lordship of Lochquhabbir.⁶ In 1516 King James V. granted to James Earl of Murray the ward, nonentry, and marriage of the lands of Glenlie, Locharcag, Glenroy, Glenspayng, and the lands called Edderayvsk, with the bailiary of the same, in the lordship of Lochabir, which belonged to the deceased Ferquhar M'Kintoisch.⁷ In 1528 King James V. granted to Ewin Alansoun, for his good service and for a certain pecuniary composition, the 40 marklands of Glenlie and Locharkaig, with half the bailiary of Lochabir, which had formerly been held by his father Alan Donaldsoun of the King's predecessors, and were in their hands by reason of nonentry at his decease.⁸ In 1539 the same Ewin resigned the of Macintosh family, which quotes original charter. See post as to including the lands of Glenluy-Glenspean. 'From this time,' observes Mr. Gregory, 'a deadly feud prevailed between the Clanchattan and Clanchameron regarding these lands, which lasted without intermission for upwards of three hundred years.'

same lands to King James V., who granted them to him in liferent, and to his grandson Ewen Cammeroun in heritage.¹ In 1544 Queen Mary confirmed the grant of 1544 made by Ferquhard Makintosche of Capoch to William Makintosche of Dunnachtan.² In 1552 the same Queen granted to Alexander Lord Gordoun the lands of Glenloy-Glenespane, namely, the lands of Innerroybeg, Innerroymoir, Boynetoun-in-will, Boynetoun-in-kandkellie, Keppacht, Boyne, Auchaderre, Murlagoun, Tulloch, and Dellyndundaig, which had been forfeited by William M'Intosche of Dunnauchtane for treason and lese majesty.³ In the same year Allester M'Ranald of the Capach witnesses an agreement between George Earl of Huntly and Donald M'Soirly of Glenneves.⁴ In 1553 Queen Mary granted the same lands to George Lord Gordoun.⁵ In 1564 the same Queen granted to Donald Cameroun, the son and heir of the deceased Donald Cameroun or Alansoun of Lochell, the five pennylands called Lettirfinlay of the old extent of 40 shillings, the five pennylands called Stronnabaw of the same old extent, and the five pennylands of Lindalie of the old extent of 50 shillings, all which were formerly held by them of the deceased George Earl of Huntlie, by whom the lands were forfeited.⁶ In 1615 Lauchlan M'Intosche of Dynnach-tane was served heir to Lauchlan M'Intosche his grandfather in the lands of Glenloy and Locherkaig, including the lands of Glenspean and Glenroy, namely, Bohintinekenkelle, Cappache, Auchnacross, Innerroymoir, Innerroybeg, Murvagan, Boheny, Auchlochrich, Kilkerrroll, Tullich, Dallichdundarge, Auchorderne, Bohintynevill, and Arkwe, with the office of sheriff (or bailie) and seneschal of the lordship of Lochaber, together of the old extent of £80.⁷ In 1623 Sir John Grant of Mulven was served heir male to his father John Grant of Frewchie in the same lands, styled the towns and lands of Glenloy, Locharkak, Glenspean, and Glenroy.⁸

In 1496 King James IV. granted to Lachlan Makgilleone, the natural son of Hector Makgilleone of Dowarde, with remainder in succession to Hector himself, to his brother Donald, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleone, certain lands which Hector had resigned, and which were now united into the barony of Dowarde, and included Innerloquhy, Auchintorbeg, Teirlondy, Drumfowre, Achnadale, Cammyske, Toulik, Dony, Corocoulec, Le Sokkach, Auchinquhare, and Thomaquharrik, in Lochquhabir.⁹ In 1509 Lauchlan Makgillecoun of Dowart, by license obtained from King James IV., sold to Alexander Earl of Huntlie, retaining the right of reversion, the lands of Correquhoule, Auchnadalyn, Cammiskee, Thomcarich, and Thomlerk, in the lordship of Lochabir.¹⁰ In 1510 King James IV. confirmed to Duncan Stewart of Appin the 6½ marklands of Auchnadialla, the 6½ marklands of Corremyll, the three marklands of Cammask, the three marklands of Thomelekebeg, the three marklands of Dowane, and the three marklands of Thovanecarrigh, in Lochabir, which with other lands he had acquired from the deceased Lauchlan Magilleon of Dowart in lieu of a certain sum of moneý, and under reversion on payment of that sum.¹ In 1512 the same king granted to the same Duncan Stewart, for his good service, and for his present to the king of a galley of 36 oars, a liferent of the lands of Innerlochy, Terelondy, Drumefour, and Auchintoir, in the lordship of Lochabir.² In 1531 King James V. granted to Ewen Alansoun, captain of the parentela of Clancameroune, for payment of 40 marks yearly, the same lands of the old extent of 13 marks, and other lands in Lochabir, which belonged to the king in property, but were never in his rental, and were occupied by the inhabitants of the isles and others who had no right to them.³ In 1540 Hector Makelane of Dowart resigned, and King James V. granted to Hector his son and apparent heir, with remainder to the heirs male of the elder Hector, to his brothers Alan and John, and to his own heirs whomsoever, the barony of Dowart, including the same lands in Lochabir that were granted in 1496 to Lauchlan Makgilleone.⁴ In 1557 the same Hector, fear of Dowart, with consent of his father Hector liferenter, sold in liferent to Jonet Campbell, daughter of Archibald Earl of Argyle, the lands of Corryquheulycht of the old extent of six marks, six shillings, and eight pence, Downy two marks, Toulyk two marks, and Innerlochquhy eight marks, with their salmon fishings, in the lordship of Lochquhaber.⁵ In 1558 Queen Mary confirmed the sale by deeds under her great and privy seals.⁶ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Doward was served heir to his grandfather Hector M'Clayne in the lands of Inwirlochy, Auchtitorbeg, Tirlundy, Drumfour, Auchmadala, Annisky, Cowlis, Dwny, Correchoulen, Soukkach, Auchichterre, and Tomquharrik, with the advowson of the churches, and the office of bailie of the lands.⁷

At the mouth of the river Lochy, on its left bank, stand the ruins of Inverlochy Castle, consisting of four round towers 30 feet high, connected by walls about 20 feet high, forming a large quadrangle, and surrounded at the distance of ten paces by a moat eight paces wide.⁸ The western and largest of the towers, known as Cumming's Tower, has walls ten feet thick.⁹ The origin of the castle, by some ascribed to the fabulous period of Scotch history, and coupled with the tradition of a large and opulent city adjoining, is by others dated in the reign of King Edward I. on the ground of its resemblance to the castles built by him in North Wales.¹⁰ In the year 1472 Celestine of the Isles lord of Lochalch dated a charter at Inuerlocha.¹¹ In the acts of the Scotch Parliament, under the date 1503, there occurs 'memorandum anent the biggin of Innerlochy, and commone tharuppon with the Erle of Huntlie,' showing that the castle had by that time been ruinous or partly destroyed.¹ In 1506 King James IV. granted to Alexander Earl of Huntly the castle and castle-stead of Innerlochy, with the ancient bounds, ditches, fish ponds, gardens, enclosures, and green, with power to repair, raise (or make higher), and build it with battlements (propugnaculis), iron bars, le machcoling, drawbridges, and all other necessary furnishings and fortifications, and to make captains, constables, janitors, jailers, and all other officers necessary for the keeping of the castle.² In 1508 the same king by a deed under his privy seal released the Earl from an obligation to build 'a towr and strenth with barmkyn' in Innerlochy, postponing the term prescribed for building from Martinmas 1508 to Martinmas 1509, as the King had detained the Earl in his personal service.³ In 1509, in a grant of the sheriffdom of Inverness by the same king to the same earl, Innerlochy was appointed as the place for holding courts within the bounds of Lochquhabir.⁴ In 1511 the same earl had a letter under the privy seal of the same king 'supersedand the bigging of the house of Innerlochy within Lochabir quhill Mertimes 1512.'⁵ In 1556 Queen Mary re-appointed Innerlochy as the seat of the sheriff courts of Inverness for the district of Lochquhabir.⁶

In 1431 was fought the battle of Inverlochy, in which Donald Ballach, the uncle of Alexander Lord of the Isles, defeated Alexander Earl of Mar, and slew Alan Stewart Earl of Caithnes and many others.⁷ In 1645 Inverlochy was the scene of another conflict, in which the Campbells under the Marquis of Argyle were defeated by the celebrated Marquis of Montrose.⁸

On a height called Mulroy near the house of Keppoch was fought in 1688 the last clan battle that took place in the highlands, in which Coll Macdonald of Keppoch defeated the Macintoshes.⁹

At Highbridge on the Spean, where a bridge of three arches built by General Wade spans the stream, occurred the first engagement between the royal forces and the highlanders in 1745.¹⁰

KILMALIE.

Kilmalyn¹ — Kilmale² — Kilmalze³ — Culmaly⁴ — Kilmaille⁵ — Kilmalzie.⁶
Deanery of Morvern.⁷ (Map, No. 40.)

THIS parish, which lies partly in Argyle and partly in Inverness, and to which there is now attached part of the old parish of Elanmunde, included the districts of Ardgour, Lochiel, Glenluy, Locharkeg, Achadrome, and Glengarry, all lying within the ancient lordship of Lochaber.⁸ This extensive and much diversified district has on the east the fresh-water lakes Loch Oich and Loch Lochy lying in the line of the great Caledonian valley, and on the same side and in the same line part of the two sea lochs named Loch Linnhe and Lochiel, of which the latter turning off midway at right angles indents the parish almost to its western border. Parallel to the same line lies Lochshiel, which forms part of the west boundary of the parish, and parallel to the upper portion of Lochiel, in a direction nearly east and west, the parish is traversed by Locharkeg about the centre of its largest division, and by a chain of lakes near its north boundary which includes Loch Quoich and Loch Garry. Between Locharkeg and Loch Lochy there is a beautiful valley named the Dark Mile.⁹

In the year 1296 Richard Fossard, parson of the church of Kilmalyn, swore fealty to King Edward I.¹⁰ In 1532 Master Alexander Rattar was vicar of Kilmale.¹¹ In 1536 and 1549 charters are witnessed by Sir John Campbell rector of Kilmalze.¹² He was dead before the 28th of August 1549, when King James V. appointed Sir John Sclatar rector of the same church.¹³ In 1552 the vicar was Sir Robert M'Raith.¹⁴ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Archibald Earl of Argyle the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the kirk of Kilmalyie.¹⁵ In 1685 a confirmation by King James VII. of the marquissate of Huntly to George Duke of Gordon included the patronage of the church of Kilmalzie, and a yearly fair to be held there on the 18th of August called Mary Fair.¹⁶

The church seems to have stood originally on a hill above the town of Kilmalie, which lay on the north shore of Lochiel opposite an island called Island Lochiel.¹⁷ In the seventeenth century it stood within the town of Kilmalie.¹⁸ It now stands at Corpach to the eastward of Kilmalie on the right bank of the Lochy, which is said to have been one of those stations at which the bodies of the dead rested for a time on their way to Iona.¹ The second of these was the church traditionally believed to have been built by Gillie-dow-mak-ehravolich (the black child, son to the bones), the original from which Sir Walter Scott has drawn his 'hermit monk' Brian in the Lady of the Lake.²

Near the head of Locharkeg there is an island named of old Island Columbkil, on which in the seventeenth century stood a church or chapel dedicated apparently to Saint Columba.³

The lands of Lochiel were probably included in those of Louchabre in the grant of the earldom of Moray by King Robert Bruce to Thomas Ranulph between 1307 and 1314.⁴ In the year 1372 or 1373 King Robert II. confirmed a grant by John of Yle to Reginald of Yle his son of 60 marklands in Lochabre, including Loche and Kylmald (apparently Lochiel and Kilmalie).⁵ The lands of Lochiel are said to have been forfeited in 1429 by Donald Dubh, chief of the Clanchameron, and to have been soon afterwards granted by Alexander Lord of the Isles to John Garve Maclean of Coll.⁶ In 1461 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to his kinsman John the son of Murdac M'Gilleoin of Lochboyg the following lands in Locheale in his lordship of Lochaber, namely, the lands of Banvy, Mykannich, Fyelyn and Creglwing, Corpych, Innernat, Achydo, Kilmalze, Achymoleag, Drumfarmolloch, Faneworwill, Fasfarna, Stonsonleak, Correbeg, Achitollodoun, Keanloch, Drumnasalze, Culenap, Nahohacho, Clerechaik, Mischerolach, Crew, Salachan, and the half of Lyndaly.⁷ In 1472 Celestine of the Isles, lord of Lochaleh, granted lands in Ross to Alan the son of Donald Duff, captain of the Clancamroun.⁸ In 1492 Alexander of the Isles, of Lochaleh and Lochhiel, granted to Ewen the son of Alan the son of Donald, captain of the Clancamroun, the lands of Cray, Salchan, Banwe, Corpach, Kilmalzhe, Achedo, Anat, Achetilay, Drumfermalach, Fanmoymell, Fassefarn, Corebeg, Owechan, Ayche-toldowne, Chanloycheil, Kowilknep, Drumnassall, Clachak, and Clochfyne, in Lochheil.⁹ In 1494 King James IV. confirmed to John Magilleon of Lochboye the lands granted to him in 1461 by John Lord of the Isles, by whom they had been forfeited to the King.¹⁰ In 1495 the same king confirmed to Ewin the son of Alan the lands granted to him in 1492 by Alexander of the Isles.¹¹ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the Isles, and of many other lands including Loehille, for three years or longer according to the Regent's pleasure.¹² In 1520 Ewen Allanson of Lochiel appears in record.¹³ In 1522 the lands of Banvy and others in Lochiel (included in the grant of 1461) were resigned by John M'Gilleon of Lochboye, and granted by King James V. to Sir John Campbell of Calder.¹⁴ In 1526 the grant was confirmed by the same king.¹⁵ In 1528 the same lands were resigned by Sir John

Campbell, and granted by King James V. to Colin Earl of Ergile.¹ In the same year Ewen Alansoun of Lochiell resigned to the same king the 30 marklands of Lochiell, the same that are specified in the grant of 1492, which, with other lands then resigned by Ewen, the King granted to him anew, and incorporated into the barony of Lochiell.² In the same year King James V. granted to John M'Clane of Coill the lands of Locheall in the lordship of Lochaber, of the old extent of £20, apparently the same as the 30 marklands granted to Ewen Alansoun.³ In 1531 Ewen Alansoun appears in record as captain of the parentela of Clancameroun.⁴ In 1536 there appears Donald Camroun the son and heir of Ewin Allansoun captain of Clancamroun.⁵ In 1539 Ewen Allansoun resigned the 30 marklands of Lochiell (as specified above), which King James V. then granted to him in liferent, and to his grandson Ewen Cammeroun in heritage.⁶ In 1541 Ewin Allansoun of Lochele again appears in record.⁷ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to George Earl of Huntlie the escheat of certain lands which heritably belonged to Ewin Allansoun of Locheill, including the lands of Locheill, and the place and fortalice of Torcastell, in the lordship of Lochaber.⁸ In 1553 Queen Mary granted to the same earl the lands of Locheill, Banvy, Corpoch, Kilmalze, Auchedo, Anned, Auchatilie, Drumfarmalach, Farmarwell, Faschefarne, Corryweg, Clirthaik, Claithnid, Nechowechon, and other lands in Lochquhaber, with the manor and fortalice of Torcastell which had been forfeited by Ewen Allansoun of Locheill for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.⁹ In 1554 the same queen granted to George Earl of Huntlie and Murray the nonentry dues of all the lands belonging to the deceased Ewin Camroun alias Litill Ewin, captain of the Clancamroun, and also the marriage of his brother and heir Donald Dow, or other lawful heir.¹⁰ In 1564 Queen Mary granted to Donald Cameroun, the son and heir of the deceased Donald Cameroun or Alansoun of Locheill, certain lands in Lochabir, which they had formerly held of the deceased George Earl of Huntlie, and which that earl had forfeited.¹¹ In 1606 Hector M'Clane of Lochboy was served heir to John M'Clane of Lochboy his great-grandfather in the lands of Banvy, Mikeanieche, and the rest of the lands granted by John of Yle to John M'Gilleoin in 1461, and together of the old extent of £10, 13s. 4d.¹² In 1608 Allan Camerone of Locheill was served heir to his great-grandfather Ewin Camerone, called Ewin Allansoun of Locheill, in the 30 marklands of Locheill, including the lands granted in 1492 by Alexander of the Isles to Ewin the son of Alan, and together of the old extent of £10.¹³

The lands of Logharkech were included in the earldom of Moray as granted by King Robert Bruce to his nephew Thomas Ranulph between the years 1307 and 1314.¹⁴ In 1336 John of Isla, afterwards Lord of the Isles, granted the lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig to William

Macintosh chief of the Clanchattan.¹ From that period the lands are said to have been the subject of a deadly feud between the Clanchattan and the Clanchameron for upwards of three hundred years.² In 1372 or 1373 King Robert II. confirmed a grant of the lands of Locharkage made by John of Yle to Reginald of Yle his son.³ Between the years 1443 and 1447 Alexander Lord of the Isles is said to have confirmed to Malcolm Macintosh chief of the Clanchattan his lands in Lochaber (including Glenluy and Locharkaig), and to have granted him the office of baillie of the district.⁴ For several years after 1497 the same lands, belonging to the Clanchattan, were forcibly held by the Clanchameron.⁵ In 1505 Ferquhard Makintoseche of Capoch granted to William Makintoseche of Dunnaehtan the lands of Glenloy and Lochquhareaige, and specially the lands of Moy, Arracht, Strone, Bare, Inuerlettir, Inuermusk, Mullin, Auchnaherve, Achnanellene, Lachmakkeillie, Glenmeillie, Dewreik, Inuermaille, Wallairt, Killerois, Auchnacarre, Clunys, Inuercawals, Auchnasawille, Creif, Salehan, Muk, Chamhone, Kindloche, Arkwe, Murvalgan, Callach, Glendessorach, Clasbragach, Glenpona, Chanloch, Glenkinglen, Messulech, and other lands in the lordship of Lochquhabbir.⁶ In 1516 King James V. granted to James Earl of Murray the ward, non-entries, and marriage of the lands of Glenlie-Lochareag, and others in Lochaber, with the bailliary of the same lands, which belonged to the deceased Ferquhar M'Kintoisch.⁷ In 1528 the same king granted to Ewen Alansoun, for his good service and for a certain pecuniary composition, the 40 marklands of Glenlie and Lochirkaig, with half of the bailliary of Lochaber, which were formerly held by his father Alan Donaldsoun of the King's predecessors, and were in the King's hands by reason of Alan's death.⁸ In 1539 the same lands and half bailliary were resigned by Ewen Alansoun, and granted by King James V. anew to the same Ewen in liferent, and to his grandson Ewen Cammeroun in heritage.⁹ In 1544 Queen Mary confirmed the grant of the same lands made in 1505 by Ferquhard Makintoseche of Capach to William Makintoseche of Dunnaehtan.¹⁰ In 1552 the same queen granted to Alexander Lord Gordoun the lands of Glenloy, namely, Stroyne, Bar, Innervske, Millanc, Interach, and Moy; and the lands of Locharkeg, including Innerteach, Ballach, Achnasauill, Sallachan, Creow, Mvk, Candmoir, Blair, Callacht, Murlagen, Candapold, Laganeferme, Waldart, Innermalze, Ach-nabar, Candleros, Muschenricht, and Cloyn — all which had been forfeited by William M'Intosche of Dunnaehtan for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.¹¹ In 1553, after the death of William Makintoseche, Queen Mary granted the same lands to George Lord Gordoun.¹² In 1615 Lauchlan M'Intosche of Dynnachtane was served heir to Lauchlan M'Intosche his grandfather in the lands of Glenloy and Locherkaig, as enumerated in the grant by Ferquhard Makintoseche in 1505.¹³ In the Isles, lord of Lochalch, is witnessed by Ewen the son of Donald the son of Lachlan of Ardgour.¹ In 1479 the same Ewen, styled Ewen Makcanehill of Ardgovre, is witness to a charter by John of Ila Lord of the Isles.² In 1493 the laird of Ardgour was Lauchlan Macewin Maclean.³ In 1517 Lauchlane Maklane of Argour and his kinsmen and friends had a remission under the privy seal of King James V. for assisting Sir Donald of the Isles of Lochalch when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.⁴ In the same year John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the Isles and other parts, including Argour, for three years or more according to the Regent's pleasure.⁵ In 1536 King James V., on the narrative that the writs of the deceased M'Carlich M'Ewin had been destroyed in time of war, granted anew to his son and heir John M'Carlich one markland of Calp and Girvan, 20 shillings of Dusk, one mark of Auchinsowill and Transelk, one mark of Stromegegane and Clauchzalk, one mark of Blairboy and Correbeg, one mark of the two Innerscanvillis, one mark of Cameleffyne and Crandelich, one mark of Arehowlane and Auchnanes, one mark of Lawdnaues and Cragnathane, one mark of Narauchan and Lakeich, 20 shillings of Danedach and Altezowis, one mark of Kilbodane, 2 marks and 10 shillings of Culle, 23 shillings and 4 pence of Sallochanbeg, 2 marks of Sallochanmoir, 2 marks of Innersanda and Innerbracatill, and half a mark of the two Branakillis and Clascammik, in the lordship of Ardgour and sheriffdom of Inverness, together of the old extent of 22 marks, the grantee making three suits yearly at the three head courts of Inverness.⁶ In 1541 King James V. granted to Ewin Allansoun of Lochele the nonentry and other dues of the same 22 marklands of Ardgowr, which the grant states to have been in the King's hands since the decease of the last lawful possessor.⁷ In 1542 John M'Clane of Ardgoure and others had a remission under the privy seal of King James V. for remaining from the army at Swlway, and for other acts of disobedience.⁸ In the same year John Makcarlich resigned the 22 marklands of Argour in the lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Inverness, and King James V. granted them anew to him in heritage, with the towers, forts, manors, mills, fishings, tenants, tenandries, woods, and forests, erecting all anew into the barony of Argour, and appointing the manor of Cullie to be the principal message.⁹ In 1545 John Maclane of Ardgowr was one of the council of the Isles mentioned above.¹⁰ In 1546 the same John and others had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.¹¹ In the same year Queen Mary granted to Hector M'Clane of Dowart the ward of the lands of Ardgour, which are stated to have been in the Queen's hands since the decease of Johnne M'Carlic M'Kewin M'Clane (apparently the same John).¹² In 1549

the same queen granted to the same Hector the lands and barony of Argour, in her hands since the decease of John M'Carlich of Argour, and annexed them to Hector's own barony of Doward in the sheriffdom of Terbert.¹ In 1603 Charles M'Killeane was served heir to John M'Kerleich, his great-grand-uncle's son, in the same barony.² In 1618 Allan M'Ewine M'Allane or M'Claine of Ardgour was served heir in the same to his great-grand-uncle's son John M'Cherlich M'Ewne or M'Claine of Ardgour.³ In 1629 Ewen M'Lean was served heir to his grandfather the deceased tutor of Ardgour in two marklands of Innerskaffadill, one mark of Achuness and other lands, half a mark of Aelnaphubill, and three shillings and fourpence of Blairbuy, in the barony of Ardgour, united into one free barony.⁴

The fortalice of the Torecastle upon the right bank of the river Lochy appears, as we have seen, in deeds of the dates 1546 and 1553.⁵ A writer of the seventeenth century observes, 'Not two myles from the church of Killmaille, which is at the syd of the loch ovir aganis the iland cald Loehyiell, is the castell of Torriechastell upon the west bank of the river Lochy. Sum suppose this to have been the place of Berigonium so much spoken of in our old monuments, how trulie or upon what grounds I cannot judge.'⁶

The same writer informs us, that in the year 1620, just as the people of the country had finished building a bridge over the river Airkaig, 'they report they saw an infinit number of adders swymming upon the water a little above the bridge, leaping thereon, wherof many landing creeped away throch the grass and hather to the great terrour of the beholders.'⁷

'There is a little strath betwixt the head of Loch Lochy and another small fresche water loch called Loehgawich (Loch Oieh). This strath is scarce one myl of length, and not the eight part of a myl in breadth. It is called Achadrome, supposed be the people therabout to be the middle part of Scotland be the length. There is a stone in a playne in this strath cald the Stone of the Rigg of Scotland, that runs from nord east to south west.'⁸

MORVERN.

THIS is a modern parish, composed of the two ancient parishes Kilcolmkill and Killintag (or Kilfinnie), which appear to have been united about the period of the Reformation,¹ but whose boundaries it seems now impossible to ascertain. It includes the greater part of the ancient lordship of Morvern, formerly known as Kenalban, and itself at one period included in the more extensive lordship of Garmoran.² Morvern and Kingerloch together form a peninsula, having on the west Loch Sunart, on the east Loch Linnhe, and on the south the sound of Mull. Its coast is indented on the south and west by two small sea lochs named Lochaline and Lochteagus, near the latter of which lie the islands Oransa and Carna. In the interior it is mountainous, rising in Bencaddan to the height of 2306 feet, and is diversified by a few small lakes, one of which, Loch Unimore, lying in a romantic valley of the same name which runs eastward from the head of Lochteagus, has been celebrated by Professor Wilson.³

Morvern, as before stated, gave name to one of the rural deaneries of Argyle. In 1545 and 1546 Roderike Maccallister, or Rore Ranaldsoun, was dean of Morwarne and bishop elect of the Isles.⁴

In the year 1671 William bishop of Argyle granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle a lease of the teinds of the bishop's quarter of various churches, including those of Icolmekill and Killintag in Morverne.⁵

by the decease of Sir John Judge.¹ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to Hectour M'Gilleoun of Doward and his heirs, until the Queen should attain the age of fourteen years, the patronage of several parsonages, including the parsonage of the church of Kilcolmkill, when vacant by decease, resignation, or otherwise.²

The church of Kilcolmkill, dedicated to Saint Columba, and traditionally believed to have been founded by him, stood at Keill on Lochaline, where a small portion of its ruins and the burying ground remain.³ The church which existed in 1794, whose dimensions were 40 feet by 16 within walls, and which had neither bell nor seats, stood at a short distance from the ruins at Keill.⁴ The present church was built in 1799.⁵ The churchyard was anciently held as a sanctuary.⁶

Killindykt⁷—Kilfynnye⁸—Kyllyntag⁹—Killintag.¹⁰ Deanery of Morvern.

In the year 1542 King James V. presented Sir Charles M'Clane chaplain to the rectory and vicarage of the church of Killindykt in Garmorvarn, which was vacant by the decease of Sir Angus Ewinsone.¹¹ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to Hectour M'Gilleoun of Doward and his heirs, until the Queen should attain the age of fourteen years, the patronage of the parsonage of the church of Kilfynnye, and of certain other churches, when vacant by decease, resignation, or otherwise.¹² In the same year Sir James Walkare was rector of Kyllyntag.¹³

The church, probably dedicated to Saint Findoc the virgin, stood near the coast of the Sound of Mull, about nine miles west from the church of Keill.¹⁴ The present church, built in 1780, stands at a short distance from the former.¹⁵ It is of the same dimensions as was its contemporary at Keill, and in 1794 was in the same condition.¹⁶ The cemetery of the older church, which appears to be still used, was of old regarded as a sanctuary.¹⁷

There is a tradition that Morvern in the twelfth century was part of the possessions of Somerled Prince of Argyle, who at the head of the men of Morvern is said to have defeated a body of Norse pirates.¹⁸ In 1292 the lands of Kinnelbathyn (Kenalbin) were included by King John

Balliol in the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle.¹ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted the lands of Kinbaldein to Angus of Yle, the descendant of Somerled.² In 1335 Edward Balliol granted in heritage to John of the Isles for his allegiance, quantum in se erat, the land of Kenalbadon and other lands in Argyle and the Isles.³ In 1336 King Edward III. confirmed the grant.⁴ In 1390 the lord of Morvern appears to have been Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles.⁵ In 1475 John of Ile, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, forfeited all his lands, including Morvarne, to the crown.⁶ In 1476 Morvarne was included in the lands restored to the same John by King James III. at the request of his queen and parliament.⁷ In 1478 the same king on attaining his majority confirmed the restoration.⁸ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, granted to Lauchlane Makclane of Doward for eleven years, and thereafter during the Regent's pleasure, the King's lands of Murwerne, with power to sublet them.⁹ In the same year the Regent appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the same and other lands for three years or longer according to his pleasure.¹⁰ In 1533 Archibald Earl of Argyle and 92 others had a remission from King James V. 'for treasonable fire-raising with displayed banner' in Morvern and other parts.¹¹ In a list of the crown lands in the lordship of the Isles in the year 1536 there is included 'the yle of Morvell betuix the louch of Louchsonvort and Louchneil,' a description evidently intended for the lands of Morvern.¹² In 1541 and 1542 Ewin M'Martying was 'officiar and serjand' of the King's lands of Morven.¹³

In 1390 Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles granted to Lachlan Makgilleone twelve mark-lands of Morwarn, namely, 6 pennylands of Achagnaha, 5 pennylands of Achagranach, 3 pennylands of Achagalain, 3 pennylands of Vlgadall, 2 pennylands of Dubgaere, 2½ pennylands of Nasrone, and 2½ pennylands of Achagtaeegeneruflang.¹⁴ The grant was confirmed in 1431 by King James I., and in 1495 by King James IV.¹⁵ In 1496 the latter king granted anew to Lachlan Makgilleone the natural son of Hector Makgilleone of Dowarde, and to his heirs, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to his brother Donald and his heirs, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleone, the lands of Achnaha, Achkalon, Dowgree, Kynloch, Achranich with le Straith, le Clasche, and le Claschebreke, Achintadownoll, Owladoll, le Strone, and Achtowiekrufluk, lying in le Morwarne, all resigned by Hector, and now included in the free barony Dowarde.¹⁶ In 1540 the same lands as part of the same barony were resigned by Hector Makclane of Dowart, and granted by King James V. to his son and heir Hector and his male heirs, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, his brother Alan and his heirs, his brother John and his heirs, and his own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makclane.¹⁷ In 1557 Hector

Makclane fear of Dowart, with consent of his father Hector liferenter, sold to Jonet Campbell daughter of Archibald Earl of Argyle in liferent $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Auchrannycht, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Auchnohay, 2 marks 3 shillings and 4 pence of Auchigawlen, with the tower, fortalice, manor, and salmon fishings, 16 shillings and 8 pence of Aquhittywitrufing, 6 shillings and 8 pence of Strone, and 3 marks of Vlodyle and Strone, all of old extent, in the lordship of Morwarne, and in the sheriffdom of Tarbart by annexation.¹ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Doward was served heir to his grandfather Hector in the same lands that were granted to the family in 1496 and 1540, with the advowson of the churches and the office of bailie.²

In 1494 King James IV. granted to John M'Gilleoun of Lochboye 6 pennylands of Achenbeg and Yecomys, 2 pennylands of Kowilkelis, 3 pennylands of the two Achefors, 3 pennylands of Achenagawyn, 2 pennylands of Hennyngbeg, one pennyland of Areangus, one pennyland of Corosmedill, $3\frac{1}{2}$ pennylands of Cleynlondre, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ pennylands of Cormawin, in the lordship of Morwarn, which with other lands he had held in heritage of John of Ile, through whose forfeiture they were in the King's hands.³ In 1534 John Makgilleoune of Lochboy granted the same lands, of the extent of 12 marks, to his son Murdoch, and in 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.⁴ In 1542 the same king granted the same lands in free barony to Murdoc Macgilleoun on his resignation, and to his heirs male, with remainder to his brother Charles and his heirs male.⁵ In 1615 Hector M'Cleane of Lochbowie was served heir to his great-grandfather Murdoch in the same 12 marklands, then included in the barony of Moy, and of the old extent of 80 marks.⁶

In 1494 King James IV. granted to John M'Ean of Ardnamurchan the lands of Anlastill, Laldie, Davenak, and others, in Morverne.⁷ In 1538 Mareon M'Ean was served heir to her father John M'Ean in the same lands.⁸ In 1540 the same Mareon resigned the lands in favour of Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁹

In 1509 King James IV. granted to Ewin the son of Hector of Kilmalew and his heirs male, with remainder in succession to his brothers Alan and Ferchard and their heirs, to his brother Niel and his heirs by More the daughter of Colin Makintosh, to Niel's brother Terlet and his heirs, to Hector's son Alexander and his heirs by Margaret Fresor daughter of Hugh Fresor Lord Lovet, and to Ewin's lawful heirs whomsoever, for the service of a ship of 22 oars, 6 pennylands of Laach (or Blooech), 2 pennylands of Kilmalew, a pennyland of Druminella (or Drummella), a pennyland of Inchgeran, a pennyland of Grenan, a halfpennyland of Strone, a pennyland of Kilbedane, a pennyland of Skeanlogh, a great pennyland of Conych, a pennyland of Myndraste, a pennyland of Torbrek, a pennyland of Keankilze, a pennyland of Loghuskemore, a pennyland of Loghuskebeg, a pennyland of Sallochancorry, a great pennyland of Corre, a pennyland of Ardnacarny, a pennyland of Caygan, a halfpennyland of Reismagowan, a great pennyland of Aryhawry, a pennyland of Treere (or Toer), a great pennyland of Arymane, a

In 1528 King James V. granted to John M'Clane of Coill three marklands old extent of Auchillenen, and 40 shillinglands of Druma (or Drummyn) in the lordship of Morwarn.³ In 1542 the same lands were resigned by John Makelane, and granted by the same king to John Makelane his son as part of the free barony of Coll.⁴ In 1559 that barony, including the same lands of Auchleynane and Drummynane in the sheriffdom of Terbert, was resigned by Hector M'Clane of Coill, and granted by Queen Mary to Hector his son and heir apparent, reserving the liferent to Hector the elder, and the terce to his widow, provided that he should not be convicted of lese majesty.⁵

In 1534 John Makgilleoun of Lochboy granted to his natural son Murdoch Makgilleoun 6 pennylands of Drummyne, 4 pennylands of Achyawale, 2½ pennylands of Auchlychtmatrufflan, 2½ pennylands of Aldachonnycht, half of the lands of Dowderre, 4 pennylands of Yaore, a pennyland of Dernamart, and 5 pennylands of Barre, in the lordship of Moray [Morvern?] and sheriffdom of Innernys, and other lands, with the balliary of the lands in Moray [Morvern?].⁶ In 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.⁷

In 1541 King James V. granted for life to Ewin M'Martying, 'officiar and serjand' of the King's lands of Morven, the lands of Ledistill and Archanyeh in the lordship of Morven and sheriffdom of Innernes, of the old extent of two marks.⁸

The two marklands and a half of Fynhorra or Fynthora (apparently the modern Fewnary) were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, which in 1545 was granted by Queen Mary to James Makeconnyll of Donyveg and Glennis, in 1558 was confirmed to him by the same queen and her husband Francis the Dauphin, and in 1564 was granted by the same queen to Archibald M'Coneill the son and apparent heir of James.⁹

In 1635 John M'Clane was served heir to his father Angus M'Clane rector of Morvarne in the 20 shillinglands of Ulline in Morwarne, of old in the sheriffdom of Innernes.¹⁰

On a promontory on the Sound of Mull, immediately east of Lochaline, stand the ruins of the castle of Ardtornish, the ancient seat of the Lords of the Isles, in which Sir Walter Scott has laid the opening scene of his poem.¹ In 1380 John Lord of the Isles, the son of Angus Og of Isla, died at his castle of Ardtorinish.² In 1390 and 1409 several charters by Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles are given at his castle of Ardthoranis.³ In 1451 John Stewart lord of Lorn dates a charter at Ardtorinche.⁴ In 1461 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted at Ardtornys a charter of the lands of Lochiel.⁵ In 1462 was concluded between the same John of Yle and King Edward IV. of England the treaty of Ardtornish, by which John of Yle, his son Donald Balloch, and his grandson John of Yle, became bound to assist King Edward and James Earl of Douglas in subduing the kingdom of Scotland, a service for which they were to receive respectively in time of war £200, £40, and £20 sterling yearly, and in time of peace 100 marks, £20, and £10 sterling.⁶ In the seventeenth century Ardtornish belonged to Maclean of Dowart.⁷ The remains of the ancient castle consist chiefly of the keep and some fragments of the outer defences.⁸

At Keanlochaline there are the ruins of a castle, traditionally said to have belonged to the family of M'Innes (apparently the descendants of Angus of Ile).⁹

On a small island in Loch Ternate are the ruins of a stronghold, and on another in Loch-teagus the remains of a vitrified fort.¹⁰

In the burying-ground at Keill are several tombs of the Macinesses, a stone coffin said to contain the remains of a Spanish lady who perished on board the Florida at Tobermory, and the tomb of a gigantic warrior named Mac Vic Ian of the house of Ardnamurchan.¹¹

ARDNAMURCHAN.

Kilquhoan in Ardnamvrchane¹—Kilchoan.² Deanery of Morven.
(Map. No. 42.)

THIS parish, now united to Arasaig and Elanfinan, and separated from the latter by a line uniting the points at which Loch Shiel on the north and Loch Sunart on the south approach nearest, forms the largest portion of a considerable peninsula of Argyle terminating in the Point of Ardnamurchan, the western extremity of the mainland of Scotland. It is crossed from east to west by high hills and deep valleys, and has a coast-line many miles in extent.

In 1515 King James V. presented Sir Roderick M'Alester (Alexandri) chaplain to the rectory of Kilquhoan in Ardnamurchane, vacant by the decease of Sir Andrew Makcacherne.³ In 1623 Andrew bishop of Argyle leased to John Campbell the eldest son of Donald Campbell of Barbreck-Lochaw the bishop's quarter of the same church.⁴ In 1667 the patronage of the church of Kilchoan was included by King Charles II. in a new grant of the earldom of Argyle to Earl Archibald.⁵ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the patronage of the same church.⁶

The church, dedicated to Saint Congan the abbot, stood on the south coast on the right bank of a small stream falling into Kilchoan bay.⁷ Its ruins still exist.⁸ At Kilmory on the north coast there was another church, apparently dedicated to the Virgin, and still partly in existence, which in the seventeenth century appears to have been the parish church.⁹ The present church at Kilchoan was built in 1831, and the church at Kilmory apparently a little earlier.¹⁰ There is also a parliamentary church at Aharacle near Loch Shiel.¹¹

In 1723 the parsonage teinds of Ardnamurchan are stated at 82 bolls 2½ firlots, or £36, 14s. 5½d., and the vicarage at £12, 13s. 4d.¹²

There is no earlier mention of this district than in the Life of Saint Columba by Adomnan, who describes his master as on one occasion making a journey through this rugged region—per asperam et saxosam regionem quae dicitur Ardamuirchol. The same author elsewhere writes it Ardaib Muircol.¹³ The sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle, erected by King John Balliol in 1292, included the lands of Ardenmurich.¹⁴ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted the lands of Ardnamurchin to Angus of Yle.¹ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted in heritage to John of the Isles for his allegiance the land of Ardinton (apparently Ardnamurchan).² In 1336 King Edward III. confirmed the grant.³ In 1409 there appear in record Alexander Macian (Johannis) of Ardnamurchan, and his daughter Fynvola, the wife of Hugh of Slete, apparently the descendants of Angus of Yle.⁴ In 1478 a charter of John of Isla Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Alexander M'Cane of Ardnamurcho.⁵ In 1494 John Makecane of Ardmurquhane, apparently the son of another John, and grandson of Alexander M'Cane, had from King James IV. a grant of lands in Ila forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, and in 1499 from the same king a grant of the lands of Ardnamurchan and the Castle of Mengarie for the same service as used to be paid to the Lord of the Isles.⁶ In 1499 the same king granted him lands in various parts to the extent of 200 marks for his good service in taking John of the Isles, his son, and their accomplices, and for resigning certain lands in Kintyre.⁷ In 1505 the same king confirmed to the same John Makkane all former grants made to him in the Isles and elsewhere, including the low land (terra bassa) of Ardnamurchan.⁸ In 1515 John Makecane of Ardnamurchane, with many others including Colin Earl of Ergile, had a remission from King James V. for all crimes except treason.⁹ In 1516 the same John and others, familiars and servants of Colin Earl of Ergile, had a special protection from the Regent John Duke of Albany.¹⁰ In 1517 the Regent granted to Lauchlan Makelane of Doward the fermes of the King's lands of Teree, to be held during the Regent's pleasure, for Lauchlan's good service, and his inbringing of the King's fermes of the south side of Ardnamurchane, except those of the lands which belonged to John Makecane of Ardnamurchane, for which John himself should be responsible.¹¹ In the same year Colin Earl of Ergile was appointed lieutenant of the lands of Ardnamurchane and others for three years or longer according to the Regent's pleasure.¹² In the same year Sir Donald of Lochalsh laid waste Ardnamurchan with fire and sword.¹³ In 1518 or 1519 the same Sir Donald and others attacked and slew John Makcane and two of his sons at Craiganairgid (the silver craig) in Morvern.¹⁴ In 1519 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile the ward, relief, nonentry, and marriage of the lands which belonged to the deceased John Makcayne of Ardnamurquhan, with the office of bailie and the castles of the same.¹⁵ In 1538 Mareon M'Ean was served heir to her father John in the lands of Ardnamurchan and others.¹⁶ In 1540 the same Mareon resigned the same lands in favour of Archibald Earl of Ergile.¹⁷ In 1541 King James V. paid to the same earl the sum of £5000 for resigning ad

perpetuam remanentiam the lands, lordships, and dominions in the Isles, which belonged to the heirs of the deceased Mackane, and which had been heritably alienated to the Earl (including probably the lands of Ardnamurchan.)¹ In 1543 Queen Mary granted to the same earl for twelve years the lands of Ardnamurchane and others which had belonged to the deceased John M'Ane of Ardnamurchane, and which had been resigned by John's daughter Jonet to the Earl, and by the Earl to the Queen.² In 1545 Alexander Mackeyn of Ardnamurchane was one of the barons and council of Donald Lord of the Isles.³ In 1550 (14 September) Queen Mary confirmed to James M'Conale of Dunnavecht a grant by Archibald Earl of Argyle alienating to him and his heirs, with remainder to the Earl, the 80 marklands old extent of Ardnamorquhy with the castle and fortalice of Castell Mayerie in the sheriffdom of Innernes.⁴ In the same year (20th September) the same queen granted or confirmed to Earl Archibald the same lands and castle, which had been resigned at Holyrood to King James V. by Mariot M'Kane the daughter and heiress of the deceased John M'Kane of Ardnamurchane.⁵ In 1561 the lands of Geirgadill in Ardnamurchan were held of the abbot of Iona by John M'Ian of Ardnamurchan.⁶ 'Ardnamurchen,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'is fourscoir merkland. The Clan Ean Murguenich wer the old inhabitants, dispossessed be the Campbells, who have planted it with other people, unless it be a few remaynder of the old.'⁷ In 1723 the whole of the tenements in Ardnamurchan were the following — Terbart three pennylands, Glenbarrowdale five pennylands, Glenbeg four pennylands, Glenmoir five pennylands, Ardslnish five pennylands, Camisangaall six pennylands, Tornamoany four pennylands, Bourblaige five pennylands, Skinad five pennylands, Coriuolline six pennylands, Mingary six pennylands, Kilchoan five pennylands, Ormsaigmoir four pennylands, Ormsaigbeg five pennylands, Girgadale five pennylands, Achachosnich nine pennylands, Achnaha five pennylands, Glendrien five pennylands, Faskadal three pennylands, Achateny six pennylands, Braynanault five pennylands, Kilmorri four pennylands, Swardilchorach five pennylands, Swardilmoir five pennylands, Swardilcheul eight pennylands, Gortonfern one pennyland, Lehick one pennyland, Clash and Ardrimonish two pennylands, Daal and Gortonnoorn six pennylands, Ardtoe and Waterfoot four pennylands, Acharacle five pennylands — in all 152 pennylands.⁸

On the south coast of Ardnamurchan there is a low rocky promontory, on which 'sternly placed' stands the castle of Mingarry.⁹ This castle, 50 feet in length, and three stories in height, is surrounded by an irregular hexagonal wall nearly as high as itself, and rising immediately from the edge of the rock, to the angles of which those of the castle are adapted.¹⁰ In 1493 King James IV., who was then in the highlands for the purpose of receiving the submission of the vassals of the Lordship of the Isles, dates a charter at the castle of Mewar in Ardmurquhane.¹ In 1495 at the same place John Striveling of Ker resigned the barony of Ker to the same king.² In 1499, as we have seen, the castle of Mengarie was included in a grant by the same king to John M'Ean of Ardnamurchan.³ In 1505 King James IV., as above stated, confirmed to the same John all grants formerly made to him, including the house and fortalice of Castelmeary.⁴ In 1515 King James V. paid the sum of £33, 6s. 8d. to Dowgall Campbell for certain expenses 'maid on marinaris quhilkis he had with him in the Gabriell for the supporting of Makkanis house quhen it wes first to be segit be Schir Donald Ylis.'⁵ In 1517 Sir Donald took the castle and razed it to the ground.⁶ In 1519 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile the 'castles' of Ardnamurquhan with the lands.⁷ In 1550 Queen Mary confirmed a grant of the castle and fortalice of Castell Mayerie by Archibald Earl of Ergile to James M'Concle of Dunnavecht, and in the same year confirmed it to the Earl himself as resigned to King James V. by Mariot M'Kane the daughter of John M'Kane of Ardnamurchan.⁸ In 1589 the castle was besieged by Maclean of Dowart and his men, assisted by a hundred Spanish soldiers from the Florida, one of the vessels of the Armada which had been driven into the harbour of Tobermory.⁹ In 1612 a commission was granted by Archibald Earl of Argyle to Donald Campbell of Barbreck-Lochow 'to take and receive' the castle of Mingarry, and to put keepers in it at the Earl's expense, with power to summon before him the tenants of Ardnamurchan, to fix and collect the Earl's rents, and to punish refractory tenants.¹⁰ In 1644 the castle was taken by Allaster Macdonald, known as Colquitto, and was afterwards besieged without success by the Marquis of Argyle.¹¹

Ellenenan¹—Fynani Insula²—Yland Finan³—Yland Fynan⁴—Ilanfinan⁵
—Island Finan.⁶ Deanery of Morvern. (Map, No. 43.)

THIS parish, now united to Ardnamurchan, was apparently coextensive with the district named Sunart, which lies between Ardnamurchan on the west and Ardgor on the east, having Loch Sunart and Morvern on the south, and Loch Shiel on the north. Both its coast and its interior are similar to those of Ardnamurchan, and some of its hills rise to the height of 2000 to 3000 feet. At Strontian on Loch Sunart are the lead mines which produce the peculiar kind of ore which is named from the place.

In 1392 the advowson of the church of Swynwort was confirmed by King Robert III. to Reginald of Yle, to whom it had been previously granted along with the lands by John of Yle his father.⁷ In 1515 Sir Andrew Makcacherne rector of Ellenenan died, and was succeeded by Sir Roderick M'Alester chaplain.⁸ In 1545 and 1546 Roderike Maccallister or Rore Ranaldsoun, kinsman to Donald Lord of the Isles, dean of Morwarne, and bishop elect of the Isles, was one of two commissioners appointed by Donald to treat with King Henry VIII., in the fulfilment of which commission, while the Lord of the Isles lay with his army at Carrickfergus, Sir Roderick seems to have resided in Dublin for about a year, supported by the Privy Council of England.⁹ In 1547 Rory M'Alester, parson, had a remission under the privy seal of Queen Mary 'for his treasonable passing to England and Ireland, and inbringing of Inglismen within the Iis and vthir partis within the realm, for burning, heirschip, and destruction.'¹⁰ A tombstone in Ardchattan priory, ornamented with a flower border, and having in the centre the figure of an ecclesiastic in the attitude of prayer, bears the inscription—Hic iacet venerandus et egregius vir Rodericus Alexandri rector quondam Fynani Insule qui obiit anno Domini —, which, though without date, undoubtedly commemorates the political dean of Morvern, and shows that he died rector of Elanfinan.¹¹ In 1623 Andrew bishop of Argyle granted to John Campbell, the eldest son of Donald Campbell of Barbreck-Lochow, a lease of the bishop's quarter of the teinds of Ilanfinan, in so far as it lay within the bounds of Shunart.¹² In 1667 a new grant of the earldom of

Argyle by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald included the patronage of the church of Ilanfinan.¹ In 1695 Archibald Earl of Argyle was served heir to his father Earl Archibald in the patronage of the same church.²

The church, dedicated to Saint Finan, and sometimes styled a monastery, stood on the small island from which it was named, and which lies in Loch Shiel near its southern extremity.³ There still remain the walls of the church, its altar, and a fine toned angular handbell.⁴ There is a parliamentary church at Strontian.⁵

In 1723 the parsonage teinds of Sunart are stated at 32 bolls or £14, 4s. 5d., and the vicarage at £4, 18s. 4d.⁶

In 1372 or 1373 King Robert II. confirmed a grant of the lands of Swynwort and Letterlochettle by his son-in-law John of Yle to Reginald of Yle his son.⁷ In 1392 the same grant, consisting of three unciate of Swynwort and Lettirlochettle, was confirmed by King Robert III.⁸ In 1495 John Makkane of Ardnamurchane claimed possession of the lands of Sunart, and his claim was disputed by Allan Macruari of Moydart as a tenant of John of Isla surnamed Catanach.⁹ In 1499 King James IV. granted to John Makkane of Ardnamurchan, for his good service in taking John of the Isles, his son, and their accomplices, and for resigning certain lands in Kintyre and elsewhere, 200 marks of land, including 20 marklands of Swynfuird.¹⁰ In 1505 he confirmed to the same John all his lands, including the low land (terra bassa) of Ardnamurchan and Soynfort.¹¹ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of Swnorthe and other lands for three years or more according to the Regent's pleasure.¹² In 1543 Queen Mary granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile for 12 years her lands of Swynfuird and others, which were resigned to the Earl by Jonet M'Ane the daughter of John M'Ane, and which the Earl had resigned to the Queen.¹³ The rest of the history of Sunart about this period appears to be the same as that of Ardnamurchan.¹⁴ 'Swyneord,' says a writer of the following century, 'is reckoned 30 markland. It was holden be the Clanean of Mackoneil lord of Yla and Cantyre.'¹⁵ The 'isle' of Shunart was in 1667 included in the new grant of the earldom of Argyle above mentioned.¹⁶ In 1723 the whole of the tenements of Swenard are stated as follows: Achnalea five pennylands; Carnach; Strontien five pennylands; Drimnatorrin five pennylands; Torbaan; Arriundill five pennylands; Annahylt five pennylands; Ardnastaing five pennylands; Daalnasheillach; Glenhurich; Powloch five pennylands; Gortennorig, Scammodill, and Glasporryn, three pennylands; Ronachanniar five pennylands; Razebale six pennylands; Camusine five pennylands; Ronachanstroan five pennylands; Achellan; Derrydaff one pennyland; in all 60 pennylands.¹⁷

ARASAIG.

Arasech¹ — Arissak² — Kilmolroy in Arisik³ — Kilmaroy in Arisaig⁴ — Kilvorie in Arresaick.⁵ Deanery of Morvern. (Map. No. 44.)

THIS parish, which has been united to Ardnamurchan, appears to have consisted of the districts named Moydart, Arasaig, and South Morar, with the island of Shona and several smaller isles, all included in the ancient lordship of Garmoran.⁶ It may be generally described as an extensive mountainous tract lying between Loch Shiel on the south and Loch Morar on the north, and having a long rocky coast-line indented on the west with numerous bays, of which the chief are Loch Moydart, Loch Aylort, Loch-na-nuagh, and Loch-na-gal.

In the year 1250 Elias parson of Arasech appears in record.⁷ The patronage of the church appears to have been included in a grant of the lands Modworth and others made in 1309 by King Robert Bruce to Roderick the son of Alan,⁸ in a grant of the same lands about 1372 by John of Yle to Reginald his son, and in confirmations of the latter grant in 1373 by King Robert II. and in 1392 by King Robert III.⁹ Before 1506 the church appears to have been served by the same rector as the church of Knoydart, John Dougalsoun, and after his death by John Makmurich chaplain, who in that year seems to have been presented to both rectories by King James IV.¹⁰ In 1517 King James V. presented Sir Roderick Rannaldsoun chaplain to the rectory of Kilmolroy in Arisik and also of the church of Knodort, vacant by the decease of Sir John Makmoris (probably the same as Makmurich) last rector and lawful possessor of the same, or by resignation of Sir Alexander Wentoun reputed rector, or by whatever other lawful means.¹¹ In 1561 the abbot of Iona had two-thirds of the parsonage of Mwidort, and the bishop of Argyle one third.¹² In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Earl Archibald his quarter of the teinds of the church of Kilvorie in Arresaick.¹³

The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stood at Keppach or Ardnafuaran in Arasaig, where its ruins may still be seen.¹⁴ There is a modern church at the same place, and another at Polnish upon Loch Aylort.¹⁵

In the year 1309 King Robert Bruce granted in heritage to Roderic the son of Alan a davach and a half of the land of Modworth, half a davach of Arysseyk, namely, five pennylands of Gedeuall, and five pennylands of Glenbressell and Bethey, and various other lands, all which were resigned by Cristian of Marr the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic, to be held by Roderic for the service of a ship of 26 oars with its complement of men and victuals for the King's army when necessary and on due warning; but, if Roderic the son of Alan should have no male heir, then Roderic the son of Cristian should hold the lands in heritage, on condition that he should give in marriage the daughter, or daughters of the said Roderic his uncle, if he should have any, with a portion of 400 marks Sterling; and, if in the course of nature it should happen that Roderic the son of Cristian could not succeed to the lands, then the daughter or daughters of Roderic the son of Alan should succeed their father in the same, or, if he had no surviving heir, the lands should revert to Cristian and her heirs.¹ About the year 1342 or 1343 King David II. granted to Angus the son of John of the Isles (ancestor of the family of Ardnamurchan) the 24 marklands of Morware, and other lands, a grant however which appears never to have taken effect.² In 1343 the same king granted to Reginald the son of Roderic of the Isles eight unciate of Garwmorwarne, a grant which included Mudeworth, Mordhowor, and Aresayg.³ In 1367 the King's lands of Garmoruore or Garuemoron, of the old extent of £200 or 300 marks, were in the hands of John of the Isles.⁴ In 1372 King Robert II. granted to John of Yle the 300 marklands which belonged to Alan the son of Roderic, including the lands of Modoworth, Arrassag, and Moreovyr.⁵ In 1372 or 1373 John of Yle granted the lands of Mudewort, Arassayk, and Morowore, to Reginald of Yle his son, to whom about the same time they were confirmed by King David II.⁶ In 1392 the same grant was confirmed by King Robert III.⁷ Godfrey the brother of Reginald, who in 1388 is styled lord of WYST, is said to have held Garmoran after his brother's death in 1386.⁸ In 1427 among a number of persons arrested during the stay of King James I. at Inverness was Alexander Makrewry of Garmoran, the son of Godfrey of Islay, and styled the leader of a thousand men.⁹ It appears that he was afterwards executed along with several others, among whom was John Macarthur, who is said to have asserted his claim to the lands of Garmoran on the ground of the charter granted to Arthur Campbell his ancestor by Cristian the daughter of Alan.¹⁰ The lands of Garmorvarne were forfeited by John Lord of the Isles in 1475, restored to him by King James III. in 1476, and confirmed to him by the same king in 1478.¹¹ About the year 1494 the same lands seem to have been held by Alan Macruari the great-grandson of Reginald of Yle.¹ In 1498 King James IV. granted to Ranald Makallane and his heirs, with remainder to his brother Alexander and his heirs, various lands, including 4 marks of Ardnis, 4 marks of Borwadall, 2 marks of Drumnydarach and Brunnary, 4 marks of Gadeoll, Sandaig, and Ardaulis, 4 marks of Kilnehake, Duff, Cammas, and Glenbestell, and 6 marks of Kanlod, Ardnefory, and Drumchonlich, in Arissaik, in the lordship of the Isles, extending in all to 24 marks, which were formerly held by Hugh of the Isles of John Lord of the Isles, by whom they were forfeited to the crown; John Huchonsoun of Sleit, the son of the said Hugh, having renounced all right in the lands that belonged to him by heritage or by the King's promise made to the deceased Alexander of the Isles of Lochalch.² In the same year the same king granted to Angus Rewochsoun Makranald and his heirs male, with remainder to his son Angus and his heirs, 6 marklands of Arassaik, namely, le Keppach, Torbey, Ard-maksemone, and two thirds of Brownary, and 14 marklands of Moror, held as those granted to Ranald Makallane, and resigned in the same terms by John Huchonsoun of Sleit.³ In 1509 Alan Macruari, chief of the Clanranald of Moydart, is said to have been executed at Blair in Athole, and in 1513 his son and successor Ranald Allanson was put to death at Perth.⁴ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the lands of Mudorth and Arissaig, and of Moroyne which Angus Makangus Rewing had (South Morar).⁵ In 1532 King James V. granted a charter of legitimation in favour of John Makalester of Casteltirrim, the son of the deceased Alexander M'Alane of Casteltirrim, and in the same year, for the good service done and to be done by him, and seeing that the charters granted to his predecessors had been destroyed through war and other local disturbances, granted anew to him and to his heirs the 27 marklands of Moydort, the 30 marklands of Arissaik, and other lands, in the sheriffdom of Inverness, which of old belonged in heritage to Alan Makrory the grandfather of John Makalestar of Casteltirrim, and to his predecessors, and now to be held of the King in fee for service of ward, relief, and marriage, provided that John Makalester and his heirs should not do homage to any person without the special license of the King.⁶ In 1534 John M'Allan V'Allaster captain of the Clanronald granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle the two Kinluthes, Aernie, Glenalladill, Blyng, and Shenan, together of the old extent of 10 marks, in the barony of Moydart.⁷ In the same year the granter of these lands appears as John M'Alester M'Alester of Elanterin captain of the Clanranald.⁸ In 1538 King James V. granted to Alane M'Coule M'Rannald, and his brother Lauchlane M'Coule M'Rannald, the nonentry and other dues of 14 marklands of Morowre and 7 marklands in Awrissaig, and other lands, in the sheriffdom of Inverness.⁹ In 1540 the same king granted the nonentry and other dues of the

same lands to Archibald Earl of Ergile, the lands according to the grant having been in the King's hands since the decease of John Makangus Reoch Makrannald.¹ In the same year he granted to Ranald Alanesoun, styled Galda, the dues of the 27 marklands of Moydort, and the 24 marklands of Arissaik, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, which were in the King's hands since the decease of Alane Rorisoun Ranald's father.² At the same time, on the narrative that it appeared that the deceased Alan Rorysoun of Moydort, the father of Ranald Alanesoun, and his predecessors had been heritably infeft in the same lands, and that all their charters had been lost or destroyed through disturbances in that district, in consequence of which Ranald could never obtain entry as his father's heir, King James V. granted him the lands anew, and revoked a grant of them made in his minority to John Makalester on sinister and unjust information, and all other grants of the same lands which he had given to any other persons.³ Ranald died in 1544, and in 1563 Queen Mary granted to his son Allane Makrannald the dues of the 30 marks of Mwdart, and the 30 marks of Arissak, and other lands, which were in her hands since his father's decease.⁴ In 1612 Angus M'Allan M'Ronald was served heir to his grandfather Ronald Allanson of Moydart in the 27 marklands of Moydart and the 24 marklands of Arrisack, of the old extent of £20.⁵ In 1627 John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane, captain of Clanronald, was served heir male to Donald M'Allane Viceane of Ellantirrim, captain of Clanronald, in the tenantry of Casteltirrim, including among others 3 marklands of Moydart; 14 marklands of Morrou, namely, Crae, Tray, Duassich, Aucholadill, Worklach, Arrichicharrie and Nakyrside, Poulliskman, Schomusletter, Skammadill, Ratullan, Ferratorie, Clachok, Inneroussie, Merrickillie, and Lochbeoraid, together of the extent of 28 marks; and 7 marklands of Arrasack, namely, the lands of Keppach, Manis, Arnapoll, Terrabeach, and Brunnarie, together of the extent of 14 marks.⁶ In 1633 George Mackenzie was served heir to his brother Colin Earl of Seafort, Lord Mackenzie of Kintail, in the 27 marklands of Moydart and the 24 marklands of Arrasack.⁷

Of Castle Tirrim in Loch Moydart, the ancient seat of the Clanranald of Garmoran, said to have been built by Amie Macruari, the lady of John Lord of the Isles, about the middle of the fourteenth century, a writer of the seventeenth century says—'One castell it (Muideort) hath upon a rock in the sea, called Iland Tirrim. Ships may come to it. Upon the west and south syd of the castell is a hie mountain.'⁸ In 1372 or 1373 John of Yle granted to Reginald of Yle his son the castle of Elantirym along with the lands of Mudewort, and the grant was confirmed by King Robert II.⁹ In 1386 Reginald died in his own mansion of Castle Tirrim.¹⁰

In 1389 Godfrey of Isla lord of Wyst granted a charter at his castle of Elane Tyrim.¹ In 1392 King Robert III. confirmed the grant of the same castle and lands made by John of Yle to his son Reginald.² In 1531, 1532, and 1534, as we have seen, there appears in record John M'Alister of Casteltirrim or Elanterin (John Moydertach) the son of the deceased Alexander M'Alane of Casteltirrim.³ In 1545 a deed of Donald Lord of the Isles is dated at Elleytarne, apparently Castle Tirrim.⁴ The lands to which John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane as captain of Clanronald succeeded in 1627 were named from this castle the tenandry of Casteltirrim.⁵ The form of the castle is pentagonal, two sides being occupied by buildings, and the others formed by a high thick wall enclosing a large court.⁶

It was on the shores of Loch-na-nuagh below the house of Borrodale that Prince Charles Edward landed in 1745, and having crossed from Borrodale to the opposite coast, he walked by Kinlochmoydart to Lochshiel, and sailed up the lake to Glenfinan, where he was met by his friends, and where a monument was afterwards erected on the spot on which his standard was first unfurled.⁷

The latter, lying immediately north of the fresh-water lake called Loch Morar, is 'a very little country.' 'Upon the north syd of this Morrou there is a sea-loch (Loch Nevis) cumeth in betwixt both the countreys of Morrou and Knodort.'¹⁷ 'Knodort is very rough, full of mountaynis and glennis, with divers smal rivers therin. The march betwixt Knodort and Glenelg is the salt-water loch called Lochowrin, whilk is environed with black mountayns and ugie rugged steep rocks with plentie of wood on bath syds.'¹⁸ Loch Nevis which nearly divides the parish, and Loch Hourn which borders it on the north, render its high rocky coast of very considerable extent.

The church of Knoydart appears to have been included in a grant of the lands about the year 1372 by John of Yle to Reginald his son, and in confirmations of that grant by King Robert II. in 1373 and King Robert III. in 1392.¹ In 1506 King James IV. presented John Makmuriel chaplain to the rectory of the church of Saint Congan of Knokfurd, Arissak, and Morour (meaning probably the churches both of Knoydart and of Arasaig), vacant by the decease of John Dougalsoun.² In 1511 the same king presented Sir Alexander Wentoun to the rectory of Knodwart, which was then vacant by the decease of Sir John Makmury.³ In 1517 King James V. presented Sir Roderik Rannaldsoun chaplain to the rectory of the churches of Kilmolroy in Arisik and Kilquhoan in Knodort, vacant by the decease of Sir John Makmoris last rector and lawful possessor, or by the resignation of Sir Alexander Wentoun reputed rector, or by whatever other lawful means.⁴ In 1536 the same king presented Sir John Donaldsoun to the rectory and vicarage of Knodort called the church of Saint Coan, vacant by the decease of Sir Niel the last rector.⁵ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Earl Archibald the teinds of the bishop's quarter of the church of Kilehoan in Knoydart.⁶

The church stood on the north shore of Loch Nevis at the mouth of a small stream apparently named Kilehoan.⁷

The grant by King Robert Bruce to Roderic the son of Alan in 1309 of lands resigned by Cristian of Marr included three davachs of Knodworath.⁸ The lands of Cnudeworth were included also in the eight unciate of Garwmorwarne granted in 1343 by King David II. to Reginald the son of Roderic of the Isles.⁹ Its subsequent history as part of the lordship of Garmoran is the same as that of Arasaig and Moydart down almost to the end of the fifteenth century.¹⁰ In the year 1507 King James IV. gave Alexander Earl of Huntlie a commission under his privy seal to lease the lands of Knoydart in the lordship of the Isles to the tenants at the time for five years or less as he might think expedient, for 'male, gersum, and vthir dewiteis in the forme of the Kingis rentale.'¹¹ In 1517 John Duke of Albany Regent appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of Knoydart and other lands for three years.¹² In 1536 King James V. granted to Donald Camroun, the son and heir of Ewin Allanesoun captain of Clancamroun, the nonentry and other dues of the 60 pennylands of Knodort which belonged to the deceased John Makranald.¹³ In 1537 the same lands were appraised and sold to Donald Cameroun as the King's donatar for the sum of £700, the amount of the nonentry dues for the 70 years during which the lands were in the King's hands, the former lord of the lands to have regress to them on paying that sum within seven years.¹⁴ In 1538 the same king granted to Ewin Alansoun captain of Clancamroun the ward of the £10 lands of Knodort which belonged to his deceased son Donald Makewin.¹ In 1545 among the councillors of Donald Lord of the Isles there appears Anguse Rannaldsoun of Knwdeort.² In 1563 Donald Camroun was served heir to his father Donald Camroun of Lochzell in the 60 pennylands of Knodzert, of the old extent of 40 shillings.³ In 1607 Allan the son of Donald Camroun was served heir to his father in the same lands.⁴

In 1517 among the lands over which Colin Earl of Ergile was appointed lieutenant by the Regent John Duke of Albany were included Moroyrn which Angus Makangus Rewing had, and the other Moroyrn which Alester Makcane Macalester had, the latter being the 'very litle countrey' known as North Morar.⁵ In 1538 King James V. granted to Alexander Makane M'Alister of Glengarry the nonentry dues of the 12 marklands of Moror in the lordship of Gartmoror, which had been in the King's hands since the decease of Alexander's father John M'Alister.⁶ In 1539 the same Alexander resigned the same lands to King James V., who then granted them anew in liferent to him and Margaret Ylis his wife, and in heritage in the male line to their son Angus M'Alister, with remainder to the lawful heirs of Alexander; granting also to Angus for his good service the nonentry and other dues of the lands for past years, and all right belonging to the King by reason of forfeiture.⁷ In 1548 the liferent of the 12 marklands of Moror belonging to Alester M'Keane M'Alister of Glengawrie, and other lands belonging to him, to his son Angus, and to Ewin Donaldsoun nephew and heir of Ewen Alansoun of Lochelsch, and held of the Queen for service of ward and relief, were appraised and sold to James Grant of Freuchy, cessionar and assignee lawfully constituted by his tenants, for satisfaction of a 'spulzie' made by the holders of the lands and their accomplices.⁸ In 1554 Queen Mary granted to John Grant, the son and heir of the deceased James Grant of Fruchquhy, the relief of the same, and other lands which belonged to him as heir.⁹ In the following century the lands of North Morroure were held by the laird of Glengarry.¹⁰

Kilhammerin¹—Killchuimen, Kilchonan²—Kilchamerin, Heglis Kilchummerin³—Kilchuman in Glenelg.⁴ Deanery of Morvern. (Map, No. 46.)

THE old parishes of Glenelg and Knoydart are now united. The former seems to have included only the district known of old as Glenelg or Gleneglis.

‘Glenelg lyeth ovir aganis Knodeord, north from it, and looking west to the sea and the Ile of Skie, devyded therfrom be a small arme of the sea. The bay which runneth up from the sea far eastward devyding it from Knodeord is called Lochhuirne. It doth perteyne to Macloid of Harry. There is one church in this countrey called Killchuimen. A passage or ferry be sea ther is ovir to Slait in Skie. It is cald Kilraa. This countrey marcheth with Kintail. It is of the dioces of Argyle and sherifdom of Inverness.’⁵

Of the church of Glenelg there appears to be no notice previously to the Reformation. In 1585 William M’Cloyd was served heir to his father Tormund M’Cloyd of Herros in the advowson of the churches of the barony of Glenelg, which must have included the church of Kilchuimen.⁶ In 1626 John M’Cleod was served heir to his father Sir Roderick M’Cleod of Dunvegane in the advowson of the same churches, which with the barony of Glenelg were then included in the barony of Dunvegan.⁷ In 1671 William bishop of Argyle leased to Earl Archibald the teinds of the bishop’s quarter of the church of Kilchuman in Glenelg.⁸

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Coengen, seems to have stood on the right bank of a small stream falling into the bay of Glenelg near the village of Kirktown, where the modern church also is situated.⁹

Among the documents found in the King’s treasury at Edinburgh in 1282 there was one entitled ‘Charter of Glenhelk, which belonged to the King of Man.’¹⁰ In 1292 the lands of Glenelg appear to have been included in the sheriffdom of Skye erected by King John Balliol.¹¹ The same lands were between 1307 and 1314 granted by King Robert Bruce to Thomas Ranulph as a part of the earldom of Moray.¹²

About the year 1343 King David II. granted to Malcolm the son of Turmode Maclode two thirds of the tenement of Glenelg, namely, eight davachs and five pennylands, for the service of a ship of 26 oars when required.¹³ In 1449 and 1478 charters of John of Yle Lord of the Isles are witnessed by William M'Cloyd of Glenelg.¹ In 1517 Colin Earl of Ergile was appointed by the Regent John Duke of Albany lieutenant of various lands in the Highlands and Isles, including the lands of Glenylg.² In 1533 one third of the two thirds of the lands of Glenelg, which belonged in heritage to Alexander M'Cloyd of Dunvegan, were appraised to Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovate for the sum of £800 Scots recovered by him, and in defect of movable goods.³ In 1535 the other two thirds of the same lands were appraised in favour of the same Hugh for the sum of 2400 marks Scots, as part payment of £4085, 10s. 8d. contained in letters of the King, under reversion to Alexander Macclويد on payment of these sums and expenses within seven years.⁴ In 1536 King James V. granted to the same Hew Lord Fraser of Lovett the dues of the lands of Glenelg, which were in the King's hands by reason of the nonentry of the heir of the deceased William M'Cloid.⁵ In 1540 the lands and barony of Glenelg, with the castle, mills, and fishings, were resigned by Lord Fraser, and were then granted by King James V. to Alexander M'Cloyd of Dunvegane.⁶ In 1541 the same king granted to William Makeloid, the son and apparent heir of Alexander M'Cloid of Dunvegane, and to Agnes Fraser his wife, the lands of Arrocardich, Skallachzachbeg, Skallachzachmoir, Knokfyn, Pitalman, Estir Meill, Westir Meyll, Luzaw, Nachtane, Westir Corrare, and Inchkennell, in the lordship of Glenelg, which Alexander M'Cloid had resigned.⁷ In 1545 Alexander Macleod of Dunvegane was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles.⁸ In 1553 Queen Mary granted to her chancellor George Earl of Huntlie the ward and other dues of Glenelg, and of all the other lands that belonged to the deceased William M'Cloid of Dunvegane.⁹ In 1555 the Earl of Huntlie agreed to resign the grant to Archibald Earl of Argyle for the sum of 1200 marks, an agreement which appears never to have been fulfilled.¹⁰ In 1559 the same Earl of Huntlie resigned the grant to the Queen Regent Mary of Guise, who then sold to James Macdonald of Dunnyveg the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Mary M'Cloide (including Glenelg) the heiress of William M'Cloide.¹¹ In 1567 Archibald Earl of Argyle, who seems to have acquired the ward of Mary M'Cloide from James Macdonald, bound himself by a contract with her uncle Tormoid M'Cloid to procure her infestment in Glenelg and her other lands, if charters could be found, and, if not, to get a new infestment from the Queen, and on her infestment to infest Tormoid in the same; it being further arranged, that the Earl should provide Mary with a husband, that Tormoid should get himself infest in the lands, and then infest the Earl in the same, for which purpose the Earl should obtain the Queen's consent, and that Tormoid should pay to Mary and her future spouse £1000, or renounce all right to the lands.¹² In 1572 King James VI. granted to Mary M'Cloid a charter of the lands in question.¹³ In 1580 Mary M'Cloid, with the consent of her husband

Duncan Campbell heir apparent of Auchinbrek, resigned the lands in favour of her uncle Tormoid M'Clويد, who was then infest in the same.¹ In 1585 William M'Cloyd was served heir to his father Tormund M'Cloyd of Herres in the lands and barony of Glenelg, with the advowson of the churches and chapels, of the old extent of £32.² In 1626 John M'Cleod was served heir male to his father Sir Roderick M'Cleod of Dunvegane in the same lands and barony, then included in the barony of Dunvegane.³

In the year 1437 Hugh Fraser lord of Lovet, and lord of the third part of Glenelg, granted that third part to Sir Alexander of Ile Earl of Ross.⁴ In 1539 Hugh Lord Frasare of Lovet resigned all his lands, including the third of the lands of Glenelg, with the castles, mills, and fishings, to King James V., who granted the whole anew to him and his male heirs bearing the name and arms of Frasere, with remainder to his heirs whomsoever, and erected all the lands into the free barony of Lovet.⁵

In 1561 the 'Ards' of Glenelge were held by M'Clويد of Heries of the abbot of Iona.⁶

There is a village at Kirktown of Glenelg.⁷

In Glen Beg of Glenelg there are the remains of two of those interesting circular buildings called Picts' houses, one of which is considered the largest and best specimen in the Highlands.⁸ They are respectively 30 and 25 feet high, 30 and 54 feet in diameter inside, and 33 and 57 feet in diameter over walls.⁹

THIS parish, which seems to have originally included the whole island of Bute, has for a long period embraced only its southern portion, being separated from Rothesay towards the east by Loch Ascog and its stream, and towards the west by the Quien Loch and its stream, between the heads of which lochs the rest of the boundary is drawn unevenly and touches the south end of Loch Fad. Its surface, chiefly arable, presents a few hills of no great height, the highest being Suidhe Chatain (Saint Cathan's seat), 520 feet above the sea level. Its form is generally triangular, but being indented on the east by Kilchattan bay and on the west by the bay of Stravanan, it terminates in a sort of peninsula, the southern point of which is the Garroch Head, termed in Gaelic Ceannt Garbh (the stormy head), which is said to have given name to the parish.

The names of two saints of some note, Saint Cathan and his nephew Saint Blane, who are believed to have flourished about the middle of the sixth century, are connected in record with the island of Bute,¹⁰ but their connexion with Kingarth is chiefly commemorated by the existence of the churches founded by them or dedicated to them. In the year 1204 Alan the Steward the son of Walter granted to the monks of Paisley the church of Kengaif in the island of Bote, with the chapels and the whole parochia of the island, and all the land which Saint Blane is said to have of old enclosed from sea to sea by certain and apparent boundaries.¹¹ In 1489, on the 7th of February, the Lords of Council assigned to Master Harbert Maxwell parson of Kyngarth the fifth day of May following to prove that Robert Stewart provost of Glasgow and Alane Stewart his son 'spuilzeit and tuk a corspressand kow worth twa merkis and a mantill worth 20 schillingis of the froitis of the said kirk of Kyngarth,' ordaining him at the same time to have letters to summon his witnesses, and to summon Alane Stewart to hear them sworn, Robert Stewart and Master Harbert himself being summoned apud acta.¹² In 1497 Master Adam Cvlqhohne was rector of Kingarth.¹³ In 1509 the fruits of the church of Kingarth were annexed by King James IV. to the prebend of Suthwick erected by the Pope in the Chapel Royal at Stirling, reserving only a sufficient portion for the maintenance of the vicar pensioner of Kingarth.¹ In 1517, 1529, 1530, and 1531, charters are witnessed by Master Finlay Lenax or Levinax vicar of Kingart, who in 1541 appears as notary public.² In 1529 King James V. granted to Archibald Campbell, the son and heir of Colin Campbell Earl of Ergile, all the goods that belonged to the deceased Sir Patrick M'Connoquhy 'lady prest of the kirk of Kyngarth,' and which were escheat to the King 'because the said vmquhill Schir Patrick slew himself wilfully.'³ The church of Kingarth appears to be that which Archdeacon Monro in 1549 styles 'the kirk of Bride,' the southern of the two parish churches which he says then existed in Bute.⁴ In 1550 Michael Dysert parson of Kingarth granted a lease of the parsonage to Ninian Stewart of Largibrachton.⁵ In 1558 Sir George Clapperton, chancellor of the Chapel Royal of Stirling, presented Master John Carswell (afterwards bishop of the Isles) to the rectory of Southwick and Kingarth.⁶ In 1559 the same John Carsewell granted to Ninian Stewart of Kilcattan a lease of the teinds, glebe, and kirklands of Kingarth for three years, to be repeated during the lifetime of the lessor.⁷ In 1554 and 1556 Sir James M'Wartye or Makwarrathy was vicar of Kingert.⁸ In 1561 part of the teinds of the isle of Bute were drawn by the bishop of the Isles, in Kingarth apparently from the lands of Ascog, Ardinhoe, and Meikle Kilcattan.⁹ In 1572 Master Archibald Sinclair was presented (probably by King James VI.) to the chancellorship of the Chapel Royal, and to the parsonage and vicarage of Southwick and Kingarth.¹⁰ In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide at Antrum in Ireland, was served heir to Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten his uncle's son in certain lands, including a mark of the churchland of the rector of Kingarth with the principal mansion of Kilcatten.¹¹ In 1670 Margaret Grahame was served heir to her mother Margaret Carnegie the wife of William Grahame burgess of Edinburgh, and to Jonet Carnegie her maternal aunt, in various lands in Bute, and in the parsonage teinds of old called 'Bischope quarteris' of the parishes of Rothsay and Kingarthe, which belonged to John Stewart of Barshegray.¹²

The church of Saint Cathan, probably the original parish church, of which the ruins are still to be seen, stood near the centre of the parish about two miles north from the head of Kilchattan Bay.¹³ Near the centre of the southern peninsula the ruins of the church of Saint Blane stand on an artificial mound, whose level top is enclosed by a wall composed of large stones rudely piled together, and 500 feet in circumference.¹⁴ The whole of this space, which was used as a cemetery, is arched with masonry about two feet beneath the surface, and from it there runs a built passage, which seems to have been underground, to a smaller and lower enclosure of 124 feet in circumference, locally known as 'The Nunnery,' and apparently used as a burying ground for females.¹ The church is approached on the north by a flight of steps leading from a neighbouring wood, in which there is a circular building, sometimes styled 'the Devil's Cauldron,' composed of rude stones, 10 feet in height, 30 feet in diameter, with walls 9 feet thick, and an entrance 9 feet wide.² It stands at the base of a rocky ridge 50 feet high, from each end of which there runs out a wall supposed to have marked the limits of a sanctuary, and forming perhaps the remains of the metæ certæ et apparentes attributed to Saint Blane.³ The church and reputed nunnery are marked by Blaeu as Kilblain and Marg-na-heglis.⁴ On the east coast near Mount Stuart House there is a church at one time used as the parish church during the residence of the proprietor, and still in good repair.⁵ The present parish church, built in 1826, stands on a rising ground between the bays of Kilchatan and Stravanan, apparently on the site of one which in the last century was known as the 'Mid Kirk.'⁶

The lands of this parish, as part of the island of Bute, appear to have been successively held during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries by the Kings of Man, Somerled lord of Argyle and his descendants, and the Stewards of Scotland, by which last family they were possessed before the year 1204.⁷ After the treaty with Norway in 1266, by which the Western Isles were ceded to Scotland, the lands of Bute seem to have remained in the possession of the Stewarts, although still claimed by the descendants of Somerled.⁸ In 1292 they were included by King John Balliol in the sheriffdom of Kentyr.⁹ In 1314 they appear to have been held by Angus of Ile of the family of Somerled, who was in the army of King Robert Bruce at Bannockburn.¹⁰ Before the year 1325 the lands of Bute were probably resigned by Angus of Ile along with those of Kintyre, and granted by King Robert Bruce to Robert the son of Walter the Steward, afterwards King Robert II.¹¹ In 1449 and 1450 the fermes of the crown lands in Kingarth, as stated by the King's chamberlain Niel the son of James in money and grassum barley, were as follow—Garrach, first and second half, each 50s. and 4 bolls; Dungule, 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Lubasbeg, 16s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Lubasmore, 53s. 4d. and 4 bolls; Kelloup, £5; Bransare, £4, 13s. 4d. and 7 bolls; Langill, divided into four parts, each 40s. and 3 bolls; Killecatanbeg, £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Killecatanmor, three parts, each 40s. and 3 bolls; Bruchag, 40s. and 3 bolls; Scoulogmore, £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Kervycroy, £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Stramanane, first half 40s. and 3 bolls, second half 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Dalachane (or Galachane), 40s. and 3 bolls; Ardnachow, 40s.; Ambrysmore, 40s. and 3 bolls; Ambrysbeg, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Brigadill, two parts, each 50s. and 4 bolls.¹² In 1506 King James IV., on the narrative that the tenants of his lands of Bute had been of old infeft in them by his progenitors, and with the advice of the Lords of Council, granted the lands in heritage to the tenants by whom they were then occupied, to be held of the King as Steward of Scotland for payment of the fermes and dues as stated in the King's rental.¹ In 1534 King James V. granted to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda Montgomery his wife the lands and lordship of Bute within the parishes of Kingarth and Rothissay, with the marts, victual, and all other dues, for yearly payment of £150, 6s. 8d., 11 chalders 15 bolls of bear, 10 chalders oats, 1 chalders 8 bolls of meal, and 41 $\frac{3}{4}$ marts, in augmentation of the rental yearly by 40d., the price of the boll of meal to be 6s. 8d., of the boll of oats 3s. 4d., and of a mart 20s.²

From 1445 to 1450 inclusive the crown lands of Scoulogmore, rented yearly, as above stated, at £3, 6s. 8d. and five bolls of bear, were held by Cristin Leche, but the fermes, as well as one mart due yearly from the lands, were by the gift of King James II. remitted to Cristin during all that period.³ The lands were afterwards granted in heritage to Gilbert Cunningburgh.⁴ In 1506 William Cunningburgh was served heir to his father Gilbert in the 16 marklands of Seoulag.⁵ In 1527 Archibald Cunningburgh was served heir to his father William in the same lands, including the 4 marklands of Kerenevin, the 4 marklands of Keremorane, the 4 marklands of Mydscowlok, and the 4 marklands of Nether Scowlok.⁶ In 1555 William Cunnyburgh was served heir to his father Archibald Cunnyburgh of Skethok in the same 16 marklands, of the old extent of £10, 3s. 4d.⁷ In 1563 they were inherited by Thomas Cunningburgh the brother of William.⁸

In 1445 the 'mailmartis' of the lands of Kellisloupe, amounting to 11 $\frac{1}{2}$, were granted by King James II. to the constable of Bute.⁹ In 1449 and 1450 Kelloup, as before stated, was rented at £5.¹⁰ In 1506 King James IV. granted the lands of Kelspokis in heritage to John Stewart.¹¹ In 1558 John Stewart was served heir to his father Robert Stewart of Cerrecroy in the lands of Kilspokis, of the old extent of £5.¹² In 1560 John Stewart of Southbar and Kelspokes alienated the £5 lands of Over and Nether Kelspokes to Robert Stewart the second son of James Stewart sheriff of Bute, to whom Queen Mary in 1563 granted a crown charter of the lands.¹³ In 1622 Alexander Stewart of Kelspokis was served heir in the same lands to his grandfather Alexander, and in 1624 in certain other lands to his father James Stewart of Kelspoks.¹⁴

In 1457 John Glass had seisin of the mill of Ambrismore.¹⁵ In 1489 John Glass (apparently the son of the former) was seised in the same mill.¹⁶ In 1521 Robert Glass was served heir to his father John in the same mill, and in that year he granted it with its lands and aqueduct to his kinsman John Glass of Arnhow.¹ In 1531 he confirmed or renewed the grant, which was then confirmed also by King James V.² In 1546 Robert Glass granted the mill in reversion to the sheriff of Bute.³ In 1564 William Glass received seisin of the same mill.⁴

Ambrismore and Ambrisbeg, respectively rented from the crown at 40s. and 3 bolls bear, and 33s. and 2 bolls bear, were among the lands granted in 1498 to David Lyndesay.⁵ In 1506 King James IV. granted in heritage to Ewin Makconochy the lands of Almorusbeg, and to Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute the lands of Almorusbeg.⁶ In 1529 the same Ninian granted the 40 shillinglands of Ambrismore in liferent to his wife Elizabeth Blair, and in heritage to her son Robert Stewart; and in the same year King James V. confirmed the grant.⁷ There appear in record, in 1541 Finlay M'Conquy of Ambrisbeg, in 1541 and 1547 Robert Stewart of Amrosmoir, in 1554 William Stewart of Ambrismore, and in 1563 James the son of William Stewart of Ambrismor.⁸

In 1474 King James III. granted to John (James?) Stewart sheriff of Bute, an acre of land in Kilcattan with the privilege of a mill, to be held in feu for yearly payment of one mark.⁹ In 1490 Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute was served heir to his father James in the mill of Kilcattan.¹⁰ In 1539 James Stewart sheriff of Bute was served heir to his father Ninian in the same mill.¹¹ Among a number of lands resigned in 1561 by Sir James Stewart sheriff of Bute, and granted by Queen Mary to him in liferent, and to his son and heir apparent John Stewart in heritage, there was included an acre of land of Kilcattenmoir, with the mill, mill houses, 'lie dammys' and aqueducts of the same.¹² In 1566 the same Sir James Stewart resigned the mill of Kilcattan with its astricted miltures, which were then granted by Queen Mary to (apparently) the same John Stewart (his son).¹³ In 1590 the mill and the lands contained in the same grant appear to have been resigned by John Stewart sheriff of Bute to whom they were then granted anew by King James VI.¹⁴ The present mill of Kilcattan occupies the site of the mill built in 1474.¹⁵

Of the crown lands of Kilchattan, divided, as we have seen, into Killecatanbeg and Killecatanmor, the latter being subdivided into three parts, the grant of 1498 to David Lyndesay included the lands of Kelcattenebeg.¹⁶ In 1506 King James IV. granted the lands of Kilquhattanbeg and Kilquhattanmore in heritage to James Stewart, by whom they were at the time held as tenant.¹⁷ There appear in record, in 1517 and 1533 James Stewart of Kilchattane,¹⁸ and in 1541 John Stewart of Kilcattane or Kilcattanemoir.¹⁹ In 1548 or 1549 John Stewart of Kilchattan sold to his kinsman Robert Stewart, the son of Ninian Stewart of Kildawanane, with reservation of the liferent to Ninian, the 8 marklands of Kilehattanmoir and Kilehattanbeg, to be held of Queen Mary as Stewardess of Scotland, for yearly payment of 8 marks in silver, 8 bolls bear, 8 bolls oats, and 1 $\frac{6}{10}$ 'lardnar martis,' allowing 16s. of the 8 marks in lieu of the oats and parts of a mart.¹ In 1549 the sale was followed by a crown charter from the Queen.² In 1556 and 1557 there appear in record Ninian Stewart of Kilcattan, and James the son of John Stewart in Litill Kilchattanc.³ In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide, was served heir to his uncle's son Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten in the 5 marklands of Meikle Kilkatten, the 3 marklands of Litle Kilkatten, and other lands, together with the principal mansion of Kilcatten.⁴

In 1478 William of Cuningburgh (probably of Scoulog) having for some time held the crown lands of Stramanane by falsely representing to the commissioners of King James III. that he held them by the consent and goodwill of Fynlaw M'Alane the former tenant, and having when sued before the Lords of Council acknowledged his deception, the Lords ordained that he should give up the lands and pay 10s. to Finlaw as expenses, and that the lands should be leased to Finlaw at the King's pleasure.⁵ In 1506, when King James IV. granted his lands of Bute in heritage to the occupiers, the half of Stramanane was granted to John Makwreedy, and the other half to Finlay Makallan.⁶ In 1546 there appears in record Gilnef Makallane of Stramannanc.⁷ In 1622 Patrick M'Varthie, portioner of Stravanan, was served heir to his father John M'Varthie in part of the lands of Stravanan, of the old extent of 20 shillings.⁸

In 1491 Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute gave seisin to Alexander Bannatyne in the lands of Kerrylamont.⁹ Lubasbeg and Lubasmore, or Litill and Mekill Lowpas, rented in 1449 respectively at 16s. and 2 bolls bear, and 53s. 4d. and 4 bolls bear, and Kerelawmond, together of the extent of £6, 16s. 8d., were in 1499 granted by King James IV. to Henry Lech.¹⁰ In 1506 the same lands, extending to 10 marks and 40 pence of ferme, 10 bolls 1 firlot of bear, 2 marts, and 5 bolls 1 firlot of oats, were resigned by Thomas Leich, and granted by King James IV. for life to John Leich his son.¹¹ In the same year that king granted in heritage the lands of Kerelawmond to Alexander Banachtyne the elder, and the lands of Lowpasbeg and Lowpasmore to Alexander Banachtyne the younger.¹² In 1515 John Bannatyne was served heir to his father Alexander in the lands of Kerrylamont.¹³ In 1532 Archibald Bannatyne was served heir in the same lands to his father John.¹⁴ In 1538 and 1552 charters are witnessed by Archibald Bannatyne of Kerelawmond.¹⁵ In 1567 John Bannatyne was served heir in the same lands to his father Archibald.¹⁶

The crown lands of Langill were, as above stated, divided into four parts, each rented at 40s. and 3 bolls bear, and apparently distinguished as Langill, Langillculcathlane, Langilculereich, and Langilwenag or Langilbrunag. In 1498 King James IV. confirmed a grant of £20 lands in Bute, made in his minority to David Lyndesay the nephew of Alexander Lyndesay of Dunrod, and Eufame Stewart his wife, including the lands of Langmylculcathlane, with power to sublet.¹ In 1506 the same king in granting his lands of Bute in heritage to the tenants granted Langilculrathla to Donald Makwrerdy; the half of Langilculereich to Alexander Glas, and the other half to Finlay Makwrerdy; and the half of Langilwenach to Donald Makalester, and the other half to John Makintailzour.² In 1525 Gilchrist Macvararthis was served heir to his father Finlay in half of the lands of Langilculcluth.³ In 1541 a charter is witnessed by Findlay Moir M'Vararty of Largull.⁴ In 1546 Ninian Makgiluevis Talzour of Langulbrunag granted to Allan Makallane 20 shillings of the lands of Langulbrunag, for yearly payment of 20s. to the Queen as Stewardess of Scotland, allowing 3 shillings of that sum for oats and parts of a 'lardynart-mart,' 6 firloths oats, 6 firloths bear, and three tenths of a 'lardynart-mart.'⁵ In 1552 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1551 John Kelso granted the land of Langilquochag to Alexander Stuart.⁷ In 1554 Robert M'Allane was served heir to his father Allane M'Allane of Langilwinox in the lands of Langilwunnan of the old extent of 20 shillings.⁸ In 1555 or previously Donald M'Allaster of Langilbunnage sold to John M'Wyrartie and Katherine Glas his wife the south part of the lands of Langilbunnage, of the old extent of 20 shillings.⁹ In 1556 a charter is witnessed by John Frasel of Layngill.¹⁰ In 1623 John M'Wrathie of Langilcultelachlane was served heir to his grandfather John in the lands of Langilculclachlane, of the old extent of 40s.¹¹ In 1624 Alexander Stewart was served heir to his father James Stewart or Kelspoks in the 20 shillinglands of Langilmilgay.¹² In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide at Antrum in Ireland, was served heir to his uncle's son Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten in the 3 marklands of Langlelorid, and the 20 shillinglands of Langilkechag.¹³

The grant by King James IV. to David Lyndesay in 1498 included the lands of Keretonlea.¹⁴ In 1506 the same king granted Kerytonla in heritage to Malcolm Makfersoun the tenant at the time.¹⁵ In 1625 John M'Fersoun of Keretonley was served heir to his father John M'Fersoun in the lands of Keretonley, of the old extent of 40 shillings.¹⁶

The crown lands of Garrach, divided in the rental of 1449 into two parts rented each at 50 shillings and 4 bolls of bear, and in 1498 granted to David Lyndesay as 'Le Gariteis,' were subsequently known as South and North Garochty.¹⁷ By the grant of King James IV. in 1506

the lands of North Garachach were given in heritage to Gilnew Mackaw, and the lands of South Garachach equally divided between Gilpatrick and John Makkaw.¹ In 1510 King James IV. granted the lands of South Garochty in feu to Patrick M'Caw, who in 1515 appears in record as Patrik Makcaw of Garachty.² In the latter year Gilchrist Makcaw of Garachty granted to his kinsman Alexander Makcaw 25 shillinglands of South Garachty, for yearly payment of 23s. 3d. in silver, and for two bolls of barley, 7 firloths oats, and 5s. 7½d. for his share of a mart, to be paid at the terms at which the other inhabitants of Bute were bound to pay their victual and marts.³ In 1529 the grant was confirmed by King James V.⁴ In 1533 a charter is witnessed by Alexander of Garachty and John Makaw of Garachty.⁵ In 1560 Gilchrist M'Caw of Garachty granted to Alexander M'Caw the 25 shillinglands of North Garachty.⁶ In 1566 Gilbert M'Caw granted to Gilneff M'Caw 8s. 4d. of South Garachty.⁷ In 1568 Gilbert M'Caw granted 12s. 6d. of South Garachty to Mary M'Caw the daughter of Gilneff M'Caw, and to her heirs by Alexander M'Caw Gilbert's son.⁸

In 1506 King James IV. granted the three marklands of Ardnehow for life to Eufame Kelso the widow of Angus Glass, and in heritage to John Glas the younger.⁹ In 1510, 1531, 1541, and 1552 John Glas of Ardinquo or Ardinhow, apparently the same person, appears in various records.¹⁰

The two parts of Brigadill, rented from the crown in 1449 each at 50s. and 4 bolls of bear, were known as Brigadilknok and Brigadillowin. In 1506 King James IV. granted in heritage to John Glas the half of Brigadilknok, to George Kelso a third of Brigadill, and to Donald Makwreedy the other two-thirds of the same.¹¹ In 1517 Donald Makwarrarty of Birgadulknok granted to James Stewart of Kilchatane 25 shillinglands (the half) of Birgadulknok, for yearly payment to the King as Steward of Scotland of 25 shillings in silver, 2 bolls of bear, 6 firloths of oats, and a fourteenth and a fortieth part of a mart.¹² In 1534 King James V. confirmed the grant.¹³ In 1541 Robert Stewart of Drumely exchanged with John Kelso 20 shillinglands of Drumely (in Rothesay) for 25 shillinglands of Birgadillovyn, and in 1542 King James V. confirmed the exchange.¹⁴ In 1547 Alexander Glas sold to Robert Stewart of Ammerismore 25 shillinglands of Brigydulcrok, to be held of Queen Mary as Stewardess of Scotland, who thereupon granted Robert Stewart a crown charter of the lands.¹⁵ In 1552 John Stewart of Briggadilknok and Achecunterie sold to Donald Makgellespik Maknele the eastern side of Briggadilknok, of the old extent of 25 shillings, and in 1553 Queen Mary gave Donald a charter of the lands.¹⁶ In

1557 the same Donald sold the lands to Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten.¹ In 1563 Queen Mary confirmed the grant of the 25 shillinglands of the north side of Birgadilchrif (Brigadilknok) made in 1517 by Donald Makweraith (Makwarrarty) to James Stewart the son of William Stewart of Ambrismoir, and the grant of the 25 shillinglands of the south side of Brigadilchrif made in 1541 by John Kelso to Robert Stewart of Drumcly.² In 1637 Ninian Stewart of Askog was served heir to his father John Stewart of Askog in the 25 shillinglands of Birgadilknok.³

Galachane, rented in 1449 at 40s. and 3 bolls of bear, was in 1506 divided by the grant of King James IV. between Robert Kynnungburgh and John Douglas, the north half being granted in heritage to the former, and the south half to the latter.⁴ In 1515 Robert Cunyburgh of Gallachane granted to William Cunyburgh his 20 shillinglands of Gallochane, to be held of the King as Steward of Scotland for yearly payment of 18s. 6d. in silver, 6 firlots of bear, 6 firlots of oats, and 4s. 6d. as his portion of one mart.⁵ In 1533 King James V. confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1538 Archibald Cunyburte of Gallachane sold to Duncan Makwerarty, his wife Katherine Levenax, and their son Finlay Makwerarty, the same 20 shillinglands, to be held of the King as Steward of Scotland, for yearly payment of 20 shillings in silver, 6 firlots of bear, 6 firlots of oats, and 6 twentieths of a 'lardynar-mart,' allowing three of the 20 shillings for the oats and parts of a mart.⁷ In 1539 King James V. gave Finlay Makwerarty a charter of the lands.⁸ In 1564 or previously Finlay M'Werarthie of Galachane granted the north side of Galachane, of the old extent of 20 shillings, to Ninian Stewart of Kildavanane and Elizabeth Lyndesay his wife, and in 1564 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.⁹

In 1506 King James IV. granted the half of the crown lands of Dungalld in heritage to Donald Makenoch, and the other half to Patrick Makece (or Maktee).¹⁰ In 1533 Gilpatrick Makcoe (or Maktee) of Dwngull granted to William Hyndman a markland (one-half) of Dwngull, to be held of the King as Steward for the usual fermes.¹¹ In 1534 the grant was confirmed by King James V.¹² In 1564 or previously William Hyndman of Duzull granted his markland of the eastern side of Duzull to Ninian Stewart of Kildavanane and Elizabeth Lyndesay his wife, and in 1564 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.¹³ In 1602 John M'Conoche was served heir to his father Allan M'Conoche of Dunnezeill in the lands of Dunnezeill (the western half) of the old extent of 13s. 4d.¹⁴ In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide, was served heir to his uncle's son Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten in the two marklands of Dungalld (the whole property).¹⁵

The lands of Bransare, paying of yearly rent to the crown £4, 13s. 4d. and 7 bolls of bear, were in 1506 given in heritage by King James IV. to Gilcrist Makwreedy.¹ In 1551 Gilcrist M'Wartie of Bransar sold two marklands of Bransar to John M'Conquhy the son of Alexander M'Conquhy, who in 1552 had from Queen Mary a charter of the same.²

Bruchag, or Broehog, paying yearly to the crown 40s. and 3 bolls of bear, was by the grant of King James IV. in 1506 divided between Walter Banachtyne and Gilcrist Makwreedy, to each of whom a half was given in heritage.³ In 1507 Finlay MacGilchrist MacVurarthis received seisin of the half of Bruchag.⁴ In 1520 Thomas MacVurarthis was seised in the same lands.⁵ In 1525 Gilcrist MacVurarthis was served heir in the same to Finlay M'Vurarthis.⁶ In 1600 John M'Verrathie was served heir to his grandfather Gilchrist in the south half of Bruchok, of the old extent of 20 shillings.⁷

Kervyeroy, or Kerycroy, rented in 1449 at £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls of bear, was in 1506 granted in heritage by King James IV. to John Stewart, who in 1517 appears as John Stewart of Kerecroy along with James Stewart his son.⁸ In 1533 there appear in record Robert Stewart of Killecroy and his brother James, and in 1558 Robert Stewart of Cerrecroy and his son John.⁹ In 1544 Robert Stewart of Kirricroy granted to his son Archibald the five marklands of Kirricroy.¹⁰ In 1622 Robert Stewart of Killecroy was served heir to his grandfather Archibald in the lands of Killecroy of the old extent of 5 marks.¹¹

In 1506 King James IV. granted in heritage the half of the lands of Kerymanach to Finlay Makwreedy, and the other half to Finlay Makilmon.¹² In the same year he granted the lands of Kerymanch in heritage to Duncan Makconochy.¹³ In 1517 Duncan Makeconquhy of Keremanach granted to Alexander the son of James Stewart of Kilchatane the two marklands of Keremanach, to be held of the King as Steward, for yearly payment of 26s. 8d., 2 bolls bear, 2 bolls oats, and one fourteenth and one twentieth of a mart.¹⁴ In 1534 King James V. confirmed the grant.¹⁵ In 1520 Thomas Macvurarthis received seisin of half the lands of Kirrymenoch.¹⁶ In 1525 Gilchrist Macvurarthis was served heir to Finlay Macvurarthis in the same lands.¹⁷ In 1540 John Baan Macvurarthis was seised in the half of Kirrymenoch, and in 1555 Finlay Macvurarthis received seisin of the same.¹⁸ In 1600 John M'Verrathie was served heir to his grandfather Gilchrist M'Verrathie in the south half of Kiremanoche, of the old extent of 20 shillings.¹⁹ In 1608 Finlay M'Ilmune was served heir to his grandfather Finlay M'Ilmune of Keremanache in the lands (apparently the north half) of Keremanoch, also of the old extent of 20 shillings.²⁰

In 1480 Robert Stewart was ordered by the Lords of Council to pay to the lady of Lus the mails and marts of the lands of Kincarth in Bute due at the term of the Whitsunday before last, amounting to the sum of £12, 15s. and 9 marts, for which, failing payment, his lands and goods were to be distrained.¹ In 1515, 1530, 1533, 1546, 1547, and 1552, charters are dated by various persons at Kingarth.²

In 1503 Ninian Cochrane of Ovirlee sold to Hugh Lord Montgumry the north half of the lands of Ascok, and in 1504 King James IV. confirmed the sale by a charter under his great seal.³ In 1510 the same king granted to John Glas of Ardinquo four marklands of Ascok, which belonged in heritage to John Glas of Ascok, and which he had resigned.⁴ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to Archibald M'Lauchlane, the son of Lauchlane M'Lauchlane of that ilk and of Katherine Tait his wife, with remainder to Lauchlane and his heirs, the £3 lands of Askok, which were resigned by Archibald the son of the deceased Lauchlane M'Clane of Dovard.⁵ In 1554 the £3 lands of Askok were resigned by Archibald M'Lauchlane of Askok (apparently the son of Lauchlane), and were then granted by Queen Mary to Lauchlane M'Lauchlane and his wife Katherine Tait.⁶ In 1564 Archibald M'Lauchlane was served heir to his father Lauchlane in the same lands of Ascoks, of the old extent of £3.⁷ In the same year William Glass received seisin of the £1 land of Ascog and the mill of Ambrismore.⁸ In 1601 John Glass appears as heir to his uncle Robert Glas of Askoge.⁹ In 1637 Ninian Stewart of Askog was served heir to his father John Stewart of Askog in the 40 shillinglands of Over Ascog and the 20 shillinglands of Nether Ascog with the mill and the lake called the Loch of Ascog, together of the old extent of £6 and 4 marks.¹⁰

In 1506 the crown lands of Cowleing or Culavin were granted in heritage by King James IV., the half to John Makconochy, and the half to Alexander Makwreedy.¹¹ In 1541 a charter is witnessed by Donald M'Vararty and John M'Conquy of Culewyne.¹² In 1552 John Makconquhy of Cullavin, with the consent of Finlay Makconquhy his eldest son and apparent heir, granted to his second son Donald, with remainder to Patrick his brother, his lands of Cullavin of the old extent of 20 shillings.¹³ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.¹⁴ The charter of John Makconquhy is witnessed by Donald Makweraith of Cullavin.¹⁵

There are villages at Kerrycroy and Kilchatan Bay.¹⁶

THIS parish includes the northern and larger portion of the island of Bute, together with the island of Inchmarnoch on its western coast. It includes also Loch Fad, and is bounded on the south chiefly by Loch Quien and Loch Ascog. The interior is hilly, rising from 430 to 875 feet above the sea. The coast, partly rock and partly gravel, is about 30 miles in extent, and is indented on the west by the bays of Saint Ninian and Ettrick, and on the east coast by Kames bay.

In 1321 Alan bishop of the Isles, and in 1323 his successor Gilbert M'Cleland, were buried in the church of the Virgin Mary of Rothersay.¹² Between the years 1397 and 1406 James Stewart, the grandson of King Robert III. granted the advowson of the kirk of Rosay to the monks of Kilwinning.¹³ In 1429 the parish church of Bute was the place appointed for payment of the reddendo for the lands of Kyldauanan then granted by King James IV. to John Lech.¹⁴ In 1447 Sir Nigel was vicar of Bute.¹⁵ In 1501 a charter is witnessed by Sir Andrew Banachtin vicar of the church of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Rothisay.¹⁶ In the same year, on the erection of the college of the Chapel Royal at Stirling by Pope Alexander VI. at the request of King James IV., the parish church of Butt was made one of the prebends.¹⁷ The erection was confirmed in 1502 by the same pope, and in 1504 by Pope Julius II.¹⁸ In 1502 Master Robert Abernethy rector of that church, and official of the Isles of But and Arran, in his consistory (loco consistoriali) within the church, heard a petition from the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, and granted them under his official seal a transumpt of their title deeds to certain property within the burgh of Rosay.¹ In 1512 King James IV. presented Master Thomas Diksoun dean of Lestalrig to the rectory of Bute, which was vacant by the decease of Master Robert Abirnethy.² In 1548 Master Andrew Hamiltoun had from Queen Mary two presentations to the vicarage of Rothesay, one dated on the 7th of April as successor to the deceased Sir Walter Turnbull, the other dated on the 27th of the same month as successor to the deceased Sir Alexander Bannauchtyne (perhaps intended for Sir Andrew) last legal possessor of the vicarage, the right of collation to which, the see of the Isles being vacant, belonged to the vicar-general of the Isles and the chapter of Ycomekill.³ In 1561 the teinds of Bute belonged to the bishop of the Isles.⁴ In 1567 William Barbour, one of the prebendaries of Restalrig, in name of the other prebendaries, granted to Dugal Campbell of Auchinbreck and his wife a 19 years' lease of half the parsonage of the kirk of Rothesay, which belonged to Restalrig.⁵ In 1587 King James VI. granted to David Cumming, master of the singing school of Edinburgh, the prebend called Bute tertius, which was vacant by the death of William Barbour, and by the insufficiency of John Barbour who then claimed right to it.⁶ In 1590 the prebendaries of Restalrig leased the half of the parsonage of Rothesay for 15 years to FyNEGELLA Macdonald the widow of Dugall Campbell of Auchinbrek, and the wife of John Stewart sheriff of Bute.⁷ In the same year the patronage of the parish of Rothesay was granted by King James VI. to John Stewart sheriff of Bute.⁸ In 1592 David Cumming, and Patrick Dunbar prebendary of Bute quintus, obtained a decret before the Lords Commissaries at Edinburgh against John Barber, finding that the pursuers were duly provided to the prebends of Bute tertius and Bute quintus, and ordaining him to pay the rents to them.⁹ At a subsequent date Master Patrick M'Queen minister at Rothesay granted to John Stewart sheriff of Bute and to Jean Blair his wife a 5 years' lease, to be renewed during the lessor's lifetime, of the bishop's quarter of the parsonage of Rothesay which was vacant by the decease of John Campbell bishop of the Isles, and of part of the parsonage called Bute tertius which was vacant by the decease of David Cumming one of the prebendaries of Restalrig, and of the other teinds which belonged to him.¹⁰ In 1593 an act of the Scotch parliament, recalling certain infeftments, excepted among others the patronage of the parsonage and vicarage of Rothesay granted to John Stewart sheriff of Bute.¹¹ In 1594 Master Robert Lindsay, prebendary of Bute primo, and sacristan (of Restalrig?), leased the prebend to John Stewart the younger son of John Stewart sheriff of Bute.¹² In the same year he resigned the prebend to the sheriff.¹³ On the restoration of the chapter of the Isles in 1615 by King James VI. the parson of Rothesay was appointed subdean.¹⁴ In 1670 Margaret Grahame was served heir to her mother Margaret Carnegie the wife of William Grahame burgess of Edinburgh, and to Jonet Carnegie her maternal aunt, in various lands and in the parsonage teinds of old called 'Bischope quarteris' of the parishes of Rothsay and Kingarthe.¹

The original church of Rothesay appears to have been dedicated to Saint Brieuc or Brioc.² The church of Saint Mary of Rothesay, supposed to have been built in the thirteenth century, and after the Reformation used as the cathedral church of the Isles, stood about a mile south from the burgh of Rothesay.³ The choir, still standing, is 26 feet 10 inches in length by 17 feet 1 inch in breadth within walls, and the nave, removed in 1692, was 81 feet by 22 within walls.⁴ In 1692 a church was built immediately on the north of the nave, and in 1695 it was taken down, and another, the present parish church, built in its stead.⁵ In 1800 a church was built within the town of Rothesay, to which in 1834 parish bounds were assigned.⁶

In the parish there are the ruins or vestiges of twelve small chapels.⁷

The chapel of Saint Marnoch on the island of Inchmarnoch is described by Fordun and other chroniclers as a cell of monks.⁸ It is apparently styled by Blaeu 'Kildauanach,' a name which seems to bear that meaning.⁹

In the royal castle of Rothesay there was a chapel dedicated to Saint Michael, and served by two chaplains, who at one time, if not permanently, officiated also in the royal chapel of Saint Bride within the burgh.¹⁰ From 1445 to 1450 there was paid yearly from the fermes of Bute to two chaplains performing divine service in these chapels the sum of £12, 5s. 4d.¹¹ In 1489 King James IV. granted to Hugh Lord Montgumry for life power to lease the lands of Bute, for yearly payment of certain sums, out of which he was bound to pay yearly £12, 5s. 'to the two usual chaplains.'¹² In 1527 King James V. presented Master Finlay Scott or Levenax (apparently the vicar of Kingarthe) to the chaplainry of £6 of the chapel of Saint Michael in the castle of Rothissay.¹³ In 1549 James Stewart sheriff of Bute, on receiving from Queen Mary a grant of the chamberlainship of the lordship, became bound to pay yearly £6, 13s. 4d. to the two chaplains officiating in the castle of Rothissa.¹⁴

The royal chapel of Saint Bride in the burgh of Rothesay was, as we have seen, occasionally served by the chaplains of the castle.¹⁵ It had also a regular chaplain of its own. In 1445 among the expenses of the chamberlain of Bute there occurs the sum of £10 delivered to ² The Old Statistical Account says that the old name of the church was Killebhruic. An historical memoir prefixed to the Bute Inventory says that the tutelary saint of Rothesay was Saint Brook. Brux day fair is still held in the town (see post). The saint, whose name is thus variously given, appears to be Saint Brieuc, who is said to have been born in Britain in the fifth or sixth century, to have followed Saint Germanus into France, and there to have lived and died in a monastery which he founded in the town of Saint Brieux, to which he gave name. He was commemorated in various parts of Scotland on the first of May. See Acta Sanctorum, Maii, Tom. i. Butler's Lives of the Saints, vol. v. p. 12.

Alexander of Narne the comptroller by liverance of Sir Nigel chaplain of the chapel of Saint Bride in Bute, who was also vicar of the parish.¹ In 1445 there was remitted to the same Sir Nigel, chaplain of the chapel of Saint Bride near the castle of Bute, one boll of barley (apparently due for the lands which he farmed), because he had transacted business for the King (James II.) at various times, and in 1446 and 1447 the same deduction was allowed him for transacting the King's business between Bute and Striueline.² In 1527 King James V. presented Sir William Bannachtyne chaplain to the chaplainry of Saint Brydis Chapell in the town of Rothissay, vacant by the resignation of Sir Johne Finlayson.³ In 1538 a sale of land in the parish of Kingarth is witnessed by Master Patrick Lorane chaplain of the royal chapel of Saint Bride.⁴ In 1543 Queen Mary presented Master Andrew Hammyltoun to the same chaplainry of Saint Bride in the burgh of Rothissay, vacant by the decease of Sir William Bannachtyne last chaplain and possessor.⁵ In 1550 the same Queen presented Sir James M'Morane to the same chaplainry, vacant by the resignation of Master Andrew Hammiltoun.⁶

There was a chapel dedicated to Saint Columba, but there is no mention of its site. In 1516 King James V. granted to Sir Patrick Makbard the chaplainry of Saint Columba in the isle of Bute, with liberty to discharge the due burdens and services either personally or by substitute.⁷

Archdeacon Monro in 1549 mentions a chapel situated under the castle of Kames.⁸ Blaeu places a chapel at Chappelrow a little to the north of the town of Rothesay.⁹

There were chapels also at Kilmory, Saint Ninian's Point, Nether Ardroscaedale, Saint Calmag (at which is a great stone cross), Kildavanan, and Kilmichael.¹⁰

Bute (in Norse Bot) which seems at all periods to have been included in that division of the Western Isles called Sudreyjar or the Southern Isles, and which our Scotch chroniclers affirm was first named Rothsay from a descendant of Simon Brek, and afterwards Bothe from the botha of Saint Brandan, was in the eleventh and twelfth centuries undoubtedly held by a race of petty sovereigns styled Kings of Man, first under the Kings of Scotland, and then of the Kings of Norway.¹¹ Walter, the first Steward of Scotland, who died in 1093, is said to have obtained Bute from King Malcolm II.¹² In the year 1098 it was with the rest of the Isles ceded by Maelkolf King of Scotland to Magnus Berfaet King of Norway.¹³ About the year 1156 the South Isles appear to have been ceded by Godred King of Man to his brother-in-law Somerled lord of Argyle.¹⁴ After the death of Somerled in 1164 they were divided between his sons, of whom

Angus the youngest seems to have (at least nominally) held Bute from that time till his death in 1210.¹ Between these dates the Steward of Scotland (Walter, or his son Alan) either shared or disputed with Angus the possession of the island.² After the year 1210 it was granted by Reginald the brother of Angus to Ruari or Roderick the son of Reginald, whose descendants were styled Macruari.³ Before the year 1249 King Alexander II. sent two bishops to Haco King of Norway to inquire whether he would yield the territories in the Hebrides unjustly wrested by Magnus Berfaet from King Malcolm.⁴ King Haco maintained that Malcolm had no right of sovereignty in these islands when Magnus took them from King Godred, and he refused even to sell them.⁵ The negotiation was afterwards renewed, but without success, and in 1249 King Alexander collected forces for the purpose of wresting the Isles from Haco, but died during his expedition on the island of Kerrera.⁶ In 1261 and 1262 King Alexander III. attempted to treat with Haco for the Hebrides, but failed.⁷ These negotiations, the attempts of the Scots to seize the Isles, and their expulsion of Roderick from Bute, are said to have led in 1263 to the celebrated expedition of Haco King of Norway, to whom the Isles were still subject.⁸ In the course of that expedition 'Rudri a Scotchman' (the same Roderick), who claimed Bute as his inheritance, with his two brothers, swore fealty to King Haco, who thereupon restored him to his possessions.⁹ During the same expedition attempts at a treaty were again made, but without success, and Haco, though defeated at Largs, is said to have regained all the provinces which Magnus Berfaet had acquired.¹⁰ In 1266 all the islands south and west of the Great Sea (Magni Haff), except Orkney and Shetland, were ceded by Magnus King of Norway to King Alexander III.¹¹ Subsequently Bute appears to have been held of the crown by Angus of Islay the son of Dovenald, otherwise known as Angus Oig.¹² Among the documents found in the King's treasury at Edinburgh in 1282 there was one entitled 'A letter of the King of Norway concerning the isle of Bot and certain other islands which belonged to the King of Man,' having reference doubtless to a much earlier period.¹³ Between 1283 and 1295 charters of Angus the son of Douenald are witnessed by Ferchard the son of Nigel of Buyt.¹⁴ In 1292 the island of Boot was included by King John Balliol in the sheriffdom of Kentyr.¹⁵ In 1296 King Edward I. ordered the men of James the Steward of Scotland in Both, Cowal, and Rotheseay, to assist with their galleys and other vessels Alexander Earl of Meneteth as warden of the castles of these lands.¹⁶ In 1312 the treaty of 1266 was ratified by an agreement between King Robert Bruce and Haco King of Norway.¹⁷ In 1314 Bute was held of King Robert Bruce by Angus of Ile.¹⁸ It was afterwards held by Robert the

Steward, the son of Walter and the nephew of King Robert Bruce, having been probably granted to him by that King between 1314 and 1325 along with the lands of Kintyre.¹ In 1334, when the Steward and Dougal Campbel of Lochow made a descent on Cowaill and took the castle of Dounhone, the Brandani of Bute, the Steward's nativi, hastened to his assistance, and being encountered in a narrow pass by Alan of Lyle the sheriff of Bute (apparently in the interest of Edward Balliol) attacked him and his men with stones, slew him, and presented his head to the sheriff.² They also took prisoner John Gilbertson captain of the castle of Bute, and for these services they obtained from the Steward at their own request freedom from the payment of multure.³ In 1366 the lands of the Steward in Bote, Cogwall, Knapdale, Arane, and the two Combrays, were of the old extent of £1000.⁴ Between the years 1390 and 1406 John Stewart of Bute appears in record.⁵ In 1400 King Robert III. confirmed to John the Steward of Bute the sheriffship of Bute and Arran, which had been granted to him by King Robert II.⁶ From 1445 to 1450 the whole amount of ferme paid to the crown by its tenants in Bute, as stated by the chamberlain Nigel the son of James (Niel Jamieson), was yearly £141, 18s. 6d., for every 5s. of which sum every 5 marklands, except the burgh of Rothesay, paid yearly one mart.⁷ For the same period the grassum bear of the crown lands was yearly 11 chalders 2 bolls at £4 per chalder, and the 'mailmartis' yearly 40½.⁸ In 1449 and 1450 the fermes and grassum bear of the crown lands in the parish of Rothesay were stated by the same chamberlain individually as follows—Bernaul, 46s. 8d. and 2 bolls 2 firlots; Kerveeresach, 46s. 8d. and 3 bolls 2 firlots; Barone, £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Barmor, 40s. and 3 bolls; Cuvén, 33s. 4d. and 4 bolls; Scalpsay, 46s. 8d. and 4 bolls; Ardsalpsay, the same; Nether Kylmore, £4, 13s. 4d. and 8 bolls; Over Killemer, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls 2 firlots; Kilconlik, 40s. and 3 bolls; Blardyve, 33s. 4d.; Askachragan, 26s. 8d.; Achynhervy, 40s. and 3 bolls; Downanlont, 4 parts, each 40s. and 3 bolls; Largabrachtane, 53s. 4d. and 4 bolls; Knersa, 40s. and 3 bolls; Lapennycalc, 20s. and 1 boll 2 firlots; Scarale, 40s. and 3 bolls; Glacknabechy, 46s. 8d. and 3 bolls 2 firlots; Aldton, 40s. and 3 bolls; Killenaychale, £3, 6s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Schenlont, 53s. 4d. and 4 bolls; Cloynschamrag, 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Stuk, 53s. 4d. and 4 bolls; Awchylwik, 40s. and 3 bolls; Cawnach, 4 parts, each 25s., and for the whole 7 bolls and 2 firlots; Nether Kylmore, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls 2 firlots; the third part of Nether Kylmore, 40s.; the burgh (of Rothesay), £6.⁹ In 1452 King James II. in payment of a sum of 800 marks lent him by the canons of Glasgow out of the offerings made in their church in the time of indulgences, granted them the whole crown rents of Bute and other lands, with the customs of several burghs, and the power of leasing the lands, levying the rents, and other privileges.¹⁰ About the year 1455 an expedition in favour of the forfeited Earl of Douglas, despatched by John Lord of the Isles against the coast of Ayr, and headed by his kinsman Donald Balloch of Islay, exacted from the isle of Bute a tribute of 100 bolls of meal, 100 marts, and 100 marks of silver.¹ In 1469 the lordship of Bute with the castle of Rothesay was by act of parliament annexed to the patrimony of the Prince of Scotland.² In 1473 King James III. appointed William Haket of Beilsice King's clerk of Justiciary within the bounds of Bute and other lands.³ In 1475, when John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles was cited before parliament, he was accused among other things of depredations committed on the lands of Bute and Arane, and of the slaughter of the King's lieges inhabiting the same.⁴ In 1489 King James IV. granted to Hugh Lord Montgumry for life the power of leasing the lands and lordship of Bute, and of letting them to subtenants, for yearly payment of £141, 18s. 6d., of £5 as the fogage of Bute, of 41½ marts, of 11 chalders 15 bolls bear, and of 1 chalders 8 bolls of meal.⁵ In the same year he granted him also for life the office of bailie of the island of Bute, and the office of justiciar within the lordships of Bute and Aran, for the purpose of holding one justiciary circuit therein, with power to appoint substitutes.⁶ In 1506 the same King commissioned David bishop of Ergile, John bishop of the Isles, Archibald Earl of Ergile, Henry abbot of Jedworth, Sir Duncan Campbele of Glenvrquha, Sir John Striueling of Cragbernard, James Redehouch comptroller, and Sir Duncan Forestar of Gardon, or any three of them, the comptroller being one, to let the lands of the lordship of Bute to the tenants or to others for three or four years.⁷ Subsequently in the same year, on the narrative that his tenants in Bute had been of old infested in the lands by his progenitors, King James IV. with the advice of the Lords of Council, granted to them and their heirs male the lands which they respectively occupied, to be held of the King as Steward of Scotland, for payment of the usual pecuniary fermes, marts, barley, and oats, with other services.⁸ In 1512 the inhabitants of Bute and Cumray and the town of Rosay had from King James IV. a remission for all past crimes except the four pleas of the crown.⁹ In 1515 John Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland granted to Colin Earl of Ergile, Sir John Campbel his brother, Archibald Campbel of Skipinche, John Lawmont of Inverin, John Makeane of Ardnamurehane, and all their friends and others inhabiting their lands, and the lands under the government of the Earl in Ergile, Lorne, Knapdale, Kyntire, and Cowale, a remission for all crimes except treason, and in particular for their ravages committed on the lordship of Bute, the castle of Rothesay, and the tenants and inhabitants of the same.¹⁰ In 1534 King James V. granted to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda Montgomery his wife the lands and lordship of Bute within the parishes of Kingarth and Rothissay, with the marts, victual, and other dues, for yearly payment of £150, 6s. 8d.,

11 chalders 15 bolls bear, 10 chalders oats, 1 chalders 8 bolls meal, and 41½ marts, in augmentation of his rental by 40d. yearly, the price of the boll of meal and bear to be 6s. 8d., of the boll of oats 3s. 4d., and of a mart 23s.¹ In 1538 King James V. granted for five years to Niniane Stewart sheriff of Bute, James Stewart his son and apparent heir, and his other son Archibald Stewart, all the dues of the lands, lordship, and forest of Bute, they paying 6s. 8d. for every boll of bear, price of the chalders £5, 6s. 8d., 40 pence for each boll of oats, price of the chalders 53s. 4d., and for each mart according to use and wont.² In 1543 Queen Mary granted the same dues for nine years to Archibald Earl of Ergile, for payment yearly of 8s. 4d. for each boll of bear, of 4s. 4d. for each boll of oats, and of 24s. for every mart as was wont to be paid.³ In 1544 Matthew Earl of Lennox with an English army occupied and laid waste the isle of Bute.⁴ In 1546 Master Hugh Guthre (whose designation is not recorded) had a remission from Queen Mary for his treasonable assistance given to 'our auld enemies of Inghland' in burning the islands of Bute and Arran.⁵ In 1545 or 1546 Queen Mary appointed Archibald Earl of Ergile justiciar of Bute for a year.⁶ In 1547 the same queen granted to the same earl for seven years all the dues of the lands, lordship, and forest of Bute, for payment yearly of 8s. 4d. for every boll of bear, price of the chalders 10 marks, of 4s. 4d. for every boll of oats, price of the chalders £3, 10s. 4d., and of 20 shillings for each of 41½ marts.⁷ In 1549 James Stewart sheriff of Bute was summoned before parliament for certain crimes of treason, and for assisting the English in 1544 in spoiling and burning Bute, Arran, and Dunoon.⁸ In 1549 Queen Mary, for the sum of 300 marks paid as composition to William commendator of Culros her comptroller, granted for 19 years to James Stewart sheriff of Bute the office of chamberlain of the lands, lordship, mill, and forest of Bute, for yearly payment of the fermes and dues specified in the Queen's rental and in a charter granted to the tenants by King James V., namely, for every boll of 11 chalders 15 bolls of bear, and of 1 chalders 8 bolls of meal, 8s. 4d.; for every boll of 10 chalders of oats 4s.; for each of 41½ marts 24s.; and 3 marks in augmentation of the rental — the following salaries and dues to be yearly deducted by the chamberlain and his heirs in their accounts, namely, £6, 13s. 4d. to be paid to two chaplains officiating in the castle of Rothissa; £16, 13s. 4d. of annual rent due to the chamberlain; £18 due to the tenants and inhabitants; £26, 13s. 4d. to the chamberlain as keeper of the castle of Rothissa; and £5 in money and 15 bolls of bear to himself and his heirs as their fee for the office of chamberlain.⁹ In 1554 Queen Mary a second time granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile for seven years the fermes and dues of the lands, lordship, and forest of Bute, for the same yearly payment as in 1547.¹⁰ In 1558 she renewed the grant.¹¹ In 1561 the same queen granted to James Stewart sheriff of Bute in liferent, and to his son and apparent heir John Stewart in heritage, 25 marks Scots yearly from the Queen's fermes of Bute, and the office of sheriff of Bute, Arrane, and the Cumrayis, all which James had resigned, for payment of the usual dues and services.¹ In 1562 Queen Mary granted the fermes and dues of the lands, lordship, and forest of Bute to Archibald Earl of Ergile, the son of the former Earl Archibald.² In 1566 Henry and Mary, King and Queen of Scots, appointed the same earl chamberlain and chancellor of the same lordship and forest.³ In 1637 Ninian Stewart of Askog was served heir to his father John Stewart of Askog in the half of the £5 lands of Ballinkaillie and Blakhous of old called the £5 lands of the Forrest in Bute.⁴ In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide at Antrum in Ireland, was served heir in the half of the same lands to his uncle's son Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten.⁵

In the year 1429 King James I. granted to John Lech the son of the deceased Gilzequhome all the lands of Kildauanan in the sheriffdom of Bute, which belonged by heritage to the same Gilzequhome, for a yearly reddendo of two pennies or a pair of gloves within the parish church of Bute.⁶ In 1466 or earlier Gilchrist Leiche lord of Kilmavanane granted to his son and heir David Leiche the lands of Kilmavanane, except two acres arable called the Cloure opposite the Searellis, in the lordship of Kilmavanane and sheriffdom of Bute.⁷ In 1466 King James III. confirmed the grant.⁸ In 1530 there appears in record Alexander Stewart of Kildovanan.⁹ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to Elizabeth Tait the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Kildavanark in the lordship of Buyt, which had been in the Queen's hands since the decease of Niniane Stewart sheriff of Bute.¹⁰ In the same and in the following year there appear in record Ninian Stewart of Kildawanane and his sons Robert and Alexander,¹¹ and in 1556, 1557, and 1564 Ninian Stewart of Kildavanane.¹² In 1664 Master James Stewart, the son of John Stewart of Ballinstraide, was served heir to his uncle's son Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten in the three marklands of Kildauanan.¹³

The office of crowner of Bute from the beginning of the fourteenth century or earlier was held in heritage by a family named Jamieson or Neilson, and latterly in connection with the lands of Over Kilmory and others.¹⁴ It is probable that Nigel the son of James, who, as we have seen appears as chamberlain of Bute from 1445 to 1450, although not styled crowner, was the representative of the family at that period.¹⁵ In the account of the chamberlain of Bute for the years 1449 and 1450, above cited, the yearly ferme of the crown lands of Over Killemer is stated at 33s. 4d.¹⁶ In 1501 Fergus the son of James (Jamieson) held the office of crowner of

Bute.¹ In 1506 King James IV. granted in heritage to Robert Jamesoun the lands of Kilmore-Chapeltoun, Over Kilmore, and Kereferne, which he then occupied.² In 1534 King James V. confirmed to Robert Neilsoun (probably the same as Robert Jamesoun) the office of crowner of the island and sheriffdom of Bute, which had heritably belonged to the family for upwards of 200 years.³ In 1618 Francis Jamesoun was served heir to his great-great-grandfather Robert Jamesoun in the office of crowner of the island, lands, and sheriffdom of Buitt.⁴ In the same year the same Francis as crowner of Bute was served heir to his father James Jamesoun in the 5 marklands of Kilmorie-moir, 2½ marklands of Keirfairne, and 2½ marklands of Kilmorie-Chappeltoun.⁵

The lands of Nether Kilmore, rented in 1449 and 1450, as we have seen, at £4, 18s. 4d. (or perhaps more correctly at 33s. 4d.) were in 1506 granted by King James IV. to Robert Stewart the occupier in heritage.⁶ In 1531 Robert Stewart granted to his brother Ninian 31 shillinglands and a pennyland of Nether Kilmory, for payment of the ferme fixed by the King's charter to the islanders of Bute, and in the same year King James V. confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1541 Ninian Stewart granted to his kinsman William Stewart the same lands of Nethir Kilmoir, in exchange for the 4 marklands of Largabrechtane, for payment of the ferme fixed by the King's charter to the tenants of Bute.⁸ In the same year King James V. confirmed the grant.⁹ In 1546 William Stewart of Cogoch, the son of the deceased James Stewart of Gilquhattane, with the consent of Jonet Cunnyburgh his wife, sold to Ninian Stewart of Largabrechtane 31 shillinglands and 1½ pennyland of Nethir Kilmory, of which in 1547 Queen Mary granted Ninian a charter.¹⁰ In 1557 the same queen granted to Donald M'Gillespek M'Neill and Margaret Stewart his wife a crown charter of the lands of Nethir Kilmorie, of the old extent of 2½ marks, which had been sold to them by Ninian Stewart of Kilcatten.¹¹

In 1419 Robert Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland granted to John Stewart sheriff of Bute, and to Janet Semple his wife, the daughter of John Semple of Elliotstoun, the lands of Barrone (now known as Upper Barrone and Barrone Park), to be held ward of the Prince and Steward of Scotland.¹² Of the five marklands of Barrone the fourth part was between 1445 and 1450 held by John Scott the King's ranger.¹³ During that period there was remitted to him yearly out of the fermes of the fourth part of Barrone the sum of 16s. 8d. as part payment of his fee as ranger, and 23s. 4d. were paid to him by the chamberlain in full complement of that fee.¹⁴ Of the bear due as grassum from the lands which he held there were remitted to the same John

Scott yearly during the same period, by the special favour of the King (James II.) and the consideration of the auditors, 1 boll and 1 firloft; and of the marts exigible from the lands yearly one mart.¹ Laurone (perhaps Barrone) was in 1498 included by King James IV. in a confirmation of a grant of £20 lands in Bute made in his minority to David Lyndesay, the nephew of Alexander Lyndesay of Dunrod, and to Eufame Stewart his wife.² In 1506, when that King granted the crown lands of Bute in heritage to the tenants, of the 5 marklands of Barrone he gave to Gilerist Makwerich 22s. 3d., to Gilerist Makwerich the younger 11s. 5d., to Archibald Stewart 16s. 8d., and to Gilerist Makconoch 16s. 8d.³ In 1513 Gilerist Macmorich of Beallelon granted to James Stewart the 22 shillinglands and 2 $\frac{2}{3}$ pennylands of Beallelon lying among the 5 marklands of Berroun in the lordship of Bute, to be held of the King and his successors as Stewards of Scotland for yearly payment of 18s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ firlofts bear, 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ firlofts oats, and 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ of a 'lardnar-mart,' at the terms observed by the other inhabitants.⁴ In 1519 Gilerist Macmorich of Achamor granted to James Stewart the 11 shillinglands and 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ pennyland of Achamor, lying among the lands of Berroun, to be held of the King as Steward for payment yearly of 9s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ firlofts of bear, 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ firlofts of oats, and $\frac{1}{6}$ of a 'lardnar-mart' at the terms observed in Bute.⁵ In 1533 both these grants were confirmed by King James V.⁶ In 1554 John Stewart of Ballelone and Achemore sold to James Stewart sheriff of Bute and Arane the lands of Ballelone and Achemore in Bute of the old extent of 33s. 4d., and the sale was followed in the same year by a crown charter of Queen Mary.⁷ In 1561 James Stewart resigned the lands of Barrone, which Queen Mary then granted to him in liferent, and to his son and heir John Stewart in heritage.⁸

In 1400 King James III. granted to John the Steward of Bute the lands of Ardmaleish and Grenan, with £10 yearly out of the feu duties of Bute.⁹ In 1490 Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute was served heir to his father James in the same lands together with the sheriffship.¹⁰ In 1539 James Stewart sheriff of Bute was served heir to his father Ninian in the same lands and office.¹¹ In 1561 Sir James Stewart sheriff of Bute (apparently the James of 1539) resigned the lands of Ardmoleis and Grenane, with the mill, multures, and usual 'knaifschippis,' which Queen Mary then granted anew to him in liferent, and to his son and heir apparent John Stewart in heritage.¹² In 1566 the sheriff again resigned the same lands and mill, with the whole astricted multures, which were then granted (or confirmed) by Queen Mary to the same John Stewart his son.¹³ In 1590 the same lands were resigned by John Stewart sheriff of Bute, to whom they were then granted anew by King James VI. along with the patronage of the parish of Rothesay.¹⁴

The 40 shillinglands of Scarale, or the Skarellis, appear in record, as we have seen, in 1449, 1450, and 1466.¹ In 1506 King James IV. granted them in heritage to Richard Banachtyne who then held them as tenant.² In 1530 Alexander Bannachtyne of Scarell, with the consent of his 'wife apparent' Isobel Spens, granted the 40 shillinglands of Scarell to John Bannachtyne of Stwk, for yearly payment to the King as Steward of 40s. in silver, 3 bolls of bear, and 9s. as his part of one mart.³ In 1534 the grant was confirmed by King James V.⁴ In 1541 a charter is witnessed by John Bannachtyne of Scarall.⁵ In 1605 John Bannatyne was served heir to his great-grandfather William Bannatyne of Drummalunt in the lands of Skarrell of the old extent of 40s.⁶

In 1475 King James III., as tutor and governor of his firstborn son James Duke of Roithzay, Earl of Carric, Lord of Cunnynghame, and Steward of Scotland, granted to Robert of Bannachtyne the son of Ninian Bannachtyne of Camys, with remainder in succession to his brothers Alexander and Walter and their heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever bearing his surname and arms, and with reservation of the liferent to Ninian, and of the terce to his wife if he should marry, the lands of Atyngerar (Achynhervy?), Ardrossigelle (Ardroscadale), Cuarfanenbeg called le Maise, Cuarfanen, Camys (Easter Kames), and Kylmacolmoc, in the sheriffdom of Bute.⁷ In 1491, Niniane Bannachtyne of Camys having sued his mother-in-law Agnes Necouwale (or M'Connell) for having taken from him 'ane pailzoun, a brew caldrone of xvij gallonis, ane maskinfat, and ane clareschaw, and certane stuff and insicht of househald,' belonging to him as heir to his deceased father Thomlyne of Bannachtyne, and for refusing to uphold her third of a mill, and for the loss and expenses which he had thereby sustained, and the defendant not having appeared in court, the Lords of Council assigned to Niniane the 15th day of June following to prove his charge and the value of the goods and expenses.⁸ In the same year the Lords decreed that Ninian Bannatyn had unlawfully occupied two marklands of the Camys, 20 shillinglands lying in the burgh of Rosay, and a half markland in the burgh of Ranfrew, which belonged to Agnes of the Ilis, the wife of the deceased Thomas Bannathyn, as part of her terce of her deceased husband's lands, and ordained that Niniane should refund to her the value of the profits of the lands during his occupancy, that value to be proved before the sheriff, and that she should enjoy the lands as her terce during her lifetime.⁹ The lords further ordained that Agnes should pay the expenses of the nine witnesses summoned by her, namely, 6s. 8d. to each of the nine, Cristy Lawmond, Alexander M'Bair, Gilnef M'Ewin, Duncan Barone, Johne Dominik M'Bair, Donald Johnstone Sinkatyr, Gillaspay M'Nele, Morice M'Nele, and Johne Gillaspay, 'becaus the said witnes was producit be the said Agnes, and gart thaim travell, and hir summondis was vnderstand of nane avale.'¹⁰ The same Agnes was further sentenced to pay to Niniane of Bannathyn, the son and heir of Thomas, 'for a palzeoun five crouns, for a maskyn fat 24s., for a clerschew 20s., for her third part of the biging of a myln twa merkis,' all which goods belonged to Ninian as heir, and of which mill, built by Ninian, Agnes had the third part, and also to pay 6s. 8d. as the expenses of three witnesses, Findlaw M'Nele, Symon M'Wat, and Gillain M'Ewin.¹ By the charter of King James IV. in 1506 one third of Achintarve was given in heritage to James Stewart, and the other two thirds were granted to Archibald Makgillespy.² In 1530 and 1532 Ninian Bannachtyne of Kamys appears in record.³ In 1552 John Stewart of Briggadilknok and Achecunterie sold to Donald Makgillespik Maknele his land of Achecunterie of the old extent of one mark, and in 1553 Queen Mary gave to Donald a crown charter of it.⁴ In 1623 Hector Bannatyne was served heir to his father Ninian Bannatyne fear of Cames in the 12 marklands of Ardroskitillis, 8 marklands of Atrix, 5 marklands of Glenmoiris, 6 marklands of Kilbryd, 7½ marklands of Kilmacolmak, and 3 marklands of Kames, together of the extent of £55, 6s. 8d.⁵

In 1506 or 1507 King James IV. as Steward of Scotland granted anew in heritage to Donald Spens the 9 marklands of Camys (Wester Kames), and the 9 marklands of Kerslak (or Knerslak), which Donald had resigned.⁶ In 1616 there appears in record Ninian Spence of Wester Camys, the heir of his great-grandfather's father (abarus) Donald Spens of Wester Camys.⁷ In 1670 Margaret Grahame was served heir to her mother Margaret Carnegie the wife of William Grahame burghess of Edinburgh, and to her maternal aunt Jonet Carnegie, in the £12 lands of Kneslages, Edinmoir, Auchiltir, and Wester Kames with the mill, which belonged to Hector Bellenden of Kames.⁸

The 40 shillinglands of Knersa (or Knaslagwerardy), entered in the accounts of the chamberlain of Bute in 1449 and 1450,⁹ do not appear to have been included in any of the above grants, unless in that of 1670. In 1506 King James IV. granted the lands of Knaslagwerardy in heritage to John Stewart who then held them as tenant.¹⁰ In 1552 Alexander Stewart was served heir to his father John in the lands of Kneslag.¹¹ In 1658 Sir James Stewart of Kirkcounie, sheriff of Bute, was served heir to his father Sir John Stewart of Kirkcounie, also sheriff of Bute, in the 40 shillinglands of Kneslagurathie.¹²

Schenlont, or Schalewont, of the extent of 4 marklands, was in 1496 leased by King James IV. to Alexander Bannachten the son of the deceased William Bannachten.¹³ In 1506 the same king granted the lands of Schanland to Donald Banachtyne who then held them as tenant.¹⁴

In 1498 Dunaanland-Makgelmichaul, one of the four divisions of the crown lands of Downanlont, was included in the £20 lands in Bute granted by King James IV. to David Lyndesay and Eufame his wife.¹⁵ In 1506 King James IV. granted in heritage to John Makwerich the half of thence to the west by the kyles and straits between Arran and Kintyre, Argyle, and Bute, and Loch Riddan, to Clockstane, comprehending therein all the Kyles of Bute, and Lochstryne on the north; and from the foresaid Clockstane to the foresaid island of Pladda, comprehending therein the station of Cumray, the station of Fairleg, the station of Halligo, and the island in Roraine otherwise called Hemolathe Dan.¹ In 1449 and 1450, as above stated, the royal fermes of the burgh (which was exempted from the payment of marts) amounted yearly to £6.² In 1491 twenty shillinglands in the burgh of Rosay formed a part of the terce of Agnes M'Connell the widow of Thomas Bannathyn.³ In 1501 Fergus Jamieson crowner of But resigned in the hands of Finlay MacChaell, one of the bailies of the burgh of Rothissay, two shillings of yearly revenue arising from two roods of land lying within the burgh and its freedom, between the lands of Morice M'Erwin on the south side and the lands of the lords of Kelisland on the north side; after which the said Findlay gave seisin in the same two roods to the extent of two shillings yearly to William Browne subprior of the convent of the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, to be held for their prayers and suffrages for ever.⁴ In 1502 Duncan Mackellar, as procurator for Donald Macclowe, resigned in the hands of Morice M'Erwin one of the bailies an annual revenue of two shillings arising from a tenement lying within the freedom of the burgh of Rothissay, between the lands of Robert Steward on the east side and the common street on the west side; after which the said Morice gave seisin of the revenue to the same William Browne, to be held by the Friars on the same terms as the former.⁵ To these two deeds of seisin the seal of the burgh was appended.⁶ In 1503 Archibald Macgilchallum resigned in the hands of Finlay Macfall bailie a yearly revenue of 12 pence arising from his house or tenement lying in the burgh of Rosay 'between the common vennel on both sides of the same;' after which the bailie gave seisin of the same by hesp and stapill to the same William Browne subprior of the convent of the Friars Preachers.⁷ The seisin is witnessed by John Gray, John Makvicar, and Malcolm Makearmych, bailies, and by Eduard Fergusson sergeant.⁸ In 1503 it was ordained by the Scottish parliament that the 'air' of Bute and Arane, Knapdale, Kynntyr, and Mekill Cumray, should be held at Ar or at Rothissay as the King pleased.⁹ In 1511, 1513, 1517, 1519, 1529, 1533, 1541, and 1554, charters are given by various persons at Rothissay, and in 1529 and 1533 two of these charters are respectively witnessed by Donald Spens and Archibald Gray burgesses.¹⁰ In 1512 the inhabitants of the town of Rosay, along with those of Bute and Cumray, had a remission from the Regent John Duke of Albany for all past crimes except the four points of the crown.¹ In 1527 William Master of Ruthven and five others had a remission from King James V. for burning the 'town of Bute.'² In 1584 King James VI. confirmed the burgh charter granted in 1400 by King Robert III.³ By these charters power is given to hold a weekly market and two yearly fairs, one on the 22d of July, and the other on the 23d of October, each to last for the space of eight days.⁴ There are three yearly fairs held in Rothesay, namely, on the first Wednesday of May, the third Wednesday of July, and the last Wednesday of October, the first of which is styled Saint Brux day or Brux day fair.⁵

The mill of Rothesay, locally situated within the burgh, was originally called 'the King's mill,' and was the mill to which the lands of Bute were generally thirled.⁷ Before the year 1480 the mill of Bute belonged to James Stewart.⁸ In that year James Stewart had deceased, and, the yearly rent and ferme of the mill being claimed on the one hand by John Lord Dernele on the ground that the King had granted him the ward of James Stewart's heir, and on the other hand by Marion the widow of the deceased Colin Campbell on the ground of an express agreement between her and Lord Dernele, the Lords of Council assigned to Marion the 14th day of March following to prove that agreement.⁹ In 1522, at the instance of King James V. and his farmers of the mill of Rothesay, the Lords of the Session gave decret against the inhabitants of Rothesay and of the King's lands of Bute for the one and twentieth peck as abstracted multures.¹⁰ In 1527 King James V. granted to Patrick Colquhone and Elizabeth Colvile his wife the mill of Bute, with the lands and astricted multure, for yearly payment of 13 marks, in augmentation of the King's rental by one mark.¹¹ In 1535 Patrick Culquhone of Pemonthe and Elizabeth Colvile his wife sold to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda Montgomery his wife, and their heirs male, with remainder to Colin's heirs whomsoever, the same mill and multure, to be held of the King for the same yearly payment of 13 marks, the sale being followed by a crown charter from King James V.¹² In 1549 the mill of Bute was included in a 19 years' lease of the chamberlainship of Bute granted by Queen Mary to James Stewart sheriff of Bute.¹³ In 1552 the same queen confirmed the mill and multure to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglas and Matilda Montgomery his wife.¹⁴ In 1563 Ardkinglas granted the mill to Donald Campbell his brother's son.¹⁵ In 1565 the same queen granted to Archibald Stewart for five years her mill of the town of Rothissay, with the mill-land and other pertinents, for yearly payment of £10, 12s. 4d. Scots.¹⁶ In 1587 the mill was resigned by John Stewart sheriff of Bute, and granted to him anew by King James VI.¹⁷ In 1616, by a contract between John

Stewart sheriff of Bute and Hector Bannatyne of Kaimes, the sheriff agreed that the tenants of Drumachloy, Achawillig, Kildavanan, Lenihall, Glecknabae, Lenihalline, Kilmichell, Kneslagvoraty, and Kneslagloan, then thirled to the mill of Rothesay, should go to the mill of Atrick during Hector's lifetime—Hector ratified the thirlage of these lands to that mill—and both parties agreed to appoint by mutual consent a miller, who should be accountable to the sheriff for the multures of the lands in question, and to Kaimes for the multures of his own lands.¹ In 1658 Sir James Stewart of Kirkcoun sheriff of Bute was served heir to Sir John his father in the mill of Rothesay in the burgh of Rothesay, with the multures of the burgh, of the extent of 24 bolls of oatmeal with 3s. 4d. in augmentation.²

The castle of Rothesay, lying on the north side of the town, consists of a circular court with four round towers of great strength and of unknown antiquity, and of a more modern building erected on the north east between two of the towers by King Robert II. or III., the whole surrounded with a moat.³ It appears in record in the year 1228, when Olave prince of Skye, accompanied by Haco Ospac a Norwegian prince, came from Norway to Bute, and laid siege to the principal fortress of the island, where Haco Ospac was killed by a stone thrown from the wall.⁴ In 1263, during the expedition of King Haco, the Norwegians reduced a fortress in Bute, which, though not named, was most probably the castle of Rothesay.⁵ In 1296 Alexander Earl of Meneth was warden of the castle of Rothesay under King Edward I., who ordered the men of James the Steward in Both and Rothesay to assist him with their galleys and other vessels.⁶ In 1313 the castle was taken by King Robert Bruce.⁷ In 1334 the keys of the castle were given up to Edward Balliol at Renfrew, but soon afterwards, while Dougal Campbel of Lochow and Robert the Steward of Scotland were in Cowall, the Steward's men, styled Brandani, took prisoner John Gilbertson captain of the castle, who on being presented to the Steward did homage and surrendered it.⁸ In 1367 Robert the Steward dates a charter at the castle of Rothesay.⁹ In 1398 David, the eldest son of King Robert III., was created Duke of Rothesay, a title which is still held under another patent by the Prince of Wales.¹⁰ In 1404 several charters of King Robert III. are given at his castle of Rothesay or Rosay.¹¹ He died there in 1406.¹² About the same period the castle is mentioned by the Scotch chroniclers as 'a beautiful and impregnable royal castle.'¹³ From 1445 to 1450 the castle of Bute was the occasional residence of King James II., and the usual residence of the constable of Bute.¹⁴ In 1445 the expenses claimed by Niel Jamieson chamberlain of Bute, as disbursed by him from the crown rents of the island, and favour, 1 mart; in 1446 to Alexander Narn, for the expenses of the King's household, of marts received from the husbandmen of Bute, 31; in 1447 to the same Alexander for the same purpose, 33; in 1448 to Robert of Levingston comptroller, for the same purpose, 39; in 1449 to the same Robert, for the King's expenses, 40; and in 1450 to Alexander Naper, for the same purpose, 37 marts; the other entries being in general the same as in 1445, with the sole difference that in 1447 there were allowed to the chamberlain $7\frac{1}{2}$ marts as the complement of the fee due to the constable of Bute for 5 years.¹ In 1469 the castle of Rothesay was annexed to the patrimony of the Prince of Scotland in connexion with the lordship of Bute.² In 1475 among the crimes charged against John Lord of the Isles, who in that year was attainted, was included the treasonable besieging of the castle of Roithissay.³ In 1489 King James IV. granted to Hugh Lord Montgumry for life the keeping of the castle of Roithissay in the lordship of Bute, with power to make substitutes, and assigned him as his salary 40 marks yearly.⁴ In 1498 the same king appointed Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute captain and warden of the castle of Roithissay, with power to make constables, and granted him 40 marks yearly from the fermes of the lordship of Bute, with all the other profits belonging to the castle.⁵ In 1499 the same king dates a charter at Roithissay in Bute.⁶ In 1513 King James V. issued money to Lord Evandale for repairing the castle of Rothesay for the King's residence, and after the death of that king in 1542 Lord Evandale was accused of not accounting for 3000 crowns 'destined to reform the castle and place of Rothesay.'⁷ In 1515 Colin Earl of Ergile and others had a remission from the Regent John Duke of Albany for all crimes except treason, and specially their ravages committed on the lordship of Bute, the castle of Rothesay, and the tenants and inhabitants of the same.⁸ In 1527 William Master of Ruthwen and five others had a remission from King James V. for treasonably besieging the castle of Roithissay and burning the town of Bute.⁹ In 1549, when Queen Mary granted the chamberlainship of Bute to the sheriff James Stewart, she authorised him and his heirs to make certain yearly deductions from their account, among which were, as before stated, £6, 13s. 4d. to be paid to the two chaplains in the castle of Rothissa, and £26, 13s. 4d. to themselves as keepers of the castle.¹⁰ In 1561 James Stewart resigned 'the keeping and captanrie (prefectura et custodia)' of the castle, and Queen Mary then granted it to him anew in liferent, and to his son and apparent heir John Stewart in heritage, with the usual yearly revenue of 40 marks from the lands and fermes of Bute for the keeping of the castle and the salaries of the keepers.¹¹ Two officers in the College of Heralds are named Rothesay Herald and Bute Pursuivant, but the date of their creation is unknown.¹²

Besides the castle of Rothesay the parish contains Kames Castle, a tower ascribed to the fourteenth century, the ancient seat of the Bannatynes of Kames — Wester Kames castle, a small

KILBRIDE.

Aran⁴—Arram⁵—Ecclesia Sancte Brigide⁶—Saint Brigid Kirk⁷—
Kylbrid⁸—Kilbride.⁹ (Map, No. 3.)

THE island of Arran is described in 1549 as 'ane grate isle, full of grate mountains and forrests, good for hunting, with pairt of woods, extending in lenth from the Kyle of Arran to Castle Dounan southwart to twenty-four myles, and from the Kyle of Drumdoun to the Ness of Kilbride sixteen myles of breadthe, inhabit onlie at the sea coasts.'¹⁰ Of this island the parish of Kilbride includes the eastern portion, being separated from the parish of Kilmory by a continued range of hills, and extending from the Cock of Arran (a high isolated mass of rock) on the north to the farm of Dippen on the south.¹¹ The interior is in general mountainous, presenting much interesting scenery, especially in Glensannox, Glenrosa, Glensheraig, and Glenloy, and attaining in the conical summit of Goatfell (or Ben-Ghaoil, the mountain of the winds) the height of 2840 feet above the sea.¹² The coast is bold, rocky, and varied, and is indented by two fine bays, Brodick and Lamlash, the latter of which is almost landlocked by Holy Island, a rocky cone nearly 1000 feet in height.¹³

About the year 1294 a charter of Alexander of Hyle is witnessed by Marice the vicar of Arran, probably of Kilbride.¹⁴ In 1326 Sir Benedict was rector of Arram.¹⁵ In 1357 John of Meneteth,

There appears to be no record to show whether the whole island of Arran at any period formed but one parish, or which church, after its division into two, may have been termed the church of Arran. That name is here appropriated to Kilbride chiefly on the ground of its vicinity to the royal castle of Brodick.

lord of Arane and Knapdale, granted, and King David II. confirmed to the monks of Kylvynnyne the advowson of the church of Saint Bride in the island of Arane, with its chapels and pertinents.¹ Between 1390 and 1406 the grant was confirmed by King Robert III.² How it passed from the monks is not known, but in 1503 the advowson of the same church was probably granted by King James IV. to James Lord Hamiltoun with the earldom of Arane, and in 1540 it was confirmed by King James V. to James Earl of Aran.³ In 1526 a seisin of the lands of Kylmychel is witnessed by Robert Tait parish clerk of Kylbrid. in Aren.⁴ In 1549 Kilbride is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro as one of the two parish churches of Arran.⁵ In 1561 the teinds of Arran belonged to the bishop of the Isles.⁶ In 1609 James Marquis of Hammiltoun was served heir to his uncle James Earl of Arrane in the advowson of the churches of the earldom.⁷ In 1625 James Marquis of Hammiltoun was served heir to his father James in the advowson of the same churches.⁸

The church appears to have stood originally on the north-west shore of Lamlash bay, probably on the spot marked by Blaeu as Mark-na-heglis.⁹ The present church, built in 1773, stands at the south end of the village of Lamlash or Kilbride, on the west shore of the bay.¹⁰

There was a chapel at South Sannox dedicated to Saint Michael, a rude image of whom is built into the wall of the cemetery, which is still used.¹¹ There was another at Kilmichael in Glencloy, the remains of which were removed only a few years ago.¹² A third stood in Glenashdale near Whiting bay, and its cemetery, in the graves of which have been found ancient silver coins, still exists.¹³

The Holy Island, variously named Helantinlaysche, Almeslach, Molas, Molassa, and Lamlash, and supposed to be the Melansey or Melagsey to which Haco King of Norway sailed after his defeat at Largs, is famed for a cave bearing a Runic inscription, and traditionally said to have been the residence of a saint named Molvingus, Maeljos, or Molios.¹⁴ This cave, elevated about 25 feet above the present level of the sea, its inscription, a shelf of rock within it called the saint's bed, a large flat stone near it called his table, and his well celebrated for its healing virtues, are still shown, while the Baul Muluy (the stone globe of Saint Molvingus) a smooth green stone about the size of a goose's egg, which was believed to have the virtue of curing diseases and of procuring victory for the Macdonalds (whose chaplain the saint is said to have been), has now disappeared.¹⁵ The saint is said to have officiated alternately at Lamlash and at Shisken (in Kilmory), and to have died at the latter, where his grave is still shown.¹⁶

In the same island Archdeacon Monro places 'a monastery of friars,' which he says was founded by John Lord of the Isles, and in 1549 was decayed.¹ It seems to be the same that is styled by Pennant the ruins of the chapel of Saint Maeljos, and stood about a mile north from the cave of the saint, but with its cemetery was entirely removed about the year 1835.²

The early history of Arran (in Norse 'Hersey') till the period of King Haco's expedition in 1263 is nearly the same as that of Bute.³ In that year the Norwegian king bestowed Arran on a chief named Margad, and after his defeat at Largs lay some nights with his fleet near the island.⁴ In 1266 it was with the rest of the isles ceded to Scotland by his successor King Magnus.⁵ It does not appear with Bute among the lands of the sheriffdom of Kentyr erected by King John Balliol in 1292, but about the year 1306 was in the hands of the English, although for a time it afforded a refuge to King Robert Bruce.⁶ In 1326 that king again resided in Arran, and in the accounts of his chamberlain for that year there is entered the sum of 2s. paid to six men for passing thither with a ship to the King.⁷ In 1329 his chamberlain accounts for 47 marts received from Ingeram of Colchone of the stock (instaurum) of Arran, counting four 'stirkis' for one mart.⁸ In 1353 and 1357 John of Meneteth was lord of Arane and Knapdall, and patron of the churches of Arane.⁹ In 1366 the Steward of Scotland held lands in Arane, which with his lands in Bute, Cowal, Knapdale, and the Cumbrays, were of the old extent of £1000.¹⁰ In 1433 John lord of Monteith held lands in Arran.¹¹ From 1445 to 1450 the crown rents of Arane are stated by the King's chamberlain at £56, 18s. 8d. yearly, the grassum barley of Arane at 3 chalders 1 boll 2 firlots, and the 'mailmartis' at 17 (in 1449 and 1450, 18).¹² The fermes and grassum of the several crown lands in Kilbride during the same period were as follow:—Knokankelle, 26s. 8d. and 5 bolls; Achaharne, 53s. 4d. and 3 bolls; Ardlavenys, 40s. and 2 bolls; Monymor, 40s. and 2 bolls; Pennyrosche, 46s. 8d.; Lettirnagananach, 40s.; Blarbeg, 20s.; Blarmor, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Dubroach, 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Margenegless, 13s. 4d. and 1 boll; Clachellane, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Terquhullane, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Scallabedal, 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Mase and Knowach, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Glenormadill, 26s. 8d. and 2 bolls; Bradewik, 20s. and 1 boll 2 firlots; Glenservaig, 40s. and 3 bolls; Cranscheaut, 33s. 4d. and 2 bolls; Glenrossy, 40s. and 2 bolls; Knokane, Pennycastel, Rawnager, and Coreknokdow, £5.¹³ In 1445 there were allowed to the chamberlain 2 chalders 2 bolls 2 firlots, and in each of the years 1446 and 1447, 2 chalders 2 firlots of the whole grassum of Arane, which had been laid waste by 'cursed invaders' from Knapdale and Kintire.¹⁴ During the same years the chamberlain claimed deduction for the whole fermes of the following lands, almost all of which were waste, namely—Glensvag, Glenrossy, Braithwik, Terrquhilane, Dowbrooch, Blaremore, Margyncheglys,

The family of Maclouis or Fullarton held the lands of Kilmichael and the crownship of Arran in heritage early in the fourteenth century, one of that surname who adhered to the fortunes of King Robert Bruce having received a grant of them from that king.¹ In 1391 King Robert III. granted to Fergus of Foulertoun of Arane the land of Erqwhonnyne in the lordship of Arane and sheriffdom of Bute, of the old extent of two marks sterling yearly, for yearly payment of one penny of silver in name of blench ferme at the King's castle of Brethwic on the feast of Pentecost.² In 1400 the same king confirmed to John of Foulertoun, the son and heir of the deceased Ferchard (apparently the same as Fergus), the lands of Killenichel in the bailiary of Aran, together with the office of crowner of that bailiary, which belonged to Ferchard in heritage, for the usual services.³ In 1427 or 1428 King James I. confirmed the charter of 1400.⁴ In 1472 John Makclow (or Makclowy) resigned the 2½ marklands of Kilmichell and Glenklowy in the lordship of Arane, with the office of crowner of the lordship and island, which King James III. then granted to James Stewart of Auchingovne.⁵ In 1511 the two marklands of Kilmechell with the crownship of Arane, and the two marklands of Forland or Irachonane, were resigned with reservation of the liferent by Alan Fowlartoun or Maclowe, and were granted by James Earl of Arane in heritage to Fergus Fowlartoune the son and heir of Alan.⁶ In 1523 the same earl granted a precept of seisin of the four marklands old extent of Kylmychell and Quhytfoirland in the earldom of Aran, and of the office of crowner of the same, in favour of Alexander, the nephew and heir of the deceased Alan Maklowe who died seised in the same at the faith and peace of the King.⁷ In 1526 Alexander Macloue of Kylmychel, crowner of the isle of Aren, gave seisin of the two marklands of Kylmychel for life to Margaret Tait in her virginity and the heirs to be begotten in conjunct infeftment between them, with remainder to his own heirs whomsoever, and also of the profits of the third part of the crownship for life.⁸ In 1563 James Hamiltoun the son and heir apparent of James Duke of Chaltellarault, with the consent of his father, granted anew to Alan Makcloy, the son and heir apparent of Alexander M'Cloy, the two marklands of Kilmechell and the two marklands old extent of Quhitforland in the isle of Arane and sheriffdom of Bute, with the office of crowner, all which he had resigned, reserving the liferent of all the lands and of the crownship to Alexander, and the terce of Quhytfairland to Margaret Tait his wife, if she survived him.⁹ About the year 1572 King James VI. confirmed the charter of Killenichel granted in 1400 by King Robert III.¹⁰ In 1590 James Earl of Arane, with the consent of his brother John Lord Hamiltoun, admitted James (or Allan) 'Lard M'Clow' as kindly tenant for life of the 26s. 8d. lands of Scalpaden, the 40s. lands of Mais and Braidwick, the 26s. 8d. lands of Glennormadell, and the 40s. lands of Glensherwik, in the earldom of Arane and sheriffdom of Bute, for payment of the usual mails and services, and on condition that he should not transgress the statutes made by the Earl, his captains, and his bailies.¹ Martin about the year 1700 observes that Macklouis of Kirkmichael was said to be the most ancient family in Arran, and that the head of it was one of the King's coroners, his perquisites being a firloft of oats and a lamb from every village (town?) in the island.²

The Kilmichael charters are in the possession of Captain Archibald Fullarton of Kilmichael, the lineal descendant of the first Maclouis. The charter of Bruce has been lost, but the confirmation by King Robert III. proves the heritable possession of the lands by the family at a date considerably earlier than 1400.

The lands of Corrigills, and the Tenpennylands (including the three Largis, the two Keskedelis, Glenasdasdale, and Clachlane, in Kilbride, and some lands in Kilmory), are old possessions of the Stewarts of Bute. In the year 1400 King Robert III. granted to John the Steward sheriff of Bute the lands of Corrigills and 10 marks from the lands of Arran.³ In 1405 the same king, with consent of his son James the Steward of Scotland, granted to his natural son John Stewart of Ardgowan the lands called the Tenpennyland in the isle of Arran, in exchange for certain other lands.⁴ In 1433 John lord of Monteith granted to Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochaw the pennyland of Clachilan, and the lands of Kilbryde, Blairmore, and others in the island of Arran.⁵ From 1445 to 1450 Clachellane and Blarmor, as we have seen, appear in the King's rental as respectively of the extent of 33s. 4d.⁶ In 1490 Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute was served heir to his father James in the lands of Corrigills.⁷ In 1494 John Stewart of Ardgowane was sued before the Lords of Council, at the instance of King James IV. and Master John Stewart parson of Kirkkynner, for intronitting with the lands called the Tenpennyland in Arane.⁸ The Lords, after hearing the case on the 26th of June, continued it till the 8th of October of the same year, that more witnesses might be summoned.⁹ In 1503, in exchange for the lands of Ballachsheane and Auchinquharne in Perth, John Stewart of Ardgowane granted to Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute the lands called the Tenpennylandis in the island of Aranc, of the old extent of £40.¹⁰ In the same year the exchange was confirmed by King James IV.¹¹ In 1539 James Stewart was served heir to his father Ninian Stewart sheriff of Bute in the Tenpennylands and the lands of Corrigills, of the extent of £43, 6s. 8d.¹² In 1544 James Stewart sheriff of Bute paid to John Stewart (not designated) 40 marks as the remainder of a sum secured by wadset upon the lands of Kiscadale.¹³ In 1549 the same James Stewart sheriff of Bute, who had been summoned before parliament for certain crimes of treason, and for assisting the English in 1544 in burning Bute, Arran, and Dunoon, sold to James Earl of Arrane and Regent of Scotland in liferent, and to his eldest son and apparent heir James Hammiltoun in heritage, all his lands, rents, and fishings, which he held in Arran, except Corrigills, free of all burdens, reserving the office of sheriff; for which the Regent agreed to pay 4000 marks, of which

3000 were to be paid immediately, and the rest within a year after infestment—to find caution for the payment, or infest the sheriff in a yearly rent of 100 marks from the lands till they were redeemed—to have him infest in the £10 lands of Cumbray, and the chamberlainship of the same—and to reconcile him to the sheriff of Argyle.¹ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the lands to the Earl of Arran, but the sheriff protested that he had been compelled by fear of his life and a summons for treason to sell the Tenpennyland—that whatever he did in the matter should not prejudice himself or his heirs—and that the Earl of Arran had caused the Earl of Argyle to take his lands from him by force, and had charged him with treason.² In the same year—by a contract bearing that the Earl of Arran was bound to forfeit the sheriff of Bute, and to infest James Macdonald of Duniwaig in the sheriff's lands in Arran, and that, because that could not be done, the Earl had bought the lands—the Earl of Argyle became bound to Macdonald to induce the Earl of Arran to take a reasonable composition for the lands, and, should the Regent not agree, to infest Macdonald in as much good land elsewhere, he making the Earl of Argyle assignee to the Regent's lands.³ In 1556 James M'Onele (Macdonald) of Dounawik resigned to James Earl of Arran all right which he had to the bailiary of the Tenpennyland, and to any lands in Arrane, except the £5 lands of Corriglis and Cleuchtlanis which belonged to his wife Agnes Campbell.⁴ In 1561 James Stewart sheriff of Bute resigned the lands of Corregelleis to Queen Mary, who then granted them anew to him in liferent, and to his son and apparent heir John Stewart in heritage.⁵ In 1563 the same lands, of the old extent of 5 marks, formerly belonging to James Stewart sheriff of Bute, were appraised in favour of Hugh Nesbit for the sum of 300 marks, and of 15 marks as sheriff's fee.⁶ In 1571 the Tenpennylands were forfeited by the Duke of Chatelherault, and granted by King James VI. to Archibald Stewart of Largizcan.⁷ In 1590 the lands of Corrigills were resigned by John Stewart sheriff of Bute, and granted to him anew by King James VI.⁸ In 1609 James Marquis of Hammiltoun, Earl of Arrane, was served heir in the Tenpennyland to James Earl of Arrane his uncle.⁹

The crown lands of Knokan, Pennycastel, Rawnegarre, Correknokdow, Cranschant, and Knokankelle (with Glastre in Kilmorie), were from 1445 to 1450 held by the keeper of the castle of Brodick.¹⁰ In 1445 and 1446 there was remitted yearly to William Stewart then keeper the sum of £5 of the fermes of Knokan, Pennycastel, Rawnegarre, and Correknokdow, and in each of the four following years the sum of £8, 6s. 8d. of the fermes of these and the other lands which he held as keeper.¹¹ In 1445 there were remitted to the same William, for his service and by the consideration of the auditors, five of the marts due from his lands; in 1447 two marts; and in each of the years 1448, 1449, and 1450 two marts and a half.¹² In 1447 and 1448 there

There are villages at Lamdash and at Brodick on the bays of the same names, and a yearly fair at each, namely, at Lamdash in the beginning of winter, and at Brodick in the last week of June.²

Brodick (of old Brathwik) castle, a huge irregular pile of building, apparently the work of various periods, is described about the year 1306 as 'anc stith castell of stane.'³ At that time it was held by the English under Sir John the Hastings.⁴ Sir James of Douglas, having left King Robert Bruce in the island of Rachrin, and having landed in Arran and placed his men in ambush near the castle, attacked a party who had just landed with a supply of provisions, and forced them and others who had come from the castle to their relief to retreat to that stronghold, which it appears he then made no attempt to take.⁵ Soon afterwards King Robert arrived in Arran, and the castle is supposed to have been taken either before his arrival by his adherents, or after it by himself.⁶ It appears again in record, as we have seen, in the year 1391.⁷ About the year 1400 Fordun mentions Brethwik as one of two royal castles in the island of Arranc.⁸ From 1445 to 1450 William Stewart was keeper of the castle of Brathwic, and as keeper held certain lands in Arran.⁹ His yearly salary for the keeping of the castle, as stated in the chamberlain's account for 1445 and 1466, was £20.¹⁰ About the year 1455 the castle was destroyed by the islesmen under Donald Balloch of Isla.¹¹ In 1488 King James IV. granted to Hugh Lord Montgumry the lands of Arane with the keeping of the old place and castle of Bradewik in Arane.¹² In 1526 George Tait was captain of Aren (apparently of Brodick castle).¹³ In 1528 Fergus M'Dowell of Frewche and others were obliged to find caution for appearing to answer for the burning and destruction of the same castle and place.¹⁴ In 1544 during the expedition of the Earl of Lennox the castle of Brodick was rased to the ground.¹⁵ It appears to be the same as Braizay mentioned by Archdeacon Monro in 1549 as belonging to the Earl of Arran.¹⁶ About the year 1700 it is described as a building of four stories with a tower of still greater height, surrounded by a wall two stories high, and defended on the south and west by a moat, and on the other sides by the steepness of the ascent.¹⁷ The tower, a high quadrangle of red sandstone, which appears to have been built by Oliver Cromwell, has been modernised, and is still inhabited.¹⁸

Kingscross on the north of Whiting bay is supposed to be the place at which King Robert Bruce, accompanied by Maclouis or Fullarton, embarked for Carrick under the belief that his messenger Cuthbert had made the appointed signal on Turnberry point.¹ His 'hostes,' whom Barbour represents as affirming of herself,

For in this world is nane trewly
Wat thingis to cum sa wele as I, is said to have foretold before his departure the good fortune he should afterwards experience, a prophecy of which the poet, after a somewhat lengthy dissertation on astrology and necromancy, observes,

Bot, quethir scho that tald the king
How his purpos suld tak ending
Wenit or wist it witterly,
It fell eftir all halely
As scho said, for syn king was he
And of full mekill renoune.²

Bruce left Arran in the spring of 1307 (apparently). This humble beginning of a course which produced results so important is thus described by his biographer :

This was in ver, quhen wintir tid
With his blastis hidwis to bid
Was ourdrifin, and birdis smale,
As thristill and the nichtingale,
Begouth richt meraly to sing
And for to mak in thar singing
Sindry notis and soundis ser
And melody plesand to her:
And the treis begouth to ma
Burgeonis and bricht blumis alsua
To win the heling of thar hed
That wikkit wintir had tham reved,
And all grevis begouth to spring.
Intill that tyme the nobill king
With his flot and ane few menyhe,

Tornanshian (the fairy's mound) in Gleneloy is supposed to be the 'stalward plas' situated 'in ane woddy glen,' to which Douglas and his men retired after driving the English into the castle of Brodick, and to which King Robert on his landing was conducted by one of the natives.¹

Other relics of antiquity in this parish are Dunfiunn (Fingal's fort) near the point of Clachlands ; a large cairn 200 feet in circumference at the head of Moniemore glen ; erect stones at Glenshant, Sannox, Mayish, and Largiemore, one of which appears to be that mentioned by Pennant under the name MacBhrolechin's stone, and all of which are probably the remains of stone circles ; and entire circles in Blarmore glen, Gleneloy, and other places.²

THIS parish includes the western and larger portion of the isle of Arran, with the small isle of Plada on its south coast, and extends from Largiebeg point on the south to Lochranza water on the north. The interior is rugged and mountainous, the chief arable parts being an elevated sea terrace on the south, and on the west the vale of Shisken, which runs a considerable distance inland.⁸ On the coast, which is not so bold or varied as the coast of Kilbride, are the bays of Drumodoun (or Drumidoon), Machry, Catacol, and Lochranza.⁹

In the year 1357 John of Meneteth, lord of Arane and Knappdall, granted to the monks of Kylvynnyne the advowson of the church of Saint Mary in the island of Arane, and of its chapels.¹⁰ His charter is witnessed by Sir Bean the rector of the church, and the grant was afterwards confirmed by King David II.¹¹ In 1483 Master Walter Kennedy was rector of Kilmory of Arane.¹² In 1540 King James V. confirmed to James Earl of Aran the advowson of the churches and chapels of Aran, which was probably granted to him by King James IV. in 1503.¹³ In 1561 the teinds of Arran belonged to the bishop of the Isles.¹⁴ In 1571 the patronage of the rectory of Kilmorie was forfeited by the Duke of Chatelherault, and granted by King James VI. to Archibald Stewart of Largizean.¹⁵ In 1609 James Marquis of Hammiltoun, Earl of Arrane, was served heir to his uncle Earl James in the lands of the earldom and the advowson of the churches.¹ In 1617, when the bishoprick of the Isles was restored by King James VI., the parson of Kilmorie in Arran was made one of the prebendaries.²

The church is believed to have originally stood at Binnicarragan to the westward of Kilmorie, where are the remains of a church, with a burying-ground still in use, and near it a well of miraculous fame.³ The present church, built in 1785, stands at Kilmorie on the site of a former.⁴

At Clachan in Shisken, where it is believed the church of Saint Molios stood, and which Blaeu marks as Kilmichel, may be seen in the centre of the cemetery what is alleged to be the grave of that saint, which is marked by a stone having the figure of an ecclesiastic with a chalice and crozier.⁵ A church, built in 1805, occupies the site of the former.⁶

There appears to have been a church or chapel on the island of Plada. Fordun and other chroniclers from 1400 to 1500 speak of the isle of Saint Blase of Plada.⁷ Archdeacon Monro in 549 mentions it merely as 'ane little iyle full of eunings.'⁸ In 1609 a retour of certain lands includes the isle of Pladow and the advowson of the churches of the lands.⁹

There is a church at the head of Lochranza, built in 1795.¹⁰ It appears to occupy the site of an older, which is marked but not named by Blaeu about the year 1640, which Pennant in 1772 says was founded and endowed by Anne Dutchess of Hamilton in aid of the parish church of Kilbride, and which Sir Walter Scott in 1815, founding probably on what is said by Pennant, styles the convent of Saint Bride.¹¹ Martin about 1700 mentions a church of Saint James at the north end of the island.¹²

On the farm of Balnacula are the ruins of the oratory or cell (perhaps the Cabel Uual of Martin) of a monk named John, who is said to have been buried there.¹³

Blaeu places a church or chapel at Kilpatrick on Drumidoo bay.¹⁴

Before the year 1250 Reginald the son of Sorlet (Somerled), who styled himself King of the Isles, and who was lord of Ergile and Kyntire, and founder of the abbey of Sagadull, granted to the monks of Sagadull the 20 marklands of Cesken in the isle Arane.¹⁵ In 1508 King James IV. confirmed the grant of Cesken and of the other abbey lands in favour of David bishop of Argyle, and erected the whole into the barony of Sagadull.¹⁶ In 1556 James M'Onele of Donnawik resigned to James Earl of Arran all right which he had to the lands of Ceskane.¹⁷ In 1607 David Creychtoun of Lugtoun was served heir to his father Patrick Creychtoun in the lands of

Sascan in the island of Arrane, of the old extent of 18 marks, in warrandice of certain lands in Stirling.¹

The Tenpennyland in Arran, granted in 1405 by King Robert III. to John Stewart of Ardgowan, included the lands of Kildonane, the Twafurlangis, and the Dupennylandis, in this parish.² In 1463 James Stewart of Ardgowan granted the lands of Kildonane to Alexander Stewart of Beltries, reddendo yearly a pair of spurs as blench ferme.³ In 1527 Alexander Stewart granted the same lands to James Stewart of Ardgowan, reddendo two pair of spurs.⁴ In 1618 Archibald Stewart of Ardgowan was served heir to his elder brother James the heir apparent of Ardgowan in the lands of Kildonane of the old extent of 40 shillings.⁵

In 1433 John lord of Monteith granted to Sir Duncan Campbell of Loehaw the pennyland of Keanlochransay and other lands in Arran.⁶ Keanlochransay (or Loehede), paying yearly £4 and 6 bolls of bear; Catagil, 40s. and 3 bolls; Tonregethy, 40s. and 3 bolls; Pennerevaph, 53s. 4d.; Altgowlach, 13s. 4d.; Achagallane and Machremore, 40s.; and Machirbeg, 20s.; all crown lands, and partly or wholly waste, were from 1445 to 1450 occupied by Reginald M'Alexander (Ronald M'Alister), who refused notwithstanding to pay any of the dues.⁷ Of the marts due yearly for these lands there were allowed to the chamberlain in 1445, 14¼; in 1446, 13¾; in 1447, 4¼; in 1448, 3¾; and in 1449, 4¼.⁸ From 1445 to 1447 the crown lands of Tymochare and Dowgare, rented each at 13s. 4d. yearly, were lying waste.⁹ In 1452 King James II. granted to Alexander Lord Montgomery the lands of Kendlocheraysay, Cathaydill, the two Trurregeys, Tymochare, Dougarre, and Penreoche.¹⁰ In 1528 King James V. granted anew to Hugh Earl of Eglintoun, on account of the destruction of the family writs, the lands of Locharanesay in Arane, of the old extent of £20.¹¹ The other crown lands in this parish were Baynleka rented yearly at 20s., Achahar at 22s. and 2 bolls, Glasdery at 16s. 8d., and Monycole at 40s.; all of which were waste from 1445 to 1447, and of which Glastre was among the lands assigned to the keeper of the castle of Brathwik.¹²

In 1464 King James III. granted to George of Foulartoun the lands of Knychtisland in the isle of Arane, which he had resigned, with remainder to his brother William and his heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever, to be held of the King and his successors as Stewards of Scotland.¹³ In 1541 King James V. as Steward of Scotland granted to James Stewart sheriff of Bute the lands of Drumridan (apparently the same as the Knychtislands), of the old extent of 9 marks, which John Fullertoun had resigned.¹⁴ In 1549 James Stewart sheriff of Bute sold to James Earl of Aran, Regent of Scotland, in liferent, and to his eldest son and apparent heir James Hammiltoun in heritage, the lands of Toureddir (or Tonreddir) or Knychtislandis with the isle of Pladow, with the towers, mills, fishings, and other pertinents, of the old extent of 9 marks.¹ In the same year Queen Mary granted to the Earl a crown charter of the lands.² In 1609 James Marquis of Hammiltown, Earl of Arrane, was served heir to Earl James his uncle in the same lands with the advowson of their churches.³

There are three yearly fairs held in the parish, one at Lag, and two at Shedog.⁴

About the years 1400 and 1500 Fordun and other chroniclers mention the castle of Louchransay as one of two royal castles in Arane.⁵ It is noticed by Archdeacon Monro in 1549 as 'ane auld house callit the castle of the heid of Lochrenasay,' and as belonging to the Earl of Arran.⁶ It is noticed also by Martin about 1700, and by Pennant in 1772.⁷ It consists of two square towers with connecting walls, and stands on a peninsula projecting across the bay of Lochranza.⁸

Among the castles in Arran named by Archdeacon Monro is 'castle Dounan, pertaining to one of the Stuarts of Bute's blood callit Mr. James,' of whom he further informs us that 'he and his bluid are the best men in that countrey.'⁹ Kildonan castle, a square tower, now ruinous, stands on the edge of a precipitous cliff opposite the island of Plada.¹⁰

On the west coast near Drumidoon is a large cave, named the King's or Fingal's Cave, and supposed to have been inhabited by King Robert Bruce.¹¹ In the centre is a natural pier dividing it in two, on which are sculptured several figures, resembling animals, a cross, and a circular depression, the last probably of some antiquity.¹²

At Drumidoon, on a promontory presenting to the sea a face of porphyritic basalt 80 or 100 feet high, which rests on a base of sandstone, making the whole height about 300 feet above the sea, are the remains of a rude fort, of old held as a sanctuary, and now consisting of a mass of stones surrounded by a wall of loose stones.¹³ It is described by Pennant as a round tower.¹⁴

On the plain of Tormore (apparently named Sliabh-nan-carachan), are two concentric circles, respectively of 12 and 8 stones, named Suidhe-choir-Fhionn (Fingal's cauldron seat), and near these a number of upright obelisks about 15 feet high, apparently the remains of similar circles.¹⁵

At Blackwater foot are the remains of a cairn said to have been 200 feet in diameter; about the middle of Glenintshuidhe there is a moss-covered cairn named Suidhe Challumchille (Columba's seat); and on the shore of Catacol there was a cairn, now removed, named Aran or Ar Fhinn, which was believed to mark the spot where Fingal defeated the Norsemen, and is said by some to have given name to the island.¹⁶

GIGHA AND CARA.

THIS parish consists of the islands of Gigha, Cara, and Gigulum, lying off Runahuran Point on the west coast of Kintyre.³ The coast in general is rocky, steep, and much indented, and the land in general low, rising only at one part, the Creag Bhan or White Rock in Gigha, to the height of about 400 feet above the sea.⁴

In 1510 King James IV. presented Angus Makkane to the rectory of the church of Saint Catan in Giga, which was vacant by the decease of Sir John Judge.⁵ 'At the heid of the iyle Caray,' writes Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'lyes ane iyle callit Gigay, six myle lange, an myle and an half myle breidth, with ane parochie kirke.'⁶ In 1613 Hector M'Neill was served heir to his father Neill M'Neill of Thaynis in the tythes of the lands of Gyghey.⁷

The church stood at Kilchattan on the east side of the island of Gigha, near the head of Ardminish bay.⁸ About the year 1700 it seems to have stood entire, with its altar and font, of which the latter alone existed in 1790, and is still to be seen.⁹ The dimensions of the church, part of which remains, are 33 feet by 14½.¹⁰ Martin about 1700 says that in the vicinity of the church there were several erect stones, and Pennant in 1772 mentions a great rude column at Kilchattan 16 feet high, and near it several cairns, to one of which a cross was attached.¹¹ The present church, built in 1780, stands near the ruins and cemetery of the former.¹²

In 1549 we are informed by Archdeacon Monro, that 'upon the northwest coist of Kintyre, be four myle of sea to the same, lyes ane little iyle with a chapel in it callit Caray, guid for quhite fishes, abundance of cunnings, inhabit and manurit, mair nor ane myle lange, and ane halfe myle braid.'¹³ Father Hay says that in the isle of Carray there was a cell of the Holy Trinity, but by whom founded is uncertain.¹⁴ In 1626 Thomas Knox bishop of the Isles describes Cara as 'ane small iland of no worthe.'¹⁵ The chapel or cell is marked by Pont and Blaeu.¹⁶ Pennant in 1772 says that the isle of Cara was then inhabited by one family, and had once a chapel.¹⁷ Its ruins, 36 feet long, remain, having an ancient doorway on the north side.¹⁸

In 1263 Haco King of Norway in his expedition against Scotland arrived at Gudey (Gigha), and there met 'King John of the Isles,' who refused to break his allegiance with the King of Scots.¹ There also the abbot of a monastery of Grey Friars (supposed to be Saddell in Kintyre) waited on King Haco, begging protection for their church and dwelling, which Haco granted to them in writing.² While he remained on the island, Symon, a priest in his train, died, and was buried by the Grey Friars in their church in Kintyre.³ From Gudey King Haco sent a party to plunder Kintyre, who, after burning some villages, killing some of the inhabitants, and carrying away all the plunder they could, returned to the island.⁴ After his defeat at Largs Haco was again at Gudey on his return to Norway.⁵ In 1266 the isle of Gigha was ceded to Scotland with the rest of the Isles.⁶ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alán certain lands which had been resigned by Cristian of Marr the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic, and which included the island of Gug.⁷ In 1335 Edward Balliol, quantum in se erat, granted in heritage to John of the Isles certain lands both in the Isles and on the mainland, including the island of Githe, the grant being in 1336 confirmed by King Edward III.⁸ In 1343 King David II. granted to John of Yle, Lord of the Isles, various lands in the Highlands and Isles, among which was the island of Geday.⁹ About the same period the same king granted the island of Githey and other lands to Angus the son of John of the Isles his kinsman, for the usual services by sea and land.¹⁰ Gigha is the Gya of Fordun, and is mentioned by him about 1400.¹¹

In 1455 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, confirmed to Neill M'Torquell M'Neill, his constable of Castle Ssyn, one eighth part of Arydalych, an eighth of Arydagh, two eighths of Drumhaynvoir, an eighth of Aryduirmegynche, an eighth of Foiryfown, and an eighth of Arydglannich, all in Gyga, which had been granted to Neill's father Torquell Macneill by John's father Alexander of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles.¹² In 1472 a charter of Celestine of the Isles lord of Lochalch is witnessed by Hector MacTorquell M'Neill constable of Castle Swync.¹³ In 1478 a charter of John of Ila Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Malcom Macneile of Geya.¹⁴ In 1516 Nele Maknele of Geya appears among certain familiars and servitors of Colin Earl of Ergile, who received a special protection from John Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland.¹⁵ In 1531 King James V. granted to Torkill Maknele, 'cheif and principale of the clan and surname of Maknelis,' the fermes and dues of the lands that belonged to the deceased Gillecallum (Malcolm) M'Nele of Gaeya in the sheriffdom of Terbert, the grant to last during Torkill's good service and the King's pleasure.¹⁶ In 1539 the same king granted to Alane

M'Clane, the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, the nonentry and other dues of the £20 lands of Geya, namely, Canerraroeh (or Tanerraroeh), Tarbert, Ardalay, Ardachay, Ardeglammes, Chantereroch, Layme, Kilchatthen, Ardewegenis, Drumgounmoir, Drumgounbeg, Saule, and Drumero.¹ In 1542 the same king—on the narrative that the deceased Neill Makneill of Geya and the greater part of his clan had been slain by the rebellious Islesmen, that their writs of Geya and other lands had been destroyed, that they had been faithful to the King, and that Anabella Makneill, the daughter and heiress of Neill Makneill, had resigned the lands to her natural brother Neill Makneill the son of the deceased—granted to Neill in heritage the £20 lands of Geya and other lands.² In 1545 Neill M'Neill V'Achyn of Tynishe (apparently the same Neill) was seised in the same lands.³ In 1549, or perhaps a little later, Archdeacon Monro says, 'the auld thane of Gigay should be laird of the same, callit M'Neill of Gigay, and now it is possessit by the Clandonald.'⁴ In 1552 Queen Mary granted to Hector M'Clane, the natural son of the deceased Alane M'Clane the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, with remainder to the latter, the nonentry and other dues of the £20 lands of Geya and others.⁵ In 1553 the same lands, described as formerly belonging to Malcolm Makneill of Geya, and as being in the Sovereign's hands for 60 years after his decease by reason of nonentry, were appraised in favour of the same Hector the son of Alane for the sum of £17,402, 14s. due as nonentry, which Hector had as the Queen's donatar, including the fee of the sheriff for appraising.⁶ In the same year Torquill M'Neill, chief of that clan, for certain sums of money paid to him by John M'Coull of Duneveg and Glens, constituted him his assignee to the dues of the same lands.⁷ In 1554 Neill Makneill of Geya sold the lands for 1500 marks Scots to James Makconnell of Dunnaveg and Glennis and Agnes Campbell his wife, with remainder to his brothers Angus, Coill, Alexander Og, and Sorell Boy Makconnell, and to Makconnell's own heirs whomsoever, the sale being followed in the same year by a crown charter from Queen Mary.⁸ In the same year Neill MacNeill of Geya had a remission from Queen Mary for his treasonable coming in 1545 in company with the deceased Sir Rudolph Eweris and other subjects of England in time of war in battle array against the Regent (James Earl of Arran) on the moor of Ancrum, and there pursuing in order to slay the Regent, at that time representing the Queen's person and bearing her authority.⁹ In 1557 James Makconnell of Dunnaveg and Agnes Campbell his wife were seised in the £20 lands of Geya and others.¹⁰ In 1567 Queen Mary granted a commission of lieutenantancy to Archibald Earl of Argyle against Hector M'Lain elder and Hector M'Lain younger of Coll, and others, for burning the houses, barns, and cattle, of the poor inhabitants of Geya, and killing some and imprisoning others.¹¹

In 1590 John Campbell of Calder sold the £20 lands of Geya to Neill Makneill of Thynis for three thousand marks.¹ In the same year Neill Makneill granted the same lands to Malcolm Makneill his brother.² In 1599 Neill Makneill of Thynis was seised in the same lands.³ In 1613 Hector M'Neill was served heir to his father Neill M'Neill of Thynis in the £20 lands of old extent called the island of Gyghay, with the tithes, in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.⁴ In 1619 John M'Connell was served heir to his father (or brother) Archibald M'Connell, who was the natural son of Angus M'Connell of Dunavaig, in the same £20 lands and others in the sheriffdom of Tarbert, united into the barony of Geya.⁵ The parish is now divided into 31 marklands, of which Cara forms one,⁶ the other 30 constituting the old £20 lands of Geya.

Before the year 1449 Alexander Lord of the Isles granted to the monks of Saddell two marklands called Cragvan in the island of Giga.⁷ In 1508 King James IV. confirmed the grant to David bishop of Argyle, uniting the whole abbey lands in his favour into the barony of Sagadull.⁸

Pennant in 1772 says that near Kilchattan there is a square artificial mount with vestiges of a breast wall at the top, similar to the mount called Romelborg in Sweden.⁹

THIS parish, now known as Kilarrow and Kilmeny, forms the central and largest portion of the island of Islay. It is separated from Kildalton on the south by an irregular line running from Laggan to Proag, and from Kilchoman on the west by a line stretching from the head of Loch Gruinart to the shore of Lochindaal. It is bounded by Lochindaal on the south, by the Sound of Islay on the east, and by the Atlantic on the north. The land is generally low, and, where not cultivated, is covered with heath or fern. It is watered by the rivers of Kilarrow and Laggan, falling respectively into Lochindaal and Laggan Bay, and the river Anaharly falling into Loch Gruinart.

In the year 1500 King James IV. presented Sir John Patriksoun to the parsonage of Kilmolrow, which was vacant by the decease of Sir Cormek (or Cornele).¹ In 1511 the same king presented first Sir Archibald M'Kessag, and afterwards Sir John Roge, to the rectory of Kilmolrow, then vacant by the decease of Sir Malcolm Makgillekeir (or Makheker).² In 1512, the rectory being vacant by the death of Sir John Roge, the same king presented Master Patrick Roge.³ In 1529, on the resignation of the same Master Patrick, Sir Laurence Galt chaplain was presented to the rectory of Kirkmorow by King James V.⁴ In 1538 the same king presented Charles Makelane to the rectory, then vacant or when vacant by the demission or decease of the same Master Patrick Roge.⁵ In 1548 the patronage of the parsonage of Kilmarrow and some other churches, when they should be vacant by decease of the rector, was granted to Hector M'Gilleoun of Doward and his heirs till Queen Mary should attain the age of fourteen.⁶ In 1554 the same queen presented Sir Donald Campbell to the vicarage of Kilmarew, vacant by the decease of Sir Malcolm Makduffy.⁷ In 1573 Sir Charles M'Lane, probably the presentee of 1538, was rector of Killmorow.⁸ In 1617, when King James VI. restored the bishoprick of the Isles, the parson of Killenew in Ylay was made one of the prebendaries.⁹ In 1661, on a petition from the parishioners of Killerew called 'the Kirk of Yla,' the Scotch parliament ordered the sum of 300 marks of the stipend for that year to be paid to Mr. Robert Campbell, a probationer who had officiated there, but who could not be admitted as minister 'for want of the Yrish tounge.'¹⁰

The old church, dedicated to Saint Mary or Saint Malrube, stood at the village of Kilarrow (not now in existence) on the right bank of the river of the same name, which, as before stated, falls into Lochindaal.¹¹ Its cemetery remained in 1772.¹² The present church stands at the village of Bowmore, a little farther to the south on the shore of the same loch.¹³ At a remote period there appears to have been a church at Kilmeny to the north of Kilarrow, but there is apparently no record on the subject. In 1561 'Keilvennie in Illa,' probably the old church lands, was held by the bishop of the Isles.¹⁴ There are parliamentary churches at Kilmeny, Oa, and Portnahaven.¹⁵

On an island in Loch Finlagan, which lies about the centre of the parish, and from which flows the river Killarrow, are the ruins of a small chapel dedicated to Saint Finlagan; and between it and the east coast, at Kilholmkill, stood a chapel dedicated to Saint Columba—both anciently in the patronage of the Lords of the Isles.¹⁶ Before the year 1380 John Lord of the Isles is said to have roofed the chapel of Finlagan and others, and to have given them 'the proper furniture for the service of God,' and maintenance for the officiating clergy.¹⁷ In 1427 Alexander of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Master of Ross, dates a charter at the Island of Saint

Finlagan in Yle.¹ In 1503 King James IV. presented Sir Malcum Dungalsoun to 'the chapel-lanry of Sanct Colme and Sanctt Finlagane situat in the ile of Ilaa,' vacant by the decease of Sir Angus Makbreochane, and belonging to the King's presentation as Lord of the Isles.² To the record of this presentation there is appended the following memorandum: 'That thir twa chaplanrys war euir at the presentatioun of the Lordis of the Islis, and now at our Souerane Lordis presentatioun as Lord of the sammyn, quhill now that it is schewin to his Hienes that thai war fraudfully withhaldin fra him, and the sammyn schewin to his Hienes be the said reuerend faider.'³ In 1527 King James V. presented Sir Malcolm Donaldsoun to the chaplainry of Illaneynlagane in the lordship of Ilay, then vacant by the decease of Sir Malcolm Makgillespy.⁴ In 1542 the same King presented Sir Archibald M'Illyray to the two chaplainries of Ellen Finlagane and Saint Columba, with the lands belonging to them, namely, Ballachlovan, Knokchlorycht, and Balleossyn, in Ila, which were vacant by the decease of Sir Malcolm M'Donald M'Dugall.⁵ Martin about 1700, and Pennant in 1772, mention Saint Columba's chapel, and a cross 10 feet high which stood near it.⁶

In the north of the parish there is a cave called Uah-vearnag, beside which are a well called Tobir-in-knahar, and a small chapel in which those who found benefit from drinking of the well returned thanks for their recovery.⁷

Martin mentions also a church called Kilhan Alen, north-west from Kilrow.⁸

Islay (the Ila of Adomnan, the Ile of Nennius, the Il of the Norse Sagas, and the Hyle of Reginald of Durlham) occurs in record in the seventh and ninth centuries.⁹ About the year 1076 or 1096 died in Islay Godred Crovan, King of Dublin, of Man, and of the Hebrides, from whose grand-daughter Ragnhildis, the wife of Somerled, was descended the dynasty afterwards known as the Lords of the Isles.¹⁰ In 1098 Magnus Berfaet King of Norway landed on Isla, and laid it waste with fire and sword.¹¹ The subsequent history of the island till about the year 1306 is nearly the same as that of the other Sudreyjar or Southern Isles.¹² In 1263 Angus of Ila (descended from Somerled, and known as Angus Mor) did homage to Haco King of Norway, who on his resignation of Ila granted it to him again.¹³ In the same year King Haco after his defeat at Largs remained two nights in Islay Sound, and levied from the island a tribute of 300 cattle.¹⁴ In the year 1306 and subsequently it was held of King Robert Bruce by Angus of Ile (known as Angus Oig) the descendant of Somerled and the son of Angus Mor.¹⁵ In 1326 that king's chamberlain accounts for the sum of £124, 7s. 4d. as the value of 3564 lbs. of meal and cheese, at 7d. per lb., received from John M'Donnyle the bailie of Ile.¹⁶ In 1329 the bailie of Yle was John M'Douny

(probably the same person).¹ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted in heritage to John of the Isles (or of Islay), for his allegiance, the island of Ysle and other lands, which in 1336 were confirmed to the same John by King Edward III.² In 1343 King David II. granted to the same John the island of Yle and others.³ About the same period the same king granted to his kinsman Angus the son of John of the Isles the whole of the island called Yla and other lands, for the usual services by land and sea.⁴ John of Yle appears to have first adopted the style of 'Lord of the Isles' between the years 1346 and 1354.⁵ The earliest instance on record in which he is known to have used it occurs in an indenture, dated in 1354, between him and John of Larin lord of Argyle, in which the latter resigns to him certain lands, and he on the other hand becomes bound, among other conditions, not to make war on John of Larin, or assist any one in war against him, excepting only the King of Scotland.⁶ It appears however that before the year 1369 the Lord of the Isles was in rebellion against that king; but in that year, in consideration of the pardon of his former transgressions, he became bound to make satisfaction for all injuries done by him to the King's subjects, to obey the laws, to oblige his sons, vassals, and the inhabitants of his lands to do the same, and to answer to the King for all taxes and contributions.⁷ For his fulfilment of these engagements he promised to deliver as hostages, within the castle of Dunbarton, Donald his son by a daughter of the Steward of Scotland, Angus the son of his deceased son John, and his own natural son Donald; appending to the deed his own seal, together with the seal of the Earl of Stratherne Steward of Scotland, who became his surety.⁸ In 1374 the lordship of John of Ile paid to the crown yearly the sum of £133, 6s. 8d.⁹ Fordun about 1400, and succeeding chroniclers, number Ile among the larger islands of the Hebrides.¹⁰ In 1427 Alexander of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Master of Ross, as before stated, dates a charter at the island of Saint Finlagan in Yle.¹¹ In the same year he himself and his mother the Countess of Ross were arrested by King James I. at Inverness.¹² In 1429 the Lord of the Isles was liberated, and immediately again rebelled, but soon afterwards submitted to the King, who confined him in the castle of Temptalone, while his mother was sent to 'Saint Colm's Isle of Emonia' (Inchcolm).¹³ John of Yle, the son and successor of Alexander, was the Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles who in 1462 made the treaty of Ardtornish with King Edward IV. of England.¹⁴ In 1475 the same John of Yle, having been frequently summoned before parliament to answer for certain crimes, and not appearing, was declared to be guilty of treason, and to have forfeited his life, offices, and possessions to the crown; and Colin Earl of Argyle was commissioned by King James III. to prosecute the decret of forfeiture.¹⁵ In 1476 John of Ila appeared in person before the parliament at Edinburgh, and formally resigned his possessions to the King.¹ In the same year King James III. at the special request of his queen and parliament restored him to his titles, and to his lands with certain exceptions, granting him a new infeftment in the lands of the island of Isla, and of all the other islands which formerly belonged to him, with remainder to Angus of Ile his natural son and his heirs-male, to John of Ile his natural son and his heirs-male, and to his own heirs whomsoever.² In 1478 the same king on attaining his majority confirmed the restoration.³ In 1493 the same John, who was last Lord of the Isles, again and finally forfeited all his titles and lands.⁴ In 1494 King James IV. granted to John Makane of Ardmurquhane certain lands in Ila, with the office of bailie of the lands and island.⁵ In 1505 the same king confirmed to John Makkane of Ardnamurchane all the lands he had formerly granted him in Ile, with the office of bailie of all the King's lands in that island.⁶ In 1515 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, ordered the inhabitants of Iley, and of all the other lands of which John Makeane of Arthmurchy had the government and keeping from King James IV., to answer to Makeane for all the fermes of the lands; and appointed him his commissioner in that part for reducing the inhabitants, with certain exceptions, to obedience—the order to be valid till the next Feast of All Saints (1 Nov.).⁷ In 1517 Colin Earl of Argyle was made lieutenant of the Isles, and empowered by the Regent to treat with the Islesmen for the remission of their crimes.⁸ In 1536 the island of Ylay is enumerated among the crown lands in the Isles, or the lands and Lordship of the Isles.⁹ In 1540 King James V. made his memorable voyage round the coast of Scotland, in the course of which he visited the island of Islay.¹⁰ In the same year Islay and the rest of the Isles were inalienably annexed to the crown.¹¹ In 1542 King James V. appointed Archibald Stewart, captain of Dunnyvaig, governor with the power of sheriff within the bounds of Yley.¹² From 1543 to 1545 the title of Lord of the Isles was assumed by Donald Dhu, the grandson of the last Lord, and under that title he entered into a treaty with King Henry VIII. in connexion with Matthew Earl of Lennox.¹³ In 1588 the rental of the crown lands in Islay, as fixed by a charter of King James VI. to Hector M'Clane heir of Dowart, was £26, 15s. 6d.¹⁴ In 1621 King James VI. and the parliament of Scotland confirmed an infeftment made in 1614 to Sir John Campbell of Calder and his heirs-male, of 'the Yle and landis of Ylay and Rynnis, and midlewaired of Ylay, Ilyntassan, alsueill rentallit of before as vntrentallit, with the castell, toure, fortalice, and maner place of Dwnyvaig, and with the hail salmond fischeingis and vtheris fischeingis of the saidis landis and yle of Ylay'—erecting the same and certain other lands into the free barony of Yla, together with a burgh of barony to be built upon any part within the bounds of the island where Sir John or his heirs should think most expedient, with all the privileges of a free burgh of barony.¹

In 1494 King James IV. granted to John Makane of Ardmurquhane three-eighths of the lands of Skanlastill, one-eighth of the lands of Kynbelochane, and one-fourth of the lands of Capolse, Robolse, Lital Capolse, Kilbranne, Dulloch, Ochtownruche, Balluchter, Achverne, Balleclachtach, Arrevor, Correrere, Curloch, and Alane-Mackindow, in the island of Ila and lordship of the Isles, together with the office of bailie of the lands and island of Ila, all which were formerly held by him of John Lord of the Isles, and were resigned by him by reason of the forfeiture of the same John.² In 1505 the same king confirmed to John Makkane of Ardnamurchan all the grants which he had made to him of whatsoever lands in the island of Ile and others.³ In 1519 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile the ward, relief, nonentry, and marriage of the lands which belonged to the deceased John Makeayne of Ardnamurquhan, with the bailiary and castles of the same.⁴ In 1541 the Lord Treasurer paid to Archibald Earl of Argyle the sum of £5000 for renunciation of the lands in the Isles which formerly belonged to the heirs of the deceased Mackane, and which now belonged to the Earl by alienation, and were resigned by him ad perpetuam remanentiam.⁵ In 1542 King James V. granted anew to Hector M'Clane of Doward in liferent, and to his son Hector and his heirs specified in the charter of entail of the barony of Doward, certain lands in Mull and Islay, including one fourth of the lands of Garrynsay, and Kilnalen, one-fourth of Garbols and Dowach, one-fourth of Doll, one-fourth of Robols and Kepols, one-fourth of Skanlastill, one-fourth of Killelegan and Skanlastill, one-sixteenth of Meglyn, one-sixteenth of Owo, one-eighth of Bols, and six-eighths of Skanlastill, with the mills and other pertinents, in the island of Islay and sheriffdom of Terbert; all which lands belonged to the deceased Hector M'Clane the grandfather of Hector of Doward, whose charters were destroyed by the deceased Earl Angus Master of the Isles (per quondam Angusium comitem magistrum Insularum) in a time of deadly feud between them, so that his son and heir Lauchlan M'Clane could not obtain entry and seisin; and all which were now incorporated as part of the barony of Doward.⁶ In 1615 Hector Makeleane of Dowart was served heir in the same lands to his grandfather Hector.⁷

In 1496 King James IV. granted to Lachlan Makgilleone, the natural son of Hector Makgilleone of Dowarde, in heritage, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to Hector's brother Donald and his heirs, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleone, various lands in the Isles, including Torlissay in Islay, all resigned by Hector, and now erected into the free barony of Dowarde.⁸ In 1540 King James V. granted the same lands, resigned by Hector M'Clane of Dowart, to Hector M'Clane his son and apparent heir.⁹ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir in the same lands to Hector M'Clayne his grandfather.¹⁰

In 1506 King James IV. granted to John Makkane of Ardnamurchane a quarter of the lands of Baletharsauche, an eighth of Teirmachacan, and six cowlands (vaccate) of Proygag, in the island of Ile, which formerly belonged to him as heir of the deceased John M'Alester M'Ian of Ardnamurchane his grandfather, who held them of the deceased Alexander Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, and which were now in the King's hands by reason of the forfeiture of the deceased John Lord of the Isles, the son of the deceased Alexander.¹ In 1538 Mareon M'Ean was served heir in the same lands to her father John M'Ean.² In 1540 she resigned them to Archibald Earl of Argyle.³

In 1562 Queen Mary granted for seven years to James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis, for his allegiance, certain lands in Kintyre and Islay, including 16s. 8d. of Awanlassay, 6s. of Torray, 8s. 4d. of Kuralach, 2½ marks of Lagan, 16s. 8d. of Kilcalmkill, 16s. 8d. of Karray (or Corraray), 16s. 8d. of Ellenmowikduffe (or Ellannunamukduff), 2½ marks of Ardlarach, 3 marks 10 shillings of Portanellane, 16s. 8d. of Leachkarlem, 2½ marks of Seensay (or Staynsay), 3s. of Quhynnisiyrne, 16s. 8d. of Ardnahowe, 16s. 8d. of Ballevlane (or Balwlbe), 16s. of Balligillane, 8s. 4d. of Laygane, 8s. 4d. of Gealtarge (or Giltaig), 16s. 8d. of the two Melvillanemadagins (or Mwlleinnadaginis), 2½ marks of Keappolsaymoir, 16s. 8d. of Keappolsaybeg, 16s. 8d. of Balleharvey, 2½ marks of Dowasgir, 25s. of Staynbolshay, 6s. of Margadill, 2½ marks of Eurobolsay, 16s. 8d. of Leak and Knokis, 16s. 8d. of Drummalla, 2½ marks of Eskillis, 2½ marks of Gartachossanta, 8s. 4d. of Gone (or Gouc), 16s. 8d. of Gartlosky, 2½ marks of Grobolsay, 2½ marks of Carragarrie (or Kynagaery), 2½ marks of the Bar, 16s. 8d. of Ochtonaffrache, 16s. 8d. of Killewrenan, 16s. 8d. of Arregoware, 2½ marks of Ardechay, 2½ marks of Tallant (or Callant), 2½ marks of Balletarsint, half a mark of Kincaillen, 2½ marks of Ballicnoise (or Ballimos), 8s. 4d. of Dowdelbeg, 8s. 4d. of Dowdelmoir, 2½ marks of Scarrabolsy, 8s. 4d. of Teid, 16s. 8d. of Ardvmlen, 16s. 8d. of Calmiscarrie, and 8s. 4d. of Molleboye.⁴ In 1563 and 1564 the same queen renewed the grant.⁵ In 1584 King James VI., on the narrative that Angus M'Connell of Dunavaig and his predecessors had for years been tenants of those lands, granted them anew in heritage to Angus for nine years, for yearly payment of 13s. 4d. for every markland.⁶

Some lands in Islay belonged to a religious house called the monastery of Arderenis or Derenis. In 1662 Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbet was served heir to his grandfather Sir Roderick Mackenzie of Cogeauch in the markland of Woull formerly belonging to the monastery of Arderenis, and in the 4 marklands of Sclierbay, the pennyland of Scur, and the remainder of the other lands in the island of Islay, of old belonging to the monastery of Derenis.⁷

Near Islay House on Lochindaal stood formerly the village of Kilarrow, and beside it in 1772 the remains of the gallows.⁸

On the shore of the same loch about three miles farther south lies the modern village of Bowmore, begun in 1768, and now containing a population of about 1500.⁹

While King Robert Bruce was engaged in building the castle of Tarbert in Kintyre, he appears frequently to have sent to Islay for horses and corn. In 1326 his chamberlain claims as disbursed by him, as the wages of a servant for going to Ile for horses, 6d.; as paid for the passage of four horses from Ile to Tarbart, 10s.; and as the value of 160 lbs. of cheese given as wages to servants passing at various times to Ile for victuals, £4, 13s. 4d.¹

Fordun and other writers say that in the great island called Ile the Lord of the Isles had two mansions besides the castle of Donowak.² One of these was doubtless the castle built on the island Finlagan already mentioned, which was the chief residence of the Lords of the Isles, and of which the ruins are still to be seen.³ On the shore of the island there are traces of a pier, and of the houses of the Lucht-tach or guards who attended the Lord of the Isles.⁴ On this island the wives and children of the island lords were buried, while themselves were buried in Iona.⁵ A manuscript history of the Macdonalds, written in the reign of King Charles II. (1649-1685), gives the following account of the ceremony of installing the Lords of the Isles, and of the constitution of their government:—‘I thought fit to annex the ceremony of proclaiming the Lord of the Isles. At this the bishop of Argyle, the bishop of the Isles, and seven priests, were sometimes present; but a bishop was always present, with the chieftains of all the principal families and a ruler of the Isles. There was a square stone seven or eight feet long, and the tract of a man’s foot cut thereon, upon which he stood, denoting that he should walk in the footsteps and uprightness of his predecessors, and that he was installed by right in his possessions. He was clothed in a white habit to show his innocence and integrity of heart, and that he would be a light to his people and maintain the true religion. The white apparel did afterwards belong to the poet by right. Then he was to receive a white rod in his hand, intimating that he had power to rule, not with tyranny and partiality, but with discretion and sincerity. Then he received his forefathers sword, or some other sword, signifying that his duty was to protect and defend them from the incursions of their enemies in peace or war, as the obligations and customs of his predecessors were. The ceremony being over, mass was said after the blessing of the bishop and seven priests, the people pouring their prayer for the success and prosperity of their new created lord. When they were dismissed, the Lord of the Isles feasted them for a week thereafter, [and] gave liberally to the monks, poets, bards, and musicians. . . . The constitution or government of the Isles was thus. Macdonald had his council at Island Finlaggan in Isla to the number of sixteen, viz., four thanes; four armans, that is to say, lords or subthanes; four bastards, that is, squires or men of competent estates who could not come up with armans or thanes; [and four] that is, freeholders or men that had their lands in factory, as Magee of the Rinds of Isla, Macnicoll in Portree in Sky, and Maceachern, Mackay, and M’Gillevrays in Mull, Macillehmaoel or Macmillan, &c. There was a table of stone where this council sat in the Isle of Finlaggan, the which table with the stone on which Macdonald sat were carried away by Argyle with the bells that were in Icolumkill.

Moreover there was a judge in every isle for the discussion of all controversies, who had lands from Macdonald for their trouble, and likewise the eleventh part of every action decided. But there might still be an appeal to the council of the Isles. Macfinnon was obliged to see weights and measures adjusted, and Macduffie or Macphie of Colonsay kept the records of the Isles.¹ There is a tradition, that while Man belonged to the kingdom of the Isles, the rents of that island were paid in Islay, those in silver at Creig-n'-airgid (the rock of the silver), and those in kind at Creiga-mone (the rock of rents in kind.)²

Among the gravestones in the churchyard of Kilarrow there is one with the figure of a warrior clothed with a tunic reaching to the knees and armed with a sword and dirk; and another bearing only a sword surrounded with a wreath, and the figures of three animals.³

It is said that Magnus Barfod or Barbeen (Barefoot or Barelegs) received that name from his own men, because he adopted the dress then (in the eleventh century) worn in the Western Isles.⁴ This parish and the other parishes in Islay have many places which still retain their old Norse names, such as Laxay (in old Norse Laxa, 'the salmon river'), mentioned by Archdeacon Monro in 1549, and Skiba (in Danish Skibeaen, 'the ship rivulet').⁵

THIS parish, separated from Kilarrow by an irregular line running from Laggan to Proag and apparently following the windings of several small streams, forms the south east portion and about one-third of the island of Islay, terminating at the south in a point named the Mull of Islay or of Oe. Its centre is traversed by a range of hills from south to north, the highest being Benvigory. The coast is generally rocky and low, but near the Mull it attains the height of 700 or 800 feet. In the interior are a few small lakes, and on the coast several islands, including Texa, Ellan-nan-Caorach, Ellan Innersay, and the Ardelister islands.

The original church of the parish stood at Kildalton, a few miles south west from the entrance to the Sound of Islay, where its cemetery and apparently its walls, altar, and font, still remain.³ In 1790 the parish church, built in 1730, stood about half way between the old church at Kildalton and another in the south of the parish named Kilnaughtan (apparently at the village of Lagavoulin).⁴ The present church, built in 1820, stands near Ardmore point, the eastern extremity of the parish.⁵

There was a church or chapel dedicated to Saint Columba at Kilcholmkill on the east coast.⁶ There are still to be seen the walls, or part of the walls, with the altar and font, of four old churches, including apparently those of Kildalton, Kilcholmkill, and Kilnaughtan.⁷ There seems also to have been a church at Killearn or Killean near the Mull of Oe.⁸

The chroniclers of the fifteenth century place a cell of monks in Helantexa or Heirlancepa, the modern island Texa.⁹ Archdeacon Monro in 1549 says, 'At the south coast of Ila there is ane iyle callit in Erische Tisgay, ane myle of lenthe guid maineland, and ane kirk in it.'¹⁰ This cell or church is marked in Blaeu's map, but modern accounts make no allusion to it.

In 1400 John of the Isles, styled John Mor, the son of John of Ila the first Lord of the Isles, appears in record with the style 'of Dunyveg and Glens,' the latter part of which he acquired by marriage with Marjory Bisset the heiress of the district called Glens in Antrim.¹¹ He was succeeded in 1427 by his son Donald, surnamed Balloch, who in 1449, 1461, and 1463 appears in record as Donald of the Isles of Dunnovaig and Glynnis, the kinsman of John of Yle Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles.¹² Donald was succeeded about 1476 by his son John, who in 1463 witnessed along with his father a charter of John of Yle, and whose son John, styled Cathanach or Canochsone, was lord of Dunyveg and Glens from 1493 to 1500, when he was executed at Edinburgh with several of his sons.¹³ For some time afterwards the surviving sons of John Cathanach held no lands in Scotland.¹⁴ In 1517 Colin Earl of Argyle was commissioned by King James V. to treat with the Islesmen for remission of their crimes, except with Sir Donald of the Isles, his brethren, and the Clandonald.¹⁵ In 1531 Alexander [the son of] John Canochissone of Dunnevaig and Glynnis had a remission for various crimes from the same king.¹⁶ In 1545

Queen Mary for the good service done in her minority, especially in opposing the English, by James Makconnyll of Dunneveyg and Glennys (the son of Alexander, and grandson of John Cathanach), granted to him and to his heirs male, with remainder in succession to his brother Angus and his heirs male, to his brother Colin (or Coile) and his heirs male, to his brother Soirlie and his heirs male, to his brother Alexander and his heirs male, to his brother Donald Gorme M'Connyll and his heirs male, and to his own heirs male whomsoever, the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, including the following lands in the island of Islay, namely, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Navisburgh, 16s. 8d. of Rosker, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Crebeye (or Erabe), $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Mulletre, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Killenane, 16s. 8d. of Cattadull, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Ardallowane (or Ardhallowane), 16s. 8d. of Clagintarroch, 16s. 8d. of Truddirnes, 8s. 4d. of Cragfyn, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Kantowr, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Ardmannoch and Ardmoir, 8s. 4d. of Tallaland (or Callaland), 16s. 8d. of Balleattrach (or Baleichtrae), 16s. 8d. of Balleclauchauch, 16s. 8d. of Teirvachagane, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Balletarsint (or Balletersene), $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Stromenismoir, 16s. 8d. of Proaig, 5 marks of Dunnovaig, 16s. 8d. of Kilcallumkill, 5 marks of the two Ballenachtanis, 5 marks of Torrasdull and Balleneyle, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Taycarmegane (or Teytermentan), $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of the two Lennyne, and 8s. 8d. of Taydrum (or Tyndrwm).¹ In the same year James M'Connell of Dunneveg granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle power to dispose of half the lands of Ila, then in the hands of Hector M'Lain of Dowart.² In 1558 Francis and Mary, King and Queen of Scots, by a charter dated at Paris, 5th May, on the narrative that James Makconnell of Dunnyveig and Glennis and his predecessors had possessed certain lands from time immemorial, and that all their writs had been destroyed in time of war, granted to him anew for his good service against the English, with remainder to his brothers Angus, Coll, Alexander, and Sorle (or Charles), and to his own heirs whomsoever, those lands erected into the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, and including the lands in Islay before specified.³ In 1564 Queen Mary granted the same barony, including the same lands, to Archibald M'Concill the son of James M'Concill of Dunnyvaig and Glennis.⁴

In 1408 Donald Lord of the Isles (styled Macdomhnaill) granted in heritage to Bhrian Bicaire Mhagaod, for his good services to Donald himself and to his father, the lands of Bailebiorra, Machaire-learga-riabhoighe, Cionntragha, Grastol, Tocamol, Wreggoge (or Weeggoge), the two Glenapstols, Cracobus, Cornubus, and Baileneachtan, for a yearly reddendo of four cows fit for slaughter at Macdomhnaill's house, or the sum of 42 marks.⁵ In 1562 Queen Mary granted to James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis, for seven years, for his allegiance, certain lands in Kintyre and Islay, including $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Dowach, 16s. 8d. of Ballargrannaye, $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Learabolsay, 3 marks and 16d. of Killeyane (or Kilyayan), $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Gill and Glenawstill, 16s. 8d. of Grawstill, 16s. 8d. of Kentrahaye (or Kentray), $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Balliekatalzin (or Balhaltregin), 16s. 8d. of Stromenis-beg, 16s. 8d. of Tokomwill and Cornobolsay, 16s. 8d. of

Craigabolsay, 2½ marks of Glennagadill, 8s. 4d. of Begasgok (or Wgasgok), and 8s. 4d. of Glennawstill-wauchrauche (or wehtraich).¹ In 1563 and 1564 the same queen renewed the grant.² In 1584 King James VI., on the narrative that Angus M'Connell of Dunavaig and his predecessors had long been tenants of those lands, granted them anew to him and his heirs for nine years, for yearly payment of 13s. 4d. for every markland.³

In 1539 King James V. granted to Alane M'Clane, the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, the nonentry and other dues of certain lands in the sheriffdom of Terbert, including five marklands in Yla called Knokrenissale, Ardarrayecht, Ardalesyne, and Argarty.⁴ In 1542 the same king granted the same lands to Neill M'Neill, the natural son of the deceased Neill M'Neill of Geya.⁵ In 1552 Queen Mary granted the nonentry and other dues of the same lands to Hector M'Clane, the natural son of the deceased Alane M'Clane the brother of Hector M'Clane of Dowart, with remainder to the latter.⁶ In 1553 Queen Mary granted to the same Hector the son of Alane the same lands, which had formerly belonged to Malcolm Makneill of Geya, were in the hands of the sovereign for 60 years after his decease by reason of nonentry, and were appraised and sold to Hector M'Clane for the sum of £17,402, 14s. due for nonentry to him as the Queen's donatar, including the sheriff's fee for apprising the lands.⁷ In 1554 Neill Makneill of Geya sold the same lands to James Makconnell of Dunnavog and Glennis, and Agnes Campbell his wife, with remainder to his brothers Angus, Coill, Alexander Og, and Sorell Boy Makeconnell, and to his own heirs whomsoever.⁸ In the same year Queen Mary granted to James Makconnell a charter of the lands.⁹

On the east coast of the parish are two villages, named Port Ellinor and Lagavoulin.¹⁰

On the side of Lagavoulin bay opposite to the village, on a large peninsular rock, stand the remains of the ancient castle of Dunnyveg (or Dun Naomhaig), a round tower of stone protected on the land side by a thick earthen mound, beyond which are the ruins of several houses separated from the main building by a strong wall.¹¹ This castle, from which the Maconalds of Dunnyveg had their original style, is mentioned by Fordun about 1400, and by succeeding chroniclers, who say that in the large island called Ile the Lord of the Isles had then two mansions and the castle of Donowak.¹² In 1505 a confirmation by King James IV. to John Makkane of Ardnamurchan of all former grants included the house and fortalice of Donavagan in Ile.¹³ In 1519 King James V. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile, along with the dues of the lands which belonged to the deceased John Makeayne of Ardnamurquhan, the keeping of the house of Dunnewig.¹⁴ In 1540 the sum of £9 was paid from the royal treasury to land and the south of Ireland 'Mackay,' in the middle of Ireland 'Mackew,' and in Ulster 'Magee.' Note by the Rev. William Reeves, D.D. Some of the names contained in the grant are Norwegian, the others are Celtic.

Archibald Stewart, 'to pay thre gunnaris ane monethis wage in the castellis of Dunnewik and Iland Lochbrun (Lochguirm) in Ilay.'¹ In 1542 the same Archibald Stewart was captain of Dunnyvaig, and (as above mentioned) was appointed by King James V. governor with the power of sheriff within the bounds of Yley.² The castle was afterwards alternately in the hands of the King and of the Clandonald till the year 1615, when that clan finally succumbed to the power of King James VI.³ In 1621 it was confirmed by the Scotch parliament to Sir John Campbell of Calder, as part of the barony of Yla.⁴

On the hill of Dun Borreraig are the ruins of a circular hill fort, 52 feet in diameter inside, with walls 12 feet thick, a gallery within the walls, and a stone seat two feet high round the area.⁵

Another hill fort, now a mere ruin, occupied the summit of Dun Aidh, a high and nearly inaccessible rock near the Mull of Oe.⁶

A circular mound with terraces, said to be almost unique in the Western Isles, is supposed to have been used by the Norwegians as a thing-place or seat of judgement.⁷

Near the bay of Knock are two large upright flags called 'the two stones of Islay,' said to mark the grave of Yula a Danish princess, from whom the island is supposed to have derived its name.⁸

In the old burying-ground of Kildalton there are two large rudely sculptured stone crosses.⁹

small lakes (among which is Loch Guirm), a coast in general rocky, and at its extreme north and south points, known as Ardnave and the Point of Rinns, a few small islands. Loch Gruinart, an arm of the sea, is in 1549 described by Archdeacon Monro as 'ane salt water loch callit Lochegunord, quherin runs the water of Gyninord, with high sandey bankes, upon the quhilke bankes upon the sea lyes infinit selccheis, quhilkeis are slain with doges learnt to the same effect.'¹

In 1427 a charter of Alexander of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Master of Ross, is witnessed by Master Neil the son of Celestine, bachelor utriusque juris and rector of Killcomman.² In 1508 King James IV. presented Sir John M'Gilleglasch to the rectory of Kilcomane, which was vacant by the decease of Sir Malcolm Makgillaspik.³ In January 1511 the same king presented Master John Monro to the vicarage of Kilcomane, vacant by the decease of Sir John Brois.⁴ In March of the same year he presented John Cristane Makilbrid to the same vicarage, then vacant by the decease of Sir John Donaldsoun.⁵ In 1535 Master Archibald M'Carbre was rector of Kilhomene.⁶ In 1536 King James V. presented Master Rodoric Farquhar Hectorissone to three churches in the Isles, including the church of Kilconnane, and vacant by the decease of Master Mertin M'Gilmertyne.⁷ In 1542 the same king presented James Man the son of Master Duncan Man to the same rectory, vacant by the decease of Master Archibald M'Carbry, who, as we have seen, was rector in 1535.⁸ In 1543 Queen Mary presented Ninian M'Vicar to the rectory of Kilquhomen, then vacant or when vacant by the inability, resignation, or decease of the rector.⁹ In 1546 the same queen presented Sir Alexander M'Alestir, vicar of Colmele (or Colinele), to the same rectory, which had been resigned by Sir Ninian M'Vicar.¹⁰ In 1547 she presented Sir Archibald Makylwray to the rectory of Kilcomman, vacant by the inability of James Omay the son of the deceased Dounoche Omay, or in whatsoever other way.¹¹ In 1548 the patronage of the parsonage of Kilcoman, when vacant, was granted to Hector M'Gillecoun of Doward and his heirs, till Queen Mary should attain the age of fourteen years.¹²

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Coemgen, stood on the west coast to the south of Loch Guirm, where also the present church was built in 1825.¹³ There is a parliamentary church at Portnahaven at the south end of the parish.¹⁴

Before the year 1380 John the first Lord of the Isles is said to have roofed and furnished the chapel of Eorsay-Elan, or the island of Oersa (the Oversa of Buchanan and Blaeu), situated near the Point of Rinns.¹⁵ In 1535, and again in 1541, King James V. presented Sir Donald

Makintagart to the chaplainry of Ilaneirsay, vacant or when vacant by the resignation, promotion, or decease of Sir Cristopher Makwia (or Makvia).¹ 'At the west poynt of Ilay,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'lyes ane iylle callit by the Erische Ellan Ouersay, ane myle in lenth. It hath ane paroch kirke, and is very guid for fishing, inhabit and manurit, with ane right dangerous kyle and stream callit Corey Garrache; na man dare enter in it bot at ane certain tyme of the tyde, or ellis he will perish.'² In 1556 Queen Mary presented Sir Neil M'Cawla chaplain to the chaplainry of the chapel of Illanorsay and Grigydhill, vacant by the decease of Sir Donald M'Intagirt.³

There was another chapel on Island Nave (the Ylen Naomh of Blaeu) off the headland called Ardnave, which Archdeacon Monro styles 'ane iyle called by the Erisch Ellan-nese (Ellanneve ?), with ane kirke in it.'⁴ Its ruins and large cemetery still remain.⁵

There was a church or chapel at Kilchieran (or Kilkeran) near Nerbols, and another at Kilnave on the north coast of the parish, of both which the ruins seem to be still in existence.⁶

In 1542 a new grant of certain lands as part of the barony of Doward by King James V. to Hector M'Clane of Doward in liferent, and to Hector his son and his heirs specified in the charter of entail of the barony, included one-fourth of the lands of Schynnerll, one-fourth of Cowle, one-fourth of Arehallich and Forland, one-fourth of Corpellane, one-fourth of Garrynsay and Kilnalen, and one-fourth of Garbols and Dowach.⁷ In 1615 Hector Makcleane of Dowart was served heir male to Hector his grandfather in the barony of Dowart, including the same lands.⁸

In 1561 the abbot of Iona held the land of Ardneiv in Ila, of the extent of £8, 13s. 4d. and the £20 lands of Laintymanniche and Mwichelische in the same island.⁹

In 1562 Queen Mary granted to James Makconell of Dunnovaig and Glennis for seven years for his allegiance certain lands in Kintyre and Ilay, including 2½ marks of Grwnort, 2½ marks of Kendrochat, 2½ marks of the Lek, 16s. 8d. of Sohy (or Soze), 2½ marks of Smawll, 2½ marks of Megirne, 16s. 8d. of Sannagebeg, 2½ of Balnabe (or 16s. 8d. of Ballinabie and Gartnahalla), 16s. 8d. of Claignach, 5 marks of Kilchowman, 16s. 8d. of Kenasgill, 2½ marks of Kilkeranebeg and the Braid of Kilkerane (or 16s. 8d. of Kilkeranebeg, and 25s. of the Braid), 2½ marks of Kilkeranemoir, 2½ marks of Tormystie, 16s. 8d. of Culwyne (or Cultquhen), 2½ marks (or 16s. 8d.) of Lossaid, 16s. 8d. of Kealsay, 16s. 8d. of Kilcathan, 2½ marks of Ballegallie, 3 marks of Gladilfoill (or Cladefield), 2½ marks of Aelisty, 2½ marks of the other Aelistie, 16s. 8d. of Octoforda, 16s. 8d. of Amod, 16s. 8d. of Corrannay, 2½ marks of Glassance, 16s. 8d. of Lorgba, 16s. 8d. of Cultorsay, 16s. 8d. of Garthcarra, 2½ marks of Quennesby, 16s. 8d. of Kentra, 16s. 8d. of Oclisty, 16s. 8d. of Arrastill (or Arrafield), half a mark of Crosbrige, half a mark of Hallegger

In 1628 John M'Beath was served heir to his father Fergus M'Beath of Ballenab in 6s. 8d. of Areset, 16s. 8d. of Howe, and half a mark of Saligo.⁶

The parish has three villages, Portnahaven, Port Wymss, and Port Charlotte.⁷

Of the two mansions in Ile mentioned by Fordun as belonging to the Lord of the Isles the castle of Lochguirm, situated on an island in the lake of the same name, was doubtless one.⁸ In 1540 there was paid from the royal treasury of King James V. to Archibald Stewart captain of Dunyveg the sum of £9, 'to pay thre gunnaris anc monethis wage in the castellis of Dunnewik and Iland Lochbrun in Ilay.'⁹ In 1584 King James VI. granted the castle of Ellanlochgurme with the neighbouring lands for nine years to Angus M'Connell of Dunavaig.¹⁰ The remains of the castle of Lochguirm are those of a strong square fort with a round bastion at each corner.¹¹

At Kilchoman the Lord of the Isles (or Macdonald of Isla) is said to have had a seat, near which is a deep glen where he is believed to have kept his cattle.¹²

In 1598 at the head of Lochgruinar was fought one of the battles between the Macdonalds and Macleans, in which there were slain on the one side Sir Lachlan Maclean and about 300 of his men, and on the other only about 30 of the Macdonalds.¹³ It is traditionally said that on that occasion the church of Kilnave, in which some of the Macleans had taken refuge, was burned by the Macdonalds, and that Sir Lachlan Maclean was buried in the church of Kilchoman.¹⁴

Kilernadill¹—Kilaridil²—Killearn.³ (Map, No. 9.)

THIS parish, formerly named Kilearnadale, and now united to Colonsay, includes the islands of Jura, Scarba, Lunga, Belnahua, the Mare Isles, of which the chief are Dunchonnill, Garvelloch, Coulbrandon, and Elachnave, and a few islands of inferior size. With the exception of a narrow border of low land on the east coast, the whole island of Jura, which constitutes by far the largest portion of the parish, is rugged and mountainous, rising at its southern end in Bein-an-Oir, the highest of several conical peaks known as the Paps of Jura, to the height of 2500 or 2700 feet above the sea. Loch Tarbert, an arm of the sea, on the west, and Tarbert bay on the east, nearly meet and divide the island in two. Between Jura and Scarba lies the gulf or strait of Corryvreckan, in which the meeting of the tides, said to be impeded by a large sunken rock, produces a sort of whirlpool dangerous to ships.⁴

Of this church there appears to be no notice before the Reformation but that of Archdeacon Monro, who styles it 'ane chappel, sometime the paroch kirke, Kilernadill.'⁵ In 1622 Thomas bishop of the Isles granted to William Stirling of Achyll a lease of the whole parsonage and vicarage teinds of the isle of Jura, including the lands of Ardfin, Achaleik, Broastill, Strones, Sannag, Ericrage, Knokawollen, Killarnadill, Largybreck, and others.⁶ The parsonage and vicarage teinds of the islands of Ilachinive and Kilbrandon belonged to the priory of Oransay, and were in 1630 granted with the lands by Andrew bishop of Rapho and prior of Oransay to Colin Campbell rector of Craigness.⁷ In 1635 the grant was confirmed by Neill bishop of the Isles, to which bishoprick the priory of Oransay was by that time annexed.⁸

The church stood at Kilearnadale near the south end of Jura, where a church built in 1780 is still used as one of the parish churches.⁹

In the isle of Scarbay about the year 1400 there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, in which it was believed that many miracles were performed.¹⁰ This is the Kilmore of Blaeu, and the modern Kilmorie, the ruins of which are still to be seen.¹¹

Elachnave or Ilachaneue (the Isle of Saints, the Helant-leneou of the chroniclers, and by them said to contain a sanctuary), the southern of the Garveloeh group, has some remarkable remains of early religious occupation.¹ Near the landing place at the south east of the island there is a number of buildings evidently ecclesiastical. The most remarkable, though half ruined, is a bee-hive dome with low covered passages connecting it with another small circular building and with the open air. Another building has evidently been a chapel, with only one small square window (to the east) much splayed to both sides, having the door in the west end. Throughout there is no moulding or mark of chisel or mason's tool, no appearance of an arch, and no mortar. There is a cemetery which has been used to more recent times, and the crowd of low buildings has all the appearance of a monastic establishment; and, if it was so, these are perhaps the oldest vestiges of the sort now standing in Scotland.²

In the parish are caves called 'corpachs,' in which the dead are believed to have rested for a time on their way to Iona.³ Two islands in Loch Tarbert are styled by Blaeu Yl-na-heglish.⁴

The early history of the islands which compose this parish is the same with that of the other Southern Isles.⁵ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted in heritage to John of Ile (afterwards Lord of the Isles) for his allegiance the island of Dure and others; and in 1336 the grant was confirmed by King Edward III.⁶ About the year 1343 King David II. granted to Angus the son of John of the Isles (of the Ardnamurchan family) the island of Dewre and others, for the usual services by sea and land.⁷ In the same year the same king granted the island to John Lord of the Isles.⁸ About 1400 Dura is described as 24 miles long, with few inhabitants.⁹ In 1475 it was forfeited with the other islands by John the last Lord of the Isles, and in 1476 it was restored to him by King James III., who in 1478 confirmed the new grant.¹⁰ In 1536 the royal property in the Isles included the island of Skarba, the islands of Longa and Gallinaho, and apparently also the island of Jura.¹¹ In 1549 the island of Duray is described as 'ane fyne forrest for deire, inhabit and manurit at the coist syde, pairt be Clandonald of Kyntyre, pairt be Macgillayne of Douard, pairt be Macgillayne of Kinlochbuy, pairt be M'Duffithe of Colvansay.'¹²

In 1354 John of Larin lord of Argyle quitclaimed to John of Yle Lord of the Isles certain lands of which the latter had charters from King David II. or from King Robert Bruce, including the castle of Dunconill and the upper part of Duray.¹³ In 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleone a number of lands and castles, including the half of the constabulary of the castles of Dunconail and Dunkerd, with the island of Garbealeach, the two islands of Garbealan and Seealda, the pennyland of Moylbuyg in Scarba, and the upper part of the lands of Dura.¹⁴ Fordun about 1400, and the chroniclers of the following century, enumerate among the Western Isles 'Garveleane near the great castle of Donquhonyle, six miles distant from other isles in the ocean.¹ In 1496 King James IV. granted in heritage to Lachlan Makgilleon, the natural son of Hector Makgilleon of Doward, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to Hector's brother Donald and his heirs, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleon, certain lands which Hector had resigned, and which were then erected into the barony of Doward, and included Dunconnill with the isles belonging to it, le Mulboy (or Mulroy) in Scarba, and Troeg, Owenegeill, Glennamuk, Ards kalanis, Cammys, Ernystill, and Ardmenys, in Jura (apparently the lands described in the older writs as the upper part of Dura.)² In 1510 the same king granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart of Appin the lands of Dowart and others, including 5 marklands called Ardbanich, Cammis, Terbert, Troagh, Glennamuk, Hvanagell, and Myliroy, of the old extent of 10 marks, lying in the island of Dura and sheriffdom of Perth, all which Duncan had acquired from the deceased Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart in lieu of a debt of 4500 marks, and redeemable on payment of that sum.³ In 1540 the same lands, with the castle of Dunchonnaill and its isles, were resigned by Hector Makelane of Dowart, and granted by King James V. to his son and heir Hector Makelane and his male heirs, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brother Alan and his heirs, to his brother John and his heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever of the surname and arms of Makelane.⁴ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro enumerates among the Isles 'Dunchonill, ane iyle so namit from Conal Kernache, ane strenth, quhilk is als meikle as to say in Englische ane round castle.'⁵ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir to Hector his grandfather in various lands, including Dunchonill and the lands in Jura and Scarba above named.⁶ In 1629 Archibald Campbell of Kilmelford, with the consent of his son Mr. Colin Campbell parson of Craignish, resigned to Archibald Lord Lorne the isles of Garvelach and Dunchonnill, Leckbowy (apparently in Scarba), and some other lands, with the bailiary, crownship, and sheriffship of certain lands and islands, including Garvelach, Dunchonnell, Ballechoan, and Jura.⁷

In 1494 King James IV. granted anew to John M'Gilleoun of Lochboye 2½ marks of Ardlisay and Knokinsawyll in Dowray, and the pennyland of Kilmore in Scarba, together of the extent of 2 marks, one pennyland in Lunga, and other lands, all which were John M'Gilleoun's in heritage, and were held by him of John of Ile, through whose forfeiture they were in the King's hands.⁸ In 1505 the same king confirmed to John Makkane of Ardnamurchan all grants he had formerly made to him of lands in the island of Durey and elsewhere.⁹ In 1506 he granted to the same John 2½ marks in Dievra, namely, a great eighth part (magnam octauam partem) of Aridsearnula, and an eighth of Knoknaseolaman, which had been held by his grandfather Alexander of the deceased Donald of the Isles lord of Doniewag and Glynis, and were in the King's hands by forfeiture of the deceased John Lord of the Isles, the son of the deceased Alexander Earl of Ross.¹⁰ In 1534 John Makgilleoune of Lochboy granted to his son Murdoch various lands, including the $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks of Ardlisay and Knokinsawill in Dowray, and the pennyland of Kylmoyre in Scarba, together extending to two marklands, and one pennyland in the island of Lunga.¹ In 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.² In 1542 the same lands were resigned by Murdoc Makgilleoun, and granted anew by King James V. to him and his heirs male in free barony, with remainder to his brother Charles Makgilleoun and his heirs male.³ In 1615 Hector M'Cleane of Lochbowie was served heir to his great-grandfather Murdoch in the same lands, then included in the barony of Moy.⁴

The barony of Bar in North Kintyre, granted to James Makconnyll of Dunnyveyig by Queen Mary in 1545, granted anew or confirmed to the same James by Francis and Mary, King and Queen of Scots, in 1558, and granted by the same queen to Archibald the son and apparent heir of James Makconnyll in 1564, included 16s. 8d. of Ardornell and Knokprovin (or Hardharnocill and Knokrowin), 16s. 8d. of Heryne and Largebrek, 16s. 8d. of Kilharnadull and Auchichtoyvs (or Achichoise), 16s. 8d. of Knokfelomane, 16s. 8d. of Crakage, 16s. 8d. of Sannok, 16s. 8d. of Achilleik, 16s. 8d. of Strowne (or Stronowne), 16s. 8d. of Broadulle, 16s. 8d. of Ardfin, and 16s. 8d. of Knokbrak, all in the isle of Jura and sheriffdom of Terbert.⁵

In 1616 the lands of Skenan in Jura, formerly belonging to the priory of Oransay as a part of its patrimony, were granted by King James VI. to Andrew bishop of the Isles, and with other lands united into the tenandry of Oransay.⁶

In 1630 Andrew, bishop of Rapho and prior of Oransay, granted to Colin Campbell rector of Craigness the isles of Ilachinive and Kilbrandan, with the parsonage and vicarage teinds of the same, which belonged to the priory of Oransay.⁷ In 1635 Neill bishop of the Isles, to whose bishoprick the priory of Oransay was annexed, with the consent of the dean and chapter, confirmed the grant of the bishop of Rapho, and granted also the same lands anew to the same Colin Campbell.⁸

On the island of Freuch or Fruchlan in the Sound of Islay are the ruins of Claig Castle, a square tower with walls nine feet thick, defended by a deep ditch, and formerly used by the Macdonalds of Islay as a prison.⁹

At the north end of the bay of Small Isles are the remains of an encampment, consisting of three oval embanked hollows, defended on one side by deep ditches, and on the other by regular bastions.¹⁰

In various parts of the island may be seen a low wall running along a declivity generally towards a lake or precipice, and having at the lower end a deep pit, said to be an ancient contrivance for capturing the wild boar.¹¹ 'All the deire,' says Archdeacon Monro, 'of the west part of that forrest will be callit be tainchess to that narrow entry (the isthmus between Loch

The name of the island is derived by Archdeacon Monro from the word Deire (deer), an animal which it appears once abounded in the island, but is now very scarce.² Martin derives it from Dih and Rah, two Danish brothers who killed each other at Knockcrom, where two stones, each about 7 feet high, are said to be erected over their graves.³

Kilchattan⁴—Kilouran.⁵ (Map, No. 10.)

THIS parish includes the islands of Colonsay and Oronsay, separated by a narrow strait which is dry at low water, and one or two smaller isles immediately adjoining. Its main features are rugged hills of no great height, and in the lower parts, especially towards the south, tracts of rich pasture-land.

The earliest notice of Colonsay as a parish appears to be in 1549 by Archdeacon Monro, who says of the island, 'It hath ane paroch kirke.'⁶ In 1632 John bishop of the Isles granted to Coll M'Gillespick V'Donald of Colonsay a lease of the teinds of the parsonage and vicarage of the parish of Kilchattan in Colonsay, and of the whole lands of that island.⁷ In 1667 a new grant of the earldom of Argyle by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald included the patronage of the churches and chaplainries in Colonsay and the islands annexed to it.⁸

The church, dedicated to Saint Cathan, stood at Kilchattan on the west side of the island of Colonsay, where there is now a modern church.⁹ About 1700 the 'principal church' stood at the village of Kilouran at the north end of the island, the alleged site of an abbey dedicated to Saint Oran the friend of Saint Columba.¹⁰

There appear to have been several chapels within the bounds of the two islands.¹¹

At Kiloran (the cell or church of Oran) in Colonsay there is said to have been an abbey, founded by Saint Columba or by a Lord of the Isles, and latterly inhabited by canons regular of the order of Saint Augustine brought from the abbey of Holyrood.¹² Father Hay informs us that the name of the founder had been lost through the mistake of transcribers or the ignorance or negligence of librarians—that the date of the foundation was illegible, but that the occasion of it was a vow made by the founder when in imminent danger—that there existed in the Vatican a letter addressed to the convent—that the first abbot ruled for seven years, and died an old man in the odour of sanctity—and that his successor, after ruling for some time, resigned his office to the great regret of those under his charge, and returned to Holyrood.¹ It is traditionally believed that the abbey of Colonsay, which in all probability had decayed after the retirement of the second abbot recorded by Father Hay, was that of which Oransay was the priory.² Part of its cloisters appear to have remained till about the middle of the eighteenth century, and the ruins of the church are still to be seen.³

In the island of Oransay, on which Saint Columba is said to have first landed, stood a priory believed to have been founded by that saint, and afterwards changed by a Lord of the Isles into a priory of canons regular brought from Holyrood.⁴ Its subsequent history till the era of the Reformation is unknown. Colin prior of Orisoi died in the year 1510.⁵ The priory is entered in the Libellus Taxationum, a record about the date of 1535, but the valuation is not given.⁶ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro says that in Oransay there is ‘ane monastery of chanons.’⁷ In 1554 Queen Mary addressed a letter to Pope Julius III., recommending for presentation to the priorate of Oransay Sir John Makmvrich a canon of the monastery, on the resignation of Donald Macduffie (Donaldus Duphaci), to whom was reserved the liferent of the fruits of the priory, and who on the demission or death of Sir John, or the occurrence of a vacancy in any other way, was to have regress to the priorate.⁸ On the 19th of April in the same year, or in 1555, Queen Mary presented Master Robert Lawmont, chancellor of the Chapel Royal at Stirling, to the priorate of Orosai, then vacant by the death of Donald Makfee (the same as Donaldus Duphaci), and collation to which belonged to Alexander archbishop of Athens and bishop of the Isles.⁹ In 1592 King James VI. presented Donaldus Dufacius to the parsonage and vicarage of Orvinsay, vacant by the decease of Malcolme M’Duffie.¹⁰ In 1616 King James VI. granted to Andrew bishop of the Isles the 5 marklands of the isle of Oransay, 16s. of Garvolt in Colonsay, the two Corneiks, the east end of Coll, the lands of Skenan in Jura, and the lands of Brockaich, Killenew, Altshenaig, and Sowie, in Mull, all formerly belonging to the priory of Oransay as part of its patrimony—and the lands called the west end of Coll extending to seven ‘quarters land,’ the lands called Haltyren of Arneish, and others, formerly belonging to the nunnery of Icolmkill—all united into the tenandry of Oransay.¹¹ In 1623 William Stirling of Achyll had a lease of the teinds of Oransay from Thomas bishop of the Isles.¹ In 1630 Andrew bishop of Rapho and prior of Oransay granted to Colin Campbell rector of Craigness the isles of Ilachinive and Kilbrandan, with the parsonage and vicarage teinds of the same, both which belonged to the priory.² In 1635 Neill bishop of the Isles, to which bishoprick the priory of Oransay was annexed, with the consent of his dean and chapter, confirmed the grant of the bishop of Rapho.³ In 1667 the earldom of Argyle, as granted anew to Earl Archibald by King Charles II., included the barony of Balweill, in which were included the isle of Oransay and other islands, together with the parsonage and vicarage of that barony and of the isle of Oransay.⁴

Any information that we possess respecting the internal usages and regulations of the priory is furnished by Father Hay, who had seen what he styles 'a booke of rites of this place in parchment.'⁵ From internal evidence however, and from other causes, considerable doubt may be entertained of the authority and accuracy of his account.⁶

Of the priory buildings there still remain the church and a portion of the cloisters.⁷ The church, dedicated to Saint Oran, and built in the early English style, is about 60 feet long by 18 wide, and has a side chapel containing the tomb of Murchard Macduffie of Colonsay, who died in 1539, and what is generally styled the tomb of the abbot Macduffie (probably the prior of that name above mentioned).⁸ Adjoining the church is a cloister, measuring externally 41 feet square, and internally 28 feet 8 inches, of which one side is ruinous, the opposite side has five small round arches, and the remaining two sides have each seven arches or compartments, each compartment of five slabs, two upright as pillars, one crossing them as plinth, and above it other two meeting at top and forming an acute angle.⁹ From Martin's account it appears that the side now ruined had been of a construction similar to the latter two.¹⁰ The rest of the buildings are ruinous.¹¹ Near the church is a cross, 12 feet high, with an inscription, as above noticed, recording the death of Colin prior of Orisoi.¹² About the year 1700 a precious stone, said to have been taken from a cross which was fixed on the altar of the church, was in the possession of the family of Macduffie.¹³ At the same period there stood about a quarter of a mile from the church a cairn and cross, the latter named Macduffie's cross, at which the bodies of the chiefs of that clan were said to have halted on their way to burial.¹⁴

The early history of Colonsay (the Colosus of Adomnan), as one of the Southern Isles, is nearly the same as that of Bute.¹⁵ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted to John of Isla for his allegiance the island of Golwonche and others, which in 1336 were confirmed to the same John by King Edward III.¹⁶ About the year 1343 King David II. granted the same island to Angus the son of John of the Isles his kinsman.¹ In that year he granted the same island and others to John Lord of the Isles.² In 1376 the same John resigned the island of Colonsay to King Robert II., who then granted it anew to him and Margaret his wife, the King's daughter, and to his heirs by her.³ Colonsay was one of the islands forfeited by John last Lord of the Isles in 1475, restored to him in 1476, and finally forfeited by him in 1493.⁴ In 1536 it is included in a list of the crown lands in the Isles.⁵

In 1463 Donald Macduffie or Macfie of Colonsay witnesses a charter by John Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross.⁶ Morphe or Murchard M'Phe of Colonsay appears in record in 1531, and seems to be the same whose death is recorded in 1539.⁷ 'The ile,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'is bruikit be ane gentle capitane callit M'Duffyhe, and pertened of auld to Clandonald of Kyntyre.'⁸ In 1609 there appears in record Donald Macfie in Colonsay, and in 1615 Malcolm Macfie of Colonsay.⁹

The barony of Bar, granted by Queen Mary in 1545 to James M'Connyll of Dunneveyg and Glennys, granted anew to him in 1558 by the same queen and her husband the Dauphin of France, and granted in 1564 by the same queen to Archibald M'Concil the son and apparent heir of James, included 16s. 8d. of Balleramynmoir, 16s. 8d. of Ardschenis, 16s. 8d. of Balletow, 16s. 8d. of Machrebeg, 16s. 8d. of Ballemoir, 16s. 8d. of Karremoir, 16s. 8d. of Machereneclue, 16s. 8d. of Ballewetrach-Kilcattane, 16s. 8d. of Balleinima (or Ballemua), 16s. 8d. of Balleromyndow (or Ballemyndow), 16s. 8d. of Scalvasage, 5 marks of Killorane, and 2½ marks of Ballenohard, all lying in the island of Colowansay.¹⁰

In 1667 a new grant of the earldom of Argyle by King Charles II. to Earl Archibald included the isle of Colonsay and others, with the patronage of the churches and chaplainries of the same.¹¹

a distinct parish, but at some subsequent period, which does not appear to be on record, was attached to the parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvicewin, one of those into which the island of Mull was divided about the year 1730, and which itself consists of three ancient parishes.¹

Iona is about three miles long by a mile and a half broad. It is separated from the isle of Mull by a strait or sound about a mile wide, the fretum Hyonae Insulae of Adomnan, the Pollaise of Monro, and the Bay of Finfort of Blaeu. Its surface is low, rising into many irregular hills, in general not exceeding 100 feet in height, the highest of all, Dun-ii, being only 330 feet above the level of the sea. The coast is diversified by small rocky bays and headlands.

In the year 521 was born in Ireland Colm or Colum (in Latin Columba), the son of Fedhlimid M'Fergus and Aethnea M'Nave.² This person, etiam a puero, says his biographer Adomnan, deditus christiano tyrocinio et sapientiae studiis, was afterwards (apparently from the number of churches which he founded) styled Coluimcille, that is, 'Columba of churches.'³ About the year 545 he is said to have founded a noble monastery in Ireland, named from the number of oaks in the place Dearthach (now Durrough in King's County.)⁴ In 561, Diarmid King of Ireland having refused to release at Columba's intercession a freeman (apparently a disciple of the saint), the defeat of his forces at the battle of Culedreibhne was foretold by Columba, who exhorted his own people to war with Diarmid, and who was therefore excommunicated by the Synod of Ireland.⁵ On that account, by the advice of Finian bishop of Clonfert (Clunardensis) and of Brendan abbot of Birr, Columba in 563 left Ireland (then styled Scotia) and came into Scotland (Albania).⁶ He was accompanied by twelve of his disciples, whose names are given as follow—Baithen (or Comin) and Cobthach, the sons of Brendin; Ernaan, the uncle of Columba; Diormitius (Diarmid), his ministrator; Rus and Fethno (or Fechno), the sons of Rodain; Scandal the son of Ende, the son of Bresail, the son of Neil; Luguid Mocuheimne; Eochoid; Thorannu (or Tochannu) Mocufirectea; Cairnaan the son of Branduib, the son of Meilgi; and Grillaan.⁷ At that time the King of the Dalriads (or Scots) was Conal the son of Comgal, and the King of the Picts was Bridius (or Brudeus) the son of Meilochon, the former of whom gave to Columba the island of Hii on which to found a monastery, and the latter with his people he is said to have converted to Christianity.¹ The island is described as consisting at this time of five hides, or, according to Bede, of five families.² Here about the year 565 Columba founded his most celebrated monastery.³ Thenceforth his chief residence was in Iona for the remaining 34 years of his life, during which he visited various parts of Ireland, Scotland, and the Isles, and founded many churches and monasteries, all which appear to have been in some degree dependent on the monastery of Iona.⁴ 'That island,' says the venerable Bede, 'has for its ruler (rector) an abbot, who is a presbyter, to whose jurisdiction (juris) all the province, and even the bishops by an unusual practice are subject, according to the example of their first teacher, who was not a bishop, but a presbyter and monk.'⁵ Notwithstanding the fables which surround the actual history of Columba, there is no reason to doubt that, besides founding and fostering many religious establishments, he resided frequently among the Picts on the north of the Grampians or the range Drumalbin (trans dorsum Britanniae) — that his followers penetrated as far as Orkney, then under Pictish rule — that he visited Saint Kentigern, then residing 'at the place called Mellindonor' at Glasgow — and that in his own favourite residence Iona he inaugurated Aidan King of the Scots.⁶ His death, which among other things he is said to have foretold, took place about the year 597 within his own church in Iona, about the thirty-fourth year of his residence there, and the seventy-seventh of his age.⁷ From the hill which overlooked the monastery he gave it his blessing, and on descending he occupied himself in transcribing the psalter till he reached the middle of the 33d psalm (of the Vulgate), when, having finished a verse, and named Baitheneus as his successor, he performed the usual service in the church, returned from it, gave his last commands to his brethren, and about midnight retired again to the church, where he was soon after found dead before the altar by his faithful follower Diormitius.⁸ His body, 'wrapt in clean linen,' was interred with due veneration.⁹ *Qui, says Adomnan, secundum sententias scripturarum aeternis comes triumphis patribus additus, apostolis et prophetis consertus, numero aggregatus albatorum millium agnino in sanguine suas sanctorum qui laverunt stolas, agnum ductorem comitatur virgo immaculatus ab omni integer labe.*¹⁰

The grant of Iona to Columba is by some writers attributed to the King of the Picts, but Conal King of the Dalriads is now believed to have been the donor. The island, as will afterwards appear, was within the dominions of Conal, and not of Bridius.

Columba was succeeded in the rule of Iona by Baithne or Baitheneus (or Comin) the son of Brendin, one of the twelve who accompanied him from Ireland.¹ Baithne died about the year 600, and was succeeded by Laisren, who died in 605.² The next abbot was Fergna, who died about 620, about which time also was born Adomnan, afterwards abbot, and the biographer of Columba.³ Fergna was succeeded by Segenius or Segienus, who about the year 635 founded a church in the island of Rechrain.⁴ About the same time Bishop Aidan, a monk of Iona, at the request of Oswald King of Northumberland, was sent thither to instruct his subjects.⁵ Segenius died in 651, and was succeeded by Suibne who died in 657.⁶ In 652 Finan a Scot was made bishop of Lindisfarne, and in 661 was succeeded by Colman a monk of Iona, who, having maintained the Scotch side of the controversy regarding Easter, and being worsted, returned in 664 to Iona, and went thence to Ireland, where he founded the monastery of Mageo.⁷ In 653 Diuma, a Scotchman, and bishop of the Midland Angles, died, and was succeeded by another Scotchman named Ceollach, who not long after left his bishoprick and returned to Iona.⁸ In 668 or 669 Cumaine Añbe (or Cumin the Fair), abbot of Iona, and biographer of Columba, died.⁹ His successor Failbe (or Falbeus) about the year 673 sailed to Ireland, where he seems to have lived for some years as a hermit, after which he returned to Iona, and died there in 679.¹⁰ In 685 Egfrid King of the Northumbrians was slain in battle with the Picts, and was buried 'in Hii the island of Columba.'¹¹ About the same period a plague which desolated Europe was not experienced in the territories of the Picts and Scots, among whom the monasteries of Columba were still held in high estimation, although to some extent their discipline seems to have been relaxed.¹² Adomnan, the abbot of Iona, who relates this, and who twice during the prevalence of the plague visited Alfred King of the Saxons (apparently as an ambassador to treat for the release of captives), attributes the exemption of these districts from the plague, and the personal safety of himself and his companions, to the prayers of his venerable patron Saint Columba.¹³ During his stay in England he conformed to the rites of the Romish church, 'and being,' says Bede, 'earnestly admonished by many who were more learned than himself not to presume to live contrary to the universal custom of the church, either in the observance of Easter or in any other decrees, considering the small number of his followers situated in so distant a corner of the world, he changed his mind, and preferred what he had seen and heard in the English churches to the customs which he and his people had hitherto observed.'¹⁴ On his return to Iona he attempted to induce his own people and those who were subject to the monastery to adopt his own views, but without success.¹ In 689, according to Bede, Egbert a priest, who had long lived in Ireland, and who had resolved to go and preach to the Germans, was warned by one who had been a disciple of Saint Boisil at Mailros, that that saint had twice appeared to him in a dream, had forbidden Egbert to go to Germany, and had commanded him to go to the monastery of Columba, and give instructions to his disciples there, because they had degenerated.² Egbert disobeyed, and before reaching Germany was driven back by a storm.³ In 692 Adomnan went to Ireland to visit the Columbite monasteries, and succeeded in bringing nearly all who were not under the rule of Iona to observe Easter according to the Romish practice.⁴ In 696 or 697 he returned from Ireland, and again made an unsuccessful attempt to alter the observance of Easter in Icolmkill.⁵ Adomnan died in 703 or 704.⁶ About the year 707 Dunchad held the primacy (principatum) of Iona.⁷ In 708 or 709 Conan the son of Failbhe, abbot of Iona, died.⁸ In 710 or 712 Ceode or Coeddi, 'bishop of Iona,' died.⁹ About 713 Dorbein called the Long was appointed abbot of Iona, and died after having ruled only five months.¹⁰ In 716 Dunchad the son of Cindfaeladh was abbot of Iona, and in the same year Egbert (apparently the same English priest who in 689 refused to visit Iona) came to Scotland, and prevailed on the monks of Hii and the monasteries subject to them to observe Easter after the Romish custom.¹¹ In the same or in the following year abbot Dunchad died, and was succeeded by Faelchu the son of Dorbein, who appears to have been appointed abbot before the death of Dunchad.¹² About the same period the family of Ie (the disciples of Columba) were driven beyond Drumalban by Nectan King of the Picts.¹³ In 724 Faelchu the son of Dorbein died, and was succeeded by Cillenius (or Cilleán) called the Long, who died in 726.¹⁴ In 727 the relics of Adomnan were translated to Ireland, and his law revived.¹⁵ In 729 Egbert, who in 716 had introduced the change in the observance of Easter, died in Iona, where he had resided during the interval.¹⁶ In 730 the relics of Adomnan were brought back from Ireland to Iona.¹⁷ In 744 there occurred a great storm, in which a great number of the community of Iona perished.¹⁸ About 750 died Cillenius (or Cilleán) surnamed Droichteach, abbot and anchorite of Iona, and Cillenius the son of Congal.¹⁹ In 754 died

Feidlimm or Failbhe, abbot of Iona, who seems to have been appointed to the office before the death of Faelchu the son of Dorbein.¹ In the same year Sleibine abbot of Iona went into Ireland; in 757 he promulgated there the law of Columba; in 758 he returned to Iona; and about 766 he died.² In 758 Donald the son of Murchad the son of Diarmid, King of Ireland, died in Iona, and was buried in Dermaigh (Durrugh).³ In 765 his successor Niall, surnamed Pluviosus, the son of Fergal, after reigning seven years, sojourned in I-cholaim-chille (became a monk of Iona), and died there.⁴ About the year 767 died Suibne abbot of Iona.⁵ In 777 died Muiredhach the son of Uarghaile, who is styled by the annalists prior of Ia-columicille.⁶ In the same year Artghal M'Cathail King of Connacht went as a pilgrim to Iona, where in 786 he died.⁷ About 797 there is recorded the death of two abbots of Iona, Bresal the son of Segienus, who was abbot about 30 years, and Condachtach, styled scriba optimus, who must have ruled only for a short time.⁸ About the year 801 Iona was burned by foreign (Norse) pirates.⁹ In 806 it was again laid waste by pirates, when 68 of the inmates lay and clerical were killed, and apparently 64 left alive.¹⁰ In the same year a new town was built at Icolmkill.¹¹ In 813 Ceallach the son of Congal, abbot of Iona, having finished the church of Cenindsa (Kells in Ireland), resigned his office, and Diarmid an alumnus of Daigri (Derry?) was ordained in his stead.¹² Ceallach died in 814.¹³ In 823 Blathmac M'Flainn (probably an ecclesiastic) obtained the crown of martyrdom, having been slain by foreigners in Hi-Columicille.¹⁴ In 828 abbot Diarmid carried the relics of Columba into Scotland, and in 830 he removed them to Ireland.¹⁵ This removal was but temporary or partial, as about the year 848 the relics of the patron saint were again carried to Ireland by Inrechtach abbot of Iona.¹⁶ Inrechtach is said to have been killed by the Saxons on his way to Rome.¹⁷ In 863 Cellach the son of Alildus, abbot of Kildare (Cilledara) and of Iona, died in the land of the Cruitnech.¹⁸ In 875 or 877 the shrine and relics of Columba were again removed to Ireland, in order to escape the hands of foreign invaders.¹⁹ In 877 or 879 died Feradach M'Cormaic abbot of Iona.²⁰ In 890 or 891 died another abbot, named Flann M'Maleduin.²¹ In 935 died Aongas M'Muircert, a wise man, an anchorite, and tanaisi of the abbot of Iona.²² In 945 died Caoncomhrac abbot of Iona; in 966 Finghin an anchorite, 'bishop of Iona;' in 977 Fiachra, prepositus (in Celtic air) of Iona; and in 979 Mugron, comharb of Collumeille in Ireland and Scotland.²³ In 985, on Christmas Eve, Iona was laid waste by the Danes, who slew the abbot and fifteen of the monks (viros religiosos ecclesiae).²⁴ In 986 there were slain 360 of the Danes who plundered Iona, 'by a miracle,' say the Irish annalists, 'of God and of Cholaimchille.'¹ In 1004 there is recorded the death of Maolbrid O'Rimedha abbot of Iona, and in 1025 the death of Flannabhra comharb of Iae-colaimchille.² In 1034 Macnia O'Uachtan (styled ferleighinn Cenaansa, praedector Cellensis) was drowned in going from Scotland to Ireland, along with the books (another authority says the bed) of Columba, three relics of [Saint] Patrick, and thirty men.³ In 1062 died Gillecrist O'Maoldor, comharb of Colaimcille in Ireland and Scotland.⁴ In 1069 the abbot of Iona, called the son of M'Baeten, was killed by the son of Indabar O'Maoldor.⁵ In 1097 Magnus Berfaet King of Norway, during his first expedition to the Sudreyjar and Ireland, when he arrived at the Holy Island, granted his peace to the inhabitants and allowed them to retain their possessions.⁶ The Norse Sagas inform us that he opened the little Kolumkille church, and entered it, but immediately came out again, and ordered it to be locked up, saying that no one should dare to enter it.⁷ In 1099 Dunchad Mac Mic Maonach (the son of the monk's son), abbot of Iona, died.⁸

The following century seems to have produced considerable changes in Iona, which however during that period continued to be a resort of pilgrims. It is recorded by the Ulster annalists, that in the year 1164 the good family (maile muintir) of Ia, that is, Augustin the great priest, Dubside the lector (ferleiginn), Macgilladubh the hermit (disertach), Macforcellaigh the chief of the Keldees, and the other good people of Ia, with the advice of Somerled and the men of Argyle and the Isles, and the consent of the successor (comarba) of [Saint] Patrick (the bishop of Armagh) and of O'Lochlan King of Ireland and the people of the race of Eoghan (the men of Tyrone), went to Flaherty O'Brolcan the high successor (cenn comarba) of Columkille to take the abbacy of Ia.⁹ About this period the monastery seems to have been appropriated to monks of the Cluniac order.¹⁰ Between the years 1172 and 1180 King William the Lion granted to the canons of Holyrood the churches or chapels in Galloway which belonged to the jurisdiction of the abbey of Hii-columchille, with all their tithes and other ecclesiastical benefits, namely, the church which was called Kirhecormach, the church of Saint Andrew, the church of Balenceros, and the church of Cheletun.¹¹ In 1174 Maol Patrick O'Banan, bishop of Conor and Down, a venerable man, full of sanctity, meekness, and purity of heart, died in Hy of Columkille at a good old age.¹² In 1175 Flaherty O'Brolcan, to whom the abbacy of Iona was offered in 1164, died at the Black Abbey church of Derry.¹³ In 1188 Awlave O'Daighre died in Iona while on a pilgrimage there.¹⁴ In 1199 Saint Maurice O'Baodain died in Hy of Columkille.¹⁵ In 1203 a church or monastery was erected in the centre of the island, in opposition to the ecclesiastical laws and to the wishes of the inhabitants, by an individual named Ceallach, who is further stated to have done great damage to the town; but the bishops of Tyrone and Tirconnell, the abbot of Derry, and other Irish ecclesiastics, with many of the people of Derry, went to Iona and took down the church, after which Amhalgaidh O'Fingail was elected abbot by the suffrages of the Scots and Irish.¹ In 1226 Simon bishop of the Isles appears to have been also abbot of Iona.² In 1234 the lord abbot of Hy (apparently the same Simon) and brother Alan a monk were present at the settlement of a dispute about the church of Kyncardyn in Strathspey between Andrew bishop of Moray and Walter Cumyn Earl of Mynynteth, and appended their names to the bishop's copy of the settlement.³ The abbey of Iona was for centuries included in the diocese of Dunkeld.⁴ Between the years 1306 and 1329 Finlay, elected abbot of Y, received episcopal confirmation from his ordinary William Sinclair bishop of Dunkeld (the same valorous prelate who in the absence of King Robert Bruce rallied the men of Fife when they fled from the English, and drove the invaders back to their ships).⁵ Before the year 1380 John Lord of the Isles made donations to Icolmkill.⁶ Donald, Lord of the Isles, who in 1411 fought at Harlaw, and who died about 1420, is said to have presented vessels of gold and silver 'to Columkill for the monastery,' and to have become a monk of Iona.⁷ In 1431 the abbot of the island Iona did obeisance (fecit obedientiam manualem) to Robert of Cardeny bishop of Dunkeld his ordinary.⁸ In 1492 John abbot of Y, who was one of the council of John Lord of the Isles, witnessed a charter by that lord and his nephew the lord of Lochalsh in favour of John M'Gilleon of Lochbuy.⁹ This John was the last abbot of Iona, and appears to be the same as John bishop of the Isles, in whose favour the abbey was soon afterwards annexed to the bishoprick.¹⁰

The bishoprick of the Isles (Sudreyjar) is said to have been founded in 838 or earlier, and to have been united in 1098 (when the Isles were seized by King Magnus) to the bishoprick of Man, and the united diocese then became suffragan to the archbishop of Trondhjem, by whom for some time afterwards the bishops of the Isles appear to have been consecrated.¹¹ In 1266, when the Isles were recovered by Scotland, there was ceded along with them the right of the patronage of the bishoprick of Man (episcopatus Mannie), saving the right, jurisdiction, and liberty of the see of Trondhjem (Nidrosensis ecclesie), if it had any, within that bishoprick.¹² In 1334 King Edward III., taking advantage of the civil wars in Scotland, seized on the Isle of Man, and in 1340 Bishop Thomas was taken prisoner by an Englishman, and swore fealty to that king.¹³ After the year 1380 the English chose a bishop of Man, and the Scotch a bishop of the Isles, but no regular division of the diocese appears to have taken place.¹⁴ In the Privy Seal Record under the date

the Isles, in the Queen's hands by the decease of Master Roderic MacClane last bishop, until the appointment of another.¹ In 1554, by a precept under the privy seal of the same queen, the same Alexander, styled archbishop of Athens and commendator of Inchechaffray and Yeolmkill, was admitted to the temporality of the monastery of Yeolmkill.² From 1554 to 1562 he appears in record as archbishop of Athens, bishop postulate of the Isles, and perpetual commendator of the abbeys of Inchechaffray and Icolmkill.³ In 1565 Master Patrick M'Clane, who had been presented by Queen Mary to the bishoprick of the Isles and the abbey of Icolmkill, on account of his inability resigned his right to Master John Carswell, who became bound to pay him a yearly pension; and Queen Mary thereupon granted to John Carswell all the fruits of the bishoprick, binding him at the same time to pay the stipends of the ministers planted within the bounds.⁴ In 1567 the same queen anew appointed John Carswell bishop of the Isles and abbot of Yeolmekill.⁵ In 1572 King James VI. confirmed the transference of a yearly pension of 200 marks Scots out of the fruits of the abbaey of Yeolmkill by John abbot of Balmerinloch to James Campbell of Arkinglas and his heirs, dated 10 June of that year, and confirmed by the deceased John bishop of the Isles; and also a grant by the bishop to the same parties, as security for the pension, of the fruits of the bishop's churches of Kingarth and Rothesay, and of the whole feu mails of the lands and barony of Mukearne.⁶ In 1573 a confirmation of Bishop Ferquhard's charter of 1532, and a new grant of the lands of Mukearn, are signed by John bishop of the Isles and commendator of Yona, and by James M'Clayne and Murchard, monks.⁷ In 1581 King James VI. appointed Alexander Campbell, the commendator of Ardehattane, abbot and commendator of the monastery of Ecolmekill for life, the commendatorship having been resigned in his favour by John bishop of the Isles.⁸ In the same year that king granted to John bishop of the Isles the escheat of all the goods belonging to certain persons who were denounced rebels and at horn for not paying the dues of the bishoprick and of the abbaey of Icolmekill as part of its patrimony.⁹ In 1615 King James VI. restored the chapter of the Isles, and in 1617 the parliament in ratifying the restoration declared that the 'abbaey of Icolmekill and pryorie of Archattan hes bene past all memorie of man proper pairtis and pertinentis of the said bischoprik as vnite and annexit thairto, but prejudice alwaysis of all and quhatsumeuir personnes, infeftmentis, takis, rightis, and vtheris securiteis lauchfullie made to thame conforme to the lawes of this realme than standand, and speciallie of onye priuiledge belonging and dew to the bischoprik of Dunkeld furth of the said pryorie of Ardehattan and abbaey of Icolmekill, quhilk his hienes and estaittis forsaide findis and declairis sall not be comprehendit vnder this act.¹ In 1626 a report by Thomas Knox bishop of the Isles bore, that 'it is to be considerit that to the bishoprik ar annexit the abbacie of Icolmkill and priourie of Ardehattan, and yit remaneth in the priour of Ardehattan his possessioun be vertew of ane lyfrent gift undir his Majesteis greit seall before the act of annexatioune to the bishoprik, so that nather I nor my father (Bishop Andrew) culd evir enjoy any pairt thair of bot Icolmkill, whiche by compositioun with Sir Johne Campbell, assignay to the said priour, I possess.'² In 1635 King Charles I. ordered that two bells, taken from Icolmkill by Bishop Andrew Knox on his translation (to Raphoe in 1622), should be restored.³ In the same year that king ordered £400 to be paid from the Exchequer to repair the cathedral of Iona, but there is no evidence that it ever was paid.⁴ In 1640 the same king granted to James Levingstoun keeper of the privy seal a lease for thrice 19 years of the temporality of Argyle and the Isles.⁵ In 1648 James Levingstoun resigned the lease in favour of Archibald Marquis of Argyle, to whom it was then confirmed by King Charles I.⁶ In 1663 the Scotch parliament, on a petition from the bishop of the Isles (Robert Wallace), and for the purpose of supplying the Isles with ministers who had 'the Yrish tounge,' appointed the sum of £200 to be paid yearly out of the vacant stipends of the bishoprick to each of six expectants who had passed their courses of philosophy, and £100 to each of six scholars to be trained up at school and college.⁷

Of the dignitaries of the cathedral we have but the following scanty notices. In 1461 and 1462 Duncan archdeacon of the Isles was one of two commissioners appointed by John Lord of the Isles in negotiating the treaty of Ardtornish.⁸ In 1476 and 1479 charters of the same Lord of the Isles are witnessed by Neil M'Ylwyrd or Makkilbreid archdeacon of the Isles.⁹ In 1516 King James V. presented Sir Richard Lausone to the archdeaconry of the Isles, which was then vacant by the decease of Master Thomas Flemyng.¹⁰ In 1544 the archdeacon of the Isles was Master Rore M'Clane, to whom in that year Bishop Farquhard resigned the bishoprick.¹¹ In 1548 Queen Mary presented Master Archibald Munro chaplain to the archdeaconry, when it should be vacant by the demission of the venerable clerk Master Roderic M'Clane.¹² In 1563 a charter by Alexander Bane of Tullich in Ross is witnessed by Donald Munro archdeacon of the Isles.¹³ In 1615 King James VI., understanding that 'the hail fundatioun and ancient evidentis and recordis of the bischoprik of the Yyles hes bene this lang tyme bigane obscurit and suppressit, that na memorie remaynes quhat or how manye digniteis wes in that see, and quha wes the memberis of that chaptoure,' appointed as follows — the parson of Sorbie in Tirree, vicar of Icolmekill, to be dean; the parson of Rothesay to be subdean; and the parsons of Kilmorie in Arran, Cumrie, Killenev in Ylay, and Killean in Torsay in Mull, to be prebendaries.¹ In 1617 the appointment was ratified by the Scotch parliament.² In 1662 King Charles II. and his parliament appointed an archdeacon for the Isles, and assigned to him as his 'proper kirks' the churches of Snisort with Lendill, and the church of Slait and Strath, in the isle of Skye, and the islands of Egg, Rum, Mue, and Canna.³

The nunnery of Iona, an institution probably of the thirteenth century, is first mentioned by Fordun.⁴ It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and the nuns were of the order of Saint Augustine, and wore a white gown with a rochet of fine linen.⁵ In the year 1509 King James IV. granted a letter of protection to his religious and oratrices the lady Agnes daughter of Donald Makgillane, prioress of the monastery of nuns of the most Blessed Virgin Mary in the isle of Saint Columba in the lordship of the Isles, and the convent of that monastery—taking them, their monastery, and the churches, tithes, rights, privileges, liberties, lands, revenues, and possessions, belonging to them in high land and low, and their bailies, officers, tenants, familiars, factors, and servitors, and their goods movable and immovable, ecclesiastical and secular, everywhere, under the special peace, protection, tuition, maintenance, and defence of the King—and ordering all his lieges within the Isles and elsewhere, and specially Lauchlan M'Gillane of Dowart, Ranald Alansoun M'Rory, and John M'Gillane of Lochboy, not to annoy the prioress and the others in any way, or exact from them anything on pretence of 'sornyng or almsdeed,' or allow others to do the same, but rather to protect them, and that under the highest penalty.⁶ This prioress, otherwise styled Anna the daughter of Donald M'Terlet, appears to have died in 1543.⁷ In 1548 Queen Mary granted a precept under her privy seal to admit to the temporality of the lands, rents, and possessions of the monastery the lady Mary Farquhardson or M'Gilleone, prioress of Icolmkill, promoted by his Holiness the Pope (Julius III.) to the monastery or nunnery of the same.⁸ In 1567 the same queen by a letter under her privy seal granted to Marioun Makclane (apparently the grantee of 1548) 'the prioressie and nvnrie of the abbey of Yeolmkill liand within the diocie of the Ylis, now vakand throw deceis of vmquhile Agnes M'Clane, last priores thairof, with all and sindrie places, hous, manss, yairdis, landis, and fischeingis, quhatsumeuir pertening thairto, vsit and wount, for all the dayis of hir lyfytyme—with power to the said Marioun, hir factouris and procuratouris in hir name, [to ask, eraif, ressaue, intromet, and vptak, all and hail] the mailis, fermes, proffittis, dewiteis, fruitis, rentis, prouentis, emolimentis, and teindis of the said priorissie and nunrie of the abbay foirsaid vsit and wount fra all and sindrie takismen, tennentis, parrochinnaris, and vthiris intromettouris thairwith, off all yeiris and termes bigane sen the vacanee thairof, and sielyke yeirlie and termelie in tyme cuming during the said space to crave, ressaif, vptak, and intromet with, and at hir plesour to dispoun siclike and als frelie in all thingis as

The church or chapel of Saint Oran or Aran is recorded by Fordun to have existed and to have been used as a burying-place in the sixth or in the previous century, before Saint Columba had come to Iona.³ It is at least of very considerable antiquity, and together with its cemetery, which was regarded as a sanctuary, was the place of sepulture of the Kings of the Scots and Picts down to the time of King Malcolm III. (who died in 1093), and of the Lords of the Isles and other chiefs to a much later period.⁴ It has been styled the church or temple of Oran, but latterly at least ranked only as a chapel.⁵ In 1542 King James V. presented Sir John M'Mwlyne, monk of the monastery of Colmkill, to the chaplainry of the chapel of Saint Aran (Sancte Arane) in that monastery, which was vacant by the decease of Sir Donald M'Cristyn.⁶

Of Iona as a parish we have but very few and imperfect notices. The parish church was dedicated to Saint Ronan, a Scotchman, who is said to have visited Rome, and on his return thence through England to have maintained the Romish side of the Easter controversy against Finan bishop of Lindisfarne; to have retired thereafter to the isle of Ronan (Rona); and to have died there about the year 678.⁷ In 1380, when John Lord of the Isles was interred at Iona, the abbot, monks, and vicar (probably of the parish church) went to meet the funeral procession.⁸ Between 1380 and 1420 Donald Lord of the Isles, who in 1411 fought the battle of Harlaw, granted to the minister (vicar?) of Iona lands in Mull and Isla and confirmed to him every privilege which he formerly possessed.⁹ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro enumerates 'a parochie kirke' among the religious institutions of Iona.¹⁰ Buchanan about the year 1577 does the same.¹¹ Among the 'kirkis and personagis, belonging in 1561 to the abbot of Ecolmkill there are enumerated 'the teindis of Ecolmkill callit the personaige of Tempill-Ronaige', or 'the personage of Ecolmkill,' which was one of two parsonages of which the bishop of the Isles had not the third.¹ In 1573 Fingonius Makmullen was dean of Mulle and minister of the island of Y.² About the year 1700 the church appears as the church Ronan, and a small bay on the east of the island still bears the name Port Ronan.³

The church of Saint Ronan appears to have stood near the Port, at the south end of the village, and probably within the enclosure now known as Claoth-nan-Druithnach, and locally interpreted the burying-place of the Druids.⁴

North from the Claoth-nan-Druithnach, and west of the village, stood the nunnery, of Norman architecture, but not older than the thirteenth century, of which there remain only the walls of the church, 60 feet by 20.⁵ In 1772 the roof of the east end was entire, and is described by Pennant as 'a pretty vault of thin stones bound together by four ribs meeting in the centre.'⁶ Within is the tomb of the prioress Agnes or Anne Maclean, with the figure of a prioress and of the Virgin Mary, the legend Sancta Maria ora pro me, and the commemorative inscription *Hic iacet Anna Donaldi Terleti filia quondam priorissa de Iona que obiit anno m^o d^o x^lo iii^o. Eius animam Altissimo comendamus.*⁷ There is another tombstone with an imperfect inscription recording the death of the prioress Mary the daughter of John M'Lachlan.⁸ The nuns, it is said, were buried on the outside of the church.⁹

From the nunnery there runs northward for about 300 yards to the burying-ground and chapel of Saint Oran a paved road 15 feet wide, from the north end of which branch out other two—one named Straid-na-marbh (the road of the dead), leading to Port-na-marbh on the east side of the island, where bodies intended for interment were landed—the other leading to the landing-place at Port Ronan.¹⁰ On the west side of Straid-na-marbh stands a large and beautifully sculptured cross called Maclean's Cross, apparently of great antiquity, and said to be one of 360 which at one time stood in the island.¹¹

'Within this isle of Colmkill,' says Archdeacon Monro, 'there is ane sanctuary also or kirkzaird callit in Erische Religoran, quhilk is a very fair kirkzaird and weill biggit about with stane and lyme. Into this sanctuary there is three tombes of stane formit like little chapels, with ane braid gray marble or quhin staine in the gavill of ilk ane of the tombes.'¹² The archdeacon further informs us that these slabs of marble bore respectively the inscriptions Tumulus Regum Scotie, Tumulus Regum Hybernie, and Tumulus Regum Norwegie, and that in these tombs were buried 48 Scotch, 4 Irish, and 8 Norwegian kings.¹ Of these tombs there now remains nothing but the supposed vestiges, locally styled Iomaire-nan-Righ, the ridge of the kings.² The cemetery contains a red unpolished stone said to cover the remains of a king of France.³ 'Within this sanctuary also lyes the maist part of the Lords of the Isles with their lineage, twa Clan Lynes with their lynage, M'Kynnon and M'Guare with their lynnages, with sundrie uthers inhabitants of the hail Iles.'⁴ Of their tombs there are several still to be seen both within the chapel of Saint Oran and in the surrounding ground.⁵ The chapel itself, built of red granite, the oldest of the existing ecclesiastical buildings in Iona, measures externally 35 feet by 20 feet 8 inches, and is remarkable for its western doorway, a Norman arch with the beak-head ornament.⁶ Within it is a tomb said to be that of Angus Oig, the faithful friend of King Robert Bruce, with the inscription, Hic iacet corpus Angusii filii Domini Angusii Macdomnill de Ila—M'Kinnon's cross, inscribed, Hec est crux Lacclanni Maicfingone et eius filii Johannis abbatis de Hy facta anno Domini m^o cccc^o lxxxix—Macquarrie's tomb—and the tomb of Maclean of Grulin.⁷ In the burying-ground are the tombs of MacIaine of Lochbuy, Maclean of Duairt, Maclean of Coll, Ailean-nan-Sop (one of the Duairt family, and the head of a sept or party, who lived between 1513 and 1542), and Macleod of Lewis.⁸ Of the tombs of ecclesiastics the same ground contains the tomb of Bishop Camochasach, and the tomb of the four priors, inscribed thus, Hic iacent quatuor priores de Y ex una natione v. Johannes Hugonius Patricius in decretis olim bacularius et alter Hugonius qui obiit anno Domini millesimo quingentesimo.⁹ Within the Religoran there are also two tombstones bearing inscriptions in the Irish character, as follows—Ōr do anmin Eogain (a prayer for the soul of Eogain), and Ōr do Mailfataric (a prayer for the soul of Maelpatrick).¹⁰ Near the door of the chapel were to be seen in 1772 the stones called Clach-abrath, which had been substituted for three globes of white marble, always turned round by visitors, and which it was superstitiously believed were to wear through their pedestal before the end of the world.¹¹

The monastery (monasterium or coenobium) of Columba included a church (ecclesia) or oratory (oratorium) with an altar (altare or altarium) and recesses called exedrae, exedriolae, or conclavia—an hospitium, apparently a house for the entertainment of strangers, or a space including the separate residences of the monks—a dwelling-house for the saint himself styled domus, tugurium, hospitiolum, or tuguriolum—office-houses, such as a barn or storehouse (horreum) for laying up the produce of their fields—and a 'place' (platea or plateola), probably surrounded by these various portions of the monastery.¹² The whole of these buildings appear to have been constructed of timber and wickerwork, which was the material commonly used at the time.¹ Columba's usual employment was reading, writing, or prayer, while his monks, not barefooted, but substantially shod with some kind of calcei, reared or repaired the monastic buildings, cultivated their ground, and tended their cattle, the scene of their agricultural operations lying chiefly in a field on the west side of the island styled the campus occidentalis.² On land they used wheeled vehicles (currus, curricula, vehicula, plaustra), and on sea vessels with sails styled naves, scaphae, and currucae, the last being a translation of the celtic word currach or currogh.³ They were summoned to their devotions or other duties by a bell (clocca or campana).⁴ The monastery stood at the foot of a small hill, from which Columba on the day of his death is said to have given his last blessing to the establishment which he had instituted and ruled.⁵ Near it about the year 680 there stood a cross fixed molari lapidi (in a quern?), at a spot on which a white horse, employed to carry the milk-vessels from the pasture to the monastery, was believed to have met Columba a little before his death, and to have wept upon his breast.⁶ All traces of the original monastery must have disappeared centuries ago, but the remains of that by which it was succeeded, and which stand north of Religoran, are not of earlier date than the thirteenth century.⁷ The church, built of red granite and of the usual cruciform shape, has the nave and choir each 64 feet by 23 feet 6 inches; the transept apparently 70 feet long and 17 wide; and the tower which rises from the centre 22 feet by 26 feet 6 inches, and 75 feet in height.⁸ There were at one time in the choir an altar of white marble veined with grey, 6 feet by 4, of which a fragment remained in 1772, and four small chapels.⁹ There still remain three well-wrought sedilia apparently of Early English work.¹⁰ The tower is said to have contained a fine peal of bells, a circumstance to which Sir Walter Scott has alluded in his fancied voyage of Bruce from Skye to Arran.¹¹ From the south east corner of the choir there extended in 1772 two parallel walls, 12 feet high and 10 feet apart, called the dorus tragh (the door to the shore), which were supposed to have been roofed and to have stretched to the sea.¹ On the north of the church were the cloisters, and according to Martin a library, and from a Norman arcade still standing these appear to have been part of the oldest buildings.² In a corner of these there lay till 1830 the famous black stones, on which it was customary to swear oaths and ratify agreements.³ In the choir are the tombs of Macleod of Macleod, Maclean of Ross, the abbot Kenneth M'Kenzie, and the abbot John Mackinnon, the last of which bears the inscription, *Hic jacet Joannes Mac Fingone abbas de Y qui obiit anno Domini millesimo quingentesimo cuius anime propicietur altissimus Deus amen.*⁴ Near the west end of the church, apparently on the north side, there is a small tomb or cell, in which it is traditionally believed that Columba was interred.⁵ Near the same spot are two crosses styled Saint Martin's and Saint John's.⁶ Besides the chapel of Saint Oran there appear to have been several others in the vicinity of the cathedral, one of which, named Saint Mary's, stood near its south east end.⁷

The library of Iona is not altogether a fable. It is not in the least improbable that the liber vitreus of Columba, though fabulously said to have been given to him by an angel, may have had a positive existence, and along with his own writings may have been preserved by his successors.⁸ That psalters and other books were written and used by them, is evident from the extant memoirs of the saint.⁹ That any of these may have been preserved in the abbey which rose upon the ruins of Columba's monastery, is of course mere conjecture; but, though Boece's fables about the books brought from Rome by King Fergus II. must be summarily rejected, there seems no reason to doubt the proposed visit of Pope Pius V. in 1460 to the library of Iona, or the alleged fact that in 1525 several manuscripts were brought from Iona to Aberdeen, which, though much injured and nearly illegible, appeared to be fragments of Sallust and of some of our Scottish chroniclers.¹⁰

In the year 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleone certain lands and the keeping of certain castles, together with the office of Fragramanach and Armanach in the isle of Hy—an office or offices of which we have no farther account.¹¹

About the year 1770 there died in Iona a female, the last of a race styled the Clan-an-oister, who were believed to be the lineal descendants of an individual appointed by Columba door-keeper (ostiarus) of the monastery—an office more likely to have existed in the subsequent Cluniac establishment.¹

In the Taxatio Sec. XVI. the monastery of Icolmkill is rated ad rationem triginta millium librarum at £206, 13s.; and in the Libellus Taxationum at 1000 marks.² In the latter the nunnery seems to be entered, but no valuation is given.³

Besides the £20 lands of Ecolmkill, whose early history is that of the monastery, the abbots of Iona had the £20 lands of Rosse and other lands in Mull, lands in Tiree, the isle of Cannay, and lands in Uist, Skye, Ardnamurchan, Glenelg, Islay, Kintyre, and Lorn.⁴ In a lease of the abbey lands, granted in 1588 by King James VI. to Hector M'Clane the son and apparent heir of Lachlan M'Clane of Dowart, we have the following abstract of the crown rents yielded by them—Ross of Mull, £63, 8s. 7½d.; other lands in Mull, £21, 5s. 10d.; island of Iona, £22, 13s. 4d.; lands in Isla, £26, 15s. 8d.; lands in Tiree, £28, 3s. 4d.; total, £162, 6s. 9½d.⁵ In 1665 the lands of the abbey and bishoprick, their free rent, and their taxation for the relief of beneficed persons, were as follow: The bishop's rent arising from the teinds of the abbey, £400, taxed to the amount of £18, 1s. 4d.; lands of Skeirehynzie (in Kintyre), held by Archibald Earl of Argyle, rent £900, tax £48, 12s.; isle of Carra, held by M'Donald of Largie, rent £24, tax £1, 5s. 9d.; kirklands of Isla, held of the abbey by Sir Hewgh Campbell of Caddell, rent £900, tax £48, 12s.; lands of Nucaipice in Lorne, held by the same Sir Hewgh, rent £1600, tax £86, 8s.; lands of Rosemule, held by Sir Allan M'Lane of Dowart, rent £1300, tax £70, 4s.; lands of Kilphubill, Killayn, Caizemoir, Killwamran, Kyllnynan, Kendgerrora, Killmoorebeach, Thoren, Carsaig, Skiridan, Clashvildall, and Leyalt, in Mule, rent £600, tax £32, 8s.; Ieollumkill, held by the same Sir Allane, rent £500, tax £27; lands of Ballephulzie, Crewbrapoill, and Vaill, rent £400, tax £21, 12s.; lands in Mule, Teirrie, Scarba, Jura, and the two ends of Coll, held by the same Sir Allane, and Litle Collonsay, held by M'Cowarie and valued at £40, rent £540, tax £29, 3s.; lands of Cammusnanesserrin (in Lorn), held by Campbell of Innerlivar, rent £120, tax £6, 9s. 6d.; lands of Halfe-tewung in Trotwayshe, and the two Ormadills in Slait (all in Skye), and the lands called Vaginab, held by Sir James M'Donald of Slait, rent £390, tax £21, 1s. 4d.; teinds of the lands of Trotwayshe, Slait, and North Wyst, held by the same Sir James, amount £560, tax £30, 4s. 8d.; teinds of the lands of Eg and South Wyst, held by Donald Macdonald of Mudart, amount £200, tax £10, 16s.; teinds of the lands of Harreis, Vaternish, Bracadaill, and Durinysh, held by John M'Lewd of Harreis and Dunivegan, amount £600, tax £32, 8s.; teinds of lands in Skye and Mule, held by M'Kingone of Stratheuearadill, amount £200, tax £10, 16s.; teinds of Barra, held by Gillonan M'Neill of Barra, amount £240, tax £12, 19s.; teinds of Lewis, held by Kenneth Earl of Seaforth, amount £700, tax £37, 16s.;

the whole rent amounting to £10,174 Scots, and the whole tax to £550, 6s. 11d.¹ In grants of the barony of Dowart, or part of it, to Archibald Earl of Argyle by King Charles II. in 1657 and 1669 are included the kirklands called the £40 lands of Ross and the island of Iona or Icolmkill.² In 1772 the tenants of Iona held their land runrig, and had common pasture.³

The lands belonging to the nunnery lay in the islands of Inch Kenneth, Mull, Tiree, Canna, Coll, Skye, and Uist.⁴

On the south west of the island there is a small bay with a harbour (probably the Hyonaæ Portus of Adomnan), at which Columba is locally believed to have first landed from Ireland, and on the shore of which is a large mound or barrow, supposed to represent the size of the currack or boat which bore the saint to Iona, and from which the harbour is named Port-na-churaich.⁵

Near the port, and from the field of old termed the campus occidentalis, rises a small hill, on which Columba was believed to have met with angels, and which from that belief was named at an early period Colliculus Angelorum, or in Gaelic Cnoc-Angel, a name which it still retains.⁶ During the rule of Adomnan, between 680 and 704, after a long drought in the season of spring, which reminded men of the significant figure of Holy Writ, that the heavens should be iron and the earth brass, it occurred to Adomnan and his monks to bring forth to their newly sown fields the white tunic in which Columba had died, to go round the fields bearing it, to hold it up and thrice shake or beat it, and to open and read on the Colliculus Angelorum the books which the saint had written with his own hand; on which the heavens were suddenly covered with clouds, and a plentiful rain followed.⁷ Adomnan relates this as a miracle wrought by the tunic and books of Columba, and observes, *Unius itaque beati commemoratio nominis viri, in tunica et libris commemorata, multis regionibus eadem vice et populis salubri subvenit opportunitate.*⁸ In far later and more enlightened times the people of Iona on the Feast of Saint Michael were in the habit of coursing around Cnoc-Angel with their horses.⁹

A hill in the same neighbourhood, named Cwteilne, which stood between the campus occidentalis and the monastery, was in the time of Adomnan noted for the posthumous miracles of Columba.¹⁰

In the south is the hill named Cairn-cul-ri-Eirinn (the eminence of the back turned to Ireland), said to be the last hill ascended by Columba before building his monastery.¹¹

On the east are Port-na-marbh and Port Ronan, already mentioned, and in their immediate neighbourhood a low mound called Ellaidh, on which coffins were laid while the bearers refreshed themselves.¹²

In the north and north west are Cabhan Culdich (the retreat of the Culdees), a small circular ruin, and Dunbhuirg, a lofty isolated rock with the remains of a tower, at the foot of which is a large tract named Culbhuirg (the back of the castle).¹

On the north of the abbey are the remains of the bishop's house.² On the west of it are the abbot's mount (probably the hill overlooking the monastery in the time of Columba), beyond which were to be seen in 1772 the ruins of a mill, granary, and kiln, and north of the granary a large moss or half-drained lake called the Lochan Mor (still existing), with an embankment on one side named the Bishop's Walk, and at one end an enclosed square containing a cairn and styled a burialplace.³

In 1609 Andrew Knox bishop of the Isles, as King's commissioner, met the Islesmen at Icolmkill, and with their consent passed the nine enactments subsequently known as the 'Statutes of Icolmkill.'⁴

Father Hay in the seventeenth century thus lamented the downfall of Iona—'The monastery was destroyed in 1560, not without the special observation of the whole kingdom, the monks were driven away, and the revenues turned to profane uses; whence the poor were defrauded of continual alms, strangers of entertainment, the servants of God of their necessary food and clothing, the souls of the pious faithful of their sacrifices, the church of as many prayers, and God of the worship due to him.'⁵

Kilviceowin in Rosse¹ — Kilmakewin² — Kilwichkewin.³ (Map, No. 12.)

THE old parish of Kilviceuen, at the Reformation united into one with the other parishes of Mull, was about 1688 part of the parish of Ross composed of Torosay, Kilfinichen, Kilviceuen, and Inehkenneth.⁴ About 1730 Torosay was made a separate parish, and the others remained united, and are still generally known as Ross.⁵

Kilviceuen in Mull, divided from Iona by the strait before mentioned (or perhaps by a line cutting off a small portion of the Ross of Mull), included the remainder or whole of the Ross, the lands of Brolos, and apparently a part of the lands of Moloros—all which formed a peninsula in the south of Mull running from north-east to south-west nearly in the line of Loch Linnhe and the great Caledonian valley. The parish is partly hilly, partly flat, and is composed of granite and a small belt of stratified primary rocks, having an extensive, steep, rocky coast, with few places for anchorage.⁶

There seems to be no mention of this parish before the year 1561, when it appears in the rental of the bishoprick of the Isles as the parsonage of Kilviceowin in Rosse, of which the whole teinds belonged to the abbot of Iona.⁷ In grants of all or part of the barony of Dowart to the Earl of Argyle in the years 1657 and 1669 there appear the 'kirklands called the £40 land of Ross and the isle of Iona or Icolmkill.'⁸ About 1700 Martin very erroneously mentions Kilwichkewin as one of the two parish churches of Mull.⁹

The church, apparently dedicated to some unknown saint, stood at Kilviceuen on the south coast.¹⁰ Its churchyard and ruined church still remain, the former containing a monument taken from Iona and commemorating one of its priors.¹¹ One of the modern churches of the united parish, built in 1804, stands at Bonessan on the north coast of the Ross.¹²

At Kilpatrick on Loch Scriden in the north of the parish there was a church or chapel dedicated to Saint Patrick, of which the cemetery still exists.¹³ At Killinan on the same loch there appears to have been a church dedicated to Saint Finan.¹⁴ At Killeneck in the same vicinity (the Kilinaig of Blaeu) there was probably a church dedicated to Saint Senaie an Irish saint.¹ At Kilmorie in the west of the parish there seems to have been a church dedicated to the Virgin Mary.² The New Statistical Account mentions thirteen cemeteries in the united parish, without enumerating their localities.

In the year 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleone the 12 $\frac{3}{4}$ pennylands of Broglos.³ In 1496 the lands of Browlos were resigned by Hector Makgilleoun of Doward, and granted by King James IV. to Hector's natural son Lachlan in heritage, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to his brother Donald and his heirs, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleoun.⁴ In 1510 King James IV. confirmed to Duncan Stewart of Appin and his heirs various lands which he had acquired from the deceased Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart for 4500 marks, and which were redeemable within seven years for that sum, including a pennyland of Kilfadrich, a pennyland of Ardkinsais, a pennyland of Ormassaig, three pennylands of the three Thorvis, a pennyland of Kilinnagh, a pennyland of Ragros (or Nagros), and a pennyland of Naigele, within the lands of Brolos.⁵ In 1540 Hector Makclane of Dowart resigned the lands of Brolos, which King James V. then granted in heritage as part of the barony of Dowart to Hector his son and heir, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brother Alan and his heirs, to his brother John and his heirs, and to his (Hector the elder's) own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makclane.⁶ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir in the same lands to Hector M'Clayne his grandfather.⁷

Part of the lands of Moloros, as before stated, seems to have been within this parish, the rest lying in the parish of Killean in Torosay. In 1494 King James IV. granted to John M'Gilleoun of Lochboye the lands of Moloros and others, which were in the King's hands by the forfeiture of John of Ile, of whom John M'Gilleoun had held them in heritage—those apparently in the parish of Kilviceuen being a pennyland of Camroyn, a pennyland of Glenboyr, a halfpennyland of Crosta, a halfpennyland of Inegard, and a pennyland of Roysale.⁸ In 1534 John Makgilleoun of Lochboy granted the same lands to Murdoch Makgilleoun his son, and in 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.⁹ In 1542 the lands were resigned by Murdoc, and granted by the same king anew in free barony to him and his heirs male, with remainder to his brother Charles Makgilleoun and his heirs male.¹⁰ In 1615 Hector M'Cleane of Lochbowie was served heir in the same lands to Murdoch M'Cleane his great-grandfather.¹¹

In 1561 among the lands held by the abbot of Iona are enumerated in Brolos a pennyland called Torrniehtrache, the pennyland of Carsage, the pennyland of Carvalge, and apparently the halfpennyland of Glasveildirie.¹ In 1588 King James VI. granted to Hector M'Clane, the son and heir of Lauchlan M'Clane of Dowart, the lands formerly belonging to the abbot of Iona, including Beith, Thorin, Carsaig, Skrydane and Ard, Gleswilder and Lyald, each consisting of one pennyland and paying to the crown £1, 16s. 8d., in all £7, 6s. 8d.²

In 1561 the abbot of Iona held the £20 lands of Rosse.³ In the charter of 1588 above cited these lands and their respective rents are enumerated as follow—Schabbay, 4 pennylands, £5, 0s. 10d.; Skur, 1½ pennyland, £1, 16s. 3d.; Kilmakewin, 4 pennylands, £4, 19s. 4d.; Seirpene, 2 pennylands, £1, 8s. 4d.; Edderaloch, a halfpennyland, 5s.; Uskane, a pennyland, £1, 4s. 2d.; Ardkaivaig, a pennyland, £1, 4s. 2d.; Larakhin, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Ardachig, a pennyland, £1, 4s. 2d.; Lewone, a halfpennyland, 5s.; Knoknafineg, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Knoktaytarlach, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Traysane, two pennylands, £2, 8s. 4d.; Ardwalleneis, two pennylands, £2, 8s. 4d.; Bernis, a pennyland, £1, 4s. 2d.; Teirgargane, two pennylands, £2, 8s. 4d.; Teirkill, a pennyland, £1, 4s. 2d.; Kilmorie, three farthinglands, 13s. 1½d.; Ellanecalmene, a halfpennyland, 5s.; Stokadell, two pennylands, £2, 8s. 4d.; Ballimoir, four pennylands, £4, 6s.; Sailquhur, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Potty, a pennyland and a half, £1, 14s. 11d.; Terchladane, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Creweych Lower, a halfpennyland, 5s.; Creweych Upper, a halfpennyland, 5s.; Ardehenaig, two pennylands, £2, 8s. 4d.; part of Teirgeyll called Callegownan, two pennylands and a half, £3, 5s. 10d.; Bonessane, three pennylands and a half, £4, 8s. 4d.; Crongerd, two pennylands, £2, 5s. 10d.; Ley, two pennylands, £2, 7s. 6d.; Assabol, a pennyland, £1, 2s. 6d.; Ardtwn, five pennylands, £5, 3s. 4d.; in all £63, 8s. 7½d.⁴ In 1657 and 1669 the same £20 lands of Ross (as before stated) were included in grants of the barony of Dowart by King Charles II. to Archibald Earl of Argyle.⁵

In 1616 King James VI. granted to Andrew bishop of the Isles the lands of Brockaich, Killenewr, Altshenag, and Sowie, in Mull, formerly belonging to the priory of Oransay, and partly or wholly within this parish.⁶

At Bonessan there is a village with a population of about 250.⁷

THE parish of Killean or Torosay, which at the Reformation is said to have formed only a part of the parish of the whole island, seems to have been about 1626 a distinct parsonage, and about 1631 was served by the same minister as Kilfinichen.⁵ It is now again a separate parish.

The parish includes the south-east part of the island of Mull, comprehending the districts of Glenforsay and Torosay, and the whole or the greater part of the district known of old as Moloros. It is diversified by lakes, streams, and conical hills, and its coast, skirted by the Atlantic and the Sound of Mull (the Mylarsund of the Sagas), is indented by numerous sea-lochs, and perforated by numerous caves. The mountains Bentealluidh and Benbhuy are each about 2800 feet above the level of the sea.

In 1561 the parsonage of Keillean in Toirrasa in Mull is enumerated among those belonging to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles being entitled to one-third.⁶ When King James VI. in 1615 restored the chapter of the Isles, the parson of Killean was made one of the prebendaries.⁷ In 1626 a report by Thomas Knox bishop of the Isles states that the parsonage of Killane was served by a minister named McLean.⁸ In 1631, as above stated, Killeane and Killenachin were served by one minister.⁹

The old church (apparently dedicated to Saint John) stood on the south east coast on the peninsula between Lochspelve and Lochdon, where its ruins are still to be seen.¹⁰ The present church, built in 1780, stands at Craignuire on the Sound.¹¹ There is a parliamentary church, built about the same time as the latter, at Salen in the north of the parish, and another, built in 1828, at Kinlochspelve in the south.¹²

At Laggan near Lochbuy and at Columkil near Salen are the ruins of chapels, the latter, as its name implies, dedicated to Saint Columba.¹³ Kilpatrick near Dowart Castle indicates the site of another dedicated to Saint Patrick.¹⁴ Blaeu places a chapel in Glenkannyr (Glenkenner) at the head of Lochba.¹⁵

The island of Mull (the Maleos of Ptolemy, the Malea of Adomnan, and the Myl of the Sagas) as one of the Sudreyjar followed the fortunes of those islands during the early period of our country's history.¹ About the beginning of the fourteenth century the possession of the island was a matter of dispute between Alexander of Lorn and Angus of Isla, and, the former having about the year 1314 forfeited all his lands, Mull was granted to the latter by King Robert Bruce.² In 1335 Edward Balliol granted the island of Mulle in heritage to John of the Isles, to whom it was in 1336 confirmed by King Edward III.³ In 1343 King David II. granted the isle of Mule to John of Yle.⁴ In 1354 John of Larin lord of Argyll quitclaimed to John of Yle Lord of the Isles certain lands of which the latter had grants from King David II. or King Robert Bruce, including the isle of Mull with its pertinents.⁵ About 1400 Fordun enumerates Mule among the Western Isles.⁶ The island was in 1475 forfeited by John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, together with the other lands which he held, was restored to him in 1476 by King James III., and was in 1478 confirmed to him by the same king.⁷ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, granted the King's lands of Mull and Murwerne to Lauchlane Makclane of Dowart for eleven years or longer at the Regent's will, with power to sublet them.⁸ In 1533 Alane M'Clane, the son of the deceased Lauchlane M'Clane of Doward, had from King James V. a remission for 19 years for incendiarism committed in the isle of Mull, and for the slaughter of John M'Gillane the son of John M'Gillane of Lochboy, and of other persons.⁹ In the same year the same king granted a remission to Archibald Earl of Argyll and 92 others for fire-raising with displayed banner in the isle of Mule and other parts.¹⁰ In 1536 Mule is enumerated among the crown lands within the Lordship of the Isles.¹¹ In 1540 King James V. in his voyage round the isles visited Mull, and took thence Maclean of Dowart and Macdonald of Isla, the leading men of the district.¹² In the same year the Lordship of the Isles, including Mull, was inalienably annexed to the crown.¹³

In the year 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleon the castle of Doward, with an unciata of the land of Torosay and two pennylands of Glenkener.¹⁴ In 1409 Hector Makgilleon, the son of Lachlan, and the nephew of Donald of Ile, was lord of Doward.¹⁵ In 1411 Hector was slain at Harlaw.¹⁶ There appear in record in 1427, 1449, 1461, and 1463, Lachlan Makgilleon lord of Doward, in 1449 and 1472 Lachlan Makgilleon younger, master of Doward, in 1476 Roland Makclane of Dowart, in 1478 Lachlan Makgilleon of Doward, and in 1479 Rolland Makclane of Dowart.¹ In 1496 Hector Makgilleon of Doward resigned the lands of Torosay with the castle of Doward and mill of the same, and the lands of Glenkennir and others in Mull and elsewhere, which King James IV. then erected into the free barony of Doward in favour of Lachlan Makgilleon, Hector's natural son, and his heirs, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to his brother Donald and his heirs, and to Hector's own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleon.² In 1506 King James IV. directed a letter under his privy seal to Lachlane Makgilleon of Doward and nine others 'landit men within the Ilis,' charging them not to intermeddle with any thing belonging to the bishop of the Isles, and praying them to assist him in collecting his rents.³ In 1509 Lauchlan M'Gillane of Dowart was with several others ordered by the same king to protect the prioress and nuns of the monastery of the Virgin Mary in the isle of Saint Columba.⁴ In 1510 the same king granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart of Appin certain lands which Duncan had acquired from Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart for 4500 marks, and redeemable on payment of that sum within seven years, including the lands of Dowart extending to one pennyland, with the castle of Dowart, a pennyland of Ardchoigh, two pennylands of Thonchormaigh, a pennyland of Ardnagros, two pennylands of the two Barnafrane, two pennylands of Auehnachraghe, a pennyland of Ardnadhrogit, two pennylands of the two Glennannis, a pennyland of Culkelis, a pennyland of Auehtabigh, a pennyland of Ardkeill, three halfpennylands of the two Thornaskeath, a pennyland of Glenkeill, and a pennyland of Blareboy, all lying within the lands of Thorissai.⁵ In 1517 (6 January) the Regent Albany granted a safe-conduct to Alexander (Lauchlan?) Makillane of Dufard, Alexander Makcloid of Dunveggane, and 100 others, to pass to any place within the realm till the 15th of March following.⁶ In the same year (10 March) the Regent granted to Lauchlan Makclane of Doward power to raise the tenantry whom he had under him during the last king's reign for the weal of the King and country and for his own just quarrels, except against the King, the Regent, or the Earl of Ergile the King's lieutenant.⁷ Two days afterwards (12 March) the same Lauchlan and several others had from the Regent a remission for assisting Sir Donald of the Ilis of Lochalch when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.⁸ In 1527 King James V. granted to Hector Makgilleon of Doward, the porated as part of the barony of Dowart.¹ In 1546 the Regent Arran granted to Hector M'Clane of Dowart and others a remission for assisting the English (under the Earl of Lennox in 1544) in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.² In 1553 there appears in record Hector Makclane of Dowart, and in 1557 and 1558 there appear Hector Makclane lord of the franktenement of Dowart (probably the same as the former) and Hector Makclane fear of Dowart (apparently the same father and son to whom the barony was granted by King James V. in 1542).³ In 1564 Gilbert M'Kellor of Ardurie and Malcome his son resigned to Archibald Earl of Argyle the four marklands of Glendan in the barony of Ardskeodnish, for which the Earl granted them the 15 shillinglands of Drumdarroch and the keeping of the woods of Dowart, free of all duty except hawking, hunting, and furnishing a wright for the Earl's work according to the custom of the country.⁴ In 1588 there appear in record Lauchlan M'Clane of Dowart and Hector M'Clane his son and heir.⁵ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir to Hector M'Clayne his grandfather in the lands of Torosay with the castle and mill, and in the lands of Glenkynnuir, and in other lands in Mull and elsewhere, of the old extent of 228 marks.⁶ In 1615 Hector Makeleane of Dowart was served heir male to his grandfather Hector Makeleane of Dowart in the lands and barony of Dowart, including, as before, the lands of Torosay with the castle of Dowart and mill, and the lands of Glenkynnuir, with certain other lands, together of the old extent of 194 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence.⁷

In 1449 a charter of John of Yle is witnessed by John M'Gilleoin of Lochboyg.⁸ By an indenture made at Dingwall in the year 1475 between Hector M'Gilleoin of Lochboyg on one side and Johnne of Ross of Balnagovin and his son and heir apparent Alexander of Ross on the other, with the consent of Johnne of the Yle Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, Lady Margrete of the Ilis, Huchone of the Ilis of Slet, 'and vtheris gentillis of the saide lordis counsale quhilkis war than for the tyme,' it was agreed—That David the son and apparent heir of Alexander of Ross should be married to Margaret the daughter of Hector M'Gilleoin, and, failing her, to his daughter Cristiane, and failing Cristiane, to whatever other daughter he might have by his wife Margaret Campbell; that, failing David, Huchon the son of Alexander of Ross should marry the said Margaret, or Cristiane, or other daughter of Hector by his said wife; that, failing Huchon, any other son and heir of Alexander of Ross should marry one or other of the said daughters of Hector M'Gilleoin; that, as soon as Johnne and Alexander of Ross should get David out of the hands of those in whose keeping he then was, they should without fraud or guile send him to be kept by Hector M'Gilleoin; that Hector should do his endeavour to procure David's liberty; that, as soon as the marriage should be effected, Hector should deliver to John or Alexander 100 marks Scots as the 'tochir' of his daughter; that whichever of the two should receive the 100 marks should assign to the married pair or the longer liver of them twenty marklands till the lordship of Balnagowin should come into their hands; that, if John or Alexander of Ross should fail to fulfil the above agreement, especially with regard to the marriage, he should pay to Hector, his heirs, or assignees, the sum of 600 marks Scots, and that Hector or his heirs should have the twenty two marklands of Straithochell till the 600 marks should be paid; and that, should Hector fail to fulfil the agreement, he should in like manner forfeit 600 marks to John and Alexander, who in that case should retain the twenty two marklands of Drumgowour till the money was paid.¹ In 1476 and 1478 charters of John of Isla Lord of the Isles are witnessed by Hector M'Clane of Canlochbuy or Lochbowe.² In 1494 Johne M'Gillane of Lochboy produced the indenture of 1475 before the Lords of Council, and requested that it should be copied and publicly recorded.³ In the parliaments of 1504, 1505, and 1506 John M'Clane of Lochboy was frequently summoned to answer for certain treasonable acts, but did not appear.⁴ In 1505 the same John, and all his kinsmen, friends, tenants, and servants, had a remission 'for all maner of actiouns' for two months following the 23d of November.⁵ In 1509 John M'Gillane of Lochboy was one of those to whose protection the prioress and nuns of Icolmkill were specially recommended by King James IV.⁶ In 1517 Lauchlan Maklane of Lochboy and his friends had a remission from the Regent Albany for assisting Sir Donald of the Isles of Lochalch when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.⁷ In 1533 John M'Gillane the son of John M'Gillane of Lochboy was slain by Alane M'Clane the son of the deceased Lauchlan M'Clane of Doward, and the Lochboy property was inherited by his brother Murdoch.⁸ In 1544 Murdo M'Clane of Lochboy assisted the English (under the Earl of Lennox) in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane; in 1545 he was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross (the confederate of Lennox); and in 1546 he had a remission from government for his assistance of the English in 1544.⁹

The principal lands belonging to M'Clane of Lochboy were those of Glenforsay and Moloros, and were held of the Lords of the Isles previously to their forfeiture in 1493.¹⁰ In 1494 King James IV. granted anew to John M'Gilleoun of Lochboye the lands which were his by heritage, and which he had held of John of Ile, through whose forfeiture they were in the King's hands, including two pennylands of Grouding, a pennyland of Calchell, a pennyland of Kelbeg, a pennyland of Yeddrill, a halfpennyland of Chowour, a pennyland of Brayadill, a farthingland of Toslebeg, a pennyland of the two Russillis, a pennyland of Coroch, a pennyland of Pengowyn, a pennyland of Letter-Arnacreill, a pennyland of Fynchenis, a pennyland of Laychtyrdill, a pennyland of Garemown, a pennyland of Skowlestillmore, and a pennyland of Skollistellbeg, in Forsay, in all 20 marklands—and also a pennyland of Ardesalyn, a pennyland of Drumnatym, a pennyland of Kowillay, a halfpennyland of Garmown, a halfpennyland of Berchantroman, a pennyland of Chanlochspelow, a halfpennyland of Juredill, a pennyland of Debedell and Desgaig, two pennylands of Lagan, a pennyland of Moy with the castle, a pennyland of Camroyn, a pennyland of Glenbayr, a halfpennyland of Croseca, a halfpennyland of Inegard, a pennyland of Roysale, and a halfpennyland of Darnakowlane, in Moloros, in all 17½ marklands.¹ In 1534 John Makgilleoun of Lochboy granted the same lands to Murdoch Makgilleoun his son, and in 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.² In 1542 Murdoch Makgilleoun resigned the same lands, lying in the isle of Mowill and sheriffdom of Terbert, and King James V. granted them anew in free barony to him and to his heirs male, with remainder to his brother Charles Makgilleoun and his heirs-male.³ In 1603 Hector M'Cleane of Lochbowie was served heir to Murdoch M'Cleane his great-grandfather in the same lands, the retour however specifying a pennyland of Moy with the loch of Lochbowie instead of a pennyland of Moy with the castle.⁴

In 1635 John M'Cleane was served heir to his father Angus M'Cleane rector of Morvarne in various lands, including the 16 shillinglands of Killcan in Torrosay in Mull, of old in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.⁵

Dowart Castle stands at the extremity of a long headland on the Sound of Mull, four miles and a half from the ferry house of Achnacraig.⁶ It consists of a large quadrangular tower, said to be of Danish origin, with walls varying from 12 to 14 feet in thickness, and some modern buildings forming with the tower and a high wall on the south a quadrangle of about 120 feet by 80.⁷ It was granted, as we have seen, in 1390 with the lands of Torosay and others by Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles to Lachlan Makgilleon.⁸ It appears in Fordun and other chroniclers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries as the castle of Dondoward.⁹ It is included in all the subsequent grants of lands in Mull to the Macclanes of Dowart.¹⁰ It is connected in history with an incident which forms the groundwork of Miss Baillie's drama 'The Family Legend.' About the year 1527 Macclane of Dowart for some unknown cause exposed his lady, Elizabeth the daughter of Archibald Earl of Argyle, on a rock lying in the Sound between Dowart and Lismore, visible only at low water, and still named from the circumstances the Lady's Rock. She was accidentally rescued by some of her father's people, and Macclane was subsequently assassinated at Edinburgh by her brother Sir John Campbell of Calder. This produced the feud above mentioned, which was prevented only by the interference of government.¹¹

The castle of Moy or Lochbuy stands in the south of the parish at the head of the sea loch from which it is named, and near the mountain named Benbhuy.¹ It was granted or confirmed, as above stated, to the Maclaines of Lochbuy along with the lands of Moloros in 1494, 1534, 1538, and 1542.² A chief of modern times, who entertained Dr. Johnson in 1773, and who could not be persuaded that heritable jurisdiction had been abolished, on one occasion imprisoned several persons in the dungeon of the old castle of Moy.³

Keilfeinchen⁴—Killenachin⁵—Kilinnachan⁶—Killinchen.⁷ (Map, No. 14.)

THE parish of Kilfinichen was subsequently to the Reformation united into one parish with Kilviceuen, Torosay, and Inch Kenneth. Torosay was afterwards disjoined, and the other three still remain united under the name Kilfinichen and Kilviceuen, more generally known as Ross.

Kilfinichen included almost the whole peninsula of Ardmanach in Mull, lying on the north of Loch Scriden. It is a hilly country with a steep rocky coast, attaining in Benmore on its north border the height of 3097 feet above the sea.

In 1561 the parsonage of Keilfeinchen in Mull belonged to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles being entitled to one third.⁸ In 1631 the parishes of Killeane and Killenachin were served by one minister.⁹ About the year 1700 Killinchen is mentioned by Martin as one of the two parish churches of Mull.¹⁰

The church, dedicated perhaps to Saint Fincana the Virgin, one of the nine daughters of Saint Dovenald, stood in the south of the parish on the north shore of Loch Scriden.¹¹ There is a modern church, built in 1804, at the same place.¹²

In the year 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, by a charter dated at Ardhoranis (Ard-tornish) granted to Lachlan Makgilleon (of Doward) various lands, among which were a great pennyland of Burg, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ pennylands in Ardmeaganach, including Akeawtegan as far as Ulwach, called Keltegan and Ulwach.¹³ In 1496 King James IV. granted in heritage to Lachlan Makgilleon, the natural son of Hector Makgilleon of Doward, with remainder to Hector and his

In 1494 King James IV. granted to John M'Gilleoun of Lochboye a pennyland of Tayobill, a halfpennyland of Kailtrene, a halfpennyland of Kaylemore, a pennyland of Scoabyll, a halfpennyland of Teyrehowrane, a halfpennyland of Brekach, two pennylands of Knokroy, 1½ pennyland of Sowconnyll, and a pennyland of Cammys, in Ardmanich in the isle of Mull, extending in all to 12 marks, which lands John M'Gilleoun had held in heritage of John of Ile, by whose forfeiture they were in the King's hands.⁵ In 1534 John Makgilleoun of Lochboy granted the same lands to his son Murdoch.⁶ In 1538 King James V. confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1542 the same Murdoc resigned the lands of Ardmanach and others, which were then granted to him anew in free barony by the same king.⁸ In 1615 Hector M'Clane of Lochbowie was served heir in the same lands to his great-grandfather Murdoch M'Clane.⁹

INCHKENNETH.

Insula Sancti Kennethi¹—Yle callit Sancti Kennedy besyde Mule²—
Inchkenzie³—Island of Saint Kynneth⁴—Skennie⁵—Inch Chainie.⁶

THIS parish is united with Kilfinichen and Kilviceuen, and the three are locally known as Ross.⁷

The old parish of Inchkenneth included the island of that name, the island of Eorsa, and a small portion of the peninsula of Mull named Ardmanach, off the north coast of which the islands lie. 'On the north and north eist of Colmkill lyes ane iyle, be twalve myles of sea till within the entres of Lochseaford forsaid, callit Inch Kenzie, half ane myle in lenthe, and not fully half a myle in breadthe, a fair ile, fertill and fruitful, inhabit and manurit, full of cunings about the shores of it, with a paroch kirk, the maist part of the parochin being upon the mayne shoar of Mull, being onlie ane half myle distant from the said ile, and the hail parochin of it pertains to the prioress of Colmkill. Within this iyle of Inch Kenzie in the said Loche of Seaforte be ane myle of sea lyes ane ile callit Eorsay, ane fertile ile, full of corne and grassing, mair than a myle lang, pertaining to the prioress of Colmkill.'⁸ 'Inchkenneth is a pretty little island, a mile long and about half a mile broad, all good land.'⁹ The mainland part of the parish lies on the north slope of Benmore, already stated to be 3097 feet above the sea.

About the year 1400 Fordun enumerates among the Western Isles the isle of Saint Kenneth with a parish church.¹⁰ In 1549, as we have seen, the church is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro.¹¹ In 1574 the teinds of the parish were included in a grant of the lands by Mary Nikillean prioress of Yona to Hector M'Cleane of Dowarde.¹²

The church, dedicated to Saint Kenneth or Kenny, stood on the island of Inchkenneth.¹³ Its walls, 60 feet by 30, are still entire, and its cemetery is still used.¹⁴ In 1773 its altar exhibited on one side a bas-relief of the Virgin, and beside it was a small bell.¹⁵ The island is said to have had a monastery, an idea perhaps originated by its connexion with Iona.¹⁶

Among the crown lands in the Lordship of the Isles in the year 1536 there is enumerated the 'Yle callit Sancti Kennedy besyde Mule.'¹ In 1549, as above stated, the whole lands of the parish belonged to the prioress of Iona.² In 1574 Mary Nikillean, prioress of the monastery of Saint Mary the Virgin in the island of Yona, with consent of the convent, granted in heritage to Hector M'Cleane of Dowarde a pennyland of Kingsheyer, a pennyland of Ballimanaeh, a halfpennyland of Teanyga, a pennyland of Ballienahabnie, a pennyland of Kilwannoyer, two pennylands of Ard, two pennylands of Derriedowaig, a pennyland of Gilsaad, a pennyland of Sgarrasdull, two pennylands of Knok, two pennylands of Clachaig, a halfpennyland of Eorsay, two pennylands including the island of Saint Kynneith with the rabbit warren, and fishings of the same, a halfpennyland of Glenligdowill, and a halfpennyland of Eningart, with the teindsheaves included as of old when the lands were let without division, lying mostly in the isle of Mull in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.³

In 1635 John M'Cleane was served heir to his father Angus M'Cleane rector of Morvarne in the 16 shillinglands of Knok in Mull, the 20 shillinglands of Ulline in Morwarne, of old in the county of Innernes, and the 16 shillinglands of Killean in Torresay in Mull, of old in the sheriffdom of Tarbert, all formerly united into the tenandry of Knok, of the old extent of 52 shillings.⁴

The island of Inchkenneth has a modern interest from the visit of Dr. Johnson in 1773. He says of it, 'Inchkenneth is a proper prelude to Icolmkill. It was not without some mournful emotion that we contemplated the ruins of religious structures and the monuments of the dead.'⁵ The walls of the house or group of cottages in which Dr. Johnson was entertained by Sir Allan Maclean and his two daughters are still to be seen.⁶ His entertainment on that occasion he has commemorated in an elegant Latin ode, which has been translated into English verse by the late Sir Daniel Sandford.⁷

THIS parish, at one time united to Kilninian and Kilmore, and now disjoined, consists of the islands of Ulva, Gometra, Little Colonsa, and Staffa, and a part of the isle of Mull.

'Two miles from Eorsa,' says Buchanan, 'lies Ulva, five miles long, rich for its size both in corn and in pasturage. It possesses a commodious road for ships of war. South east is Colonsa; the soil is fertile, and there is a hazel wood in it. Stretching from south to north, about three quarters of a mile distant, stands Gomatra, two miles long and about a mile broad. Four miles south from Gomatra is Staffa. Both have convenient harbours.¹

Of this church, dedicated to the same saint as Kilviceuen in Mull, and probably in the advowson of the local chief, there appears in record nothing but the name Kilv'Ewyn as applied to the lands.² It stood at Kilviceuen in the island of Ulva, where its ruins were to be seen in 1773; and its cemetery is still the usual burying-place of the inhabitants.³ A new church was built in 1827.⁴

Ulva, Gometra, and Staffa, are the Ulfey, Gudthmundarey, and Stafey, of the Norwegian chroniclers.⁵ In 1773 Dr. Johnson found the old tax upon marriage termed mercheta mulierum exigible in Ulva, and consisting of a sheep valued at 5 shillings.⁶

In 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleon (of Doward) the 4 pennylands of Godmadray, and other lands.⁷ In 1496 Hector Makgilleon of Doward resigned Gowmedra and his other lands, which King James IV. then erected into the free barony of Doward in favour of Hector's natural son Lachlan Makgilleon, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to his brother Donald and his heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleon.⁸ In 1540 Gomodra was resigned as part of the same barony by Hector Makclane of Doward, and granted by King James V. to his son and apparent heir Hector Makclane and his heirs male, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brother Alan and heirs, to his brother John and heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever of the same surname and arms.⁹ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Doward was served heir to his grandfather Hector in the same lands and barony, including the same island of Gomodra.¹⁰

The Macquarries of Ulva possessed that island and the neighbouring lands about the middle of the fifteenth century. In 1463 a charter of John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, is witnessed by John M'Goire of Ulua.¹¹ John Makquhory of Wlway (probably the same John), who died about the year 1473, had heritable possession of the lands of Wlway, and of the 5 marklands in Mull named Lagan-Walsangary.¹² In 1504 and 1505 Makcorry of Vllowa (Dunslaf the son of John) and various others were frequently summoned before parliament to answer for certain treasonable acts, and after several refusals to appear at last submitted to government.¹³ In 1517 Dulleis Makwidy of Ulua (apparently the same Dunslaf) and his kinsmen and friends had a remission from the Regent Albany for assisting Sir Donald of the Ilis of Lochalch, when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.¹⁴ In 1531 Makcorry lord of Ulway along with many others was frequently summoned before parliament, but failed to appear.¹ In 1536 Ulway is enumerated among the crown lands in the Lordship of the Isles.² In 1540 John M'Coirry, the natural son of Duslan (Dunslaf?) M'Coirry of Ulway and Langanvaslagary had a precept of legitimation under the privy seal of King James V.³ In 1545 Jhone Macquore of Ulway was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles, then holding treasonable intercourse with England.⁴ In 1546 M'Rore of Ulway (probably the same John) had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.⁵ In 1553 Queen Mary granted to Hector Makclane of Dowart the lands of Ulway, and 5 marklands called Lagan-Walsangary, in the sheriffdom of Tarbert, which had been in the Sovereign's hands by reason of nonentry for 80 years after the decease of John Makquhory of Ulway, and which had been sold to Hector Makclane for the sum of £4588 as the value of the nonentry, and for £225, 8s. as the sheriff's fee.⁶ Among the chiefs and gentlemen who met the bishop of the Isles in 1609, when the 'statutes of Iona' were passed, was Gillespick Macquarrie of Ulva.⁷ In 1615 Hector Makeleane of Dowart was served heir to his grandfather Hector in the lands of Ulway, Lagan, and Walsagary, of the old extent of 20 marks.⁸ In 1630 Donald Makquoyrie in Ulway was served heir to his grandfather Hector Makquoyrie in Ulway in a pennyland and a half of Carnallich, a pennyland of Noyak, a halfpennyland of Ormakbeig, a pennyland of Ormakmoir, a pennyland of Craigaik, a pennyland of Kilv'Ewyn, a pennyland of Golarimoir, a pennyland of Glackingradin, a pennyland of Ballegartney, a farthingland of Collocharran, a halfpennyland of Bearnis, a pennyland of Cowll, a pennyland of Abos, three farthinglands of Soribie, three farthinglands of Ferrineynardo, and a pennyland of Ardali, in the island of Ulway—in the island of Staffa extending to a farthingland—and in three farthinglands of Drissak, three farthinglands of Kowlmwillyn, a halfpennyland of Pennisauch, a pennyland of Rowaik, and a pennyland of Glenmakquoyrie, in the isle of Mull and sheriffdom of Tarbert—together of the old extent of 23 marks, 1 shilling, and 8 pence.⁹

On a high steep rock in Glackingdaline bay are the ruins of Glackingdaline castle.¹⁰

In 1773 Dr. Johnson and his friend Boswell were entertained by the last 'chief of Ulva's isle.'¹¹ In 1777 at the age of 62 Macquarrie, reduced by his own profuse hospitality, sold his estate and entered the army. Having served abroad for many years with distinction, he returned to his native country, and in 1818 died in the island of Mull at the advanced age of 103. The old Macquarrie mansion still remains, and Johnson's room is pointed out to strangers.¹²

KILNINIAN.

Keilnoening in Mulle¹—Kilymaig². (Map, No. 17.)

THIS parish, now united to Kilcolmkil (the united parish being known as Kilninian and Kilmore), included the lands of Treshinish, Morinish, and others, forming the greater portion of that peninsula of Mull lying north of Lochnakeal, and also the Treshinish Isles, lying off the point of Treshinish, and of old considered the boundary between the Nordthreyar and Sudreyjar, or North and South Isles. It is in general composed of hill and heath, but has some arable land on the coast.

We have no record of this church previously to the year 1561, when it appears as the parsonage of Keilnoening in Mulle belonging to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles being entitled to one-third.³

The church, dedicated to Saint Ninian the apostle of Galloway, stood at Kilninian on Loch Tua.⁴ A modern church, built in 1754, stands at the same place.⁵ There appear to have been churches or chapels at Kilmaluag near Treshinish point, at Kilchrist and Kildavie in the north of the parish, at Kilmorie in the east, and at Kilbrenan and Kilchrinan in the south.⁶

In the year 1343 King David II. granted to his kinsman Angus the son of John of the Isles the two unciate of land in Mull which were called Morynis, the grantee rendering the usual service by sea and land.⁷ In 1390 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to Lachlan Makgilleon (of Doward) a pennyland of Calwogray, a pennyland of Aeneangbage, and a halfpennyland of Bedich (in Morinish).⁸ The grant was confirmed in 1431 by King James I., and in 1495 by King James IV.⁹ In 1496 Hector Makgilleon of Doward resigned the lands of Callogary, Eynvay, Calzach, Lag, Soneboll, Gilzacrest, Peynmore, and Arderenis, in Morenis, which King James IV. then granted in heritage to his natural son Lachlan Makgilleon as part of the free barony of Doward, with remainder to Hector and his heirs, to his brother Donald and heirs, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makgilleon.¹⁰ In 1510 King James IV. granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart of Appin three halfpennylands of Fregittill, three halfpennylands of Calwegar, a pennyland of Svneboll, a pennyland of Gilerist, a pennyland of Laigh, a pennyland of Challich, a pennyland of Areyn, a pennyland of Ynigwy, a halfpennyland of Pennymore and Ardirenis, seven pennylands of Chressines, and a pennyland of Thorssay, within the lands of Mornch—which with many others Duncan Stewart had acquired from the deceased Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart for the sum of 4500 marks due by Lauchlan to him, and redeemable on payment of the same.¹ In 1540 Hector Makelane of Dowart resigned the lands of Collogray, Inewey, Calioch, Lag, Sonepoill, Gilerist, Penemore, and Arderenis, in Morenis, which were then granted by King James V. as part of the free barony of Dowart to his son and heir Hector Makelane and his heirs male, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brother Alan and heirs, to his brother John and heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makelane.² In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir in the same lands to Hector M'Clayne his grandfather.³

In 1390, 1431, 1495, 1496, 1540, and 1603, the lands of Tressines were included in the same grants with Morines.⁴

Among the lands acquired by Duncan Stewart of Appin from the deceased Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart, of which King James IV. in 1510 granted to the former a crown charter, were included three farthinglands of Doischoring, three halfpennylands of Aremelkeyne, a pennyland of Drumgrane, a pennyland of Chorsboill, a halfpennyland of Knoighow, two pennylands of Enichsay, a pennyland of Glaichvgare, three halfpennylands of Ordeskin, three halfpennylands of Regdill, a pennyland of Thorslosk, a halfpennyland of Ardualy, a pennyland of Kilmichael, three halfpennylands of Corehamore, a pennyland of Oskemore, a pennyland of Bolleriche, a pennyland of Thynniddale, and a halfpennyland of Baighe, all of old extent, in the islands of Mule and Teree in the sheriffdom of Perth, together with the office of steward of Teree and Mule, with all liberties formerly possessed by Lauchlan Makgilleon.⁵ In 1542 King James V. granted of new to Hector M'Clane of Doward in liferent, and to his son Hector and his heirs specified in the charter of entail of the barony of Doward, the following lands of the old extent of £20 as part of that barony, namely, the lands of Osewmwl, Corcomwr, Kilmychaell, Ardualing, the two Fannemoreis, Torlosk, Tostane (or Costare) Ardesgenye, Burgbeg, Burgmore, Rewdill, Glaikowgary, Ewinsay, Crosopollic, Langavill, Knokowir, Kildawie, Drumgiga, Duchorene (or Dathoren), Aremolkeyne, and Tunadill, in Mwill, in the sheriffdom of Terbert—all which lands belonged to the deceased Hector M'Clane, the grandfather of Hector the elder, whose charters were destroyed in a time of deadly feud between him and Earl Angus Master of the Isles, so that his son and heir Lauchlan M'Clane could not obtain entry and seisin of the same.⁶ In 1615 Hector Makeleane of Dowart was served heir male to Hector Makeleane of Dowart his grandfather in the same £20 lands in the same island and sheriffdom.⁷

In 1561 the abbot of Iona had the pennyland Kilphubbill, the pennyland of Kealline, the pennyland of Kilbrandane, the pennyland of Kilneoning, the half pennyland of Cen-garwgerrie, and the pennyland of Kilmorie.¹ In a grant of the abbey lands in 1588 by King James VI. to Hector M'Clane, the son and apparent heir of Lauchlan M'Clane of Dowart, Kilphobull, Killin, Calyemoir, Kilvrany, Kilayne, Kingargera, and Kilmorie, each a pennyland, were rented at £1, 16s. 8d. each, except Kilmorie a threefarthingland rented at £1, 2s. 6d.²

The Treshinish Isles include Bachbeg, Bachmore, Lunga, Flada, Cairnburgmore, Cairnburgbeg, Duncroit, Scerna, Caeregralish, Graphaland, the Eagle Isles, and the Irishman's Isle. They are remarkable chiefly as the boundary already mentioned, which was defended by a strong fortress situated on the steep rocky island of Cairnburgmore, accessible only at one point.³ Kiarnaborg, the Bjana or Bjarnaborg of the Sagas, is said to mean the Castle of the Rock.⁴ In 1249 the castle of Kiarnaborg was held by John Dungadson, called King of the Isles, and subject to Norway.⁵ King Alexander II. demanded its surrender, but King John refused and retired to Lewes.⁶ In 1343 King David II. granted to John of Yle the keeping of the castles of Kernoborgh and Iseleborgh, with the lands and small islands belonging to the same.⁷ In 1354 John of Larin lord of Argyll quitclaimed to John of Yle Lord of the Isles the castles of Kerneburgh and Hystylburch with the dependent islands (granted to the latter by King Robert Bruce or King David II.), of which he seems to have anew received the keeping, it being stipulated in the first instance that, until he should have delivered the castle of Kerneburgh to John of Yle, he should give him three hostages, namely, a lawful son of Lachlan M'Alexander, a lawful son of Ywar M'Lulli, and a lawful son of John M'Molmari or of another good man of his clan, and secondly that John of Larin should never give the keeping of the castle of Kerneburgh to any of the clan Fynwyne (Mackinnon).⁸ In 1390 Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles granted to Lachlan Makgilleon (of Doward) the constabulary and keeping of his castles of Kernaborg and Iseborg, together with the small isles Floda and Lunga.⁹ About 1400 Fordun and other chroniclers mention the very strong castle of Carneborough, four miles distant from Mule in the sea.¹⁰ In 1409 Donald of Ile granted to his nephew Hector Makgilleon lord of Doward, constable of his castle of Karnaborg, the six marklands of Tyrvughafeal in the island of Coll, instead of the meal and cheese wont to be given yearly by the inhabitants of Tyriage (Tiree) to the constable for the keeping of that castle.¹¹ The grants of 1390 and 1409 were confirmed in 1431 by King James I., and in 1495 by King James IV.¹² In 1496 the latter king granted Carnaborg with the isles of the same, which were resigned by Hector Makgilleon of Doward, in heritage to his natural son Lachlan as part of the barony of Doward, with remainder to Hector, to his brother Donald, and to Hector's heirs whomsoever bearing the Makgilleon surname and arms.¹ In 1504, while the army of King James IV. lay at Dunbarton, arms and ammunition were sent thence to Carneburg for the siege of the castle, which does not appear to have been taken at that time.² In 1513 it was taken by Lauchlan Maclean of Dowart in the interest of Sir Donald of Lochalsh (styled Donald Galda).³ On 6 September 1515 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, granted to Lauchlane Makelane of Doward and Alexander Makeloid of Dunbegane, their servants, landed men, gentlemen, and yeomen, a remission for all past crimes, and in particular for besieging and taking the castles of Carnebog and Dunskaith, and holding them against his authority, and for their assisting Sir Donald Ilis of Lochalsh and his accomplices, the remission to last till 1 January 1516.⁴ In 1519 Sir Donald is said to have died in the castle.⁵ In 1540 Kearnaburg with the islands was resigned by Hector Makelane of Dowart, and granted by King James V. as part of the barony of Dowart to his son and heir Hector and his heirs male, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brothers Alan and John, and to his own heirs whomsoever of the same surname and arms.⁶ About the year 1577 Buchanan observes, 'Four miles from these (the islands forming the parish of Ulva), receding to the south-west, are the two Carniburghs, the greater and the less, so surrounded by precipitous rocks and a rapid current that the natural fortifications aided by art are completely impregnable.'⁷ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir to his grandfather Hector in Kearnburgh and its islands.⁸

THIS parish, now united to Kilninian, appears to have included the districts of Quinish, Mishinish, and Aros. Its surface, like that of Kilninian, is composed chiefly of hill and heath. Towards its western boundary lies Loch Erisa, a freshwater lake of considerable size. At Drimfin near the east coast is Saint Mary's Lake. Opposite the bay of Tobermory in the Sound of Mull is the island named Calve island or the Calf of Mull.

In 1409 a charter of Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Master Malcolm rector of the church of Saint Columba of Moyle.¹ Among the parsonages of the abbot of Iona in 1561, of each of which the bishop of the Isles had a third, was the parsonage of Keilchallumkill in Quynaise in Mulle.²

The church stood near the head of a sea loch on the north coast of Mull in the district of Quinish.³ A modern church, built in 1754, stands a little southward of the former at Kilmore, where probably stood of old a church or chapel dedicated to the Virgin.⁴

At Tobermory (Mary's Well) are the ruins of a chapel, and a well, dedicated to the Virgin Mary.⁵ In 1540 King James V. presented Sir Fingonius Makmulane chaplain to the chaplainry of Tibbirmore in the diocese of the Isles, vacant by the decease of Sir Donald M'Fadzeane.⁶ There is at Tobermory a church built in 1828 for the district of Tobermory and part of Salen.⁷

From a deed already quoted, dated in 1354, it is probable that the clan Fynwyne (Mackinnon) held lands in Mull at that period.⁸ In the year 1409 a charter of Donald of Ile Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Lauchlan Macfingon.⁹ In 1517 Niel Makynnan of Moines and certain others, with their kinsman and friends, had a remission from the Regent Albany for assisting Sir Donald of the Ilis of Lochalch when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.¹⁰ In 1531 Ewin Makkymmyng of Strathardill (the same as Mackinnon of Mishnish) and many others were frequently summoned before parliament, but failed to appear.¹¹ In 1542 Ewin M'Fingon resigned the 20 marklands of Meysnes in the island of Mule, and the lands of Strathardol in Skye, which King James V. then granted to him anew, uniting them into one free tenantry, of which seisin was to be taken only at the chief message of Strathardol.¹² In 1545 the same Ewin joined in the rebellion of Donald Lord of the Isles, and was one of his council.¹³ In 1557 Queen Mary granted to Lauchlane M'Fingone, the son and heir apparent of the deceased Ewin M'Fingone, the ward, nonentry, and other dues of the lands of Maysenes and Straithwardill, which had been in her hands since Ewin's decease.¹⁴ Sir Lauchlan Mackinnon, the son of Lauchlane M'Fingone, appears as chief of his clan from 1587 to 1625.¹⁵

Before the year 1449 the lands of Quinish appear to have been granted by Alexander Lord of the Isles to John Maclean of Coll, surnamed Garve.¹⁶ They seem to have been confirmed to the same John by King James II. before the year 1460.¹⁷ In 1528 King James V., on the narrative that the writs of the deceased John M'Clayne of Coill granted to him by King James II. had been destroyed, granted anew to his grandson John M'Clayne of Coill certain lands, including the 18 marklands of Cowinis, namely, 18s. of Pennemolloch towards the

On the bay of Tobermory is the village of the same name, whose harbour, nearly landlocked by the Calf island, is safe and commodious.⁶

Near the village are the remains of a circular building said to have been a Norwegian fort.⁷

In the year 1263 Haco King of Norway during his expedition against Scotland passed in going and returning through the Sound of Mull (Mylarsund), and on the latter occasion spent several nights at the Calf of Mull (the Mylarkalfr of the Norse chroniclers.)⁸ 'Upon the narrest coste of Mull,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'lyes ane iyle callit Calfe, ane myle of lenthe, full of woods, with ane sufficient raid for shipes, perteyning to M'Gillayne of Doward.'⁹

On a high rocky promontory overlooking the bay of Aros at the eastern extremity of the parish stands the old castle of Aros (Aarhus, the mouth of the Aa), one of the strongholds of the Lords of the isles.¹⁰ It is mentioned by Fordun and others about the year 1400 as one of two castles in Mull, and styled Donarwise.¹¹ In 1449 John of Yle Lord of the Isles dates a charter at Aros.¹² At the same castle in 1608 a number of the turbulent Island chiefs met Lord Ohiltree lieutenant of the Isles, who inveigled them on pretence of hearing sermon by the bishop on board the King's ship, and thus succeeded in making them prisoners.¹³ He restored the castle to Maclean of Dowart on his promise that he should surrender it when required.¹⁴ The castle of Aros, now a mere ruin, was a massy oblong, 30 paces by 12, with walls 40 feet high, and a spacious esplanade extending to the edge of the rock, which seems to have been enclosed by a wall.¹

About two miles from Tobermory is Bloody Bay, so named from a sea fight which took place in 1480, and in which the adherents of John Lord of the Isles were defeated with great loss by Angus his natural son.²

In 1588 or 1589 the Florida, a ship of the Spanish Armada, was driven by stress of weather into the harbour of Tobermory.³ Maclean of Douart, after having employed a hundred Spanish soldiers from the Florida in an expedition against various parts of the Highlands and Isles, treacherously blew up and sunk the ship.⁴ In 1641 James Duke of Lennox and Richmond, High Admiral of Scotland, with the consent of King Charles I., granted to Archibald Marquis of Argyle 'the wrack ships and other vessells with the hail ornaments, amunitione, and other goods and geare quihilk should be found therein, of the Spanish Armado cast away and sunk to the ground of the sea wpon the coast of Mull anno 1588.'⁵ In 1667 King Charles II., 'to take away the escheat of the Marqueis forfaultour,' confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1677 Archibald Earl of Argyle was sued before the Lords of Council by William Aikman, procurator fiscal of the Court of Admiralty, for meddling with the 'said wrack ship at Tobermory'—but was acquitted of the charge.⁷ 'In the bay of Topur Morry, anno 1730, 1731, and I think 1732, Captain Jacob Roe continued fishing upon a Spanish wreck, said to be blown up in Q. Elizabeth's reign with a great treasure on board upon their Armada attempting to invade England—and all the fruits of his great labour and expence were a few broad pieces of Spanish gold which had neither suffered in weight nor figure, and some pieces of eight in silver which were somewhat wasted, besides a beautifull piece of brass ordnance.'⁸ Other attempts have been made to secure the contents of the sunk vessel, and there have been brought up guns of brass and iron, some of which, dated 1584, may still be seen at Dunstaffnage Castle.⁹ A portion of a plank which belonged to the Florida was presented to King George IV. on his visit to Edinburgh in 1822.¹⁰

Soirbie in Teirie¹—Sorbie in Tiree²—Soirby³—Soroby.⁴ (Map, No. 19.)

THIS parish and Kirkapoll, into which the island of Tiree was anciently divided, were in 1618 united to the island and parish of Coll.⁵

The island of Tiree, of which the parish of Soroby formed the south west portion, is in general low and level, and about 50 feet above the sea. Its greatest elevation is Ben Heinish in Soroby, which attains the height of 400 feet. It abounds with lakes.

In 1561 the parsonage of Soirbie in Teirie belonged to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles having one-third.⁶ In 1615, when King James VI. restored the chapter of the Isles, the parson of Sorbie, vicar of Icolmekill, was appointed dean.⁷ About the year 1700 Martin says that Tiree had one parish church called Soroby.⁸

The church stood at Soroby on the south east coast.⁹ There was a church or chapel at Kilchainie on the north west coast.¹⁰

Tiree seems to be the Ethica terra of Adomnan, and to have been in that early age a dependency of Iona, a supposition strengthened by the existing remains of some of its religious buildings.¹¹ Its early history nearly corresponds with that of Bute.¹² In 1292, as the property of Anegus the son of Douenald of the Isles, it was probably included in the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle erected by King John Balliol.¹³ About the year 1314 it was probably held by Angus of Isla (known as Angus Oig, and styled by Barbour 'Angus of Ile and But, Syr of the Ilis.')¹⁴ In 1343 King David Second granted the island of Tiriyad to John of Yle (the son of Angus Oig), by whom it seems to have been forfeited for his adherence to Edward Balliol.¹⁵ In 1354 John of Larin lord of Argyle quitclaimed to the same John of Yle Lord of the Isles the island of Tereyd, with the exception afterwards mentioned.¹⁶ In 1390 Donald of Ile granted to Lachlan M'Gilleon (of Doward) the office of bailie of all his lands of Tyriage, with an unciata of Mannawallis, half an unciata of Hindebollis, and the office of steward of his (Donald's) house.¹ Fordun about the year 1400 mentions Tiree as one of the greater islands of the Hebrides.² Previously to 1409 the inhabitants of Tyriage paid yearly to the constable of Karnaborg a quantity of meal and cheese, in lieu of which Donald of Ile in that year granted to the constable the 6 marklands of Tyrvughafeal in Coll.³ In 1431 the grant of 1390, and the exchange of 1409, were confirmed by King James I.⁴ In 1475 John of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, forfeited Tiree with his other possessions; in 1476 the islands including Tiree were restored to him by King James III.; and in 1478 that king confirmed the restoration.⁵ In 1493 the Isles were again forfeited by the same John, the last acknowledged Lord.⁶ In 1494 King James IV. granted anew to John M'Gilleon of Lochboye certain lands in Lochaber, together with half the office of bailie in the island of Tyriage, namely, in the southern parts of the same, all which John M'Gilleon had held in heritage of John Lord of the Isles, by whom they were forfeited to the King.⁷ In 1495 the same king confirmed the grants made by Donald of Ile in 1390 and 1409.⁸ In 1496 he granted in heritage to Lachlan Makgilleon, the natural son of Hector Makgilleon of Doward, with remainder to Hector, his brother Donald, and Hector's heirs whomsoever of the Makgilleon surname and arms, the lands of Mandalon, Crossoboll, and Herne, in Tireig, with the stewardship of all the lands of Tireig, which Hector Makgilleon had resigned.⁹ In 1510 the same king granted in heritage to Duncan Stewart of Appin certain lands in Mule and Teree in the sheriffdom of Perth, together with the offices of the stewardries of Teree and Mule, with all liberties, as formerly possessed by the deceased Lauchlan Makgilleon of Dowart.¹⁰ About this period the same king appears to have put an end to a feud between the Macleans of Dowart and Lochbuy regarding the boundary of their respective lands in Tiree.¹¹ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, granted to Lauchlan Makclane of Doward, for his good service and for his inbringing of the King's fermes of the south side of Ardnamurchane, the fermes and dues of the King's lands of Teree, to be held during the regency of Albany.¹² In the same year the Regent appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of all the Isles except Bute and Arane, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants, for the space of three years or more according to the Regent's pleasure.¹³ In 1522 the lands in Lochaber granted in 1494 to John M'Gilleon of Lochboye together with half the baliary of Terrag were resigned by John M'Gilleon, and granted by King James V. to Sir John Campbell of Calder.¹⁴ In 1524 the same king appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of all the Isles except Bute and Arane, and of the lands usually called the ferme lands, and of others specified in the King's precept.¹⁵ In

1526 the same king confirmed to Sir John Campbell of Calder the grant made in 1522 of lands in Lochaber and the bailiary of the south half of the island of Tiriage.¹ In 1528 the same lands and half bailiary were resigned by Sir John Campbell, and granted by King James V. to Sir John's brother Colin Earl of Ergile.² In 1533 that king granted to Archibald Earl of Argyle and 92 others a remission for treasonable fire-raising in the islands of Mule, Teyre, and Morvern.³ In 1536 Terree is enumerated among the crown lands in the Lordship of the Isles.⁴ In 1540 the lands of Mandalon, Crossipoll, and Heren, in Tierig, with the office of the bailiary of Tierig, were resigned by Hector Makelane of Dowart, and granted by King James V. as part of the barony of Dowart to his son and apparent heir Hector and his male heirs, with remainder to Hector the elder, his brothers Alan and John, and his own heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Makelane.⁵ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Dowart was served heir to his grandfather Hector M'Clayne in the same lands and bailiary.⁶

In 1561 the £4 land of Baillephuille was held by the abbot of Iona.⁷ In 1588 the six marklands of Ballefulye, granted with other lands by King James VI. to Hector M'Clane the son and apparent heir of Lauchlan M'Clane of Dowart, paid £8 of yearly rent to the crown.⁸

The house of Donald of Ile is mentioned, as we have seen, in his grant of 1390 to Lachlan M'Gilleon.⁹ Fordun about 1400 says that in the island of Tyre-e is a very strong tower.¹⁰ 'There is,' says Buchanan about the year 1577, 'a fresh water lake in it, in the midst of which stands an ancient castle.'¹¹ This was perhaps the Castel Loch Hyrbol of Blaeu.¹² In the island are various ancient forts, cairns, and standing stones.¹³

KIRKAPOLL.

Kirkapost in Teirie¹—Kirkapol in Tiree²—Kirkapoll in Teiri³—Kirkabol⁴
—Kirkapoll in Tirie.⁵ (Map, No. 20.)

THIS parish, united in 1618 with Soroby and Coll, was composed of the north east portion of the island of Tiree. In general appearance it is the same as Soroby.

In 1561 the parsonage of Kirkapost belonged to the bishop of the Isles.⁶ In 1599 Alexander Campbell commendator of Ardhattan granted in heritage to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eachtrachan, for his life and the life of his next heir and for 19 years more, the teinds of certain parishes including the parish of Kirkapol in Tiree, reserving the teinds payable to the ministers of the respective parishes.⁷ In the same year Duncan Campbell resigned the lease in favour of Catherine M'Donald, the wife of Alexander Campbell commendator of Icolmkill, and her heirs, to whom it was then confirmed by King James VI.⁸ In 1602 Alexander Campbell prior of Archattane resigned the church, teinds, and patronage of Kirkapoll, and King James VI. granted him a new infeftment heritably in the same.⁹ In 1631 John Campbell was served heir to his father Alexander Campbell of Ardhattan in the church, teinds, and advowson of Kirkapoll.¹⁰ In 1697 John Campbell of Ardhattan was served heir to his father Archibald Campbell fear of Ardhattan in the property of the church and parsonage of Kirkapoll with the teinds and patronage.¹¹

The church stood at Kirkapoll about the middle of the parish and near a loch of the same name.¹² Blaeu places a church also at Kilmolowaig, apparently at the south west corner of the parish.¹³

In the year 1354 John of Larin lord of Argyle quitclaimed to John of Yle Lord of the Isles the isle of Tereyd, with the exception of the three unciats of Tereyd next to Colle, which John of Yle then confirmed to the former and his heirs for ever, John of Larin engaging that the steward of the three unciats should not make a domestic establishment (domesticatura) or a dwelling (habitaculum) on those lands without leave obtained from John of Yle.¹⁴

In 1561 the markland of Wyle belonged to the abbot of Iona, and the land of Kirkapost to the bishop of the Isles.¹⁵ In 1588 King James VI. granted anew to Hector M'Clane, the son and apparent heir of Lauchlan M'Clane of Dowart, the six marklands of Kirkebold, the markland of Woyll, and the six marklands of Keillis, paying respectively to the crown yearly £8, £2, 16s. 8d., and £8.¹

In 1574 Mary Nikillean, prioress of the monastery of Saint Mary the Virgin in the island of Yona, with the consent of the convent, granted in heritage to Hector M'Clane of Dowarde the lands belonging to the nunnery, including the three marklands of Skervenis in the isle of Teray in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.² In 1635 John M'Cleane was served heir to his father Angus M'Cleane rector of Morvarne in the same three marklands of old in the same sheriffdom.³

IN 1618 Coll and Tiree were united into one parish.⁴

The parish of Coll included the island of that name, the island of Gunna, and numerous small islands around its coast.

'There are several districts of sandy desert in Coll; there are forty-eight lochs of fresh water, but many of them are very small; there are no rivers in Coll, but only some brooks; in the whole isle there are but three hills, and none of them considerable for a highland country.'⁵ Its surface is rugged and unequal, none of its hills exceeding 300 feet in height, and the coast is in general rocky and precipitous.⁶

Of this church there seems to be no extant record. It was probably in the advowson of the Lord of the Isles or of Maclean of Coll. The 'Kirktown' appears in grants of the barony in 1528, 1542, and 1642.⁷ The church seems to have stood either at Crossapill on the south coast, or at Grisapoll on the north west.⁸ On the north coast at Kilynaig and Kilchainie there appear to have been chapels dedicated to Saint Senaie and Saint Kenneth.⁹ Blaeu places a church or chapel at Fail in the south west extremity of the island, and Kilbride appears in modern maps.¹⁰ In 1773 there were the ruins of a chapel (possibly of the old parish church) in 'the northern part of the island,' but no parish church, a mere hut being used for public worship.¹¹ A church was built near the middle of the island in 1802.¹² There appears to have been a chapel in the island of Gunna, which belonged to the nuns of Iona.¹³

The island of Coll, whose history is not to be distinguished from that of the other Isles, was probably included in the sheriffdom of Lorn or Argyle erected by King John Balliol in 1292.¹ In 1314 it seems to have been held of King Robert Bruce by Angus Oig of Isla.² In 1343 it was granted by King David II. to John Lord of the Isles after his return to the allegiance of that king.³ In 1354, when John of Larin quitclaimed to the same Lord of the Isles certain lands of which the latter had charters from King Robert I. or King David II., he retained the island of Colle, which the Lord of the Isles then granted to him and his heirs for ever.⁴ About 1400 the island is enumerated by Fordun among the Western Isles of Scotland.⁵ It was forfeited with the other Isles by John of Ile Earl of Ross in 1475, restored to him by King James III. in 1476, confirmed to him by that king in 1478, and again and finally forfeited by him in 1493.⁶ In 1517 and again in 1524 Colin Earl of Ergile was appointed by John Duke of Albany lieutenant of all the Isles South and North.⁷

Early in the fifteenth century Alexander Earl of Ross appears to have granted the lands and barony of Coll to John Maclean, styled Garve, the son of Lauchlan Maclean of Dowart, and founder of the family of Coll.⁸ The same John is said to have slain Gilleonan Macneill of Barra, who disputed his possession of Coll.⁹ In 1449 there appears in record John M'Lachlan (Lachlan) M'Gilleoin of Coll, who about that period had a grant of the lands of Coll from King James II.¹⁰ John, the son and successor of John Garve, was killed in the feud which arose between the Macleans and Camerons about the lands of Lochiel, and John (styled Abrach), the son of the former, and the grandson of John Garve, was laird of Coll in 1493.¹¹ In 1515, when John Duke of Albany, Regent, appointed John Makcane of Ardnamurchan his commissioner for reducing the inhabitants of part of the Isles to obedience, among the exceptions was Alexander the son of John Caynoch of Coll.¹² In 1516 the same regent granted a special protection during his pleasure to 'Alexander Johne Caynochis sone' and others.¹³ In 1528 King James V., on the narrative that the writs of the deceased John M'Clayne of Coill, granted to him by King James II. had been destroyed, granted anew to his grandson John M'Clayne of Coill the lands of Coill of the old extent of £20, namely, 3 marklands of Brakauch, 3 marklands of Fealda, 20s. of Crocepoldo, 20s. of Wig, 20s. of Claid, 20s. of Totorannald, 20s. of Ballehow, 20s. of Cardnaha, 20s. of Gremysare, 20s. of Crecepoldo, 20s. of Arnapoldo, 20s. of Galdanach, 20s. of Gare and Knok, 20s. of Treella, 20s. of Kirktown, 20s. of Torressa, and 6s. 8d. of Gortane, in the sheriffdom of Terbert.¹⁴ In 1531 John M'Kane Albrych of Coile was with many others frequently summoned before parliament, but failed to appear.¹⁵ In 1542 John

Makclane of Coll resigned the lands above specified, with the addition of 10s. of Mebois, the castle of Coll, with the mills, fishings, and woods, all which with certain other lands were united by King James V. into the free barony of Coll, the castle to be the chief messuage, and were granted in liferent to the same John, and in heritage to John Makclane his son and apparent heir.¹ In 1545 John Maclane of Coll was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles, and in 1546 he had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.² In 1558 that queen granted to Hector M'Clane, the brother and heir of the deceased John M'Clane of Cole, the nonentry and other dues of the lands and barony of Cole, as specified in the grant of 1542.³ In 1559 the same lands and barony were resigned by Hector Makclane of Coill, and granted by Queen Mary in heritage to Hector his son and heir, with reservation of the liferent to himself and of the terce to his widow, provided he should not be convicted of lese majesty.⁴ In 1561 the lands of Coll were laid waste and the tenants imprisoned by Hector Maclean of Dowart.⁵ From 1596 to 1625 Lachlan Maclean, the son of Hector, appears as laird of Coll.⁶ In 1642 John M'Cleane was served heir male to his father Lauchlan M'Cleane of Coil in the lands, barony, and castle of Coil, as formerly specified, together of the old extent of 42 marks.⁷

In 1409 Donald of Ile, Lord of the Isles, granted to his nephew Hector Makgilleon lord of Doward, the constable of his castle of Karnaborg, the 6 marklands of Tyrvughafeal in the isle of Coll, instead of the meal and cheese wont to be given yearly by the inhabitants of Tyriage to the constable for the keeping of that castle.⁸ The grant was confirmed in 1431 by King James I., and in 1495 by King James IV.⁹

In 1558 Queen Mary granted to Hector M'Gillean of Coll the 6 marklands of Detyrung, Chornak, Sedustill, Pollis, Cornakveg, and Cornakmore, in the barony of Coll and sheriffdom of Tarbet.¹⁰ In 1574 Mary Nikillean prioress of Iona, with the consent of the convent, granted to Hector M'Clane of Dowarde the lands and isle of Ganna, and the lands the teringa of Kylis, the lands of Ardinsse Upper, the lands of Ardinsse Nether, and the lands of Fresland, in the island of Coll, in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.¹¹ In 1616 King James VI. granted to Andrew bishop of the Isles the two Corneiks and the east end of Coll, formerly belonging to the priory of Oransay as part of its patrimony—and the lands called the west end of Coll extending to seven quarters land, and the lands called Haltyren of Ardneish, and others, formerly belonging to the nunnery of Icolmkill—all united with some other lands into the tenandry of Oransay.¹²

There is a village at Arinangour in Coll containing about 170 inhabitants.¹³

The castle of Coll, styled Breacacha (the Spotted Field), appears, as we have seen, in grants of the barony in 1542 and 1642.¹ It is the Castel Brekach of Blaeu.² It stands on the shore of a sea loch, named by Blaeu Loch-na-chastel, and apparently now known as Breacacha Bay, on the south east of the island, and is still nearly entire.³

Near the castle is the modern family seat, where Johnson and Boswell were in 1773 entertained by the young laird of Coll.⁴ In the charter-room they were shown a large shin-bone, believed to have been one of the bones of John Garve Maclean.⁵

THIS parish appears to have consisted of the islands of Eigg, Muck, and Rum, with the smaller islands called Ellain Chaistal and Ellain no' n' Each, the former lying adjacent to Eigg, and the latter to Muck. All these islands, with Canna and the smaller island named Ellan Gainmhich, now form the parish of the Small Isles.

The island of Eigg is intersected in the middle by a glen stretching from sea to sea, and terminating on the south-west in Scur Eigg, and on the north-east in Benvui.⁹ Scur Eigg, a hill rising 1340 feet above the sea level, is remarkable as being surmounted by a perpendicular mass of pitchstone porphyry 470 feet in height.¹⁰

Muck (or Ellain-na-muick, the island of Swine) is a low green island with a heathy hill at the north end.¹¹ It is described by Archdeacon Monro as 'very fertill and fruitful of cornes and grassing for all store, and very guid for fishing, inhabit and manurit, a good falcon nest in it.'¹²

Rum is described by Archdeacon Monro in the sixteenth century as abounding in forests, high hills, deer, solan geese, and other wild fowls.¹³ A writer of the seventeenth century observes, 'It hath great mountains and many deer. More it hath certaine wild fowles about the bigness of a dow, gray coloured, which are scarce in uthir places. Good meat they ar, but that to them

In the year 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alan for his homage and service certain lands, including lands in the islands of Eigg and Rum with the advowson of the church, all which had been resigned by Cristian of Marr, the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic.³ Towards the end of the fourteenth century the advowson appears to have belonged to the Lords of the Isles.⁴ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro describes the island of Eigg as containing 'a parochie kirke.'⁵ In 1662, when King Charles II. appointed an archdeacon for the Isles, the islands of Egga, Ruma, Mucca, and Canna, were included among the parishes assigned to him as 'his proper kirks.'⁶

The church, dedicated to Saint Donan, stood at Kildonan on the east side of Eigg.⁷ In the end of the seventeenth century the saint's anniversary (17 April) was observed in the island, and his well was held in great esteem.⁸ At the same period a well dedicated to Saint Catharine was frequented on 15 April as her anniversary.⁹ Martin mentions also a cairn dedicated to Saint Martin and named Martin Dessil, and another dedicated to the Virgin Mary.¹⁰

At Kilmory on the north-west coast of Rum stood a chapel, apparently dedicated to the Virgin, the ruins of which existed in 1772.¹¹

The island of Eigg is probably the Gea mentioned by Adomnan.¹² In 1263 Haco King of Norway after the battle of Largs sailed to Rauney, supposed to be the island of Rum.¹³ Among the documents found in 1282 in the King's treasury at Edinburgh there was one entitled 'A letter of the King of Norway relating to the lands of Iuist and Egin.'¹⁴ By an ordinance of King John Balliol in 1292 eight davachs of land, including the islands of Egge and Rume, were among the lands then erected into the sheriffdom of Skey.¹⁵ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alan certain lands which had been resigned by Cristian of Marr the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic, including six davachs of Egis and Rum with the advowson of the church of the same.¹⁶ In 1343 King David II. granted to Reginald the son of Roderic of the Isles, for the usual services by sea and land, the islands of Egghe and Roumme, and others.¹⁷ In 1372 King Robert II. granted to John del Yle the 300 marklands which belonged to Alan the son of Roderic within the kingdom, a grant which included the islands of Rumme and Eggeh.¹⁸ In the same year the same islands were granted by John de

Yle to Reginald de Yle his son, to whom they were confirmed by King Robert II.¹ In 1392 the same grant was confirmed by King Robert III.² About the year 1400 Rumme is mentioned by Fordun as an island twelve miles long with few inhabitants.³ In 1475 the islands of Eigg and Rum, with the other islands belonging to John Lord of the Isles, were forfeited by him; in 1476 they were restored to him by King James III.; in 1478 they were confirmed to him by the same king; and in 1493 they were again forfeited by the same Lord of the Isles.⁴

In 1498 King James IV. granted in heritage to Ranald Makallane, with remainder to his brother Alexander and his heirs, and to the King, 6 marklands of Kildonene in Eg, 4 pennylands of Sandabeg, 5 pennylands of Sandamore, 5 pennylands of Grudling-neyuaidleane, 10 pennylands of Grudling-etrach, 9 pennylands of Layng, 5 pennylands of Claytall, 5 pennylands of Knokeltnok, 4 pennylands of Ballymeanach, and 5 pennylands of Houland, in the island of Eg, extending in all to 21 marklands; all which with other lands were formerly held by Hugh of the Isles of John Lord of the isles, by whom they were forfeited to the King; John Huchonsoun of Sleit, the son of Hugh of the Isles, renouncing all right in those lands which belonged to him by heritage or by the King's promise made to the deceased Alexander of the Isles of Lochalch.⁵ In 1531 King James V. granted anew in heritage to John Makalester for his good and faithful service the same 21 marklands in Igk, and other lands, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, which formerly belonged in heritage to Alan Makrory the grandfather of John Makalester of Casteltirrim and his predecessors—it being made manifest to the King that the evidents of the lands had been destroyed during war and other disturbances—to be held of the King in fee for service of ward, relief, and marriage, provided that John and his heirs should not do homage to any person without licence specially obtained of the King.⁶ In 1534 the same king granted to John M'Alester M'Alester of Elanterin and Mariot Maccane his wife the six marklands of Kildonnen in Eg, and other four marklands, in the sheriffdom of Invernys, in all ten marks old extent, which John had resigned.⁷ In 1541 the same king granted to Ranald Alanesoun, the son and heir of the deceased Alane Roresoun, the nonentry and other dues of the 21 marklands of Eigg, in the lordship of the North Isles, which had been in the King's hands since the decease of Doule M'Ranald.⁸ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to Allane Makrannald, the son of the deceased Ranald Makallane, the nonentry and other dues of the same 21 marklands of the isle of Egge, which had been in her hands since the decease of Ranald in 1544.⁹ In 1627 John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane, captain of Clanronald, was served heir male to his father Donald M'Donald Viceane of Ellantirrim, captain of Clanronald, in the 21 marklands of the isle of Eygk, of the old extent of £10.¹⁰

In 1498 King James IV. granted to Angus Rewochsoun Makranald, with remainder to his son Angus and his heirs, and to the King, various lands, including 10 pennylands of Galmastal in Eg, 5 pennylands of Grudling-neyuaidlean, a pennyland of Sandabeg, 3 pennylands of Knokeltnok, 7 pennylands of Claytall, and 4 pennylands of Ballemeanach, in Eg, extending in all to 9 marklands, which had been held by Hugh of Isles of John Lord of the Isles, and by him forfeited to the King; and all right in which, either heritable or promised by the King to Alexander of Isles of Lochalch, was resigned by John Huchonsoun of Sleit, the son of Hugh of Isles.¹ In 1538 King James V. granted to Alane M'Coule M'Rannauld, and to his brother Lauchlane M'Coule M'Rannauld, the nonentry and other dues of 9 marklands in Ayge in the sheriffdom of Inverness.² In 1540 the same king granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the nonentry and other dues of the same 9 marklands, which had been in the King's hands since the decease of Johne Makangus Reach Makrannald.³ In 1627 John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane, captain of Clanronald, was served heir to his father Donald M'Donald Viceane of Ellantirrim, captain of Clanronald, in 9 marklands in Egke not formerly disposed of in heritage, including Galmistoull, Sandie, Growlin, a third part of Cleatill, half of the lands of Knockyltaak of Crae, the lands of Tray, Duassich, Auchladdill, and the half of Balmerich, all united with other lands into the tenandry of Casteltirrim.⁴

In 1528 King James V., on the narrative that the writs of the deceased John M'Clayne of Coill granted to him by King James II. were destroyed, granted anew to his grandson John M'Clayne of Coill various lands in the sheriffdom of Terbert, including six marklands old extent in the isle of Rowme.⁵ In 1542 the same king granted in heritage to John Makelane the son and heir of John Makelane of Coll, and in liferent to the latter, the same six marklands of the isle of Rowme, namely, four marks of Killemore and 2 marks of Naharag, in the sheriffdom of Tarbert.⁶ 'This iyle,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'lyes from the west to the east in length, and pertains to M'Kenabrey of Coll.'⁷ In 1558 Queen Mary granted to Hector M'Clane, the brother and heir of the deceased John M'Clane of Cole, the nonentry and other dues of the 6 marklands of Rowme and others above mentioned.⁸ In 1559 Hector Makelane of Coill resigned the lands and barony of Coill, including the £4 lands of Rvme, in the sheriffdom of Terbert, which Queen Mary then granted in heritage to Hector Makelane his son and apparent heir, reserving the liferent to himself and the terce to his widow, provided he should not be convicted of lese majesty.⁹ A writer of the sixteenth century says of Rum, 'It perteyneth to the laird of Cola. It hath two touns, one upon the nord west syd called Kilmore, the uthir upon the south west syd called Glenharie. It hath no corne land but about the said two tounis. The rest is for pasture.¹ Pennant in 1772 says that the tenants of Rum 'runrig,' and that the extent of the island was 2000 marks.²

According to Archdeacon Monro the isle of Muck (the Helant-Muck of Buchanan) in 1549 belonged to the bishop of the Isles.³ In 1561 the 'Ile callit Ellanamwk' was possessed by M'Aen of Ardnamurchane.⁴ In 1588 it appears to have been still in possession of the Clanian.⁵ A writer of the following century observes, 'It perteyneth to the bishop of the Isles. It is 6 merkland.'⁶ The neighbouring small island of Ellain no' n'each also belonged to the bishop.⁷

Kildonan in Eigge appears to have been a residence of the Lords of the Isles, and afterwards of the Clanranald.⁸ In the south of the island is a cave, the size of which is variously stated, in which the whole inhabitants are said to have been smoked to death by the laird of Macleod, their relics still testifying the truth of the tradition.⁹

Archdeacon Monro in allusion to the deer which in his time abounded in Rum observes, 'Quhilk deir will never be slane dounewith, but the principal saitts man be in the height of the hill, because the deir will be callit upwart ay be the tainchell, or without taynychell they will pass upwart perforce.'¹⁰ In the centre of the island there is a number of converging dikes styled Tigh'n Sealg (hunting houses), and locally believed to have been used as toils for the deer.¹¹

In Muck there are vestiges of an old fort called Dun Ban (the white castle), apparently the 'stretht built upon a rock' noticed in Macfarlane's Collections.

THIS parish, now part of the parish called the Small Isles, consisted of the island of Canna and the neighbouring small island named Ellain Gainmhich or Sandy Island, both green and fertile. Canna has a harbour, near which is an eminence named Compass Hill from a belief that its vicinity materially deranges the mariner's compass.¹⁵ 'It hath,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'cornis, milk, and fishes, and the forsaid fowlis.'¹⁶

The 'paroehe kirke' of Kannay is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro in 1549.¹ In 1561 the parsonage is entered in the rental of the bishoprick as one of those belonging to the abbot of Icolmkill, of which the bishop had a third.² In 1662, when King Charles II. appointed an archdeacon for the Isles, Canna was assigned to him as one of his 'proper kirks.'³

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, stood apparently about the middle of the island of Canna.⁴ Its ruins and a small cross existed in 1772.⁵ A custom at that date observed in the island at Michaelmas is thus described by Pennant—'Every man mounts his horse with a female behind, and rides backwards and forwards from the village to a certain cross, after which they have an entertainment in all their houses, of which the chief part is an oat cake called Struan-Micheil or Saint Michael's cake.'⁶

The island of Canna between 1389 and 1401 belonged to Godfrey the son of John Lord of the Isles.⁷ Before 1549 it belonged to the abbot of Icolmkill.⁸ In 1561 the lands of Cannay are enumerated among the abbot's lands within 'Clanrannaldis boundis,' and the rental is stated at £20.⁹ In 1588 they belonged to the Clanian.¹⁰ In 1630 Alexander Campbell prior of Ardhattan assigned to his eldest son John a rent of 160 marks, payable yearly by John Moidearteach M'Donald Vicean Vicallane, the son and heir of the deceased Donald M'Allane captain of Clanronald, as a tack duty for the lands and teinds of South Yiest, Ballemonocht, and Cannay, which had in 1615 been granted by the same Alexander to the same Donald for the lifetime of the longer liver, with power to prosecute for an arrear of 240 marks due at the time of a former settlement.¹¹ In 1633 Sir Donald M'Donald of Slaitt, Baronet, was served heir to his uncle Donald Gorme M'Donald of Slaitt in the island called 'lie Insche or Iyle of Canna,' lying among the North Isles of this kingdom infra fluxum maris ejusdem and in the sheriffdom of Innernes, which formerly belonged to the monastery of Icolumkill within the same Isles as part of its patrimony, and was of the extent of £24 feufferme.¹² A writer of the same period observes of Canna, 'It perteyneth to the captain of the Clanranald.'¹³

'In a pretty bay opening towards the east there is a lofty and slender rock detached from the shore. Upon the summit are the ruins of a very small tower scarcely accessible by a steep and precipitous path. Here it is said that one of the Kings or Lords of the Isles confined a beautiful lady of whom he was jealous. The ruins are of course haunted by her restless spirit, and many romantic stories are told by the aged people of the island concerning her fate in life and her appearances after death.'¹⁴ This rock with its castle seems to be known as Corra

Sleatt²—Kilmoir in Slait³—Slait.⁴ (Map, No. 24.)

THE parish of Small Isles (including Eigg, Muck, Rum, and Canna) was disjoined from Slait in 1726.⁵

The parish of Slait is composed of the whole eastern coast of the isle of Skye, including a large peninsula terminating on the south in the Point of Sleat, and is separated from the rest of the island by an arm of the sea called Loch Eishart and a ridge of hills running north from the head of that loch to the strait named Kyle Rhea. It is diversified by woods, moors, a few small lakes, and a considerable extent of arable land.

At the Reformation the parsonage of Sleatt belonged to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles being entitled to one-third.⁶ In 1576 James M'Donill Growenych of Castell Cammes paid yearly to the bishop of the Isles at Yeolmkill between Petersmess and Beltane 18 marks for the parsonage of Kilmoir in Slait, and 16 marks for the bishop's third of the same.⁷ In 1662, on the appointment of an archdeacon for the Isles by King Charles II., the kirk of Slait, which appears to have been at the time united to Strath, was assigned to him as one of his 'proper kirks.'⁸

The church, dedicated perhaps to the Virgin Mary, stood at Kilmore near the middle of the parish.⁹ At the same place is a church, built in the seventeenth century, and still used as the parish church.¹⁰

Between 1389 and 1401 Slate was held by Godfrey the son of John Lord of the Isles.¹¹ In the year 1449 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, with the consent of his council, granted the 28 marklands of Slete in the Lordship of the Isles to his brother Hugh M'Alester of Isles lord of Slete, and to his heirs male legitimate or illegitimate by Fynvola M'Alester M'Ian of Ardnamurchan, and their lawful heirs, with remainder to Hugh's heirs male by any other wife chosen after the death of Fynvola with the advice of John of Yle and his kinsmen Donald of the Isles of Dunnowaig and Glynnis, Celestine of the Isles of Lochalche, Lachlan that of the lands of Glenelg.¹ In that year Archibald Earl of Argyle became bound to obtain for Donald M'Donald Gorme (Donald Gormeson) of Slait heritable infeftment in the lands of Tronernes, Slait, and the north part of Weist, to be held of Queen Mary, on condition that Donald should pay 1000 marks Scots to the Earl and 500 marks to Mary M'Cloid (the heiress of Dunvegan), and give his bond of manrent to the Earl.² In 1572 King James VI., in lieu of the fulfilment of several promises which he had given with the advice of his successive regents James Earl of Murray and Matthew Earl of Leuenox, to the effect that he would grant to Donald Gormson of Sky for his good and faithful service all the lands in the countries next to him when they should be forfeited by the owners, and also the liberty of presenting to the bishoprick of Ross then vacant, granted to him a yearly pension of 1000 marks Scots out of the fruits of the bishoprick of Aberdeen then also vacant through the forfeiture of Bishop William.³ In 1617 Donald Gorme of Slait was served heir to his uncle Donald Gorme of Slait in the lands of Slait, of the old extent of £20, and of the new extent of £80 and £6, 13s. 4d. augmentation, and in other lands in the Lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Innernes, all held on condition that the castle of Camys (in Slait) should be always open and in readiness for the King, and his lieutenants, chamberlains, and other servitors resorting thither.⁴ In 1626 John M'Cleod was served heir to his father Sir Roderick M'Cleod of Dunvegane in the same £20 lands of Slait, of the extent of £86, 13s. 4d.⁵ In 1644 Sir James M'Donald of Slait, Baronet, was served heir in the same lands to his father Sir Donald M'Donald of Slait, Baronet (the Donald Gorme of 1617).⁶ Lord Macdonald, the present proprietor of Sleat, is the lineal representative of the family.⁷

In 1561 the two Airmadillis in Sleatt belonged to the abbot of Iona.⁸ In 1644 Sir James M'Donald of Slait was served heir to his father Sir Donald in the two marklands of Ardmidyllis in Slait.⁹

The strait which separates Sleat from the mainland is said to have been named Kyle Rhea (the King's Strait) from Haco King of Norway, who passed through it in 1263.¹⁰ Many names of places in the parish are Norwegian, such as Ostaig, Tarskvaig, Saasaig, Toakvaig, and Moursaig.¹¹

A writer of the seventeenth century observes of Sleat, 'Ther be therin two ancient castels. The one lyeth upon the east or south east ovir aganis Knodeort, called Castell Chammes; the other upon the nord west syd of Slait, called Dunskaigh.'¹² The latter, as we have seen, appears as the castle and fortalice of Dunskahay in a deed of 1505.¹³ In 1515 John Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland granted to Lauchlane Makclane of Doward and Alexander Makclod or Dunbegane, their servants, landed men, gentlemen, and yeomen, a remission, to last from 6 September 1515 to 1 January 1516, for all past crimes, and in particular for besieging and taking the castles of Carneborg and Dunskaich, and holding them against the Regent, and for assisting Sir Donald Ilis of Lochaleh and his accomplices.¹ In 1549 the castle of Dunskey is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro as one belonging to Donald Gormesone.² It is of considerable size, and is built on a rock separated from the land by a ravine, over which was a drawbridge.³

Castle Cammes belonged also to the barons of Sleat, and was occupied either by them or by some of their relatives.⁴ There is a tradition that between 1488 and 1513 it sustained a siege from the Macleods, which was raised by the intrepidity of a lady styled Mary of the Castle.⁵ In 1576 it gave title to James Mc'Donill Growemych of Castell Cammes.⁶ In 1617, as before stated, Donald Gorme of Slait was bound by the terms on which he held his land to have the castle of Camys always ready to receive the King or his lieutenants.⁷ It seems now to be known as the castle of Knock.⁸

Besides the castles of Dunscaich and Cammes there are vestiges or sites of ancient strongholds known as Dun-phaick, Dun-flo, Dun-geilb, Dun-islay, and Dun-an-choinach.⁹

Kilcrist in Askimilruby¹⁰ — Church of Strath called Cristiskirk¹¹ — Keilchrist in Strathawradall¹² — Kilchrist¹³ — Strath.¹⁴ (Map, No. 25.)

THIS parish includes the district of Skye known as Strathswordale or Strath Mhic Ionmhuinn (MacKinnon's Strath), and the islands Scalpa, Longa, Pabba, and a few of smaller size.¹⁵ It is bounded on the west by the Coolin (or Cuillin) hills, 3000 feet above the sea level, and stretching from the head of Loch Scavaig on the south to the head of Loch Sligichan on the north. It has numerous lakes, and at its west end north from Loch Scavaig are the lake of Coiruisge (or Coriskin), studded with green islands and surrounded with steep rugged rocks, and the famous spar cave of Strathaird.

In 1505 King James IV. presented Sir Kenzeth Adamsoun chaplain to the rectory and vicarage of Kilcrist in Askimilruby lying in Strasuordale, vacant by the decease of Sir John Johnemakgillebridissoun.¹⁷ In 1508 the same king presented John Ranaldsoun clerk to the rectory of the parish church of Strath called Cristiskirk in the isle of Sky, vacant by the decease of Sir John Johnesoun.¹ In 1561 the parsonage of Keilchrist belonged to the abbot of Iona, the bishop of the Isles having one-third.² In 1662 the church of Strath, apparently united to Slait, was assigned by King Charles II. as one of the 'proper kirks' of the archdeacon of the Isles, then appointed by that king.³

The church, dedicated to the Saviour, stood at Loch Chriest about the middle of the parish.⁴ About 1840 a new church was built at Broadford on the north coast.⁵ Near Kilchrist are some strata of marble (white veined with gray), from which the altar at Iona was believed to have been taken.⁶

There are remains of chapels at Ashig or Aisk (apparently the ancient Askemorruy) on the north coast; at Kilmaree (dedicated to Saint Mary), Kilbride (dedicated to Saint Bride, and used as the parish church for some time before the new church was built at Broadford), and Borerraig (dedicated to Saint Congan), on or near the south coast; on the island of Scalpay (Teampull Frangaig); and on the island of Pabba.⁷ Near Kilchrist are an obelisk and a well named Clach-na-h-annait and Tobar-na-h-annait, and in other parts of the parish are the wells Tobar-ashig and Tobar-chliaman.⁸

The Clan Fynwyne (or Mackinnon) appears in record in 1354, and had at that time or not long afterwards the lands of Mishnish in Mull and of Strathordill in Skye⁹. In 1409 a charter of Donald Lord of the Isles is witnessed by Lauchlan Macfingone.¹⁰ In 1517 Niel Makynnann of Moises appears in record.¹¹ In 1531 we meet with Ewin Makkymmyng of Strathardill.¹² It was probably the same person to whom along with some others King James V. in 1541 granted a remission for past crimes, and who on that occasion is styled Ewin M'Kynnane Murchew.¹³ In 1542 the same king granted to Ewin M'Fingone the 20 marklands of Meysnes in Mule, and the 20 marklands of Strathardole with the mill and fishings, in the Lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Innernys, which Ewin had resigned, and which were then anew united into one free tenantry, the chief message to be Strathardole.¹⁴ In 1545 Ewin Mackynnann of Straquhordill appears as one of the councillors of Donald Lord of the Isles.¹⁵ In 1546 he had a remission from Queen Mary for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.¹⁶ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro mentions Straythsuardill as belonging to M'Kynnoun.¹⁷ In 1557 Queen Mary granted to Lauchlane M'Fingone, the son and heir of the deceased Ewin M'Fingone, the ward, nonentry, and other dues of Maysenes in Mwl and of Straithwordill in Sky, which had been in her hands since Ewin's decease.¹⁸ In 1587 the laird of Strathordell was Lauchlane

Mackinnon.¹ A writer of the following century says of Strathardill, 'It perteyneth to a gentleman cald Mackfenine or Mackfenayne, whose predecessors were marshals to Mackoneil Lord of the Isles in the tym of the greatnes of that hous. The inhabitants are of that race cald Mackfenayne.'² In 1664 Lauchlan M'Fingon of Strathordail was served heir male to John M'Fingon of Strathordail his father in the lands and barony of Strathordail, including the lands of Strathordail with the fishing and mill, in the island of Sky and Lordship of the Isles, with the ferry boat (cymba portatoria) on the water of Keillakin, and certain lands in Argyll, together of the old extent of 40 marks, and the island of Scalpa, of the old extent of 4 marks.³

In 1507 King James IV. granted to Alexander Earl of Huntly the four marklands of Scalpa-Torre in Strawrothille, and other lands, which had been forfeited by Margaret the sister of Alexander of the Isles of Lochquellch, who had by lawful marriage or otherwise subjected her person and lands to Donald Makearle Maklauchlane Done, who had assisted the King's rebel Torkil Makelode of Lewis—to be held during the King's pleasure by the Earl, or to be assigned by him to any who would perform service for these lands to the King or the Earl.⁴ In 1517 King James V. granted to Lauchlan Macclane of Doward the 4 marklands of Scalpa in the Lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Innerness, which were in the King's hands as his escheat through the decease of Archibald Huchonsoun.⁵ In 1540 the 4 marklands of Scalpa, namely, Torrin and Skeadin, were resigned by Hector Makclane of Dowart, and granted by King James V. to Hector his son and apparent heir and his male heirs as part of the barony of Dowart then erected in his favour, with remainder to the heirs of Hector the elder, to his brother Alan and heirs, to his brother John and heirs, and to his own heirs whomsoever of the Makclane surname and arms.⁶ 'Scalpay,' says Arehdeacon Monro in 1549, is 'ane faire hunting forrest full of deire, with certain little woodis and small tounes, weill inhabit and manurit, with many strengthey coves, guid for fishing. In heritage it perteines to M'Gillayne of Dowarde.'⁷ 'Hard by,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'is the ile Scalpa, plentiful of dear, which doth much harme among the corne landis. It hath also wild sheep, which evir keep the fields contrair to the use of thois countreys.'⁸ 'In Scalpa,' says the same writer, 'is the seat of Stappa, and thence a myle the seat of Keanball.'⁹ In 1603 Hector M'Clayne of Doward was served heir to Hector M'Clayne his grandfather in the 4 marklands of Skalpay, namely, Torin and Skeodin, included in the barony of Doward.¹⁰ In 1615 Hector MakCleans of Dowart was served heir male in the same lands to Hector MakCleans his grandfather.¹¹ In 1662 Sir George M'Kenzie of Tarbet, Baronet, was served heir male in the same lands to his grandfather Sir Roderick M'Kenzie of Cogeauch.¹² In 1664 Lauchlan M'Fingon of Strathordail was served heir male to John M'Fingon of Strathordail his father in the 4 marklands of Scalpa, including the lands of Tory, Skerdin, and Fronimus, with the salmon fishings pro principali, included, as above stated, with other lands in the barony of Strathordail.¹

‘At the shore of Sky foresaid,’ says Archdeacon Monro, ‘lyes ane iyle callit Pabay, neyre ane myle in lenth, full of woodes, guid for fishing, and a main shelter for thieves and cut-throats. It pertains to M’Kynnoun.’²

At Broadford there is a village, at which are held three yearly fairs.³

In the west of the parish are the ruins of seven circular duns of dry stone, and in the east a number of barrows, some of which when opened contained stone coffins or urns.⁴ Near Broadford there is a barrow with an arched vault, in which a curious stone and ancient buckle were found.⁵

The ferry named Kyleakin is believed to have derived its name from Haco King of Norway, who passed through it in 1263.⁶ Near it are the ruins of a square tower named Castle Maoil, said to have been built by the daughter of a Norwegian king for the purpose of levying an impost on passing vessels.⁷ In 1549 it is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro as ‘the castill of Dunnakyne pertaining to Mackynnoun.’⁸ A writer of the seventeenth century, enumerating the localities in Skye, has the following, ‘Item, Castell Chewles-akin with some small skyrrs ; item, fornent ar the said Chewles’ (the Kyle or ferry).⁹ Blaeu in the same century gives us Cheulesakin and the ‘castel of Dun-akin.’¹⁰

In the south of the parish is a cave, which in 1746 afforded a temporary shelter to Prince Charles Edward.¹¹

Archdeacon Monro describes Rasay (or Raarsay) as an island 'with pairt of birkin woodis, maney deires, pairt of profitable landes, inhabit and manurit,' a description which still applies, with the exception that there are no deer in the island.¹ It has a number of lakes, and in Dun-Can (or Dun-Lan), its greatest elevation, rises to the height of 1500 feet above the sea.² Rona, described by Monro as 'full of wood and heddir', is said by Boswell to be 'of so rocky a soil that it appears to be a pavement.'³ The latter describes the island of Flodda as 'all fine green ground.'⁴

In 1501 King James IV. presented Sir Nichol Berchame to the vicarage of Kilmolowok in Rasay, then one of the 'annexis' of Snescurd (Snizort).⁵ In 1526 King James V. presented Sir Donald Munro (apparently the future archdeacon of the Isles) to the vicarage of Sneisport and Rairsay, vacant by the decease of Sir Tormot M'Farsane.⁶ The archdeacon in 1549 styles the church 'ane parochie kirk callit Killmolowocke.'⁷ A writer of the following century says that Raasa 'hath one paroch kirk, Kilmaluag.'⁸

The church, dedicated to Saint Moluac, and described by Johnson in 1773 as 'a chapel unroofed and ruinous,' stood at the south-end of the island at the place variously known as Kilmoluag, Clachan, or Kirktown, near the mansion-house of the laird of Rasay.⁹ Its precincts were of old a sanctuary, which was marked by eight erect stones or crosses, some of which were remaining in 1773.¹⁰

The island of Raasa occurs in record in the year 1263, when it is mentioned as a point in the rout of King Haco from Norway to Scotland.¹¹ It was afterwards held for a long period by a branch of the family of Macleod of Lewis styled the Siol Vic Gillichallum.¹² In 1549 Archdeacon Monro speaks of it and of the island of Ronay as 'pertaining to M'Gyllychallan of Raarsay be the sword, and to the bishope of the Iles be heritage.'¹³ In 1561 Rasay is entered in the rental of the bishoprick as the property of the bishop.¹⁴ It seems however to have continued in the possession of the Macleods of Rasay, two of whom, Gillichallum Garve and Gillichallum Oig his son, appear in record about the year 1572.¹⁵ In that year King James VI. granted certain lands in the sheriffdom of Innerness to Torquil Makeloyd the heir of Lewis, with remainder to Gillichallum Garve M'Cloyd of Raisay and his male heirs.¹⁶ In 1630 Alexander M'Leane was served heir to his father Donald M'Leane M'Ferquhard M'Eachen in the lands of Rarsay, namely, Clachan, Cistage, Innerwig, Clam, Maenes, Brow-kill, Awoynes with the island Phladda, Ronaha, Skrebidell, Halleg and Larg, Lebost, Naiseiring, Lagan, Achositore, Ire, Swysnes, Inneraros, Borradaill, and Ramisdill, extending to 8

marklands.¹ In 1688 Janet and Giles M'Leods alias M'Alaster Vic Gillichallum were served heirs of line, conquest, and provision, to their father Alexander M'Leod alias M'Alaster Vic Gillichallum of Rasay, who was the son and heir of the deceased Alexander M'Leod alias M'Alaster Vic Gillichallum, the grandfather of the said Janet and Giles M'Leods alias M'Alaster Vic Gillichallum, who was the son and heir of Malcolm M'Leod alias M'Gillicallum of Rasay, the great grandfather of the said Janet and Giles M'Leods alias M'Alaster Vic Gillicallum of Rasay, in the lands of Rasay, including the towns, lands, islands, lie grassings, Kilmiluach, Ausach, Balliechurne, Balliemeanoeh, Invervig, Glam, Moignes, Crochill, with the pertinents of Sciepadéall, Hallag, Leaghk, Kamiorick, Lieboast, Slagandine, Slachro, Fearne, Stair, Ire, Shuashnesmore, Shuashnesbeg, Inneraross, Broradell, Glen, and Kylehan, and the two islands commonly called Rona and Fladda.²

Archdeacon Monro mentions two castles in Rasay, 'the castle of Killmorocht (Kilmaluag) and the castle of Brolokit (Brochel), with twa fair orchards at the saids twa castells.'³ A writer of the following century mentions 'one castel callit Breokill,' and Martin about the year 1700 mentions a tower at Clachan.⁴ The latter, the castle of Kilmaluag and an ancient residence of the lairds, was taken down about 1746, and its place was supplied by a modern mansion.⁵ Castle Brochel, situated near the north end of the island on a rock of conglomerate accessible only on the side next the sea, consists of two small towers of two stories each, built on two different ledges of the rock.⁶

In 1773 there stood parallel to the sanctuary a number of crosses, and a little to the north of them a range of buildings about four feet high, supposed by some to have been intended as 'false sentinels' to induce an enemy to believe the island better inhabited and guarded than it actually was.⁷

through the centre of the peninsula. It has numerous hills and lakes, the highest of the former being 1200 feet above the sea, and the most remarkable of the latter a small lake named Loch Shiant (the sacred lake).¹ Among the hills is a green level spot called Quiraing, surrounded by precipices, and difficult of access, capable of containing 4000 head of cattle, and anciently used as a place of refuge in times of danger.² The coast is in general high and rocky, and is indented by numerous bays and caves.³

Master Mertyn M'Gillemertyn seems to have been rector of this parish from 1507 to 1536.⁴ In the latter year King James V. presented Master Rodoric Farquhar Hectorissone to the rectory of the church of Kilmalvok in Trouternes, which was vacant by the decease of Master Mertin M'Gilmertyn.⁵ In 1547 Queen Mary presented Sir Archibald M'Gillewray to the same rectory, stated to be then vacant by the demission of Master Rodoric M'Clane elect of the Isles.⁶ In the same year Master Archibald M'Ilwray, styled parson of Kilmolowok, had from the same queen a grant of all the goods belonging to Master John Spottiswood servitor to Robert elect of Caithness, which the latter had forfeited by being in England in the time of war without the Queen's license.⁷ It does not however appear that Master Archibald was actual rector; for in 1552, and again in 1554, he was presented to the same rectory, on both occasions stated to be vacant or expected to be so by the resignation, decease, exchange, or otherwise, of Sir Roderic M'Clane.⁸ In 1557 the rector of Kilmolowak was Sir David Lausoun.⁹ In 1573 John Fearquhayrson, and at a later period of the same year John M'Lane, was rector of Killmolwaig in Troutyrnes.¹⁰

The church, dedicated to Saint Moluac the patron saint of Argyle, stood at Kilmaluag on the north-east coast of the parish.¹¹ After the Reformation the church of Kilmuir, dedicated to Saint Mary, and situated on the north west coast, seems to have become the parish church.¹² Its cemetery remains, but the present church, built in 1810, stands on a different site.¹³

At Kilmartin on the east coast, apparently the Clachan of the maps, there stood a chapel dedicated to St. Martin, whose cemetery still remains.¹⁴ At Steinscholl in its immediate neighbourhood there is now a government church.¹⁵

There was a chapel at Kilvaxter or Kilvakisa on the north west coast, probably belonging to the nuns of Iona.¹⁶

On an island in the lake of Saint Columba (now drained), which lay on the western border of the parish, were to be seen in 1772 the ruins of some buildings composed of stones without mortar, described by a writer of the seventeenth century as a tower and a town, and the remains of a chapel built with mortar, the former supposed to have been a monastery dedicated to Saint Columba.¹ Their foundations are still visible.² Mugstot in the vicinity is supposed to be Monkstadt (the residence of the monks).³

On the island of Fladda-chuain there stood in 1700 a chapel dedicated to Saint Columba, having an altar of blue stone believed to be possessed of miraculous powers.⁴ It was probably one of three, whose cemeteries still remain, and its burying-ground appears now to bear the name Cladh Mhanaich (the monk's burying-place).⁵

On the island of Troda there was another chapel dedicated to Saint Columba.⁶

There seem to have been several other chapels in the parish.⁷

Skye (Ellan Skyane, Skianach, the winged isle) appears to be the Scia of Adomnan, who makes it the scene of one of Saint Columba's prophecies, which was fulfilled by the arrival of an aged chief named Artbranan (primarius Geone cohortis) on its shores, his reception of the truth, his baptism, his death, and his burial, all in immediate succession, the last being performed congesto lapidum acervo at the mouth of a river thence named Dobur Artbranani.⁸ In 1098 Skye was ceded to Norway with the rest of the Western Isles.⁹ In 1223 Paul Balkason appears as sheriff of Skye under the King of Norway.¹⁰ The island was restored to Scotland with the other isles in 1266.¹¹ In 1292 by an ordinance of King John Balliol the sheriffdom of Skye was constituted of the lands of the Earl of Ros in North Argail, the lands of Glenc . . . (probably Glenelg), the lands of Skey and Lodoux (Lewis), eight davachs of certain lands including Egge and Rumme, Guiste and Barrich, with the small isles.¹² In 1309 the lands of Sky in the sheriffdom of Inverness were granted by King Robert Bruce to Hugh of Ross.¹³ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted to John of the Isles for his allegiance the island of Sky, and in 1336 King Edward III. confirmed the grant.¹⁴ In 1370 William Earl of Ross resigned the earldom and the lordship of Sky, which King David II. then granted anew to him, with remainder to Sir Walter of Lesley and Eufame his wife, and their heirs male, or, in deficiency of heirs male, to the eldest daughter of Eufame herself and of her female heirs.¹⁵ About the year 1382 Eufame Countess of Ross resigned the barony and lordship of Sky, which King Robert II. then granted to his son Alexander Stewart Earl of Buchan and to the same Eufame.¹⁶ About 1400 Skye is mentioned by Fordun as one of the greater isles.¹⁷ In 1475, 1476, 1478, and 1493, its history is the same as that of the other Hebrides.¹⁸

In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted Trouternes in Sky to Hugh Ross.¹ It afterwards belonged to the Lords of the Isles, and was held of them by the Macleods of Harris.² In 1498 King James IV. granted in heritage to Alexander M'Cloide, the son and heir of the deceased William John Makelodesoun of Dunbegane, two unciate of the lands of Trouternes, together with the bailiary of the whole lands of Trouternes, lying in Skye in the Lordship of the Isles, which had been forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, for service of ward, relief, and marriage, with the maintenance of a ship of 26 oars and two ships of 16 oars both in peace and in war for the use of the King or his lieutenants, reserving to the King the nests of falcons within the lands, and all the other usual services.³ In the same year the same king granted to Torquell Macloid of Lewis, and to his heirs by Katherine Campbel the sister of Archibald Earl of Ergile, the office of bailie of the lands of Trouternes, and four marks of the terunga of Duntullyn, and four marks of Ardvetfullan, which belonged to that office, all which had been forfeited by John Lord of the Isles.⁴ In 1507 the same king granted a letter of protection to John M'Gillemerlyne, Master Merlyne M'Gillemerlyne (apparently the rector of the parish), Mulcoill Maknicholl, Huchone M'Gillemerlyne, William Lowman, and other tenants of Troternes in the earldom of Ross and Lordship of the Isles.⁵ In 1510 the same king granted a letter of protection to Gillaspay Dow, bailie of Trouternes, ordering the lieges, especially the tenants of Trouternes, that they should not disturb him, his factors, or his servants, in their persons, their goods, or their peaceable possession of the leases which Gillaspay had from the king in Trouternes, and especially in the execution of his office of bailie.⁶ In 1517 the Regent Albany granted to Alexander Makeloid of Dunvegan the King's lands of Trouternes for eleven years, and thereafter during the will of the Regent.⁷ In 1536 the 'Yle of Trouternes' is enumerated among the crown lands in the Lordship of the Isles.⁸ In 1541 King James V. granted a remission to Archibald IIs alias Archibald the Clerk, and various others, for their treasonable burning of the castle of Allanedonnand and of the boats there, and the 'hereschip' of Kenlochow and Trouternes.⁹ In 1542 the same king granted to Alexander M'Clويد in liferent, and to his son and apparent heir William and his heirs male, with remainder to his second son Donald and his heirs male, to his third son Tormot, to John M'Clويد in Myngynnes, to William M'Clويد's heirs male whomsoever, and to the eldest of his female heirs without division, the lands of Trouternes, of the old extent of 80 marks, and extending in the King's rental to 360 marks Scots, for yearly payment of £246, 13s. 4d.¹⁰ In 1553 Queen Mary granted the bailiary of the lands of Trouternes to Archibald Earl of Argyle.¹¹ In the same year that queen granted to George Earl of Huntlie her chancellor the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Trouternes and of all other lands which belonged to the deceased William M'Cloid of Dunnevagane.¹ From 1553 to 1567 the history of the lands of Trouternes is the same as that of Glenelg.² In 1567 Archibald Earl of Argyle became bound to obtain for Donald M'Donald Gorme of Slait heritable infeftment in the lands of Trouternes and others, to be held of Queen Mary, on condition that Donald should pay 1000 marks Scots to the Earl, and 500 to Mary M'Cloid the heiress of Dunvegan, and should give his bond of manrent to the Earl.³ In 1572 King James VI., on the narrative that the charters (with certain exceptions) of the lands formerly belonging to Alexander M'Cloyd of Dunvagane had been wholly destroyed in the local wars, at the express request of Archibald Earl of Argyle, and with the advice of the Regent John Earl of Mar, granted those lands, including two unciate of Trouternes and the bailiary of all Trouternes, in heritage to Mary M'Cloyd the only niece and heir of line of Alexander, and the daughter of his deceased brother William, for the services specified in the grant of 1498.⁴ In 1580 Mary Makeloyd, with the consent of her husband Duncan Campbell, resigned the same lands and bailiary, which King James VI. then granted to her uncle Tormund Makeloyd of Dunvegan.⁵ In 1581 the same king granted to John bishop of the Isles the escheat of all the goods belonging to the deceased Donald M'Gillespie Clereische bailie of Trouternes, Huchoun M'Gillaspie his brother, Malaneill Maknicoll 'officiar' of Trouternes, Nicoll his brother, and others, who were all denounced rebels and at the horn for not paying the fermes and dues belonging to the bishoprick of the Isles and the abbey of Icolmekill.⁶ In 1584 the same king granted to Colin Earl of Ergyle the nonentry and other dues of the lands and other property of Tormond M'Cloyd of Downevagane.⁷ In 1585 William M'Cloyd was served heir to his father Tormund M'Cloyd of Herres in the two unciate of Trouternes with the bailiary of the same, of the old extent of £5, 6s. 8d.⁸ In 1633 George M'Keinzie was served heir male to his brother Colin Earl of Seafort, lord M'Keinzie of Kintail, in the 80 marklands of Trouterneis, with the mills, fishings, and advowson of churches, of the extent of 400 marks feuferme, and in two unciate of Trouterneis with the office of bailie, of the old extent of 8 marks, united to the barony of Lewes.⁹

In 1507 King James IV. granted to Alexander Earl of Huntlie the 4 marklands of Mornyncht and the 4 marklands of Vngoworrow in Trauternes, forfeited by Margaret the sister of Alexander of the Ilis of Lochquelch, who by lawful marriage or otherwise had subjected her person and lands to Donald Makearle Maklauchlane Doue, who had assisted the King's rebel Torkil Makelode of Lewis — to be held by the Earl durring the King's pleasure, or to be assigned by the Earl to any who would do service to him and the King for the lands.¹⁰

In 1508 King James IV. granted during his pleasure to Kaneth Willyamsoun his lands of the terunga of Kilmertin and half of the terunga of Baronesmor in Trouternes in the Lordship of the Isles, of the old extent of 6 marks, 'to hald the said Kaneth at the skolis, and for to lere and study the Kingis lawis of Scotland, and eftirwart to exers and vse the sammyn within the boundis of the Illis.'¹

In 1561 the abbot of Iona had a half teirunge in Trouterneiss called Keilbakstar.² In 1574 Mary Nikillean, prioress of the monastery of Saint Mary the Virgin in the island of Yona, with consent of the convent, granted in heritage to Hector M'Cleane of Dowarde the nunnery lands, including the ten pennylands of Killaxter in Trouternes.³ In 1644 Sir James M'Donald of Slaitt Baronet was served heir to his father Sir Donald in the same lands, of the extent of 52s. feuferme.⁴ In 1662 Sir George M'Kenzie of Tarbet Baronet was served heir male to his grandfather Sir Roderick M'Kenzie of Cogeauch in the same ten pennylands of Kilvaxter.⁵

In 1549 the castle of Dountwyline is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro as one of five castles in Skye, and as belonging to Donald Gromsone.⁶ 'One castel,' says a writer of the following century, 'it (Trouternes) hath cald Dun Tuylim, build upon a hie rock in the sea not far from the promontoric which beareth the name of Trointerness, being the most northern part of the whole ile.'⁷ Little of it now remains.⁸ Near it is an eminence styled Cnok-an-eirick (the hill of pleas), equivalent to the moothill of the Lowlands.⁹

Near Loch Shiant is a well, round which a dessil or circuit was wont to be made after drinking of the water, and, a small offering being left on a stone which covered it, a miraculous cure of various diseases was believed to be thus performed.¹⁰ In 1700 there stood beside it a wood, also deemed sacred.¹¹

It is said that in ancient times the Macdonalds and Macleods had each a college or school of pipers, the Macarthurs being the chief pipers to the Macdonalds, and the Mackrimmens to the Macleods.¹² The taghairm, described by Sir Walter Scott in the Lady of the Lake, was formerly practised in the district.¹³

In the parish burying-ground is the burial place of the Macdonalds, styled Reileag Mhoir Chloinn Donuill.¹⁴ In it also lie the remains of Flora Macdonald, the guide of Prince Charles Edward during part of his wanderings.¹⁵ Mugstot, already mentioned, was the place at which they landed from the Long Island.¹⁶

Wig in Trouternes¹ — Vig in Trouternes.² (Map, No. 28.)

THIS parish, now united to Snizort, seems to have occupied but a small portion of the west coast of Trotternish, extending probably from Loch Columkill on the north to the neighbourhood of Kingsburgh on the south, and bounded eastward by the central ridge of the district. Its chief feature is the bay of Uig, around which lie about 200 acres of arable land enclosed by a semicircular wall of rock.³

In 1512 King James IV. presented Sir Donald Rede to the rectory of Wig in Trouternes, vacant by the demission of Sir Nicolas Brachan.⁴ In 1552 Queen Mary presented Sir Donald Monro to the united rectory of Vig, vacant by the decease of Sir John M'Crummey.⁵

The church stood at the head of the bay of Uig apparently at the place now known as Clachan.⁶

Of the lands of this parish there seems to be no history separate from that of Trotternish already given.⁷

The houses which surround the bay of Uig form a sort of town containing a population of about 600.⁸ There seems to have been a town here in the seventeenth century, marked by Blaeu as Brugh Vyg.⁹

On the farm of Peinduin on a rock near the sea are the remains of the castle of Dundonald, said to have been built by Archibald the clerk, a relative of the Macdonalds.¹⁰

IN the year 1726 a part of the old parish of Snizort was disjoined, and erected with Rasay and Rona into the modern parish of Portree.¹⁶

The parish of Snizort formerly extended from Loch Sligachan on the south to the point of Lynedale on the north, being separated from Bracadale by a line running nearly along the centre of the island, and from Uig and Kilmuir by a line crossing from a point near Kingsburgh to the south end of the Sound of Rona. Its surface presents a great variety of scenery. Its highest eminences are those named the Storr, Aite-suidhe-Fhin, and Peindinavaig. It has numerous fresh-water lakes, the chief of which are Loch Fad and Loch Leathan. On the west it is indented by Loch Snizort, and on the east by Loch Portree.

In 1501 King James IV. presented Sir Nichol Berchame chaplain to the parsonage of Sanct Colmis Kirk in Snesfurd in Trouternes in the Lordship of the Isles, together with the 'annexis and vicaragis' of the same, namely, Kilmolowok in Rasay, and Kilmory in Watternes.¹ In 1526 King James V. presented Sir Donald Munro to the vicarage of Sneisport and Rairsay, vacant by the decease of Sir Tormot M'Farsane.² In 1561 the parsonage of Snisport belonged to the bishop of the Isles.³ In 1662, when King Charles II. appointed an archdeacon for the Isles, he assigned to him the churches of Snisort with Lendill and others as his 'proper kirks.'⁴

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, stood on an island at the head of Loch Snizort formed by the river of the same name, where its ruins and cemetery are still to be seen.⁵ A subsequent church, decayed in 1796, seems to have stood to the north of the former at the head of Loch Snizort Beg.⁶ The present church, built about the year 1800, stands near the same place.⁷

There appears to have been a church or chapel at Kildoren or Kildonnen in Lynedale.⁸

There were a church and cemetery at Ceilltarraglan (the church at the bottom of the glen), situated at one end of a plain lying above the rocks on the north side of Loch Portree.⁹ The cemetery was used till the middle of last century, when a new cemetery was formed at the church of Portree.¹⁰ The present church of Portree was built about the year 1825.¹¹

The bay of Portree was formerly named the bay of Saint Columba, and an island within it retains the name Eilan-choluimchille.¹²

The general history of the lands in this parish is the same as that of Trouternes, of which it forms a part.¹³

In 1498 King James IV. granted an unciata of Lendell and other lands to Alexander Makcloide the son and heir of the deceased William John Makclodesoun of Dunbegane, for the same service as the lands of Trouternes.¹⁴ In 1541 Alexander Makclويد of Dunvegane resigned the lands of Estir Leyndill and Wester Leyndill in the lordship of Dowirnes in Sky in the sheriffdom of the North Isles, and King James V. granted the lands to William Makclويد the son and apparent heir of Alexander and to Agnes Fraser his wife.¹⁵ The same lands appear to have been included in the grant by Queen Mary to George Earl of Huntlie in 1553, and in the successive grants of the same subjects till the year 1572.¹ In the latter year King James VI. granted an unciata of Lendell with Trouternes and other lands to Mary M'Cloyd the only niece and heir of line of Alexander M'Cloyd of Dunvegane.² In 1580 the same lands were resigned by Mary Makeloyd, and were granted by King James VI. in heritage to her uncle Tormund Makeloyd of Dunvegane.³ In 1585 William M'Cloyd was served heir in the same lands to Tormund M'Cloyd of Herres his father.⁴

In 1561 the lands of Snisport in Trouterneise belonged to the bishop of the Isles.⁵

In 1630 Alexander M'Leane was served heir to his father Donald M'Leane M'Ferquhard M'Eachen in the lands of Ire, Tutch, Carrabost, and Wgysadder, in Trouternes, in the lordship of the Isles, of the extent of 3 marks.⁶ In 1688 Janet and Giles M'Leods were served heirs of line, conquest, and provision, to their father Alexander M'Leod alias M'Alaster Vic Gillichallum of Rasay, in the towns, lands, lie grassings, of Ire, Tott, Carobost, Glengrast, Ugisarder, Knockshint, Penniemore, and Penniecappan, in the country or barony of Troternish, and in the other towns, lands, islands, and others of Fortuna-Rasaye, in the parish of Snisort.⁷

The village of Portree (the King's Port), said to have been so named from the visit of King James V. in 1540, and built upon the north shore of the loch, contains a population of 300.⁸

In this parish stood the house of Kingsburgh (anciently Kysburg), the residence of Allan the husband of Flora Macdonald.⁹ It is now entirely removed, but the site of the garden is still marked by a square of old plane-trees.¹⁰

Mygnes¹¹—Kirk of Eynort¹²—Kilmolruy.¹³ (Map, No. 30.)

THIS parish, now named Bracadale, includes the districts of Bracadale and Minginish, forming about one half of the middle portion of Skye, and stretching from the heads of Loch Scavaig and Loch Sligachan on the east to those of Loch Caroy and Loch Grishernish on the north west. Its surface is in general hilly, and its coast steep, rocky, and much indented by arms of the sea, the chief of which are Loch Bretil, Loch Eynort, and Loch Bracadale (the Westerfiord or Vestrifjordthr of the Norse Sagas), the largest branch of which is named Loch Harport.

Off the southern coast is the island of Soay (the Soa Urettil of Monro, and Soa Vrettil of Blaeu); and in Loch Bracadale are the islands Wiay, Oransay, and others.

In 1511 King James IV. presented Master John Monro to the rectory of Myngnes in the diocese of the Isles, vacant by the decease of Sir Neil the last rector.¹ In 1632 John bishop of the Isles presented Master John M'Kinnon to the kirk of Eynort in Mengenes.²

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Malrube, stood at Kilmolruy near Loch Eynort, (probably the Clachan-Eynort of the maps).³ It seems to have been rebuilt after the Reformation, and in 1792 was ruinous.⁴ A church appears to have been built at Bracadale, near the head of Lochbeg (a branch of Loch Bracadale) about the middle of the last century, to have been repaired in 1783, to have been rebuilt in 1831, and to be now the only parish church.⁵

The parish contains the sites or vestiges of various cemeteries and places of worship.⁶ To one of these, styled the chapel of Saint Assind in Brakadaill, the bishop of the Isles presented Master John M'Kinnon in 1632.⁷

In the year 1498 King James IV. granted to Alexander, the son and heir of the deceased William John Makelodesoun, four unciate of Myngnes and four unciate of Bracadoll, and other lands, which had formerly been held by William Makeloide of John Lord of the Isles, and were in the King's hands by the forfeiture of that lord, for the same service as the lands of Trouternes included in the same grant.⁸ In 1541 King James V. granted to William Makeloid, the son and apparent heir of Alexander Makeloid of Dunvegane, and to Agnes Fraser his wife, the lands of Vngcladdach, Vngroak, Sagerry, Voagyne, Penyzegeyn, Stapok, Gnobane, Layglene, Estir Leyndill, Westir Leyndill, and Oysestill, in Braikodell, extending in all to £20, in the lordship of Dowrnes in Sky and sheriffdom of the North Isles, which lands had been resigned by Alexander Makeloid.⁹ In 1542 John M'Cloid in Myngynnes was one of the heirs in remainder in a grant of Trouternes and other lands by King James V. to Alexander M'Cloid and William his son.¹⁰ In 1549 Archdeacon Monro mentions the 'countries' of Menyenise and Brachedill as belonging to M'Cloyde of Herrays.¹¹ From 1553 to 1580 the history of the lands of Brakadell and Megynes is similar to that of Glenelg and Trouternes.¹² In 1584 King James VI. granted to Colin Earl of Ergyle the nonentry and other dues of all the lands that belonged to Tormond M'Loyd of Downvegane, a grant which included Bracadale and Minginish.¹³ In 1585 William M'Cloyd was served heir to his father Tormund M'Cloyd of Herres in the four unciate of Megines and the four unciate of Bracadill.¹⁴ In 1626 John M'Cleod was served heir male in the same lands to his father Sir Roderick M'Cloid of Dunvegane.¹⁵ In 1655 Rorie Macleod of Dunvegane was served heir male in the same lands to his father John Mackleod of Dunvegane.¹⁶ In 1664 John

THIS parish includes the two peninsular districts of Waternish and Duirinish. It is the most western portion of the isle of Skye, from the rest of which it is separated by a line running from Loch Caroy (a branch of Loch Bracadale) to Loch Grishernish (a branch of Loch Snizort.)¹⁰ It is nearly divided into two by Loch Dunvegan on the north and Loch Vattin (a branch of Loch Bracadale) on the south. In Duirinish are two hills named Helvels or Hallivails, each about 1700 feet high, green with level summits (whence they are named Macleod's Tables), from the greater of which a ridge extends to Dunvegan Head, 300 feet above the sea, and from the smaller another ridge extends to the points of Idrigil and Waterstein, respectively 400 and 600 feet.¹¹ Off its extensive and generally precipitous coast are the Ascrib Isles in Loch Snizort, island Isa (or Iosa) and others in Loch Dunvegan, and near Idrigil point (its extreme south) are three basaltic pillars termed Macleod's Maidens, of which one is 200 feet, and the other two each 100 feet in height.¹²

In 1501 Kilmory in Watternes was one of the 'annexis and vicaragis' of the parsonage of Snizort, to which Sir Nichol Berchame was in that year presented by King James IV.¹³ In 1546 Schir Allane M'Kintosche was parson of Wattyrynys.¹⁴ In 1566 Archibald Earl of Ergill granted to Malcolme Makphersoun for life the parsonage and vicarage of Durynthas (or Durinis) in the diocese of the Isles, vacant by the decease of Finlay Tormotsoun.¹⁵ In 1567 Queen Mary confirmed the grant of the Earl, and the collation of Malcolm Macphersoun by John Carswell abbot of Ycolmekill.¹⁶

The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stood at Kilmuir near the head of Dunvegan Loch.¹ Its site is still marked by its cemetery, near which a new church was built in 1830.²

There are the remains of a church or chapel at Trumpan in Waternish, and of another (apparently dedicated to Saint Congan) at Glendale in Duirinish.³

Near Dunvegan is a place named Anait or Ainnit, supposed to have been a place of worship, and consisting of several buildings of loose stones situated within a triangular space formed by the confluence of two streams and a stone dike protected by a turf rampart stretching from stream to stream.⁴

Before the middle of the fifteenth century the lands of Dunvegan and Duirinish were held of the Lord of the Isles by the Macleods of Glenelg, otherwise styled of Harris and of Dunvegan, and locally known as the Siol Tormod.⁵ In 1498 King James IV. granted to Alexander Makeloid, the son and heir of William John Maklodesoun of Dunvegane, six unciate of Dyurenes, and other lands, forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, of whom they were held by William Makeloid, for the same service as the lands of Trouternes.⁶ In 1508 and 1514 or 1515 the same Alexander appears in record.⁷ In 1517 the same Alexander and about 100 others had permission under the privy seal of King James V. to pass to any place within Scotland from 6 January to 15 March.⁸ On 12 March of the same year Alexander M'Clويد of Dunvegane and his friends had a remission for assisting Sir Donald of the Ilis of Lochalch, when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.⁹ In 1531 the same Alexander was frequently summoned before parliament, but failed to appear.¹⁰ In 1540 he and 23 others had from King James V. a remission for their assistance given to David Hume of Wedderburn, Sir Donald Ilis of Lochelsche, and their accomplices, the King's rebels.¹¹ The lordship of Dowirnes included the lands in Braikodell granted in 1541 by King James V. to William Makeloid the son of Alexander and to Agnes Fraser his wife.¹² In 1545 Alexander Macleod of Dunveggane was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross.¹³ In the same year Alexander M'Clويد of Dunvegane, Rore M'Clويد of the Lewis, and forty persons in their company, had permission under the privy seal of Queen Mary to go to the Regent and Lords of Council on business from 17 August to 'Allhallomes (1 November).'¹⁴ In 1547 Queen Mary granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the ward of all the lands that belonged to the deceased Alexander M'Clويد of Dunvegane.¹⁵ In 1553 that queen granted to her chancellor George Earl of Huntly the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Dunnevegane and Durynes, and of all the other lands which belonged to the deceased William M'Clويد of Dunnevagane (the son of Alexander).¹ From that year till the year 1580 the history of those lands is the same as that of the lands of Glenelg.² In 1584 King James VI. granted to Colin Earl of Ergyle the nonentry and other dues of the lands which belonged to Tormond M'Lloyd of Downevagane.³ In 1585 William M'Clويد was served heir to his father Tormund M'Clويد of Herres in the six unciate of Dyurnas and other lands in the Lordship of the Isles.⁴ In 1626 John M'Clويد was served heir male in the same lands to his father Sir Roderick M'Clويد of Dunvegane.⁵ In 1655 Rorie Macleod of Dunvegane was served heir male in the same to his father John Mackleod of Dunvegane.⁶ In 1664 John M'Clويد of Donevagane was served heir in the same to his brother Roderick.⁷

During the fifteenth century, and perhaps previously, the lands of Waternish were held by the Macleods of Lewis, known as the Siol Torquil.⁸ In 1506 they were forfeited by Torquil Macleod of Lewis for treason.⁹ In 1508 (29 April) Andro bishop of Cathnes, Ranald Alansoun of Ylanbigern, and Alexander M'Cluide of Dunvegan, had a commission from King James IV. to let to sufficient tenants for five years the lands of the Lewis and of Wattarnes in Sky, forfeited by Torquyll M'Cluide of the Lewys.¹⁰ In the same year (7 June) the same king ordered Ranald Alansoun and Alexander Makclويد to pass to Lewis and Wattarnes to let the lands, and to take their directions in the matter from Alexander Earl of Huntlie.¹¹ In 1511 (29 June) the same king granted to Malcolm Makeloid, the son and heir of the deceased Rory M'Clويد (and the brother of Torquil), the lands and castle of Lewis and Wattirnes in the Lordship of the Isles, and other lands, all erected into the barony and lordship of Lewis.¹² In 1538 (2 April) King James V. granted to Rory M'Clويد, the son and heir of the deceased Malcolm M'Clويد of the Lewis, the nonentry and other dues of the same lands and barony from 30 June 1511 to 2 April 1539.¹³ In 1541 Rodoric M'Clويد resigned the lands, which were then anew erected by King James V. into the barony of Lewis in favour of Rodoric and his affianced spouse Barbara Stewart.¹⁴ In 1572 the same barony, including the lands and isle of Wattirness, were resigned by Rodoric Makclويد of Lewis, and were granted by King James VI. to his son and apparent heir Torquil Makclويد and his male heirs, with remainder to Gillecallum Garwe M'Clويد of Raisay and his male heirs, and to Torquil's male heirs whomsoever bearing the M'Clويد surname and arms, reserving the liferent to Rodoric, and on condition that he and Torquil should commit no crime against the King.¹⁵ In 1626 John M'Clويد was served heir male to his father Sir Roderick M'Clويد of Dunvegane in various lands united into the barony of Dunvegane, including the castle of Dunvegane, and five unciate of the lands and isles of Wattarnes, of the old extent of £18, 13s. 4d.¹⁶

In the district of Waternish there is a village called Stein, and at Fairy Bridge three miles from Dunvegan there is a yearly fair.³

Duns, barrows, and earthenhouses, are numerous throughout the parish.⁴

Among the castles of Skye Archdeacon Monro mentions ' the castill of Dunbeggan, pertaining to M'Cloyd of Herry, ane starke strengthe biggit upon ane craig.⁵ In 1557 John Og M'Cloyde of Mynyenes slew the brother of the deceased William M'Cloyde of Dunvegane, and took the house of Dunvegane, which the Queen Regent afterwards summoned Hugh Rose of Kilravock, his retainers, and others to reduce.⁶ This castle, the work of various periods, and still the family residence of Macleod, occupies the summit of a rock projecting into Dunvegan Loch and separated from the land by a stream and a ravine.⁷ In it is preserved the drinking horn of Rorie More (Sir Roderick Macleod of Dunvegan, chief of his tribe during the latter half of the reign of King James VI.), an ox's horn ornamented with a silver rim, and capable of containing as much as three ordinary quart bottles, the fill of which (of claret) it is traditionally said that each heir of Macleod at his entry was obliged to drink.⁸ In 1616 the Privy Council bound Sir Roderick to reside at Dunvegan, and restricted him to an allowance of four tuns of wine (for what period is not stated).⁹ At Dunvegan is also preserved the remnant of a banner of yellow silk styled the Fairy Flag, believed to have the power of procuring victory for the Macleods.¹⁰

There was formerly preserved at Dunvegan an ancient Irish drinking cup of dark-coloured close grained wood (probably alder), richly mounted with silver, adorned with niello and gilding, and jewelled, called the cup of Neil Glundubh (Neil of the black knees).¹¹

The farm of Borreraig is said to have been of old possessed by the Macrimmons teachers of the bagpipe (apparently hereditary sennachies or bards).¹²

The unfortunate Lady Grange was kept for some time in a cave at Idrigil in Duirinish, and died in 1745 in Waternish, where she was buried in the old cemetery at Trumpan.¹³

In 1773 there stood in the churchyard of Duirinish a pyramid of freestone about 30 feet high, erected by Simon Lord Lovat, who suffered on Towerhill, to the memory of his father, who was married to a sister of Macleod, and died at Dunvegan in 1699.¹

Kilbarr² — Kilbarray³ — Kilbarra.⁴ (Map, No. 32.)

ABOUT the year 1734 Barray was disjoined from the parish of South Uist, to which it appears to have been united after the Reformation.⁵

The parish of Barray, now apparently of the same extent as of old, consists of the island of Barray and upwards of twenty smaller isles, of which the chief are Bernera, Mingalay, Pabbay, Sanderay, and Wattersay on the south of Barray, and Uidhay, Flodday, Hellesay, Gighay, Fuday, and Fiaray, on the north. The whole parish is hilly, and the west coast in general rocky, and in Bernera and Mingalay the rocks rise to the height of 700 and 1400 feet.⁶ Beside Mingalay is a high rock (probably the Scarpa Vervecum of Buchanan) topped with luxuriant grass, to which the inhabitants of the island used to carry their sheep to feed.⁷ On the north coast of Barray is a tract of sand styled the Traymore or Great Sands of Barray.⁸

In 1392 the church appears to have been included in a grant of the island of Barre and the smaller isles around it, made by John of Yle to Reginald of Yle his son, and confirmed by King Robert III.⁹ Fordun about 1400 mentions the isle of Barray with a cell of the Holy Trinity (probably a mistake for the chapel of the Holy Trinity in North Uist).¹⁰ In 1549 Monro notices the island 'with ane parochie kirke named Kilbarr.'¹¹ A writer of the following century says, 'There is one church in Barra upon the north or nord eist syd called Kilbarray.'¹²

The church, dedicated to Saint Barr, and another church, stood at Kilbarr in the north end of the island of Barray.¹³ There still exist two ancient churches, each with an altar of rough stones, and near each is the pedestal of a cross.¹⁴ In one of these churches there was preserved till early in the last century a wooden image of Saint Barr, on whose anniversary (25 September) it was formerly a custom of the inhabitants to ride three times round Kilbarr.¹ On a small hill in the neighbourhood, which borders also on the Great Sands, is Saint Barr's well, in which according to old popular belief were produced the embryos of the cockles with which these sands abound.²

There was a church at Borge near the middle of Barray, dedicated to Saint Michael, on whose anniversary (29 September) was observed a custom similar to that practised at Kilbarr.³

In 1794 there were three places of worship, one at Kilbarr, another at Borge, and a third at Watersay.⁴ The present church, built in 1840, stands in the centre of the parish.⁵

There was a chapel in each of nine islands on the south of Barray, namely, Watersay, Sanderay, Scarpnamutt, Fladay, Pabay, Mingalay, Berneray, Gigarum, and Lingay.⁶ In Berneray there is said to have been an altar dedicated to Saint Christopher.⁷

In 1292 Barrich (the Barey of the Sagas) and the small isles of the same were included in the sheriffdom of Skey, then erected by an ordinance of King John Balliol.⁸ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alan the island of Barry and other lands, which were resigned by Cristian of Marr the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic.⁹ In 1344 King David II. granted the same island with its pertinents to Reginald the son of Roderic of the Isles.¹⁰ In 1372 King Robert II. granted to John del Yle the 300 marklands which belonged to Alan the son of Rodoric, including the lands of Barrech with their pertinents.¹¹ In 1392 King Robert III. confirmed a grant of the island of Barre and its small isles made (apparently in that year) by John of Yle to Reginald of Yle his son.¹² In 1427 Alexander of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Master of Ross, granted the lands of the whole island of Barra to his alumpnus and armiger Gilleownan the son of Rodric the son of Murchard Makneill, and his heirs male, with remainder to the longest liver of Gilleownan's brothers born to Rodric by the daughter of Ferchard Makgilleoin, and to Rodric's heirs whomsoever.¹³ In 1495 King James IV. confirmed the grant to Gilleownan Makneill, the grandson of Gilleownan the son of Rodric.¹⁴ In 1504 and 1505 Gilleonan Maknele of Barra was with others summoned before parliament to answer for certain treasonable acts, but failed to appear.¹⁵ In 1517 Gillevin Maknele of Barra and his kinsmen and friends had a remission from the Regent Albany for assisting Sir Donald of the Ilis of Lochalch when he took part with Alexander Lord Hume in his treasonable doings.¹⁶ In 1545 Gilleganan Macneill of Barray was one of the barons and council of the Isles under Donald who then assumed the style Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross.¹⁷ In 1546 Queen Mary granted a remission to Gillean Makneill of Barry and others for assisting the English in burning the islands of Bute and Arrane.¹ In 1549 M'Neill of Baray had the island of Baray, and on its north and north east coasts the isles of Nahacharrach, Nahakersait, Garnlanga, Fladay, Bwyabeg, Bwyamoir, Hay, Hellesay, Gigay, Feray, and Fuday.² In the end of the sixteenth and beginning of the seventeenth century the laird of Barry was Ruari or Roderick Macneill, styled the Turbulent, on whose forfeiture the lands were granted by King James VI. to Sir Roderick Mackenzie Tutor of Kintail.³ They were afterwards granted by Mackenzie to Sir Roderick Macneill, to be held of him for a yearly payment of 60 marks.⁴ A writer of the seventeenth century says, 'The inhabitants are cald Clan-Neill-Barray, for thois islands do al perteyn to M'Kneill of Barray.'⁵ 'None,' says the same writer, 'do go with boats into thois islands in the summer and harvest seasons befor the lord thereof have his dutyes paid to him, which [are] the half of all their cornis, butter, cheiss, &c., and he hath an officiar resident ther for that use.'⁶ In 1655 Sir George Mackenzie Baronet of Tarbit was served heir to Sir George his father in the lands and isles of Barry, Vatersay, Sandirray, Phappy, Maggillay, Bernday, the isles of Ferray and Killigir, 'and haill remanent lands and islands adjacent to the said isle of Barry, callit the pendicle isles of Barry, the teirroungs of Fuday, Kilbarray, Niclene, Grange, Burrow, Keills, Hamgistill, and the castle of Keismull, united with the teiroung of Beagistill into the barony of Barry.'⁷ In 1700 Barra and the smaller isles adjacent were the property of Mackneil of Barra, said to be the thirty-fourth of the name in lineal descent, and held of Macdonald of Sleat for yearly payment of £40 and a hawk if required, the vassal being bound also to furnish a certain number of men.⁸

In 1549 the isles lying south of Barry, of which the largest are those nine already enumerated as having chapels, were held by the bishop of the Isles (probably of Macneill of Barry).⁹ In 1561 the five isles of Barry (meaning probably Bernera, Mingalay, Pabbay, Sanderay, and Watersay, and including the smaller isles) were the property of the same bishop.¹⁰ They were styled the bishop's isles, and Bernera the most southerly seems still to be known as the bishop's isle.¹¹

'Within the southwest end of this isle,' says Ardeacon Monro, 'ther enters a salt water loche, verey narrow in the entres, and round and braide within. Into the middis of the saide loche there is ane castle in ane isle upon ane strenthey craige callit Kiselnin, perteing to M'Neill of Barry.'¹² Buchanan gives a similar description of the loch and island, and says the castle is strongly fortified.¹³ A writer of the following century styles it 'ane castell in the south end in a little iland upon a rock in a fresche loch called Kisimull.'¹⁴ The castle, we have seen, was in 1655 included in the barony of Barry.¹⁵ Martin about 1700 says that the small island Kismul on the south of Barra, the seat of Mackneil of Barra, has an old tower and hall with a magazine.¹ At the same date there still existed the office of Gockman (warder or sentinel), who kept watch on the top of the tower.² The sea appears to have forced the 'narrow entres' of Monro, and the old castle of Kismull now stands in an open bay, named Kismull or Castle Bay, and the rock on which it is built is covered at high water.³ It is an hexagonal building from 30 to 60 feet high, with a lofty square tower in one of its angles.⁴ At the entrance is a dock (apparently cut in the rock) for the galley of the chief, defended on the west by a strong wall.⁵

In the parish are the ruins or sites of eleven hill forts, five of which are in Barra, two in Watersay, and one in each of the isles Sauderay, Pabbay, Mingalay, and Bernera.⁶

There are also several circles of stone, and near one of them a well styled tobbar-nam-buadh (the well of virtues).⁷

KILPETER.

Parochia de Kilpedire Blisen⁸—Peitter's Parochin⁹—Keilpedder in Veist¹⁰—Kilfadrik¹¹—Kilphedre.¹² (Map, No. 33.)

THIS parish, now part of the modern parish of South Uist (which includes also Howmore and Benbecula), seems to have consisted of the district known as Kandish or the South Head of Uist, the district of Boisdale (of old Baghastil), and the islands Eriskay, Lingay, and Oronsay, and a few smaller isles, thus extending from the extreme south of Eriskay to the neighbourhood of Loch Eynort on the east and of the promontory styled Ardmichael on the west. The west side of the parish is low, flat, and sandy, the east rocky, mountainous, and indented by Loch Boisdale. Fresh-water lakes are numerous.

The church occurs in record as that of Kilpedire Blisen in 1309, at which time it was probably in the advowson of the crown.¹³ In 1392 it appears to have been included in a grant of the island of Huwyste made by John of Yle to Reginald his son, and confirmed by King Robert III.¹⁴ In 1561 it belonged to the abbot of Ecolmkil, the bishop of the Isles having one-third of the parsonage.¹⁵ In 1615 Alexander Campbell prior of Archchattan (and commendator of Icolmkill) granted to Donald M'Allane captain of Clanronald and to John Moideartach his son and heir the lands and teinds of South Yiest and others during the life of the longest liver of the two.¹ In 1630 the same Alexander assigned to his eldest son John a rent of 160 marks, payable yearly by John Moideartach M'Donald Vic Ean Vic Allane, the son of the deceased Donald M'Allane, as the dues of the lease granted in 1615, with power to prosecute for an arrear of 240 marks due at the time of a former settlement.²

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Peter, stood at Kilpeter on the west coast of the parish.³

There were chapels at Kilbride in Boisdale, and at Kildonnan and apparently also at Clachan of Branagh, Clachan Cuay, and Kirkidale, in the other and larger portion of the parish.⁴

Among the documents found in the treasury of the King of Scots at Edinburgh in 1282 there was one entitled 'Letter of the King of Norway regarding the lands of Iuist and Egnyn.'⁵ In 1292 Guiste (the Ivist of the Sagas, and of old including South Uist, Benbecula, and North Uist) was by an ordinance of King John Balliol included in the sheriffdom of Skey then erected.⁶ In 1344 King David II. granted the island of Ywest and others to Reginald the son of Roderic of the Isles for the usual services by sea and land.⁷ In 1372 the lands of Oviste were included in a grant by King Robert II. to John del Yle of the 300 marklands which belonged to Alan the son of Roderic.⁸ In 1389 and 1401 Godfrey de Insula, the son of John Lord of the Isles, is styled lord of Wyst.⁹ In 1392 King Robert III. confirmed to Reginald of Yle the island of Huwyste and others, granted to him (apparently in that year) by John of Yle his father.¹⁰ The island (as above defined) was forfeited by John Lord of the Isles in 1475, was restored to him by King James III. in 1476, and was confirmed to him by that king in 1478.¹¹ It was again and finally forfeited by the same John in 1493.¹²

In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Roderic the son of Alan six davachs and three quarters of land in the parish of Kilpedire Blisen, and other lands, which were resigned by Cristian of Marr the daughter of the deceased Alan the son of Roderic.¹³ Between 1389 and 1401 Godfrey the son of John Lord of the Isles, styled lord of Wyst, had one-half of South Uist (either the part known as the South Head, or the parish of Howmore.)¹⁴ In 1498 King James IV. granted to Ranald Makallane, with remainder to his brother Alexander Makallane, and with reversion to the crown, the 23 marklands of the 'Souththeid of the Ile of Ewist,' namely, the lands of Kilpeter, Askyrnis, Fraybost, Garbalteos, Kildonnan, and the two Borwarnes, which had been forfeited by John Lord of the Isles.¹ In 1538 King James V. granted to Farquhar Makallane the nonentry and other dues of the same 23 marklands, lying in the isle of Ewist and sheriffdom of Innernys, and in the King's hands by the decease of Ranald Makallane the uncle of Farquhar.² The 30 marklands of Kandes of West were included in the barony of Bar in North Kintyre, granted by Queen Mary to James Makeconnyll of Dunnyveyig and Glennis in 1545, confirmed to him by that queen and her husband Francis in 1558, and granted by the same Queen in 1564 to Archibald M'Concill the son and apparent heir of James.³ Archdeacon Monro in 1549 says that the part of the island of Ywst named 'Peitters parochin' was held by the Clanronald of the Clandonald.⁴ In 1563 James Makoneill of Dunnavaig had from Queen Mary a special grant of the 23 marklands above enumerated, which were resigned by Ferquhard M'Allesteris.⁵ In 1582 King James VI. granted in heritage to Allane Makramnald of Eister Leyis the nonentry and other dues of the 23 marklands of the Southeid of the Ile of Vist called Keandcas, namely, the lands of Kilpettir, Askirnis, Frobost, Garwailteos, Kildonan, and the two Borvarnes, lying in the Ile of Vist and sheriffdom of Innernes, which were in the King's hands since the decease of Farquhar Makallester M'Allane or any other the last lawful possessor.⁶ In 1627 John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane, captain of Clanronald, was served heir male to his father Donald M'Donald Viceane of Ellantirrim, captain of the same clan, in the 23 marklands of Kendess, of the extent of 46 marks.⁷

Between the years 1389 and 1401 the lands of Boysdale are said to have been possessed by Godfrey the son of John Lord of the Isles.⁸ In 1427 Alexander of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Master of Ross, granted the unciata of Baogastallis in Wist to his alumpnus and armiger Gilleownan the son of Rodric the son of Murchard Makneill and his heirs male, with remainder to the longest liver of Gilleownan's brothers born to Rodric by the daughter of Ferchard Makgilleoin, and to Rodric himself and his heirs whomsoever.⁹ In 1495 King James IV. confirmed the grant to Gilleownan Makneill, the grandson of Gilleownan the son of Rodric.¹⁰ In 1549 'the south south west end' of Ywst, called Baghastill, was held by M'Neill of Barray, either the same Gilleownan or a descendant.¹¹ In 1627 John M'Donald M'Allane Viceane, captain of Clanronald, was served heir male to his father Donald of Ellantirrim in the 6 marklands of Beuistill in the isle of North Uist (South Uist?), of the extent of 12 marks.¹² In 1655 Sir George Mackeinzie Baronet of Tarbit was served heir to his father Sir George in the lands called the teiroung of Beagistill, as part of the barony of Barray.¹³

In 1549 the islands of Eriskeray (Eriska), Lingay, and Orvansay, belonged to M'Neill of Barray.¹⁴

¹⁴ Description of the Western Isles.

In the entry of Loch Eynort there is a rock, on which a frigate despatched by Cromwell to subdue the inhabitants of Uist is said to have been wrecked.¹

On a small island near the island of Eriska there stood at one time an old building styled Caistal a Bhrebider (the Weaver's Castle).²

THIS parish, now part of the modern parish of South Uist, seems to have included the northern part of the island of South Uist and some small islands on its coast, extending northwards from the arm of the sea named Loch Eynort. Like the southern parish, it is low and sandy on the west, and rocky and mountainous on the east, in which is a range of hills terminating on the north in Mount Heckla. It abounds with fresh-water lakes, and on the north a peninsula is formed by two arms of the sea named Loch Skipport and Loch Bee, the latter originally a fresh-water lake, the entry to which was forced by the sea and was afterwards closed by an artificial rampart of stones. Archdeacon Monro, after describing this 'dyke of roughe staines,' observes, 'Notwithstanding the flowing streames of the sea enters throughe the said dyke of staines in the said fresche water loche, and so ther is continually gottin stiking amange the roughe staines of the dyke foresaid fluikes, podlokes, skaitts, and harings.'⁷

In 1549 Monro mentions this parish as 'the parochin of Howfe.'⁸ In 1561 the parsonage of Howmoir in Veist belonged to the abbot of Iona, the bishop's portion being one third.⁹

There appear to have been two churches at Howmore, one dedicated to Saint Mary, and the other to Saint Columba.¹⁰

There were chapels at Kilchainie, Kileulay, Kilvannan, and Ardmichael, at the last of which the cemetery still remains.¹¹

'The oldest men,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'report this ile to be much empayred and destroyed be the sands ovirblowing and burieing habitable lands, and the sea hath followed and made the loss irreparable. There are destroyed the tounes and paroch churches of Kilmarchirmoir and Kilpetil, and the church of Kilmonie is now called Kilpetil, that is, the church of the muir, for so it lay of old nearest the muirs, but now the sea and the sands have approached it. There be sum remaynes of the destroyed churches yit to be seen at low tydes or ebbing water.'¹²

Between 1389 and 1401 the half of South Uist (which half does not appear) was held by Godfrey the son of John Lord of the Isles.¹ In 1449 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, with the consent of his council, granted the 30 marklands of Skerehowg to his brother Hugh the son of Alexander of the Isles lord of Slete, and to his heirs male, legitimate or illegitimate, by Fynvola the daughter of Alexander the son of John of Ardnamurchan, and to their lawful heirs, with remainder as in the case of Slete contained in the same grant.² In 1495 the grant was confirmed by King James IV.³ In 1498 that king granted in heritage to Ranald Makallane, with remainder to his brother Alexander and his heirs, and reversion to the King, the same 30 marklands of Skeryhof which with other lands then granted were formerly held by Hugh of the Isles of John Lord of the Isles, and were forfeited by that lord; and John Huchonsoun of Sleit, the son of the same Hugh, renounced all right to the lands which belonged to him by heritage or by the King's promise made to the deceased Alexander of the Isles of Lochalch.⁴ In 1505 and 1508 Ranald Alansoun of Yland-Bagrim (apparently the same as Ranald Makallane) appears in record.⁵ In 1531 King James V., on the narrative that the charters of the 30 marklands of Skerihof in Oest and others which formerly belonged in heritage to Alan Makrory the grandfather of John Makalester of Casteltirrim, and to his predecessors, had been destroyed through war and other disturbances in the province, granted the same lands anew to John Makalester and his heirs, to be held of the King in fee for service of ward, relief, and marriage, on condition that they should not do homage to any other than the King without his special license.⁶ In 1541 the same king granted to Farquhard M'Alister M'Allane the nonentry and other dues of the same 30 marklands, which were in the King's hands since the decease of Ranald M'Allane.⁷ 'The parochin of Howfe,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'perteins to Clanronald, halding of the Clandonald.'⁸ In 1617 Donald Gorme of Slait was served heir to his uncle Donald Gorme of Slait in the 30 marklands of Skerehoug.⁹ In 1644 Sir James M'Donald of Slaitt Baronet was served heir in the same lands to Sir Donald his father.¹⁰

On an islet in a fresh-water lake near Howmore stands a small square building almost entire, named Caistal Eilen Bbeg Rum.¹¹ This was an ancient seat of the captains of Clanranald, one of whom appears in 1505 and 1508 as Ranald Alansoun of Yland-Bagrim.¹²

The remains of another castle stand on an island in a lake in the same neighbourhood, named Loch Druidibeg.¹³

BENBECULA.

Ecclesia Sancti Columbe in Beandmoyll¹—Beanweall in Ewist²—Buchagla³
—Benvalgha⁴—Kilcholambkil⁵—Church of Saint Columb in Ben-bicula.⁶ (Map, No. 35.)

THIS parish, now united to South Uist, included the islands of Benbecula, Wiay, Hysker-namonich, and others of smaller size. It is separated from South Uist and North Uist by straits several miles in width and dry at low water. In other respects it resembles the island of South Uist, being low and sandy on the west, hilly towards the east, and much divided by fresh-water lakes and arms of the sea.⁷

The church of Benbecula, said to have been founded about the year 1390 by Amie or Algive, the wife of John Lord of the Isles, appears to have been included in the grant of the lands of Uist made in 1392 by that lord to Reginald of Yle his son, and confirmed in the same year by King Robert III.⁸ In 1535 King James V. presented Archibald Makillewray to the rectory of the parish church of Saint Columba in Beandmoyll, which was vacant by the decease of Sir Tormot Makane.⁹ In 1542 the same king presented Sir Fingonius M'Mulane chaplain to the same church, styled the rectory of Beanweall in Ewist, vacant or when vacant by the demission of Sir Archibald M'Ilwray.¹⁰ 'At the end heirof (that is, of South Uist),' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'the sea enters and cuts the countrey be ebbing and flowing through it, and in the north syde of this there is ane parochin callit Buchagla.'¹¹

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, appears to have stood on the north coast of the island.¹²

At Baillvanich (monks' town) on the north west coast on a small island in a lake are remains said to be those of a monastery, but probably the remains of a chapel belonging to the monks of Iona.¹³

Two miles south from Baillvanich is Nuntoun (formerly Ballienangallich or Bael-nin-killach), where there existed till lately a building, probably a chapel of the nuns of Iona, but locally believed to have been a nunnery dedicated to the Virgin Mary.¹⁴ In 1700 there was on each side of the chapel 'a stone vault with abundance of small bones.'¹⁵

There appears also to have been a chapel on one of the islands now styled Na Monich, the Helsker Nagaillon of Archdeacon Monro, and Helskyr na Monich of Blaeu, which belonged to the nuns of Iona.¹

The island of Benbecula, of old considered a part of Uist, was as such included in the grant of the lands of Uist made in 1344 by King David II. to Reginald of the Isles, in the grant of 1372 by King Robert II. to John of Yle, and in the grant of 1392 by John of Yle to his son Reginald, confirmed in the same year by King Robert III.² It is said to have been held between 1389 and 1401 by Godfrey the son of John of Yle by Amie or Algive M'Ruari.³

In 1449 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, with the consent of his council, granted to his brother Hugh the son of Alexander of the Isles, lord of Slete, and to his heirs male and others, with remainder as in the case of Sleat, the 12 marklands of Beanbeacla and the pennyland of Gergremynis in the Lordship of the Isles.⁴ In 1495 the grant was confirmed by King James IV.⁵ In 1498 that king granted in heritage to Angus Rewochsoun Makranald, with remainder to his son Angus and his heirs, whom failing, to revert to the King, the same 12 marklands of Bendbagle in Ewyst, which were forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, of whom they had been held by Hugh of the Isles, whose son John Huchonsoun of Sleit resigned all right to the lands either heritable or promised by the King to Alexander of the Isles of Lochaleh.⁶ In the same year he granted the pennyland of Gerrygremynis in the island of Ewyst in heritage to Ranald Makallane, with remainder to his brother Alexander and his heirs, and reversion to the King.⁷ In 1538 King James V. granted to Alane M'Coule M'Rannald, and to his brother Lauchlane M'Coule M'Rannald, the nonentry and other dues of the 14 marklands of Benvole in the sheriffdom of Innernes.⁸ In 1540 the same king granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the dues of the same 14 marklands, which were in the King's hands since the decease of John Makangus Reoch Makrannald.⁹ In 1541 he granted to Farquhard M'Alester M'Allane the nonentry and other dues of the pennyland of Gerrygremynis in the isle of Ewist, in the King's hands since the decease of Ranald M'Allane.¹⁰ In 1549 the lands of the parish belonged to the Clandonald.¹¹ In 1582 King James VI. granted in heritage to Allane Makrannald of Eister Leyis the nonentry and other dues of the 14 marklands of Benwela in the south part of Vist, namely, Borwe, Grimanis, Geargrimanis, Ballefinlay, Ballenagailleach, Kilmoire, Anaird, Hey, Ballevannach, and Knokvorlund, between the water of Cardnis upon the north and the water called Fayail Nagarnan on the south, with the mills, multures, woods, and fishings, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, which were in the King's hands since the decease of Angus Reoch Makrannald or other last lawful possessor.¹² In 1617 Donald Gorme of Slait was served heir to his uncle

'Be aught myle of sea,' says Monro in 1549, 'frae this ile towards the west lyes ane ile four myle and haff myle braid, laich maine land, callit Hellsker Nagaillon. It has abundance of corne and elding for fire. It pertains to the nuns of Columkill.'² In 1574 Mary Nikillean, prioress of the monastery of Saint Mary the Virgin in the island of Yona, granted to Hector M'Clane of Doward in heritage the nunnery lands, including the four pennylands of Ballienangalleach and the lands of Hellsker in the isle of Ewyast.³ In 1576 James M'Donill Growemych of Castell Cammes is set down as paying yearly to the bishop of the isles at Ycolmkill between Petersmess and Beltane for the third of the fermes of Halskiengellachie '20 males grane and the third of one maill.'⁴

Among the lands of the abbot of Iona within the Clanranald's bounds are enumerated in 1561 the lands of Ballenamanniche lying within the isle of Weist.⁵

There is a fair in Benbecula in the month of September.⁶

The castle of Borve (Caistal Bhuirh) in Benbecula, whose ruins still remain on the west side of the island, is said to have been built by Amie M'Ruari above mentioned.⁷ It was of old styled the castle of Vynvawle (Benbecula), and in 1392 was granted with the lands by John of Yle to Reginald his son, and confirmed to the latter by King Robert III.⁸ It is mentioned by Fordun about 1400 as the castle of Benwevil.⁹ 'One castel,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'is in this isle called Beinwhaill.'¹⁰ It is marked by Blaeu about 1640 as Borg.¹¹

There was another castle in the same neighbourhood named castle Vrigh or Wiay.¹² everywhere divided and indented by fresh-water lakes and arms of the sea, is generally sandy towards the west, and has on the east a range of hills from 300 to 700 feet in height.¹ At the point of Tighay on the west there is a cave with an opening of 12 feet diameter in the roof, through which during a sea storm the waves are forced upwards to a height of more than 200 feet.²

The names Ollevat and Langavat, applied to two lakes in Benbecula, and various other names in it and the neighbouring islands, are Norwegian.¹³

The church of Kilmuir appears to have been included in the grant of the lands of Uist made in 1392 by John of Yle to Reginald his son, and confirmed by King Robert III.³ Archdeacon Monro in 1549 mentions two parish churches in the Kentnache or North Head of Uist, but names neither.⁴ In 1576 James M'Donill Growemych of Castell Cammes is set down as paying yearly to the bishop of the Isles between Petersmess and Beltane 18 'males' of grain for the third part of the parsonage of Kilmorie in Vyist.⁵

The church, dedicated to Saint Mary, stood at Kilmuir (apparently the Balchenglish of Blaeu) near the centre of the united parish.⁶ The present church of Kilmuir was built in 1764.⁷ Part of the glebe was of old a sanctuary, and bears the name of Shead Phoil (Paul's field).⁸

In 1389 Godfrey of Ile, lord of Wyst, confirmed to the monks of Inchaffray the chapel of the Holy Trinity (at Karynech) in Wyst, as granted to them by Cristina the daughter of Alan the true heiress and Reginald called M'Rodry the true lord and patron.⁹ About 1390 the chapel of Carinish was probably rebuilt or repaired by Amie M'Ruari, who is traditionally reputed its founder.¹⁰ In 1601 the Macdonalds of Uist took refuge with their cattle in the church of Kiltrynad, when the island was invaded by the Macleods of Harris.¹¹ The church is marked by Blaeu as Kiltrinidad, and its ruins are locally known as Teampul-na-Trianaide (the Trinity Church).¹²

There appear to have been churches or chapels also at Balmartin, Killipheder, Ardavoran (where a cemetery remains), Kilchalman, and Hougary, and in the island of Valay.¹³

In Boreray there was a cemetery called the Monks' Field, which is said to have been the burying-place of all the monks in the islands north of Eigg.¹⁴

On the island of Gremsey there was a small chapel or oratory, said to have been built by Amie M'Ruari.¹⁵

North Uist, as a part of the island of Uist, was included in the several grants of 1344, 1372, and 1392.¹⁶ Between 1389 and 1401 it appears to have been held by Godfrey, the son of John Lord of the Isles, and styled lord of Wyst.¹⁷

In 1389 Godfrey of Ile lord of Wyst confirmed to the monks of Inchaffray, along with the chapel of the Holy Trinity, the whole land of Karyneh, and 4 pennylands in Ylara situated between Husabost and Kanerraroeh, as granted to them by Cristina the daughter of Alan and Reginald M'Rodry.¹ 'At the north end thereof (that is, of Benbecula),' says Monro in 1549, 'the sea cutts the countrey againe, and that cutting of the sea is callit Careynesse.'² In 1561 the abbot of Iona had the lands of Cairenische, of Baillenakill and Kirkapost in Eillera, and 24 pennylands in Weist called Unganab.³ In 1576 James M'Donill Growemych of Castell Cammes paid yearly to the bishop of the Isles for the lands of Vngenab in Vyist 48 'males' of bear of the custom and use of Vyist; for the lands of Kirkebost 18 'males' of grain, 2 bolls of bear, '30 eubakis quhite cheiss, and anc plaid;' for the lands of Carinche 8 'males' and a mart; and for the lands of Balnakelie in Illera 16 'males.'⁴ In 1644 Sir James M'Donald of Slaitt Baronet was served heir to his father Sir Donald in 12 pennylands of Ungnab, 2 pennylands of Caronies, 3 pennylands of Kirkibost, and a markland of Casterton in Illaray in North Wist.⁵

In the year 1449 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, with the consent of his council, granted to his brother Hugh the son of Alexander of the Isles lord of Slete, and to his heirs male legitimate or otherwise as in the case of Slete, with remainder also as in the same case, 60 marklands in the north part of Wist, including among other lands 2 pennylands of Scolpic, 4 pennylands of Gremynis, 2 pennylands of Talawmartin (or Calawmartin), 6 pennylands of Orvinsaig, a halfpennyland of Waynlis, and a halfpennyland of the island of Gillegerre.⁶ In 1495 the grant was confirmed by King James IV.⁷ In 1505 the same king granted to Ranald Alansoun of Yland-Bagrim 60 marklands in the North Head of Evist which were resigned by John the son of the deceased Hugh of the Isles, namely, the davaeh called in Scotch le terung of Yllera, the davaeh called in Scotch the terung of Paible, the davaeh called in Scotch the terung of Pablisgerry, the davach called the terung of Bailranald, the davach of Holf, the davach of Watna, Scolping, and Gremynis, the davach of Wala, the davach of Solose, the halfpennyland of Walis, the halfpennyland of Ylandgarvy, the 6 pennylands of Orwansay, the 6 pennylands of Calmertane (or Talmertane), the 2 davachs (le terungs) of Sanda and Borwvia, and the pennyland of Gerryymar, all in the Lordship of the Isles.⁸ We are informed by Archdeacon Monro in 1549, that 'benorth this countrey (Careynesse) is callit Kenchnache of Ywst, that is in Englishe the North Head of Ywst, whilk termis twa paroehe kirkes, and is mair of profit than the rest of hail of Ywst, pertaining to Donald Gormesone.'⁹ In 1553 Quen Mary granted to George Earl of Huntlie, her chancellor, the nonentry and other dues of the lands of North Oist, and of all the other lands which belonged to the deceased William M'Cloid of Dunnevagane.¹ From that date till 1567 the history of the lands is the same as that of Glenelg.² In 1567 Archibald Earl of Argyle became bound to obtain from Queen Mary for Donald M'Donald Gorme of Slait heritable infestment in the north part of Weist and other lands, on condition that Donald should pay 1000 marks Scots to the Earl, and 500 to Mary M'Cloid the heiress of Dunvegan, and give the Earl his bond of manrent.³ In 1617 Donald Gorme of Slait was served heir to his uncle Donald Gorme of Slait in the lands of North Wist, of the old extent of £40, and apparently including as before the 2 pennylands of Scolpick, the 4 pennylands of Gremynis, the 2 pennylands of Tallowmartyne, the 6 pennylands of Orwnsag, the halfpennyland of Wainlies, and the halfpennyland of Ile Gilligerrie, in the Lordship of the Isles and sheriffdom of Innernes, to be held on condition that the castle of Camys (in Slait) should be always in readiness for the King or his deputies, and with reservation of 40 shilling-lands in Wist to the King, to be possessed by the inhabitants at his pleasure and on condition that they should not be disposed to the Islesmen (lie Heillandmen), unless first offered to Donald Gorme, his heirs, or his assignees.⁴ In 1644 Sir James Macdonald of Slaitt Baronet was served heir to his father Sir Donald in the same lands.⁵

'To the northwast fra this Kentnache of Ywyst be tualve myle of sea lyes ane ile callit Haysker, quherin infinit slaughter of seileheis is. This ile pertains to Donald Gormesone.'⁶ In 1644 Sir James Macdonald of Slaitt Baronet was served heir to his father Sir Donald in the 9 pennylands of the isle of Hilleskere in North Wist (apparently the Husker islands, marked by Blaeu as Helskyr Egach and Hayelskyr na Meul).⁷

In this parish there are numerous duns, generally ascribed to the Danes, and for the most part built on islands in fresh-water lakes, and accessible by causeways.⁸ Circles or cairns of stones are numerous.⁹ Kirkibost (Kirkjubolstadthr) and many other names are Norwegian.¹⁰

In 1700 there stood near Saint Mary's church a stone cross, 3 feet high, called the Water Cross, and said to be erected of old by the inhabitants when they wished to have rain, and to be taken down when they had procured enough.¹¹

'Into this North Heid of Ywst,' says Monro, 'there is sundrie covis and holes in the earth, coverit with heddir above, quhilk fosters maney rebellis in the countrey of the North Heid of Ywst.'¹²

THIS parish, now united to Kilmuir, appears to have included the north east district of North Uist still known as the district of Sand, and the island of Lingay and others upon its north coast. It is in general low and sandy, and much divided by lakes and arms of the sea, but somewhat mountainous towards the east.

Sand, although not named, was undoubtedly one of the two parish churches of North Uist mentioned by Monro in 1549.⁴ In 1561 the parsonage belonged to the abbot of Iona.⁵ In 1576 James M'Donill Growemych of Castell Cammes is set down as paying yearly to the bishop of the Isles between Petersmess and Beltane for the kirklands and teinds of Sanday 20 bolls of bear of the 'mett and mesour' of Vvest.⁶

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, stood at Kilcholmkill on the north coast, now known as Clachan.⁷

There was a church or chapel in Lingay dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and styled by Martin 'a parish called Kilmoor.'⁸

Some of the 60 marklands of the North Head of Ewist contained in the grants of 1449, 1505, and others, appear to have been in this parish, and to be the only lands within it of which there is any accessible record.⁹

HARRIS, of old named also the Ardmanach of Lewis, is the southern and more mountainous part of that island, rendered peninsular by Loch Resort on the west and Loch Seaforth on the east, and midway nearly subdivided into two by East and West Loch Tarbert. From its extreme south to the boundary of Lewis there runs an elevated ridge, varying from 2000 to 3000 feet above the sea. The coast is much indented, and around it lie the islands Scarp, Taransay, Pabay, Berneray, Ensay, Killigray, Scalpay, and many of smaller size.

The advowson of the church of Harris appears to have been granted in 1372 by King Robert II. to John of Yle, and in 1392 by John of Yle to Reginald his son.¹ The final forfeiture of the Lord of the Isles in 1493 brought it again to the crown.² In the early part of the following century Sir Alexander M'Clويد was rector of the church.³ In 1542 King James V. presented Finlay Tormotsoun to the rectory and vicarage of Harige, vacant by the decease of Sir Alexander M'Clويد.⁴ In 1546 a precept of seisin of the lands of Moukcarne by Roderic Maclane archdeacon of the Isles is witnessed by Sir Finlay Termatsone rector of Hary.⁵ In 1566 Archibald Earl of Ergill granted for life to Makcolme Makpherson the parsonage and vicarage of Sanct Bryde in Harrage, vacant by the decease of Finlay Tormotsoun.⁶ In 1567 Queen Mary confirmed the Earl's grant, and also the collation to the benefice by Bishop John Carswell abbot of Ycolmekill.⁷

The church, dedicated to Saint Bride, and till recently named Kilbride, appears to have stood near the centre of the parish, where a new church was built about the year 1840.⁸

At Rodil near the south point of the island was a religious house founded by one of the Macloids of Harris, and dedicated to Saint Clement.⁹ The date of its foundation is unknown, and the earliest notice of it seems to be that by Archdeacon Monro, who says, 'Within the south part of this ile lyes ane monastare with a steipeill, quhilke wes foundit and biggit be M'Clويد of Harrey, callit Roodill.'¹⁰ In 1561 the parsonage of Roidill in Hereis belonged to the bishop of the Isles.¹¹ The church of Rodil was subsequently used as the parish church. 'Ther is,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'a paroch church in Haray cald Rovidil, and a small tour (probably the 'steipeill' of Monro) in that town, named after the Saint Cleaman, in English Clement.'¹² It was repaired in 1784, and at that period used as one of the parish churches.¹³ Down to the same period it was customary with the natives of Harris to swear by Claiman-moir-a-Rowadill, the great Saint Clement of Rodil.¹⁴ The ruins of the priory (as it is termed) still remain, and enclose the monument of Alexander M'Leod of Harris (named Crottach), a piece of fine sculpture still in good preservation.¹⁵

Besides the churches of Saint Bride and Saint Clement there were in Harris and its islands many churches or chapels, the ruins of which existed in 1790.¹⁶ Of these there are enumerated on the mainland the churches of Saint Rufus (or Malrube) and Saint Luke; in the island of Taransay Teampull Che and Eagluis Tarain; in Pabbay the churches of Saint Mary and Saint Muluag; in Berneray the churches of Saint Asaph (Cill Aisaim) and of Saint Columba; and in the island of Killigray the remains of a building called Teampull na h' Annait, near which is a well named Tobar na h' Annait.¹

The peninsula of Harris, which with Lewis formed the Ljodthhus of the Sagas, seems to have been included in the lands of Skey and Lodoux, which with other lands were in 1292 erected by King John Balliol into the sheriffdom of Skey.² It was probably included also in the grant of the isle of Lewes by King David II. to John of Yle in 1344.³ In 1372 King Robert II. granted to the same John of Yle the 300 marklands which belonged to Reginald the son of Alan, including the lands of Heryce (or Hyrce).⁴ In 1392 John of Yle granted to Reginald his son the island of Herc with the small isles adjacent and the advowson of the churches, and King Robert III. confirmed the grant.⁵ In 1475 the lands of Harris were with the other isles forfeited by John Lord of the Isles; in 1476 they were restored to him by King James III.; in 1478 confirmed to him by that king; and in 1493 again and finally forfeited by the same Lord of the Isles.⁶

The lands of Harris were for centuries held by a family known as Macleod of Glenelg, Harris, or Dunvegane.⁷ The first that seems to have been styled of Harris was William M'Loyd of Glenelg, who appears in record in 1449, 1460, and 1478.⁸ In 1498 King James IV. granted in heritage to Alexander Makeloide, the son and heir of the deceased William John Maklodesoun of Dunvegane, the lands commonly called Ardmanach in Herag of Lewis, with the small isles belonging to them, and other lands, which were formerly held by William Makeloid of John Lord of the Isles, and were forfeited by that lord—for service of ward, relief, and marriage, with the holding of a ship of 26 oars and two ships of 16 oars in peace and in war for the use of the King or his lieutenants when required, and all other due services, reserving to the King the nests of falcons within the lands.⁹ From 1508 to 1547 the same Alexander (styled Crottach, or humpbacked) appears in record.¹⁰ In 1541 appears his son and heir apparent William Makeloid.¹¹ In 1547 Queen Mary granted to Archibald Earl of Ergile the ward of all the lands that belonged to the deceased Alexander M'Clويد of Dunvegane, a grant which of course included the lands of Harris.¹² In 1553 the same queen granted to her chancellor George Earl of Huntly the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Areth (Harris) and all others belonging to the deceased William M'Clويد of Dunvegane.¹³ From that year to the year 1559 the history of Harris is the same as that given of Glenelg.¹⁴ By a contract dated at Dunune in 1560, between Archibald Earl of Ergile and Tormod M'Clويد the son of the deceased Alexander

M'Cloyd of the Herre as principal and Hector Maklane of Doward as chief favourer and tutor of Tormod, the Earl, who had rescued Tormod from the hands of the French, became bound to recover for him his patrimony of Here, Tewedes, and Glenelge, and all other lands; and Tormod became the Earl's man, and bound himself not to marry without his advice—to pay, when established in Herie and Tewedess, to Hectour Maklane the ward and marriage of Herie and the Earl's expenses in his behalf, to be divided between him and the Earl as the latter might arrange—and not in the first instance to pass to the North Isles without the Earl's consent and before causing his friends who might come to him to ratify the contract; in all or any of which conditions if Tormod should fail, he agreed 'to be countit unworthie to bruike ony rowme of ane gentillman for evir in Scotland, bot to be perpetuale defamit,' and to have Hectour Maklane as his enemy.¹ The subsequent history of Harris till 1580 corresponds with that of Glenelg.² In 1584 King James VI. granted to Colin Earl of Ergile the nonentry and other dues of all the property that belonged to Tormond M'Cloyd of Downevagane.³ In 1585 William M'Cloyd was served heir to his father Tormund M'Cloyd of Herres in the lands of Herres called the Ardmannach of Lewes, with the small isles belonging to the same.⁴

In this parish there are numerous vestiges of its early possession by the Northmen, such as round forts, of which the most remarkable is the fort at Borge or Borough in Harris.⁵

S T. K I L D A .

The St. Kilda group of islands, situated about 60 miles due west from the western extremity of Harris, and included in the same parish, consists of St. Kilda (anciently Hirta), its south east promontory called the Dun separated from it by a narrow strait almost dry at low water, and the smaller islands called Lavenish, Soa, Stack Leath, Borrera, and Stack Narnin.⁶ The chief island is indented on the north west by a small bay, and on the east by one of larger size, on the shore of which is the only landing place.⁷ The hill named Connagher rises on the north to the height of 1450 feet above the sea, and southward lies a somewhat lower range called the Mulloch More.⁸

The only notice of the religious history of these islands before the Reformation is furnished by Archdeacon Monro, who in 1549 writes thus—'The inhabitants therof ar simple poor people, scarce learnit in aney religion, bot M'Cloyd of Herry his steward, or he quhom he deputs in sic office, sailes anes in the yeir ther at Midsummer with some chaplaine to baptize bairnes ther, and, if they want a chaplaine, they baptize ther bairns themselves.'⁹ In the end of the following century they observed the festivals of Christmas, Easter, Good Friday, Saint Columba's Day, and All Saints.¹

In 1698 there were in St. Kilda three chapels with cemeteries, namely, Christ's chapel near the village on the east bay, and at a short distance from it and from each other the chapels of Saint Columba and Saint Brinan or Brimmin (probably Brandan).² In 1842 Wilson mentions the churchyard and ruins of the chapel of Saint Mary (apparently the same as the Christ's chapel of Martin) near the village, and on the east bay near the Dun the remains of the chapel of Saint Brimmin.³

In 1698 there was in the village and neighbourhood a number of wells, named Toubirnimbeuy or the well of virtues, Saint Kilder's Well (named from some unknown saint, from whom the island is supposed to have received its later designation), the well of Conirdan, and the Well of Youth.⁴

The earliest notice of the island seems to be that by Fordun, who about 1400 writes of it as 'the isle of Irte, which is agreed to be under the Circius and on the outskirts (marginē) of the world, beyond which there is found no land in these bounds.'⁵ He elsewhere describes it as 'Hirth, the strongest of all the islands,' and as having 'near it an island 20 miles long with wild sheep.'⁶ Monro in 1549 says that Hirta is 'ane maine laiche ile, sa far as is manurit of it, abundant in corne and gressing, namelie for sheipe, for ther ar fairer and greiter sheip ther and larger tailed than ther is in any uther ile about.'⁷ The steward, he says, receives the dues of the land 'in miell and reistit mutton, wyld foullis reistit, and selchis.'⁸ 'This ile of Hirta pertenis of auld to M'Cloyd of Herray.'⁹ In 1633 King Charles I. granted to Archibald Lord Lorne 'all and hail the isle lyand without the hail knowne and inhabited isles of the kingdome of Scotland called Hebrides Insule, and now lately known be the name of and lyand or of whatsomever other name or designatione the same be off,' with all its castles, burghs, and other pertinents, in free regality, with power to erect burghs of barony and parish churches, of which he was then made undoubted heritable patron.¹⁰ About 1700 the rents of St. Kilda were paid to Macleod's steward in down, wool, butter, cheese, cows, horses, fowls, oil, and barley.¹¹ The present yearly rent is £60, payable in 240 stones of feathers and 23 pecks of barley.¹²

The village, situated, as before stated, on the shore of the east bay, contains about 30 houses.¹³

The island or promontory called the Dun is so named from an ancient fort known as the Dun-fir-Bholug.¹⁴ It is perforated by a natural archway, but bears no traces of fortification, except a rude wall crossing it near the extremity.¹⁵

THIS parish appears to have included only the peninsula of Ey or Ui, situated between the Broad Bay (or Loch Tua) on the north and Loch Stornoway on the south.¹⁰ It is now united with a large portion of the ancient parish of Ness, and both together form the modern parish of Stornoway.¹¹ The district of Ui is in general low and moory, with a coast partly rock and partly sand.¹²

In the year 1506 King James IV. presented Sir John Poylson, precentor of Cathanes, to the rectory of Ey in Lewis, when it should be vacant by the irregularity or inhability of John M'Cloid.¹³ In 1534 and 1536 the rector of Ey was Sir Magnus Vaus commissary of Innernys.¹⁴ In 1552 the rector was Sir Donald Munro (probably the archdeacon of the Isles).¹⁵ In 1559 Queen Mary presented Master Lachlan M'Clane to the rectory of the parish church of Nahayis in the isle of Lewis, vacant by the death of Sir John Finlay.¹⁶ In 1561 the parsonage of Eie belonged to the bishop of the Isles.¹⁷

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, stood on the isthmus or narrowest part of the peninsula of Ui, from which it seems to have derived its name.¹⁸ Its ruins and cemetery remain, and enclose the remains of many Macleods, lords of the island, of one of whom, Malcolm the son of Roderick, the tomb still exists.¹⁹

At Garabost there was a chapel, now demolished, dedicated to Saint Cowslan (Constantine).²⁰

At Stornoway was a church dedicated, it is said, to a saint named Lennan.²¹

At the same place stood a priory or cell of Inchaffray, from which it had its first prior.²² It was said to have been the residence of Saint Catan, to contain the remains of its founder and other illustrious men, to be famous for miracles, and to have had so great wealth that it was twice rebuilt after being burned.¹

The island of Lewis, which with Harris formed the Ljodthhus of the Sagas, and the residence of whose lords was the castle of Stornoway, appears in record in 1263, in which year Haco King of Norway came thither to meet Earl Birger, and afterwards touched at it on his expedition against Scotland.² In 1292 the lands of Lodoux were included in the sheriffdom of Skey, then erected by King John Balliol.³ In 1335 Edward Balliol granted in heritage to John of the Isles for his allegiance the isle of Lewethy and other lands—and in 1336 King Edward III. confirmed the grant.⁴ In 1344 King David granted the same lands to the same John, and in his hands they remained in 1367.⁵ In 1382 or 1383 King Robert II. granted to his son Alexander Stewart Earl of Buchan, and to Euphame Lady of Ross, the baronies and Lordship of Sky and Lewis, which Euphame had resigned.⁶ Lewis and the other isles were in 1475 forfeited by John Lord of the Isles, in 1476 restored to him by King James III., in 1478 confirmed to him by that king, and in 1493 again and finally forfeited by the same lord.⁷

The lands of Lewis were held by the Macleods of Lewis, known as the Siol Torquil, first apparently of the Lords of the Isles, and afterwards of the crown. In 1449 a charter of John of Yle is witnessed by Roderic M'Leod of Leoghuis.⁸ In 1461 a charter of the same John is witnessed by Torquell M'Leod of Leoghos.⁹ In 1478 and 1494 another Roderick Makleod of Lewys, and in 1498 another Torquill M'Clويد of the Lewis, appear in record.¹⁰ The same Torquil, having been summoned to appear before the parliaments of 1505 and 1506, to answer especially for the crime of assisting Donald Ila the natural son of Angus of the Isles in his incursions on the inhabitants, and of attempting to make him Lord of the Isles, and not having appeared, was declared to have forfeited his life and property.¹¹ In 1508 (29 April) Andro bishop of Cathnes, Ranald Alansoun of Ylanbigern, and Alexander M'Clويد of Dunvegan, were commissioned by King James IV. to let for five years to sufficient tenants the lands of the Lewys and of Watternes in Sky, which were forfeited by Torquyll M'Clويد of the Lewys.¹² In the same year (7 June) Ranald Alansoun and Alexander Makeloyd received orders from King James to pass to Lewis and Watternes to let the lands, and to take their directions in the matter from Alexander Earl of Huntlie.¹³ In 1511 the same king granted to Malcolm Makloid, the son and heir of Rory M'Clويد, the lands and castle of Lewis and Wattirnes in the Lordship of the Isles with other lands, erected in his favour into the barony and lordship of Lewis, the place and castle of Stornochway to be the chief messuage.¹⁴ In 1515, when the Regent Albany appointed John Makcane of Ardnamurchan his commissioner for reducing to obedience the inhabitants of part of the Highlands and Isles, Malcolm Makeloid of Lewis was one of those excepted.¹ In 1517 Malcolm Makeloid of Lewis again appears in record.² Afterwards, till about the year 1532, the lands and barony of Lewis were illegally held by John M'Cloyd, the son of Torquil and nephew of Malcolm.³ In 1538 (2 April) King James V. granted to Rory M'Cloyd, the son and heir of the deceased Malcolm M'Cloid of the Lewis, the nonentry and other dues of the lands and barony of Lewis from the 30th of June 1511 till a year after the date of the grant.⁴ In 1541 the same king granted to Rodoric M'Cloid of Lewis, and to Barbara Stewart his affianced spouse, the lands, island, and barony of Lewis, with the castle, with other lands, resigned by Rodoric, and then erected anew into the free barony of Lewis.⁵ In 1545 (28 July) the same Rodoric was one of the council of Donald Lord of the Isles, and (17 August) had with Alexander M'Cloid of Dunvegane and forty others a remission from that date to 1 November, that they might go the Regent and Lords of Council on their affairs.⁶ About 1551 Queen Mary commissioned Archibald Earl of Argyle to pursue with his men Rorie M'Leod of the Lewis for 'obtceining' certain persons out of his lands.⁷ In 1555 the same Rorve M'Cloid of the Lewis had a remission for his treasonable intercommuning with various rebels, and for other crimes.⁸ In 1572 King James VI. granted to Torquil M'Cloyd, the son and heir apparent of Rodoric Makeloid of Lewis, and to his male heirs of his body, with remainder to Gillecallum Garwe M'Cloyd of Raisay and his male heirs, and to Torquil's male heirs whomsoever bearing the M'Cloid surname and arms, the lands and barony of Lewis, which Rodoric had resigned, reserving the liferent to Rodoric on condition that he and Torquil should commit no crime against the King.⁹ Lewis was subsequently for many years a subject of contention between different members of the Macleod family, in consequence of which it fell about the year 1597 into the hands of the crown, was afterwards granted to Ludovick Duke of Lennox and other adventurers, and in the beginning of the seventeenth century became the property of Mackenzie of Kintail, afterwards Earl of Seaforth.¹⁰

In 1561 the bishop of the Isles held the land of Skeirachnaheie in Loise, apparently the church lands, or perhaps the whole parish of Ey.¹¹

In 1597 an act of parliament was passed for erecting three burghs and burgh towns in the Highlands and Isles, namely, in Kintyre, Lochaber, and Lewis.¹² The act was not carried into

On the second Wednesday of July a yearly fair is held on a moor in the neighbourhood of the town.³

The castle of Stornochway, as we have seen, appears in record in the year 1511 as the chief messuage of the barony of Lewis.⁴ 'Stearnway,' says a writer of the following century, 'is the principal town whair Macloyd used to reside. In this place is a castell. It lyeth betwixt the parochins of Nes and Hayis.'⁵ About the year 1650 the castle is said to have been dismantled by the soldiers of Cromwell.⁶ Adjoining the town and the modern Seaforth Lodge the ruins of the old castle may still be seen.⁷

In the end of the last century a native of Lewis might be known by his frequent use of the expression Donich-a-voir, by some interpreted 'the great Sabbath,' and by others 'the great St. Dominic.'⁸

Loghur⁹ — St. Columbkil.¹⁰ (Map, No. 40.)

THIS parish consists chiefly of one-half of the widest portion of the island, stretching from Loch Seaforth on the south to Loch Stornoway on the north, the remaining part branching westward and lying between the north shore of Loch Roag and the Barvas Hills.¹¹ It is deeply indented on the east by Loch Seaforth and Loch Erisort, which nearly meet in its centre, and less deeply by Loch Clay, Loch Broolum, Loch Shell, and some smaller arms of the sea. On the west is Loch Carloway. On the western inland border is a fresh-water lake named Langavat, and in the interior are Loch Trialivall and a number of smaller lakes, from all which the district is said to have derived its name.¹² About a half of the parish is level and heathy, but the southern part, of old named the Forest, and said to have abounded with deer, is mountainous.¹³ On the coast both east and west are some small islands.

There appears to be no account of this parish before the Reformation. A writer of the following century says, 'The parish of Loghur is upon the south syd of Steornway, and upon the east syd of the country.'¹⁴

The church, dedicated to Saint Columba, the cemetery of which is still the parish burying-ground, stood upon the island of Saint Colm (the Yl Cholumbkil of Blaeu) in Loch Erisort.¹ The present church, built in 1830, stands at Keose on the point of land between Loch Erisort and Loch Leurbust.²

At Kirvig or Keriwick in the district of Carloway there was a chapel dedicated to Saint Michael.³

On the south east coast lie the Shiant or Holy Isles, on one of which, named Island More, there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary.⁴

In 1590 Torquil M'Cloyd of Lewis granted in liferent to his wife Margaret Nyne Angus Makalexander six davachs of land in the lordship of Lewis, including 20 pennylands of Vallis and 30 pennylands of Lochis; and the grant was confirmed by King James VI, of whom the lands were to be held.⁵

At Down on Loch Carloway there is a circular fort with a double wall of dry stone, about 30 feet in height.⁶

Vye in Lewis⁷—Oig, Wig⁸—Wuig, Wuicgk⁹—Vyg.¹⁰ (Map, No. 41.)

THIS parish includes that portion of Lewis lying west of the parish of Lochs between Loch Resort on the south and Loch Roag on the north, with a small portion north of the latter; the islands of Bernera, Pabbay, Vaxay, Viavore, Malista, and others upon the south and west; and at the distance of about 20 miles to the westward the islands called the Flannan or Holy Isles or the Seven Hunters. It is the most mountainous part of Lewis, and abounds with fresh-water lakes; and its coast, in general flat, is indented by Loch Roag or its branches, Loch Bernera, Little Loch Roag, and the bay of Uig.¹¹

The 'parochin Vye in Lewis' is mentioned by Archdeacon Monro in 1549.¹² A deed executed by Rorie M'Cloid of the Lewes in 1573 is subscribed in his name by Ranald Anguson parson of Oig.¹³ The parish of Wuig is briefly mentioned by a writer of the following century.¹⁴

The church, said to have been dedicated to Saint Christopher, seems to have stood at Balnakile on the north of the Bay of Uig.¹⁵ A church, built in 1829, stands near the same place.¹⁶

At Molista are the remains of a religious building (styled by Martin the church of Saint Pharaer in Kaerness), locally believed to have been a nunnery, and known by the name Bail-in-cailechin-dow or Teagh-na-n-cailechan-dou, the town or house of the black old women.¹

In Bernera was a chapel apparently dedicated to Saint Macra the virgin; in little Bernera were two, dedicated respectively to Saint Donan and Saint Michael; and in Pabbay there was one dedicated to Saint Peter.²

‘Furth 50 myle in the occident seas,’ says Archdeacon Monro, ‘from the coste of the parochin Vye in Lewis, towards the west north west, lyes the seven iles of Flanayn, claid with girth and haly iles.’³ The Flannan Isles are mentioned also by Buchanan as the Sacred or Sanctuary Islands.⁴ Martin about 1700 says that the largest of these islands, named Island More, had the ruins of a chapel dedicated to Saint Flannan.⁵ These ruins are still to be seen.⁶

In the year 1590 Torquil M’Cloyd of Lewis granted in liferent to Margaret Nyne Angus Makalexander his wife six davachs of land in the lordship of Lewis, including 20 pennylands of Vge, to be held of King James VI., who in the same year confirmed the grant.⁷

Of the Flannan Isles above noticed Archdeacon Monro in 1549 further observes, ‘Wery natural gressing within thir saids iles; infinit wyld scheipe therein, quhilk na man knawes to quhom the said scheepe apperteins within them that liues this day of the countrymen; bot M’Cloyd of the Lewis at certain tymes in the yeire sends men in and hundis, and slayes maney of thir sheeipe. The flesche of thir sheipe cannot be eattin be honest men for fatnesse, for ther is no fleche one them, bot all quhyte lyke talloune, and it wery wylde gustit lykwayes. The saids iles are noudar manurit nor inhabit, bot full of greine heigh hills full of wyld sheepe in tha seven iles forsaid, quhilks may not be outrinne. They pertaine to M’Cloyd of the Lewis.’⁸

Besides these isles the archdeacon enumerates on the same coast Garvellan, Lambay, Fladay, Kealsay, Berneray-beg, Berneray-moir, Kertay, Buyabeg, Buyamojr, Vaxay, Pabay, Sigrain-moir-nagoinein, and Sigrainbeg, all belonging to M’Cloyd of the Lewis.⁹

Of the isle of Pabay he observes that it is ‘an isle maire nore ane myle lange, ane fruitfull and fertile mayne ile, full of corne and scheipe, quherein ther was a kirke, quherein also M’Cloyd of the Lewis usit to dwell quhen he wald be quyeit or ~~was~~ fearit.’¹⁰ A writer of the following century says, ‘The ordinar place of Macloyd’s residence in this countrey was Pappa, ane island within the sea.’¹¹

In 1831 a number of ancient chessmen was found among the sands of the bay of Uig, part of which are now preserved in the British Museum.¹²

Church of Our Lady in Barwas³ — Church of Saint Mary in Barvas.⁴ (Map, No. 42.)

THIS parish includes that portion of the north west coast of Lewis which lies between the districts of Carloway on the south and Ness on the north. It is almost a continuous tract of moorland studded with small lakes, except on the shore, where it is cultivated.⁵ Its coast is rocky and inaccessible except at four small bays.⁶

In 1536 King James V. presented Master Rodoric Farquhar Hectorissone to several churches vacant by the decease of Master Mertin M'Gilmertyne, including the rectory of the church of Our Lady in Barwas in the Leous.⁷ The rectory was apparently one of the four 'parochie kirkes' of Lewis mentioned by Archdeacon Monro in 1549.⁸

The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, seems to have always stood on Barvas bay, where the present church, built in 1800, and since repaired, also stands.⁹

Besides the church of Saint Mary there were in this parish the church of Saint Bride in Borve, the church of Saint Peter in Shadir, the church of Saint John the Baptist in Brogir, and the church of Saint Kieran in Lianishadir, one of which was destroyed by the encroachment of the sea or the drifting of sand, and the rest of which are ruinous.¹⁰

In the village of Shadir is Saint Andrew's well, believed to have miraculous power.¹¹

In 1590 Torquil M'Cloyd of Lewis granted in liferent to his wife Margaret Nyne Angus Makalexander six davachs of land in the lordship of Lewis, including 20 pennylands of Broagir and 20 pennylands of Gallis, to be held of King James VI., who confirmed the grant.¹²

Among the antiquities of Barvas are enumerated several ancient duns, a number of cairns, and a large erect stone 18 feet high, named Clach-an-drushel, supposed to commemorate a battle.¹³

THIS parish appears to have included the district still known as Ness (now a parish called Cross), the greater part of the modern parish of Stornoway, which includes two districts, Stornoway and Gress, some small islands on the coast, and two at some distance in the Northern Sea.³ Its general character is that of a district not much elevated, with numerous small fresh-water lakes, and a much indented coast in general rocky but partly formed of sand.⁴

Previously to the Reformation we have apparently no mention of this parish but that by Archdeacon Monro in 1549 already cited.⁵ Subsequently to that event it seems to occur only once in record, and that only in the manuscript above quoted.⁶

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Peter, stood either at Habost or at Swainbost on the north coast of the parish.⁷ At one of these two places there was a church dedicated to Saint Thomas.⁸ The present parliamentary or parish church stands at South Galson on the north-west coast, where of old stood the church of the Holy Cross.⁹

Besides these there were in Eoroby the church of Saint Mulvay (Molios or Mologus?) and the church of Saint Ronan (the former of which seems to have been known as Teampull-moir, the great temple); the church of Saint Clement in North Dell; the church of Saint Aula in Gress; the church of Saint Michael in Tolsta; and the church of Saint Colm in Garien.¹⁰

'At the north poynt of Lewis,' says Archdeacon Monro, 'there is a litle ile callit the Pigmeis Ile, with ane litle kirke in it of ther auen handey warke. Within this kirke the ancients of that countrey of the Lewis sayes that the saids Pigmeis hes bein eirdit thair. Maney men of diuers countres hes deluit vpe deiplie the flure of the litle kirke, and I myselve amanges the leaue, and hes found in it deipe vnder the erthe certaine baines and round heads of wonderful litle quantity, alledgit to be the baines of the saids Pigmeis, quhilk may be lykly according to sundry histories that wee reid of the Pigmeis; bot I leaue this far of it to the ancients of the Lewis. This ile pertinns to M'Cloyd of the Lewis.'¹¹ Buchanan about 1577 repeats the account thus given by Monro.¹² Blaeu marks the island as Ylen Dunibeg, and places a chapel in it.¹³

In the island of Rona, about 50 miles north from the Butt of Lewis, are the ruins of a chapel dedicated to Saint Ronan.¹ 'Within this isle,' says Monro, 'there is ane chapell callit St. Ronay's chapell, into quhilk chapell, as the ancient of the country alledges, they leave an spaid and ane shuil quhen any man dies, and upon the morrow findes the place of the grave markit with an spaid, as they alledge.'² In this matter also Monro is implicitly followed by Buchanan.³ Sir George Mackenzie in the seventeenth century says, 'There is a chappel in the midst of the isle, where they meet twice or thrice a day. One of the families is hereditary beddall, and the master of that stands at the altar and prayeth, the rest kneel upon their knees and join with him.'⁴

In 1590 King James VI. confirmed a charter of Torquil M'Cloyd of Lewis, granting in liferent to Margaret Nyne Angus Makalexander his wife six davaechs of land in the lordship of Lewis on the north side of the island, including the ten pennylands of Tolstaff, to be held of the King.⁵

'Towards the north northeist from Lewis,' says Archdeacon Monro in 1549, 'three score myles of sea lyes ane litle ile callit Ronay, laiche maine lande, inhabit and manurit be simple people scant of ony religione. This ile is uther haffe myle lange and haffe myle braide; abundance of corne growes on it by delving only, abundance of natural claver gerse for sheipe. There is an certain number of ky and sheipe ordainit for this ile be ther awin ald right, extending to sa maney as may be sustainit upon the said gerssing; and the countrey is so fertill of gerssing that the superexerescens of the said ky and schiepe baith feidis them in flesche and als payes ther dewties with the samen for the maist pairt. Within this ile there is sic faire quhyte beir meil made like flour, and, quhen they flay ther sheipe, they flay them belly-flaught, and stuffes ther skins fresche of the beir meil, and send ther dewties be a servant of M'Cloyd of Lewis, with certain reistit muttan and mony reistit foulis.'⁶ Sir George Mackenzie in the following century gives a somewhat similar account of Rona, and adds, 'The island of Rona hath for many generations been inhabited by five families, which seldom exceed thirty souls in all. They have a kind of commonwealth among them in so far, if any of them have more children than another, he that hath fewer taketh from the other what makes his number equal.'⁷

The rock or island called Sulisker, likewise belonging to this parish, and situated about sixteen miles west from Rona, is thus described by Monro—'Be sextene myle of sea to this ile (Rona) towards the west lyes ane ile callit Suliskeray, ane myle lang, without gresse or heddir, with heighe blacke craigges and blacke fouge there vpon pairt of them. KINTAIL.

ABOUT the middle of the last century Kintail was divided into two parishes, Kintail and Glensheil.⁵

The old and extensive parish of Kintail is bounded on the south by Glenelg, runs northward along the boundary between Inverness and Ross as far as Loch Monar, and has on the north west the water of Long and the salt-water lochs Lochlong and Lochalsh. It is deeply indented by Loch Duich, a salt-water loch running southward from the junction of the former two. The district is entirely mountainous, and attains its greatest height in Tullochard on the north of Loch Duich.⁶ Its chief valleys are Glensheil, Glenlichd, and Glenelchaig.⁷

There appears to be no notice of this church before the Reformation, except its entry in the Libellus Taxationum.⁸ It was a common church of the canons of Ross. In 1574 King James VI. presented John Murchesoun 'to the haille commoun kirk baith personage and vicarage of Kintale.'⁹ In 1582 the same king presented Donald Murchesoun to the same church, then vacant by the demission of John Murchesoun.¹⁰

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Duthace bishop of Ross, stood at Kilduich at the head of Loch Duich.¹¹ It was burned in 1719, and has been since repaired or rebuilt.¹² The church of Glensheil was built in 1758 east of Loch Duich on the estate of Letterfean.¹³

In Baiamund's Roll the church is rated at 53s. 4d.; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £26, 13s. 4.¹⁴ In 1574 Mr. John Murchesoun reader at Kintale had £18 as his yearly stipend.¹⁵

The lands of Kintail are said to have been granted to Colin an Irishman of the family of Fitzgerald by King Alexander III. for service done at the battle of Largs. The charter is not extant and its genuineness has been doubted.¹⁶ In 1292 the sheriffdom of Skey, erected by King John Balliol, included the lands of the Earl of Ros in North Argail, a district which comprehended

Kintail and several other large parishes in Ross.¹ Between 1306 and 1329 King Robert Bruce confirmed to the Earl of Ross all his lands, including North Argyle (Borealis Ergadia).² In 1342 William Earl of Ross, the son and heir of the deceased Hugh Earl of Ross, granted to Reginald the son of Roderic (Ranald Rorisonne) of the Isles the ten davachs (or ten pennylands) of Kintale in North Argyle.³ The grant was afterwards confirmed by King David II.⁴ About the year 1346 Ranald was succeeded by his sister Amie the wife of John of Isla.⁵ Between the years 1362 and 1372 William Earl of Ross, the son and heir of the deceased Hugh Earl of Ross, exchanged with his brother Hugh of Rosse lord of Fylorth and his heirs his lands of all Ergile, with the castle of Elandonan, for Hugh's lands in Buchan.⁶

In 1463 the lands of Kintail were held by Alexander Mackenzie.⁷ Kenneth his son, who succeeded him, was dead before 1493, and was succeeded by his son Kenneth Oig.⁸ In 1509 King James IV. granted to John Makkenze of Keantalle [the brother of Kenneth Oig] the 40 marklands of Keantalle, namely, the davach of Cumissaig, the davach of Letterfearn, the davach of Gleanselle, the davach of Glenlik, the davach of Letterchall, the two davachs of Croo, and three davachs between the water of Keppach and the water of Lwyng, with the castle and fortalice of Eleandonnan, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernis, with other lands in Ross, which John had resigned, and which the King then erected into the barony of Eleandonnan.⁹ In 1530 King James V. granted to James Grant of Freuchy and Johne M'Kinze of Kintale liberty to go to any part of the realm on their lawful business.¹⁰ In 1532, 1538, and 1540 the same John M'Kenich of Kintail appears in record.¹¹ In 1542 King James V. granted to John Mackenzie of Kintail the waste lands of Monar, lying between the water of Gleneak on the north, the top or summit of Landovir on the south, the torrent of Towmuk and Inchelochill on the east, and the water of Bernis running into the water of Long on the west—and also the waste lands of lie Ned, lying between Loch Boyne on the north, Loch Tresk on the south, lie Ballach on the west, and Dawelach on the east—in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes—lands which were never in the King's rental and never yielded any revenue—for the yearly payment of £4 to the King as Earl of Ross.¹² In 1543 Queen Mary granted to Kenneth Mackenze of Kintail and Isabel Stewart his wife the lands of Auchnaceyric, Lakachane, Strome-ne-mowklach, Kilkinterne, the two Rateganis, Torlousicht, Auchnashellicht, Auchnagart, Auchewrane, lie Knokfreith, Aucharskelane, and

If the charter be genuine, it is not of Alexander III. or connected with the battle of Largs (1263). Two of the witnesses, Andrew bishop of Moray and Henry de Balliol chamberlain, would correspond with the 16th year of Alexander II. The writers of the family history of the Mackenzies assert also charters of David II. (1360) and of Robert II. (1380) to 'Murdo filius Kennethi de Kintail,' but without furnishing any description or means of testing their authenticity. No such charters are recorded.

Malegane, in the lordship of Kintail, and other lands in Ross, extending in all to 36 marks, which he had resigned.¹ In 1551 the same queen granted to John M'Kenze of Kintail and Kenzeoch M'Kenze his son and apparent heir a remission for the violent taking of John Hectour M'Kenzesone of Garlouch, Doull Hectoursone, and John Towach Hectoursone, and for keeping them in prison, 'vsurpand thairthrow our Souerane Ladyis autorite.'² In 1554 there appear in record John Mackenze of Kintaile and his son and heir apparent Kenneth Mackenze of Brahan (apparently the same persons that appear in 1551).³ In 1562 there appears in record Kenzeoch M'Kinzie of Kintail, apparently the heir of John.⁴ In 1569 the same Kenzeoch was heir in remainder to the chapel lands of Apilerocce, then granted by Sir William Stewart the chaplain to Rory Makkangze and his heirs male.⁵ In 1570 King James VI. granted to Coline Makcainze, the son and apparent heir of the deceased Canzeoch Makecainze of Kintail, permission to be served heir in his minority to all the lands and rents in the sheriffdom of Innernes in which his father died last vest and seised, provided that his entry thus should not prejudice the King or those who held of him the ward and relief of the lands.⁶ In 1572 the same king confirmed a grant made by Colin Makecanze of Kintail to Barbara Graunt his affianced spouse, in fulfilment of a contract between him and John Grant of Frewelie dated 25 April 1571, of his lands of Climbo, Keppach, and Ballichon, Mekle Innerrenned, Devisduan Beg, Litill Innerrenned, Devisduan Moir, Auchadrein, Kirktoon, Ardtulloch, Roroch, Quhissill, Tullyeh, Derewall and Nvik, Incherro, Morowoch, Glenlik, Innersell and Nuik, Achazarge, Kinloch-beancharan, and Innerchouray, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes.⁷ In 1574 the same Colin was served heir to his father Kenneth M'Keinzie in the davach of Lettirfernane, the davach of Glenshall, and other lands, in the barony of Ellendonane, of the old extent of 5 marks.⁸ In 1586 King James VI. granted a remission to Colin M'Kainzie of Kintail and Rodoric M'Kainzie of Auchterfailie his brother for being art and part in the cruel murder of Rodoric M'Allester in Stroll, Gorrie M'Allester his brother in Stroncroag, Ronnald M'Gorrie the son of the latter—John Roy M'Allane V'Allester in Peitnean, John Dow M'Allane V'Allester in Kirktoon of Lochearroun, Alexander M'Allanroy, seruitors of the deceased Rodoric—Sir John Monro in Lochbrume, John Monro his son, John Monro Hucheoun—and the rest of their accomplices, under silence of night upon the lands of Ardmanichtyke (or Ardnaehfaich), Dalmartene, Kirktoon of Lochearroun, Blahat, and other parts within the baronies of Lochearroun, Lochbrume, Ros, and Kessane, in the sheriffdom of Innernes; and for all other past crimes, except treason against the King's person, and the murder of his father, grandfather, and regent.⁹ In 1633 George M'Keinzie was served heir male to his brother Colin Earl of Seaforth, Lord M'Keinzie of Kintail, in the lands and barony of Ellendonan, including the lands of Kintail, namely, the davach of Coysag, the davach of Letterfairne, the davach of Glenlick, the davach of Glenscheill, the davach of Lettirchoull, the two davachs of Croo, and three davachs between the water of Keppach and the water of Luing, with other lands, together of the old extent of £20.¹ In 1669 Colin Earl of Balcarras was served heir to his father Earl Alexander in the barony of Elandonan or Kintail, including Kintail, Lochbroome, Lochals, Lochcarrone, Kessurine, and other lands in Ross.²

Near the mouth of Loch Long is a small village named Dornie.³

Near the village, on a rock insulated at high water, are the ruins of the ancient fortress of Ellandonan, now known as Castle Dounan.⁴ It is believed to have been built by King Alexander II. or III. as a place of defence against the Danes or Norwegians.⁵ In 1331 Randolph Earl of Moray, then Warden of Scotland, despatched his crowner to Elandonan to prepare the castle for his reception, and to arrest 'mysdoaris,' fifty of whom that officer put to death, and placed their heads on the top of the castle walls.⁶ In 1350 William Earl of Ross and lord of Sky dates a charter at Elandonan, and about the same period the castle was included in an exchange of his lands in Ergile with his brother Hugh for the latter's lands in Buchan.⁷ Fordun about 1400 mentions Elandonan as one of the insule lacuales with a castle.⁸ In 1503 Alexander Earl of Huntly undertook to reduce the castles which were considered 'rycht necessar for the danting of the Ilis,' especially 'the Strome and Alanedonane,' and to furnish or raise men to keep them when reduced, King James IV. engaging to provide a ship with artillery for the purpose.⁹ In 1509 that king, as before stated, granted the castle to John Makkenze with the lands of Kintail.¹⁰ In 1539 Donald Gorme of Sleat and his allies, after laying waste Trouterness in Sky and Kenlochow in Ross, attempted to take the castle of Elandonan, but, Donald being killed by an arrow shot from the walls, the attempt failed.¹¹ In 1541 King James V. granted a remission to Donald's accomplices, namely, Archibald Ilis alias Archibald the Clerk, Alexander M'Conill Gallich, John Dow Donaldsoun, Neil M'Ewin M'Lauchlane, Donald M'Ewin M'Lauchlane, Niel M'Ewin M'Kerlich, Donald M'Anguis M'Ane M'Gillemartene, Alexander M'Breif, Finlay M'Quene, Tarmot Ger, Patrik M'Conill Meill, Angus the Clerk, Gillereoch M'Queane, Donald Og, John Glas Gow, Ewin M'Kynnane Murchew, Rodoric Mantochsoun, Donald Dow M'Gillespe, Hector Cam, Donald M'Ane Roy, John Bane, Finlay M'Ferquhersoun, Donald Boreoch M'Clويد, Niel Cuke, Donald Keill Banaldsoun, Gillebreid M'Gilleangane, Gillecallum M'Federis, and his brother Peter M'Federis, for their treasonable burning of the castle of Allanedonnand and of the boats there, for the 'hereschip' of Kenlochow and Trouteness, and for all past actions except treason against the King's person.¹² 'The castell of Ylen Donen,' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'is composed of a strong and fair dungeon upon a rock, with another tower compasd with a fair barmkin wall, with orchards and trees, all within ane yland of the lenth of twa pair of butts almost round. It is said that of old that castel consisted of seven towers.¹ It is marked by Blaeu as Chastel Ylen Donen.² It was destroyed by a ship of war in 1719, subsequently to a battle fought in Glensheil between the royal troops and those of the Pretender.³ One side of the tower or keep, which was 80 feet in height, and ruins of the other buildings remain.⁴

Near the manse of Kintail stood in 1790 Dounan Diarmod, a circular fort of stone 20 feet high and 20 feet wide.⁵

Opposite Ellandonan on the coast of Letterfearn are the remains of a circular dun named Castle Gruagach, of which the walls are 9 feet in thickness, and the internal diameter is 25 feet.⁶

Lochelch⁷ — Lochelsche⁸ — Clachan Lochalse⁹ — Lochals¹⁰ — Lochallis¹¹ — Kilchoen in Lochaelsh¹² — Kilchoen¹³ — Lochailse.¹⁴ (Map, No. 2.)

THIS parish includes a long strip of land stretching from south west to north east, the southern portion forming a peninsula having Lochcarron on the north, and Lochalsh, Lochduich, and Lochlong on the south.¹⁵ The northern and inland part is mountainous.¹⁶

We are informed by the Aberdeen Breviary that Saint Congan (about A. D. 600), having left Ireland with his sister Saint Kentigerna and her sons, Felan, Furseus, and Vlean, landed at Lochelch in North Argyle, where he appears to have died, and where Saint Felan his nephew afterwards built a church and dedicated it to Saint Congan.¹⁷ The subsequent history of the church previously to the Reformation seems to be unknown, with the exception of the fact that it was latterly a common church of the canons of Ross. In 1569 King James VI. presented Alexander Fraser or Moir to the parsonage of Lochelsche, 'vakand as ane commoun kirk of Ros.'¹⁸ In 1574 the same Alexander was reader at Lochelshe and Lochcarron.¹⁹ In 1576 King James confirmed a grant by John bishop of the Isles to the deceased Angus Mackallister of Glengarrie of a markland of Clachan Lochalse.²⁰ In 1582 the same king presented Master Murdo Murchesoun to the parsonage of Lochals and Lochcarran (then apparently united), vacant by the decease of Alexander M'Gruder.²¹

The church, dedicated to Saint Congan, stood at Kilchoan on the east shore of Lochalsh.¹ The present building was erected in 1641.² Saint Congan was commemorated on the 20th of February.³

In 1574 the reader at Lochelsche had for his stipend 'the hail commoun kirk of Lochelsche, baith personaige and vicaraige,' the value of which however is not stated.⁴

The land of Lochalsh, as part of North Argyle, was included among the lands of the Earl of Ros, in 1292 erected with others by King John Balliol into the sheriffdom of Skey.⁵ Between 1306 and 1314 also it was the property of the Earl of Ross.⁶

In 1449 the lands of Lochalche were held by Celestine the brother of John Lord of the Isles, styled Celestine of the Isles of Lochalche.⁷ The same Celestine appears in record in 1461, 1463, 1464, and 1472.⁸ In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted the lands of Lochalsche and others in Ross to his brother Celestine, and to his heirs by his wife Finvola the daughter of Lachlan Macgilleone of Dowart, with remainder to his heirs by any other wife (whom failing the lands were to revert to the Earl), for yearly payment of six pennies blench ferme.⁹ In 1464 King James III. confirmed the grant.¹⁰ Celestine died in 1473, and was succeeded by his son Alexander, who appears in record in 1492, 1494, and 1495 as Alexander of the Isles of Lochalch.¹¹ Alexander was dead in 1498, and his son Donald, known as Donald Galda, and also as Sir Donald of the Isles of Lochalch, held the lands of Lochalch till about the year 1518, and during the latter part of that period was noted for his turbulence.¹² In 1517 John Duke of Albany Regent appointed Colin Earl of Argyle, for three years or more according to the Regent's pleasure, lieutenant of the Isles and of certain other lands including Lochalche, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants.¹³ Sir Donald of Lochalche died about the year 1518, and left no male heir.¹⁴ In 1539 King James V. granted anew to Alexander M'Kane M'Alister of Glengarre and Margaret Ylis his wife in life rent, and to Angus M'Alister their son and apparent heir in heritage, the half of the lands of Lochelch, which with other lands in Ross had been resigned by Margaret Ylis (the sister and heiress of Sir Donald).¹⁵ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to James Grant of Freuchy, assignee of his tenants, the liferent of the quarter davach of Inchenarne and Ard-marrach, the quarter davach of Sellach, the quarter davach of Connachry, the quarter davach of Ardelly, the quarter davach of Ardach and Auchtatorlyne, the half quarter davach of Nosti, the quarter davach of Rewrag, the half davach of Ballimchroy, the half davach of Auchnahowgyeh, the quarter davach of Cragy and Harsa, and the quarter davach of Durris, of the lands of

Locheleh, of the old extent of 12 marks, the liferent of which belonged to Alaster M'Keane M'Alaster of Glengawrie; and also the hereditary fee of the same 12 marklands, which belonged in heritage to Angus the son and heir apparent of Alaster—which lands with others held of the Queen for service of ward and relief had been appraised for the sum of £10,770, 13s. 4d. in favour of James Grant for satisfaction of a 'spulzie' committed by Alaster, Angus, and their accomplices.¹ In 1554 (3 April) the same queen granted to John Grant, the son and heir of the deceased James Grant of Fruchquhy, the relief of the same lands and others which belonged to him in heritage.² In the same year (24 November) Thomas Dingwell of Kildun sold the same half of the lands of Lochelsehe to Kenzeth Mackenze of Brahan, the son and heir apparent of John Mackenze of Kintaille, to whom Queen Mary granted a crown charter of the lands.³

In 1492 Alexander of the Isles of Lochaleh granted to Ewin the son of Alan, captain of Clancamroun, Achenadariach and Lunde of the old extent of two marks; Fairnamore, two marks; Culwoyr and Aehmoir, two marks; Fayrinneveg and Fudanamine, and Acheache, two marks; Acheehoyneleich and Brayeintraye, two marks; Culthnok, Aचनालोच, Blaregarwe, and Acheae, two marks; Awnernis and Wochterory, two marks; in the lordship of Lochaleh.⁴ In 1495 King James IV. confirmed the grant.⁵ In 1528 the same 14 marklands were resigned by Ewin Alansoun of Lochiell, and for his good service King James V. erected them and others in his favour into the barony of Lochiell.⁶ In 1539 Ewin again resigned the lands of the barony, including the 14 marklands of Lochaleh, and the whole were then granted anew by King James to Ewin Allansoun in liferent, and to his nephew Ewin Cammeroun in heritage.⁷ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to John Grant of Culcabok 5 marklands in Lochelehe (part of the above 14), namely, the half davach of Achnadarrach and Lundy, the half davach of Fernagmoir, and the quarter davach of Farnagbeg, Fynnyman, and Acheeroy, which belonged to Ewin Donaldsoun the nephew and heir of Ewin Alansoun, were held of the Queen by service of ward and relief, and with other lands were appraised in favour of John Grant for the sum of £758, 12s. 1d. as satisfaction for a 'spulzie' committed by Ewin and others.⁸ In the same year the remaining 9 of the 14 marklands, namely, the half of the half davach commonly called the davach of Fernabeg, Finneman, and Acheeroy, the half davach of Auchowlycht and Briatorich, the half davach of Cuthok, Aचनालोच, and Blairgarrok, the half davach of Avarynnis, Ochtiririe, and Achich, and the half davach of Auchmoir and Killochir which belonged in heritage to the same Ewin Donaldsoun, the nephew and heir of Ewin Alansoun of Lochelsch, were in the same manner and for the same cause appraised in favour of James Grant of Freuehy, to whom, as above stated, the 12 marklands called the half of Lochalsh were at the same time appraised.⁹ In 1572 King James VI. granted to John Grant of Carron a crown charter of 5 marklands in Lochelehe, which were alienated to him in heritage by John Grant of Culcabok,

LOHCARRON.

Lochcarroun⁵—Lochcarran⁶—Chombrich Mulrui⁷—Clachan Mulrui.⁸

THIS parish includes a long narrow strip of hilly country extending about five miles north-west from the river Carron and the arm of the sea called Lochcarron, from which it is named, together with some detached lands lying within the parish of Applecross. On the coast are a few islands.

Of the church there seems to be no notice till after the Reformation. In 1574 Alexander Fraser or Moir officiated as reader at Lochelsche and Lochcarroun.⁹ In 1582 King James VI. presented Master Murdo Murchesoun to the parsonage of Lochals and Lochcarran, vacant by the decease of Alexander M'Gruder.¹⁰

The church, dedicated to Saint Malrube, seems to have always stood on its present site near the head of Lochcarron on its north-west shore.¹¹ The present church was built in 1751.¹²

Near Attadale are two caves, styled by the inhabitants Uagh Ashoil (the stranger's cave), and in their immediate neighbourhood a place of worship and a burying-ground.¹³

The district of Lohecarron, as part of the lands of the Earl of Ross in North Argyle, was included in the sheriffdom of Skey erected in 1292 by King John Balliol.¹ Between 1306 and 1329 King Robert Bruce confirmed to the Earl of Ross all his lands, which included North Argyle, and among these expressly the lands of Tarrodall and others, apparently in Lohecarron.²

In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted the lands of Lochcarryn, Torvirtayne, Kischernis, and others in Ross to his brother Celestine of the Isles, and to his heirs by Finvola the daughter of Lachlan Macgilleone of Dowart, with remainder to his heirs by any other wife, on whose failure the lands were to revert to the Earl.³ In 1464 King James IV. confirmed the grant.⁴ In 1517 John Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland appointed Colin Earl of Argyle, for three years or more at the Regent's pleasure, lieutenant of the Isles and of certain other lands including Lochgarron and Kissirne, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants.⁵

In 1472 Celestine of the Isles, lord of Lochalch, granted to Alan the son of Donald Duff captain of Clancamroun, and to his heirs, with remainder to the male heirs of Ewin the son of Donald, the brother of Alan, the constabulary of the castle of Strome and the 12 marklands of Kysryner (Kishorn) in the lordship and earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, for the maintenance and faithful keeping of the castle.⁶ In 1492 Alexander of the Isles of Lochalch (the son of Celestine) granted to Ewin the son of Alan, captain of Clancamroun, 20s. of Stromecarranaeh, 20s. of Slomba, 10s. of the quarter of Dovne, and 30s. of the three quarters of Achinche, in the lordship of Locharrane and earldom of Ross.⁷ In 1495 the grant was confirmed by King James IV.⁸ In 1528 Ewin Alansoun of Lochiell resigned the same lands and constabulary of Stroun, which King James V. then granted anew to him with other lands, which for his good service he erected in his favour into the barony of Lochiell.⁹ In 1539 (6 March) the same king granted to Alexander M'Cane M'Alister of Glengarre and Margaret Ylis his wife in liferent, and to their son and apparent heir Angus M'Alister in heritage, the castle, fortalice, and manor of the lands of Strome, and half of the lands of Lochearne and other lands, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys, which were resigned by Margaret Ylis.¹⁰ In the same year (11 April) Ewin Allansoun resigned the lands and barony of Lochiell, including the lands and castle granted to him in 1528, which King James then granted anew to him in liferent, and to his nephew Ewin Cammeroun in heritage.¹¹ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to George Earl of Huntlie the escheat of certain lands which belonged in heritage to Ewin Allansoun of Lochiell, and among these the lands of Strom and Kesrom in the earldom of Ross.¹² In 1548 the same queen granted to John Grant of Culcabok the liferent of the quarter davach of Auchinschallauch, the quarter davach of Dalmartyne, and the half davach of Torredaill, in Locharron, extending to $2\frac{1}{2}$ marks old extent, and valued at 359 marks 3 shillings and 8 pence, belonging to Alestar M'Kaane M'Alestar; and also the heritage of the same $2\frac{1}{2}$ marklands, belonging to Angus the son and apparent heir of Alestar; which were held of the Queen by service of ward and relief, and were with other lands appraised in favour of John Grant for satisfaction of a 'spulzie' committed by Alestar, Angus, and their accomplices.¹ In the same year Queen Mary granted to James Grant of Frouchy the liferent of the quarter davach of Dalquharrane, the half quarter davach of Ruboachane, and the half davach of Attadale, together of the old extent of 4 marks 20 pence, of the lands of Locharrone, belonging to the same Alestar; the heritage of the same lands belonging to his son Angus; and 13 marklands old extent of Kessern, namely, the davach of Achbane, the davach of Auchnaereak, the davach of Strome castell, Ardnagald, Ardnanskene, and Bleyat, and the quarter davach of Tannachtan, with the castle of Strome and the office of constable of the same, belonging in heritage to Ewin Donaldsoun the nephew and heir of Ewin Alansoun of Lochelsch; all which with other lands held of the Queen had been appraised in favour of James Grant for the same reason as the lands granted to John Grant.² In 1553 the Queen granted to George Earl of Huntly the lands of Strome and Kesrome, which had been forfeited by Ewin Allansoun of Lochiell for the crimes of treason and lese majesty.³ In 1554 she granted to John Grant, the son and heir of the deceased James Grant of Fruchquhy, the relief of the lands of Kessarne, Lochquharrone, and others, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, which belonged to him in heritage.⁴ In 1572 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the deceased John Grant of Culcabok, alienating in heritage to John Grant of Carron the $2\frac{1}{2}$ marklands of Lochcarron granted to the former by Queen Mary in 1548.⁵ In 1575 (6 March) the same king granted to Alexander Bayne of Tulch and Anne Fraser his wife, and their heirs, with remainder to Alexander's heirs whomsoever, a crown charter of half the lands of Tovirtane with the salmon fishings in salt water and fresh, sold to them by Thomas Dingwell of Kildun.⁶ In the same year (6 May) he granted in heritage to John Dingwell of Kildun, the son and heir of the deceased Thomas Dingwell of Kildun, the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Lochcarron, Kisyrne, and the fortalice of Strome, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, in the King's hands since the decease of Thomas Dingwell in 1573, or of the last lawful possessor.⁷ In the same year (5 November) he granted to Alexander Bane of Tullycht the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Torerdane and Dalmartene in the sheriffdom of Innernes, in the hands of the crown since the decease of Jonet and Margaret Ilis, sisters and heiresses of those lands, or since the death of the last lawful possessor.⁸ In 1583 the same king granted to Donald M'Angus M'Allester of Glengarrie the nonentry and other dues of £20 lands in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, including 10 shillinglands of the Dun, 10s. of Slowmba, 20s. of Stroyincaroinche, 30s. of Midstroyme, Strome castell, and Rerog, 40s. of Achintrait, 40s. of Achwanye, 10s. of Safnachan,

10s. of Blyat, 20s. of Rassor, and 10s. of Resser, in the King's hands since the decease of Sir Donald Ylis of Lochels, Donald M'Allester's predecessor and 'guidame's' brother.¹ In 1584 King James confirmed a charter by John Dingwall of Kildun alienating to Colin M'Kainzie of Kintail and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever bearing his surname and arms, the half of the lands of Aehnesellache and Coulone the half of of Edderdaeharrane, the half of Attadill, the half of Rowborchan, the half of Braelache and Dalmartein, held in feu by the deceased Robert Bane, with fishings in salt water and fresh, in the barony of Locherarne, earldom of Ros, and sheriffdom of Innernes.² In the same year Donald M'Angus M'Alister of Glengarric was served heir to his grandmother Margaret of Ilis in half of the lands of Auehnell, half of the lands of Arimachlag, half of the lands of Torredone with the fishings, and half of the lands of Auchinsellach, in Lochcarren, of the old extent of 53s. 4d.³ In 1611 John Grant of Glenmoristoun was served heir to his grandfather John Grant of Culceabock in 2½ marklands of Lochcarron (as in 1548 and 1572), of the old extent of 33s. 4d.⁴

The castle of Strome or Strone, as stated above, appears in record in the years 1472, 1528, 1539, 1548, 1575, and 1633.⁷ It appears also in 1503, in which year Alexander Earl of Huntly undertook to reduce the castles which were considered necessary 'for the danting of the Ilis', particularly the Strome and Alanedonane, and to supply or raise men to keep them when reduced, on condition that the King (James IV.) should furnish a ship and artillery for the purpose.⁸ In 1517 Colin Earl of Argyle received power from the Lords of Council to seize, if possible, on the castle of Strome.⁹ About the year 1602 it was besieged by Kenneth Mackenzie, first Lord Kintail, and surrendered to him, on which he caused it to be blown up.¹⁰ Its ruins remain at the foot of a hill on Loch Kishorn named the hill of Strome.¹¹

At Janetown (or Tomaclare) and at Laganduin are the remains of two of those circular buildings so frequent upon the west coast.¹²

THIS parish, chiefly mountainous, lies between the salt-water lochs named Loch Kishorn and Loch Torridon, and includes three districts, Kishorn, Applecross, and Lochs. On the coast there are some small islands.

We are informed by the Irish annalists that in the year 673 Maelruba (known in Scotland as Saint Rufus, Malrubius, or Malrube, and commemorated on the 27th of August) founded the church of Aporcrossan.¹³ From the same source we learn that he died at Apercrossan on the 21st of April 722, aged 80 years, three months, and 19 days.¹⁴ Saint Malrube, says the Aberdeen Breviary, was murdered at Urquhart in Ross by Norwegians who landed on the coast, and who understood that he preached a different faith from theirs. He lived some days after receiving his death wounds, and ordered his body to be buried at Appileroce.¹⁵ He was succeeded in the rule of the monastery (as it then appears to have been) of Apuorcrossan by Failbe M'Guairc, who in the year 737 perished at sea along with 22 followers who manned his vessel.¹⁶ The Aberdeen Breviary, without giving the date, informs us that the Danes, having landed at Appileroce, violated the sacred territory of six miles round the church, insulted and affirms that Saint Rufus and Saint Malrube were different persons. If so, they were frequently confounded in Scotland. Kilarrow in Islay was named also Kilarrow, that is, the church of Malrube and the church of Rufus. An island off Saint Malrube's own territory of Applecross is named Saint Ruffus' Island. The town of Keith in Banff, of old called Kethmalruf (Reg. Mor. no. 25.) after the saint of Applecross, and where the annual fair is still known as Summareve (Saint Malrube) fair, is locally and popularly said to have been dedicated to Saint Rufus. See Reg. robbed the priests and other ministers in contempt of Saint Malrube, and returned to their vessels, which were afterwards sunk in sight of land without any storm.¹ The church was afterwards a common church of the canons of Ross.² This seems to complete its known history before the era of the Reformation. In 1574 Murquho or Murdoch Johnnestoun was reader at Apileroce, and in 1575 he was presented by King James VI. to the parsonage and vicarage of Apileroce, 'being ane commoun kirk of the bishoprik of Ros.'³ In 1662 John M'Keanzie of Aplecroce was served heir to his grandfather Alexander Mackeanzie of Coull in the lands of Aplecroce and the advowson of the church.⁴

The church stood at the head of the bay of Applecross on the west coast of the parish.⁵ The building which existed in the seventeenth century is styled by a writer of the time 'a fair hieland kirk.'⁶ The church standing in 1788 was then condemned as insufficient, and the present church was built in 1817.⁷ Near it are the remains of an ecclesiastical building, but whether those of a church or of a monastery does not appear.⁸ In the last century it was common with the inhabitants to swear by the Ider of Applecross.⁹

There was a chaplainry in Applecross, dedicated to Saint Malrube, and served by one or two chaplains. In 1515 King James V. presented Sir Alexander Makcloid to the two chaplainries within the parish church of Abileors, when they should be vacant by the decease or inability of Sir Murdoc and Sir Cristin the chaplains.¹⁰ In 1539 the same king presented Sir John Donaldsoun to the chaplainry of the chapel of Saint Malrube in Apileors, vacant by the decease of Sir Alexander M'Clode.¹¹ In 1540 (20 March) he presented Sir John Donaldsoun to the chaplainry of Saint Malrube in Apileroce, vacant by the decease of Sir Christofer Johnesoun; and in the same year (29 March) he granted to Master John Cameroun and Sir John Donaldsoun chaplains all the goods that belonged to the deceased chaplain, which were in the King's hands by reason of his having been born and died illegitimate.¹² In the same year (29 November) he presented Master John Cameroun to the chaplainry of Saint Malrube in Apileroce, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir John Donaldsoun.¹³ In 1542 the same king presented Sir Murdoc Johnesoun younger to half the chaplainry of Apileroce, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Murdoc Johnesoun the elder.¹⁴ In 1548 Queen Mary granted a similar presentation in favour of the same Sir Murdoc or Murquhard Jhonestoun the younger to the chaplainry of Saint Mulrube the martyr of Abileors, the presentation belonging to the Queen during the vacancy of the see.¹⁵ In 1549 that queen, who was patron pleno jure, presented Sir John Donaldsoun to the chaplainry of Saint Malrube the martyr in Abileors, vacant or when

Saint Rufius island, Loch-an-tagart (the priest's loch), Island-na-nuagh (saints' island), Loch-na-nuag (the holy loch), and other names, indicate the former veneration for the asylum and territory consecrated by Saint Malrube.⁶

In 1574 Murquho Johnnestoun reader at Apileroce had for his stipend the sum of £17 and 8d.⁷

Between 1561 and 1566 the united value of the chaplainries of Saint Monanis (in Kiltearn) and Apilcorce, held by Sir William Stewart vicar of Dingwall, was stated by him at 36 marks.⁸

The district of Applecross was probably included in the lands of the Earl of Ross in North Argyle, which formed part of the sheriffdom of Skey erected in 1292 by King John Balliol.⁹ It seems also to have been included among the lands of the Earl of Ros between the years 1306 and 1329.¹⁰

In 1662 John M'Keanzie of Aplecroce was served heir male to his grandfather Alexander M'Keanzie of Coull in the lands of Aplecroce, including the towns and lands of Rossollis commonly called Over and Nether Rossollis, Resker, Toskag, Barradaill, Longoll, Keppach, Auchmoir, Sacadaill, Drumley, Culmoir, Tercherrie, Drumclaughan, Kirktoon of Aplecroce, Killiemorie, Culdnakle, Ardestag, Schildag, Saerell, Testang, Sadilack, Auchiechock, and Culnakle, with the advowson of the church of Aplecroce, in the parish of Aplecroce and bishoprick of Ross, of the extent of 48 marks, with 3s. 4d. in augmentation of the rental.¹¹

At Shieldag on Loch Torridon there is a fishing village with a population of 200.¹²

In the district of Applecross are the remains of a subterranean dwelling or place of concealment, four feet wide and four feet deep, faced with stone, and roofed with flags.¹³

Garloch¹—Gherloch²—Gerloch.³ (Map, No. 5.)

THIS large parish extends from Loch Torridon on the south to Loch Gruinord on the north, having a rocky coast from 80 to 100 miles in length indented by Lochew and the Gairloch, from the latter of which it is named. It is divided into two unequal parts by its principal lake Loch Maree, which is 18 miles long and studded by twenty-four wooded islands. Its highest mountain range, named the Slioch or Sliabhach, is 3000 feet in height.⁴ Round the coast are a few small islands.

At the Reformation Sir John Broik appears to have been rector of this church.⁵ From that period till 1583 it appears to have been vacant.⁶ In 1583 King James VI. presented Alexander M'Kainzie to the parsonage and vicarage of Garloch, 'vacand in oure Souerane Lordis handis contenuallie sen the reformatioun of the religioun within this realme' by the decease of Sir John Broik.⁷

The church, built in 1751, stands on the site of an older at the head of the Gairloch.⁸

At the upper end of Loch Maree (anciently Lochewe) at Kinlochew stood a church, apparently used as a place of worship till the year 1791 or later.⁹

In an island about the centre of Loch Maree, named Island Maree, there is a cemetery, which the inhabitants on the north of the loch continued to use in the end of the last century.¹⁰ In the same island are the remains of a cairn or circle of stones.¹¹ The cemetery, or the chapel which it probably contained, locally supposed to have been dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was in fact dedicated to Saint Malrube, a circumstance which gradually occasioned the abolition of the old name Lochewe, and substituted for it Loch Mulrui, now pronounced Loch Maree.¹² The carrying of an insane person round the island or cemetery was even till recent times locally believed to effect a cure.¹³

On the north side of Loch Maree near the east end is Claod-nam-Sasganach, a spot in which some Englishmen, who in the seventeenth century wrought iron mines there, buried their dead.¹⁴

Gairloch as a part of North Argyle, and the property of the Earl of Ross, was included in the sheriffdom of Skey erected in 1292 by King John Balliol.¹ Between 1306 and 1329 it was with his other lands confirmed to the Earl by King Robert Bruce.² In 1366 William Earl of Ross, Lord of Sky, granted to Paul M'Tyre and to his heirs by Mary of Grahame, with remainder to the lawful heirs of Paul, the lands of Gerloch within the parts of Argyle, for yearly payment of a penny of silver in name of blench ferme in lieu of every other service except the forinsec service of the King when required.³ In 1372 King Robert II. confirmed the grant.⁴ In 1430 King James I. granted to Nele Nelesoun, for his homage and service in the capture of his deceased brother Thomas Nelesoun a rebel, the lands of Gerloch and others in the earldoms of Ross and Sutherland and sheriffdom of Innernys.⁵ In 1517 John Duke of Albany Regent appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the Isles and other lands, including Garloch, for three years or more at the Regent's pleasure, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants.⁶

In 1528 King James V. granted to John Dingvale, provost of Trinity College Edinburgh, the ward of the lands and rents of Garloch in the sheriffdom of Innernys, which belonged to the deceased Auchinroy Makenze.⁷ In 1547 Queen Mary granted to John Earl of Sutherland all the goods belonging to John Hectoursone of Garloch, forfeited by him for assisting the English.⁸ In 1551 that queen granted to John M'Kenze of Kintail, and to Kenzoch M'Kenze his son and apparent heir, a remission for the violent taking of John Hectour M'Kenzesone of Garloch, Doull Hectoursone, and John Towach Hectoursone, and for keeping them in prison, 'vsurpand thairthrow oure Souerane Ladyis autorite.'⁹ In 1566 Alexander M'Einzie was served heir to his brother german Hector M'Einzie of Garloch in the lands of Garloch, namely, Garloch, Kirkton, Syldage, Hamgildail, Malefage, Innerasfidill, Sandecorran, Cryf, Baddichro, Beinsanderis, Meall, Allawdill, with the pasturage of Glaslettir and Tornagullan, in the earldom of Ross, of the old extent of £8.¹⁰ In 1567 Queen Mary granted in heritage to John Banerman of Cardenye the ward of the lands and rents belonging to the deceased Hector Makkenych of Garloch, with the relief of the same when it should occur, and the marriage of John Roy Makkenych the brother and apparent heir of Hector, and, should he die unmarried, the marriage of any other heir or heirs male or female.¹¹ In 1569 John M'Kenzie was served heir to his brother german Hector in the lands of Garloch as specified in the service of 1566.¹² In 1638 Kenneth M'Keinzie of Garloch was served heir male to his father Alexander M'Keinzie of Garloche in the lands and barony of Garloche, including Kirkton with the manor-place and gardens of the same, Sildag, the two Oyngadellis, Mailfag, Debak, Inneraspedell, Sandcarrane, Bادهchro, the two Sandis, Erredell, Telledill, Clive, Tollie, the two Nastis; the lands of Ellenow

In 1539 the district of Kinlochew was laid waste by Donald Gorme of Sleat and his allies, and in 1541 the latter after the death of Donald Gorme had a remission from King James V. for the 'hereschip' of Kinlochew and other crimes.²

THIS large district (which of old may have included several parishes) is composed of four smaller tracts of country, namely, Coigeach, Lochbroom proper or the Meikle Strath, the Little Strath, and the Laigh.¹⁰ It is chiefly mountainous, but has some cultivated valleys near the sea.¹¹ Around its rocky coast, about 100 miles in extent, and indented by Loch Enard, Lochbroom, Little Lochbroom (the Loch Carlin of Blaeu), and Loch Gruinord, lie the islands Ristal, Tanara, Isle Martin, Isle Gruinord, Priest Island, and the Summer Isles.¹²

In the year 1227 Mathew the parson of Lochbraon was present at Kenedor in Moray with the other clergy of Ross at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Ross and Moray regarding the diocesan right of the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹³ The church of Lochbrune was a common church of the canons of Ross.¹⁴ In 1569 King James VI. presented John Monro Alexandersoun to the vicarage of Lochbreyne, then vacant by the decease of Duncan Rannaldsoun.¹⁵ In 1573 he presented Angus Makneill M'Kenze to the vicarage, vacant by the death of John Monro.¹ In 1574 Donald Ferquharsoun was reader at Lochbrune, and in that year was presented by King James VI. to the 'hail commoun kirk baith personage and vicarage of Lochbrune.'² In 1681 the barony of Tarbet, as confirmed by King Charles II. in favour of Sir George M'Kenzie of Tarbett and John M'Kenzie his son, included the patronage of the parish church of Lochbrein.³

The old church stood at the head of Lochbroom, where the present church also was built in 1817.⁴

In the parish are seven burying-grounds, representing seven churches and chapels (including the parish church) that once existed in the district.⁵ Of these there appears to have been one at Kildonen on Little Lochbroom, dedicated, as its name implies, to Saint Donan.⁶

In 1574 Donald Ferquharsoun reader at Lochbrune had a stipend of £14, 13s. 4d., probably the third of the parsonage and vicarage.⁷

In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted the lands of Lochbryne and others in Ross, for yearly payment of six pennies blench ferme, to his brother Celestine of the Isles, and to his heirs by his wife Finvola the daughter of Lachlan Macgilleone of Dowart, with remainder in succession to his heirs by any other wife, and failing these the lands were to revert to the Earl.⁸ In 1464 King James III. confirmed the grant.⁹ After the forfeiture of the Lord of the Isles in 1476 the lands were held of the crown by the family of Lochalsch, the descendants of Celestine.¹⁰ In 1517 John Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, for the purpose of establishing peace among the inhabitants of the Highlands and Isles, appointed Colin Earl of Ergile lieutenant of the Isles and other parts, including Lochbrene, for three years or more according to the Regent's pleasure.¹¹ In 1539 King James V. granted to Alexander M'Kane M'Alister of Glengarre and Margaret Ylis his wife in liferent, and to Angus M'Alister their son and heir apparent in heritage, with remainder to Alexander's lawful heirs whomsoever, the half of the lands of Lochbrome and other lands in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys, which Margaret Ylis had resigned.¹² In 1543 Thomas Dingwell of Kildone sold the lands of Lochbryne with the fishings to John Makkenze of Kintail, in exchange for the lands of Fotherty and for a certain sum of money, for yearly payment of six pennies blench ferme to the Queen as Earl of Ross; and in the same year Queen Mary granted to John Makkenze a crown charter of Lochbryne.¹³ In 1548 that queen granted to James Grant of Freuchy the liferent of the half davach of Aglonoquban, the half davach of Auchadaskild, the quarter davach of Auchquhedrane, the quarter davach of Lachmaline, the quarter davach of Logy, the half davach of Auchnadonill, the half davach of Braklewch, the half quarter davach of Derymuk, the quarter davach of Crumnor-

In 1502 King James IV. commissioned Alexander Earl of Huntlie, Thomas Lord Fraser of Lovate, and William Monro of Fowlis, to let the lands of Cogeach, Assent, and all the other ferme lands that belonged to Torquell Makloid of Lewes, then in the King's hands by reason of Torquell's being the King's rebel, at his horn, and fugitive from the laws, with power 'to gif a parte tharof in seal to guide trew men' for such a time as the Earl should deem expedient for the King's honour.⁵ In 1508 the same king granted to Odo Makky in Strathnavern, for his faithful service in resisting and attacking the King's rebels, the lands of Assent and Ladocchogith in the sheriffdom of Innernys, forfeited for treason by Torquell Makclod formerly of the Lewis, with power to sublet.⁶ In 1511 (29 June) he granted the same lands and others, with their fortalices, houses, waters, fishings, mills, and patronage of churches, all erected into the barony and lordship of Lewis, to Malcolm Makclode the son of the deceased Rory Makclode of Lewis.⁷ In 1538 (2 April) King James V. granted to Rory M'Cloyd, the son and heir of the deceased Malcolm M'Cloid of the Lewis, the nonentry and other dues of the barony of Lewis, Wattirnes, Assent, and Coidgeach, from the 30th of June 1511 to a year after the date of the grant.⁸ In 1541 the same king granted to Rodoric M'Loid of Lewis and Barbara Stewart his affianced spouse the lands and barony of Cogeach, and other lands in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, resigned by Rodoric and erected anew by the King into the free barony of Lewis.⁹

In 1572 Rodoric Makcloyd resigned the lands and barony of Cogeauch, and his other lands, with the castles, mills, fishings, and advowson of churches and chapels, which King James VI. then granted to his son and apparent heir Torquil M'Cloyd and the male heirs of his body, with remainder to Gillicallum Garwe M'Cloyd of Raisay and his male heirs, and to Torquil's male heirs whomsoever bearing the M'Cloid surname and arms, reserving the liferent to Rodoric on condition that he and Torquil should commit no crime against the King.¹ In 1617 Donald M'Keanzie M'Ane in Leadmoiris of Assint was served heir to his brother german John M'Keanzie M'Donald M'Ane of Dauachnahard in Coegach in a davach of the lands of Auchnahard in the barony of Coegach in the sheriffdom of Inverness, including the towns and lands of Davachnahard, Auchnahard, Dorny, Badintarbat, Akilvy, Badskalbay, Stracholdyn, Stranagruen, Reiff, and the pasture between Lynlovaack and Killek, of the old extent of 26s. 8d.² In 1655 Sir George M'Keinzie of Tarbit Baronet was served heir male to his father Sir George in the lands and barony of Cogeach, of the old extent of 4 marks.³ and Ross respecting the diocesan right of the churches of Kyncalargyn and Ardrosser.¹ In 1487 Sir John Buschild was either rector or vicar of Kyncardyn.² In 1533 the vicar was Sir Archibald Balconie.³ From 1536 to 1566 Master Thomas Dunnone was rector of Kincardin.⁴ In 1566 Queen Mary presented Master Alexander Leslie for life to the parsonage and vicarage of Kincardin, vacant or when vacant by the decease or demission of Master Thomas Dynnvne.⁵ The rector of Kincardine was a canon of the cathedral, and as such had a manse within the canonry of Ross.⁶

The church, built in 1799, seems to occupy the site of its predecessors at the mouth of a small stream on the Dornoch Firth about a mile east from Invercarron.⁷ About the year 1790 the church was thatched with heather.⁸ At the same date the inhabitants used five cemeteries, two in Kincardine, and three in the parish of Creich in Sutherland.⁹

At Kilmachalmag on the Oikel stood a chapel, dedicated, as its name implies, to Saint Calmag.¹⁰

In the Book of Assumptions the rental of the parsonage and vicarage of Kincardin, as given by Mr. Thomas Ros parson of Alnes, was 120 marks or £80, but the rental, he stated, could not be made perfect, as the vicarage was unpaid.¹¹ In the Libellus Taxationum the church is valued at £26, 13s. 4d., exactly the third of the above rental.¹² In Baia mund, as preserved by Bisset, it is rated at 53s. 4d.¹³ In 1574 the reader at Kincardin had as his stipend £13, 6s. 8d. and the kirklands.¹⁴

In 1341 William Earl of Ross granted to Hugh of Ross his brother the lands of Strathochill, Strathcarron, and others, with the fishing of Acheferne and Stogok.¹⁵ In 1365 Hugh of Ross lord of Fylorth, the brother of William Earl of Ross, granted to Paul Mactyre and to his wife Mariot of Grahame the niece of Hugh of Ross, and to their heirs, with remainder to Paul's heirs by any other wife, and to his brothers and their lineal descendants, the lands of Tutumtarvok, Turnok, Amot, and Langvale, in Strathokel.¹⁶ The same Paul, who is styled the grandson of Lendres one of three sons of a king of Denmark, is said to have acquired the lands of Stracharron, Strahoykil, and Friewater.¹⁷ His daughter Catherine married Walter Ross of Balnagoun, who thus seems to have acquired the same lands.¹⁸ In 1430 King James I. granted to Nele Nelesoun, for his homage and service in the capture of his deceased brother Thomas Nelesoun a rebel, the lands of Daane, Moyzeblary, Croinzucorth, Tittumtarwauch, Lanchort, Drinayde, and others in the earldoms of Ross and Suthirland, some of which appear to lie in the parish of Kincardine.¹⁹ In 1490 King James IV., as tutor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted in heritage to David Ross, the nephew and apparent heir of John Ross of Balnagoun, among other lands those of Stracharron and Strathochell, with the mills, brewhouses, tenants, and tenandries, resigned by John Ross, and reserving to him the liferent.¹ In 1515 Sir Donald of the Isles of Lochalch granted to Hector Monro of Foulis his fishing of Kelysakkell (the Kyles of Oikel) in the sheriffdom of Innernys.² In 1528 King James V. granted to William Ros, the brother of the deceased Walter Ros of Ballangowne, the ward, relief, and nonentry of the 5 marklands of Ocumyord (or Gruinyord), the 10 marklands of Langoill, the 3 marklands of Crokkane, the 7 marklands of Cullace, and the 5 marklands of Pellavelnie (probably not all in Kincardine), in the sheriffdom of Innernys, which were in the King's hands by reason of the decease of David Ros of Ballangowne, for the yearly payment of 20 marks to James Earl of Murray or any other having the ward and relief of the lands.³ In 1529 Pope Clement VII. confirmed to the canons of New Ferne all their possessions, including among others two measures of land commonly called davachs in the place called Innercharron; the pasture they had in the places called Halchmaguli, Braghlugudi, and Salki; the fishing which they had in the water called Okeal in the place called Banaff; the fishing commonly called Choro in the town of Kyncarden; a davach in the town called Greater Fern; a half davach in the town called Lesser Fern; the land they had in the place called Archanagart; the fishing and ferry of the same; and a davach and a half in the place called Dwne.⁴ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to Alexander Ros of Balnagovn and Jonet Sinclair his wife the lands of Westir Gronzeart, Eistir Gronzeart, and others in Ross, which Alexander had resigned.⁵ Among the sums of money and victual given out of the bishoprick of Ross yearly at the period of the Reformation are mentioned 4 bolls of victual and 40s. to the 'kenar' of Kincairne.⁶ About the same period Henry Sinclair bishop of Ross, at the request of Thomas afterwards abbot of Fearn, granted to the laird of Balnagown Ardgay amounting to a davach of land, the Kirktown of Kincardine, the salmon fishing of the same amounting yearly to a last, and the mill of Kincardin which yielded yearly 24 bolls victual.⁷ At the same time the laird of Balnagowne held of the abbot of Fearn the lands of Wester Ferine, Innercarroun, Downy, and others.⁸ In 1578 the lands and barony of Strathokell (partly in Kincardine), and the lands and barony of Strathquharrone, the latter including Innerquharron, Seoll, Langwell with the fishing, Skenchall, Grumzordie with the fishing, and Auchingullane, in Kincardine, and some lands in Eddertoun, which belonged in heritage to Alexander Ros of Balnagowne and George Ros his son and apparent heir, and which with other lands were held by them of the bishop of Ros, the commendator of Ferne, and the sacrist of Thane, were in defect of movable goods appraised in favour of James Scrymgeour of Duddop constable of Dundie, to be held of the crown for the services formerly due.⁹ In 1582 King James VI. granted to George Ros of Balnagowin and to the male heirs of his body, with remainder to his male heirs whomsoever, the lands and baronies appraised in 1578 in favour of James Scrymgeour, subsequently appraised by him to

Alexander Ros of Balnagowin the father of George, and also resigned by the same James.¹ In 1584 George Ros apparent of Balnagown sold to Hugh Munro of Asschyn in heritage certain lands in Strahokell, and in warrandice the town and davach of Langwell with the wood of Skatwell, with Lonnillodloch, Cromlie, the salmon fishing of the Halfepolmorall, and all the other salmon fishings within the bounds of Langwell, in the baronies of Strahokell and Stracharroun, in the earldom of Ros and sheriffdom of Innernes.² In 1642 Robert Lord Ros of Halkheid and Melvill was served heir to Lord William his brother german in the lands of Strathokell, including with others Dalnauchtane and Down, the lands of Stracharroun, Soyall, Knockinnarrow, Longwall with the salmon fishings, Scuttiechaell, Gruntzeardis with the salmon fishings, Auchnagullan, and Tormichaell, with the Forest of Friewater, and other lands in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Inverness, all united into the barony of Balnagoune, and together of the old extent of £200.³ In the same year Lord Ross was served heir to his father James Lord Ros of Halkheid and Melville in the Kirktoon of Kincardine extending to a quarter davach or 30s., with 6s. in augmentation; the mill of Kincardine extending to 12 bolls victual; the alehouse of Kincardine with its lands, of the extent of 53s. 4d. and 10s. 8d. in augmentation; the lands of Ardye, a davach, of the extent of £10 and 40s. in augmentation; the fishing of the Yair of Kincardine, of the extent of £20; the lands of Eddertyne, a davach, of the extent of £5, 6s. 8d. and 21s. 4d. in augmentation; the alehouse of Eddertayne, of the extent of 17s. 9d. and 3s. 6¾d. in augmentation; in all £44, 9s. 5¼d. feuferme — with other lands united into the tenantry of Kirktoon of Kincardine, for the new augmentation of the whole by the sum of 6s. 8d.⁴ In 1657 David Ros of Balnagowin was served heir male to his father David in the same lands, baronies, and tenantry, with the following difference in the details — the lands of Dalvanachtan and Downe, extending to 6 davachs, of which 4 davachs lie benorth the water of Oickell in the sheriffdom of Sutherland, and 2 on the south of the same in the sheriffdom of Ross, of old the sheriffdom of Innernes; the lands of Strathcarron, Soyall, Knockinnarrow, and Languall, with the salmon fishings; the lands of Skuttichail, the lands of Auchownaguillen, the lands of Tormichell, and the lands of Esbolg, with the Forest of Friewater, all extending to a davach and a half, with other lands in the earldom of Ros and of old in the sheriffdom of Innernes, united into the barony of Belnagowne in the sheriffdom of Ross.⁵

In 1686 King James VII., in a deed confirming the barony of Balnagowan to David Ross of Balnagowan, erected the village of Ardgay in Kincarden into a burgh of barony to be called the burgh of barony of Bonarress, with two yearly fairs, one on 2 June, and the other on the second Tuesday of July, with a weekly market every Friday.⁶

There is a fair called Feille-Edeichan held at Kincardine in the end of November or beginning of December.⁷

In 1179 King William the Lion crossed the Ochiel with his army on his way to Caithness.⁸ About the same period he sent a large army into Ros against Gothred MacWilliam (or Donald Ban), and soon afterwards following in person he built or fortified two castles in Ros, laid waste the country, and nearly extirpated the followers of Gothred, who, having escaped with a few, besieged and destroyed one of the castles when the King's army had retired; but, on the King's return with Prince Alexander, Gothred was betrayed by his followers to the Earl of Buchan, and being brought to the King at Kyncardin was put to death.¹

In the parish are several ancient round towers known as duns, and several stone circles.²

In the churchyard is a sculptured stone sarcophagus, 5 feet long, 2 broad, and 2 deep, and divided into two compartments.³

Near the church there is a walled lane terminating in a semicircular space, said to have been used of old for wapinshawings.⁴

At Craigeacoineadhan in this parish the Marquis of Montrose in 1650 fought his last battle and sustained his final defeat.⁵

THIS parish, stretching along the Dornoch Firth from the water of Fearn to the Muckle Ferry, and about six miles inland, consists chiefly of arable land backed by hills varying from 600 to 1000 feet in height.¹⁴ The coast is sandy, except at one rocky point where a hilly ridge abuts upon the water's edge.

In 1532 Sir John Ros the vicar of Eddirtane died in Ballone.¹⁵ The church of Eddirthane at the period of the Reformation belonged to the subdean of Ross.¹⁶ In 1583 King James VI. presented Donald Simpsoun to the vicarage of Eddertane, vacant by the decease of Master William Strauthauchin.¹⁷

The church, built in 1743, stands apparently on the old site at Arderonie near Balinlich or Ballioch on the Dornoch Firth.¹⁸

The abbey of Fearn, founded early in the thirteenth century by Ferquhard Earl of Ross 'beside Kincardin in Stracharrin,' stood at Fearn, probably Middle Fearn, in this parish, where the convent appears to have remained for about 15 years before its removal to New Fearn, and where vestiges of its buildings seem to have been visible till the end of the sixteenth century.¹ Malcolme, one of two 'quhite channonis,' said to have been met by the Earl in Galloway bearing relics of Saint Ninian, which with the bearers he carried to Ross, was abbot for 15 years, and was succeeded by Malcolme of Nig, during whose rule (apparently about the year 1238) the site of the monastery was changed.²

In the year 1574 the reader at Eddirtayn had for his stipend 20 marks and the kirklands.³

In 1341 William Earl of Ross granted to his brother Hugh of Ross the lands of Westray and others, with the fishing of Acheferne and Stogok.⁴ Between 1350 and 1372 Hugh of Ross granted to his armiger William Marescal, for his good and faithful service, his land of Dachynbeg in Vestray.⁵ Daane, Westray, and perhaps other lands granted by King James I. to Nele Nelesoun in 1430, and by King James IV. to David Ros in 1490, appear to lie in this parish.⁶ In 1550 Alexander Ros of Balnagown granted to William Carneors of Colmishill or Colmislie the lands of Milntown of Westray with the mill, the lands of Ballinleich, and the lands of Mekill Doles, in special warrandice of the lands of Estir Rareehy which he then sold to the same William.⁷ At the Reformation all or nearly all the lands in the parish were held and paid tithes to the subdean of Ross as follows — Iddirthane, half a davach (or 23 ploughgates), occupied by Alexander Ros of Balnagown, 10 marks 6s. 8d.; Westray and Meltoun, half a davach, occupied by the same Alexander, 4 marks; Rowny (or Downe), a davach, occupied by the same, 14 marks; Mekle Doles and Lechestoun, half a davach, occupied by the same, 10 marks; Lytill Doles, three quarter davachs, occupied by John M'Coleme-stoun or Ross, 10 marks; Wastir Farine (now apparently in Kincardine), a davach, occupied by William Ros, 18 marks; Estir Ferne, a davach, occupied by Thomas Ros, 8 marks; Dathan Mekle, three fourths of a davach, occupied by Walter Ros otherwise named Alexander Waltersoun, his mother, and Thomas Ros, 6 marks; Dathan Lytle, a quarter davach, occupied by William Ros and his brother, 3 marks; the subdean's croft and mains within the canonry of Ros, occupied by Andro Wilgues, 3 marks.⁸ In 1577 William Carneors of Colmeslie was served heir to his father Robert in the lands of Mylntoun and Westra with the mill, Ballinlechie, and Mekill Doles, in warrandice of Eister Rarechie.⁹ In 1578 the lands of Litill Dolles, Mekle Dolles, the Mylntown of Westry, and Litill Dovane, with other lands held in heritage by Alexander Ros of Balnagowne, and George Ros his son and apparent heir, of the bishop of Ross, the commendator of Ferne, and the sacrist of Thane, were appraised in favour of James Seryngeour of Duddop constable of Dundie in defect of movable goods, to be held of the crown for the services formerly due.¹⁰ In 1582 King James VI. granted to George Ros of Balnagowin and the male heirs of his body, with remainder to his male heirs whomsoever, the same lands with those of Ballelich, formerly belonging to James Seryngeour of Dudop, appraised by him to Alexander

The site of the castle of Eddertoun, erroneously supposed to be one of the two founded or fortified by King William in 1179, lies near the sea.²

The circular buildings styled duns were at one time numerous in the parish, and one of them named Dunaliskag during part of the last century was nearly entire.³

West from the church is a large plain with tumuli, where a battle is believed to have been fought with the Danes or Norwegians, and beside it a circular mound with a rude obelisk in the centre about ten feet high.⁴

THIS parish (named in Gaelic Sgìre-Duich, the parish of Duthace), about 9 miles long from east to west, and two miles in breadth from north to south, consists of three tracts, a low sandy plain about 15 feet above the sea (representing the most recent sea-board of geologists), a fertile and cultivated plain or terrace about 50 feet above the sea (representing an earlier geological beach), and a still higher district culminating in the Hill of Tain 780 feet above the same level.⁹ From the coast there stretch directly across the Dornoch Firth several large sand banks, the chief of which is the Geyzen or Gizzen Brigs, a few miles below Tain, and the extension of the promontory a short way above that town at the Muckle Ferry anciently known as Portineoulyr.¹⁰

In the year 1227 (during the rule of Robert bishop of Ross) Brydinus the vicar of Tene was present with others of the clergy of Ross at Kenedor in Moray at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹¹ Saint Duthace, alleged to be the successor of Bishop Robert, born in Tayne, and subsequently revered there, died in 1249 or 1253, and was buried in the town of Tena (Tain) on 19 June in either of these years.¹² Thenceforward there appears to be no notice of the church of Tain till the year 1436, in which died Finlaw abbot of Ferne, the grandson of Sir William Feriar vicar of Tayne.¹³ In 1456 Alexander Sutherland of Dunbeath in his will appointed 30 trentals to be said for his soul, of which four were to be said in Tayne (doubtless in the church of Saint Duthace).¹ In 1483 William Cluny macer passed to the town of Thane in Ross, where the Lord Creichtoun lived in the vicar's house, and in the presence of witnesses, among whom were William Johnsoun a bailie of Thane and Thomas Rede a bailie of Cromarty, summoned that lord to appear at Edinburgh in parliament to answer for his treason.² In 1487 Master Thomas Ros was rector of the church of Tayne.³

In the same year Thomas bishop of Ross, at the instance of King James III., for the weal of his soul, and of the souls of his predecessors and successors Kings of Scotland, and of all who had contributed any thing towards the foundation, erected the chapel of Saint Duthace of Tayne, bishop, confessor, and priest, into a collegiate church for a provost, five canons, two deacons or subdeacons, a sacrist with an assistant clerk, and three singing boys.⁴ The provost was invested with full ordinary jurisdiction over the canons and other officials, their familiars and servitors dwelling in the town of Tane, and other persons that might be added to the foundation, with power of suspension and excommunication; with power also of excommunication and absolution over the inhabitants of the towns of Newmore, Morynchy, Tallirky, Cambuscurry, and Dunskaithe, and all who should in any way molest them. The five canons or prebendaries were to be regularly qualified priests, trained in morals, literature, and especially singing, and were bound to be present with the other officials at matins, vespers, and other canonical hours and masses, in good surplices made at their own expense, and to sing at the mass De corpore &c. every Thursday. Absentees were to be punished according to their demerits by pecuniary fines or otherwise as should seem good to the provost or the canon whom he appointed to supply the absentee's place. The provost was to have for his maintenance the vicarage of Tayne; and for the fabric of the church and the repair of its ornaments and books the teindsheaves of the towns of Tallirky, Morinechy, and Cambuscurry, within the girth of Tayne, granted by consent of Master Thomas Ros rector of Tayne to the provost, and to be applied at his discretion. To the provost were allotted also the escheats of the courts of the town of Tayne. He was to have moreover the town of Newmore, recently added to the foundation by King James III., for which he was bound to maintain one of the five prebendaries, who should preside in his absence, and celebrate a private mass daily for the state (status) of the King, his ancestors, and his successors, and should have from the provost for his maintenance ten marks yearly. The presentation to this prebend was vested in the King, and the presentation and collation to the provostry in the bishop of Ross. The third person was to be the prebendary of Dunskaithe, and to have for his maintenance the lands and fruits formerly annexed to the chaplainry of Dunskaithe, to rule the choir in singing, to instruct in singing the boys of the choir, to be presented by the King, and to be admitted by the provost. The fourth was the prebendary of Tallirky, who should have for his maintenance the lands and fruits formerly annexed to the chaplainry of Tallirky. The fifth was the prebendary of Morynchy with a similar provision for his maintenance. The sixth was the prebendary of Cambuseurry, to be maintained from the revenues of that chaplainry. The patronage of the latter three chaplainries or prebendaries was vested in the Earl of Ross, and the admission in the provost. The seventh person, a deacon or subdeacon, was to have for his maintenance six marks Scots from the lands of Innerathy, to be paid yearly by the lord of the same, who should have the presentation, while the admission belonged to the provost. The eighth, a deacon or subdeacon, should have for his maintenance yearly six marks Scots, four of which were to be paid by Finlay Faid, and two by John Fayd, from their lands of Innerathy and Tain; the patronage to belong to Finlay Fayd and his heirs, and the admission to the provost. The two deacons or subdeacons were to be regularly instructed and sufficiently qualified in singing and in literature. The ninth, or sacrist, was to have for his maintenance the mill of Morinchy as he formerly had, together with such suffrages as clerks usually have, to be trained in singing and literature, and to have under him an assistant with a surplice and becoming dress, who should ring the bell and supply fire and water in the church; the patronage to belong to the provost. The three singing boys, scholars, or choristers, were to be either secular or clerical, and to have for their service yearly each three marks or forty shillings Scots; the first to be paid by John Monroe of Foulis and his successors — the second by John Merschell of Davachcarty and his successors — and the third by the heirs of the deceased Andrew Alanesoun. The whole of these officials were bound continually to reside in the college, and not to be absent above eight days, or even so long without the license of the provost or president; and should they be longer absent even in the courts of the king, the bishop, or the earl, they should ipso facto forfeit their respective offices, which, if the regular patron neglected to fill them up within a month, should be disposed of by the provost; and not even an apostolical dispensation should have power to release them from continual residence. The visitation and correction of the provostry were to belong to the bishop, and the visitation and correction of the other functionaries, and full ecclesiastical power over them, to the provost; so that they were not to be sued before any one but the provost, except for crimes which inferred degradation from their sacred office. The provost and four of the prebendaries were bound to appear yearly in the bishop's synod, one prebendary remaining to celebrate mass in their absence. Each of the officials was bound at institution to swear obedience to all the statutes made and to be made, and especially to that relating to residence and the invalidity of a dispensation therefrom. The rest of the rules were to be similar to those of the collegiate church of Saint John the Baptist of Corstorphin. In 1492 the erection was confirmed by Pope Innocent VIII.¹

In 1514 a mandate of Robert Fresel dean and official of Ross is witnessed by William of Spyne provost of Tane.² In 1541 Sir Donald Monro was provost of the church of Tayne.³ In the same year King James V. presented George Ogiluy to the provostship, vacant or when vacant by the demission or decease of Sir Donald Monro.⁴ In 1542 the same king presented

Sir Hugh Gray chaplain to the provostry, then vacant by the decease of Sir Magnus Vaus.¹ In 1544 the provost was Master John Thorntoun proctor of Moray.² In 1549 Queen Mary presented Sir Nicholas Ros to the provostry of the college church of Thane, and to the vicarage of that church annexed to the provostry, when they should be vacant by the demission of Sir Alexander Gray.³ In 1550 and between 1561 and 1566 Sir Nicholas Ros appears as provost.⁴ In 1567 he demitted the provostry of Thane for the abbey of Ferne, and John bishop of Ross granted it to Thomas Ros parson of Alnes, the presentation being confirmed by Queen Mary.⁵ In 1571 Thomas Ross appears as commendator of Ferne and provost of Tayne.⁶ In 1584 he resigned the abbacy or commend of Ferne with the provostry of Tayne, which King James VI. then granted for life to Walter Ros, reserving to Thomas the liferent of both with reversion to the abbacy in case of Walter's death, and to the ministers serving the parish churches of the abbey and provostry the liferent of their stipends.⁷

In 1515 King James V. presented Sir Donald Rede chaplain to the chaplainry called Newthmore in the college church of Saint Duthac in Thane, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Finlay Fergusson.⁸ In 1518 the same king presented Master Andrew Sinclare to the chaplainry of Newmore, then vacant by the decease of Sir Donald Reid.⁹ In 1529 he presented Alexander Grant (or Duff) to the chaplainry of Neomoir (stated in the presentation to be situated in the cathedral church of Ross), vacant by the decease of Master Andrew Sinclar.¹⁰ In 1530 the same king presented Master John Bissate vicar of Kilmure to the same chaplainry (in the college church of Thane), vacant by the decease of the same Master Andrew Sinclar.¹¹ In 1531 he granted to Sir Alexander Duff chaplain, a letter confirming his presentation to the chaplainry of Newmoir, vacant by the decease of Master Andrew Sinclare, and stating that this chaplainry was situated within the college church of Tayne for suffrages and divine service to be performed there, notwithstanding a clause in the presentation to the effect that it was situated in the cathedral church of Ross, where it should have been said the college church of Tayne, and that the King therefore admitted the presentation to Sir Alexander Duff to be to that chaplainry, and by his letter of confirmation discharged all others from the same.¹² In 1541 the same king granted a letter of protection for life to Master John Bissate chaplain of the chaplainry of Newmoir within the college kirk of Tane, and to his friends and property.¹³ In 1543 Master John Bissate, the same prebendary or chaplain of Newmore in the college church of Saint Duthac of Thane, with the consent of Queen Mary, of the Earl of Arran, and of Robert bishop of Ross, granted to George Munro of Dawacharty the kirklands of the Scots for each boll, 4 muttuns or 3s. 4d. for each, 12 capons or 6s., 4 dozen poultry or 12s., together with the sum of £4 Scots for arriages, carriages, bondages, and every other burden, and for the augmentation of the rental beyond what the lands ever before yielded, amounting in all in money to the sum of £30, 14s. 8d. Scots for feuferme and customs.⁴ The lands were to be held according to the following boundaries. The lands of Intoun of Newmoir, Inchedown, Baddiequhonchar, Rawsnweye, and Kellymoir of Newmoir; Beginning at the summit of the hill called Correyewny towards the west—and thence descending the shoulder of the hill across the burn which runs from the loch of Auchnaclaych southwards to the little hill called Knokderruthoill—and thence passing southwards to the marchstone in the cultivated field called Ardachath of Newmoir on the west side of a cairn called Glascarne near the road lying on the north side of the said cairn which leads westwards to the lands of Badcall—and from the said marchstone to the marchstones as they are situated as far as the marchstone situated on the

the north. In 1574 Master George Munro, on his promotion to the chancery of Ross, resigned the chaplainry of Newmore, which King James VI. then granted for seven years to George Monro the son of Andro Monro of Newmore 'in support of his sustentation at the scoles.'¹ In 1579 the chaplainry was resigned by Master George Munro, and granted by King James to his brother John Munro for the same term and purpose.² In 1585 King James confirmed the grant of the lands of the chaplainry, made in 1571 by Master George Monro to Andrew Monro.³ In 1586 King James renewed to John Monro the grant of 1579 for the same period.⁴ In 1639 Robert Monro of Obstaill was served heir to his father Colonel John Monro of Obsteill in the churchlands of the same chaplainry, of the extent of £30, 14s. 8d. feuferme.⁵

In 1500 King James IV. presented Sir Alexander Ross to the chaplainry of Dunskaith within the college kirk of Tane, vacant by the promotion, incapacity, or demission of Sir John Poilson chanter of Catneiss, last chaplain—the patronage belonging to the King and the collation to the bishop of Ross.⁶ In 1533 Sir Nicholas Ross, the natural son of Sir Alexander Ros, was chaplain of Dunskeath.⁷ Sir Nicholas had four sons, Nicholas, William, Donald, and Thomas, who received letters of legitimation from Queen Mary in 1543.⁸ In 1544 that queen presented Sir Thomas Stevinsoun chaplain to the chaplainry and prebend in the college church of Thane, then vacant or when vacant by the decease or demission of Sir —— Ros.⁹ In the same year she granted a precept of legitimation in favour of Sir Nicholas Ros the chaplain of Dunskeith.¹⁰ By a deed dated at the college church of Thayne 24 March 1544 Sir Nicholas, with the consent of Queen Mary, of the Earl of Arran, of Robert bishop of Ross, and of Master John Thorntoun provost and the prebendaries assembled in chapter, granted to Nicholas Ros (his son) and his heirs male, with remainder to William Ros the brother german of Nicholas and his heirs male, to Donald Ros their brother german and his heirs male, to Thomas Ros their brother german and his heirs male, to the eldest of the female heirs of Thomas, and to the heirs of Nicholas whomsoever, his lands of Dunskaith in the lordship of Ardmanach and sheriffdom of Innernes, together with a revenue of two marks Scots from the ferry dues and profits (de nauo et proficuis) of the Queen's port and ferry of Cromatye—which lands and revenue belonged to him as the patrimony of the chaplainry, and extended in his rental to the sum of 18 marks Scots—the grantee paying yearly 20 marks in augmentation of the rental by two marks, and engaging to build and maintain a sufficient mansion upon the lands.¹¹ In 1549 Queen Mary presented Sir Donald Scherare chaplain to the chaplainry of Dunskaith, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Nicholas Ros.¹² In 1578 King James VI. granted the chaplainry to Thomas Davidsoun, the son of John Davidsoun in Edinburgh, for his support at school for seven years.¹³

In 1580 he confirmed a grant in heritage by Andrew Daudisoun chaplain of Dunskaith, given with the consent of the chapter to John Daudisoun, of the manse and tenement lying in the town of Thayne on the north side of the same, between the lands of Thomas Fiddes burges of Thayne on the east, the common road on the west, the public road on the south, and the garden of the said Andrew on the north.¹ In 1582 the same king granted to Thomas Daudisoun, the son of John Daudisoun burges of Edinbureh, the chaplainry of Dunskaith, not exceeding the sum of 20 marks yearly, vacant by the decease of Sir Andro Daudisoun.² In 1586 he granted to the same Thomas Daudisoun, 'bursar in the college of Cambrige in England,' for seven years, 'and that for supporte to hald and interteny him at the said college for his bettir education in vertew and guid lettres,' the chaplainries of Dunskeyth and Ardefail in the diocese of Ross, not exceeding the sum of £30, vacant by expiration of the grant made to the said Thomas and his brother James, or in any other way.³ In 1587 he granted to Robert Monro, the son of Huchecoun Monro in Fyreis, for seven years, 'to hald and interteny him at the seules,' the same two chaplainries, vacant by the expiration of the grants made to the two sons of John Daudisoun tailor 'throw thair not abyding actuallie at the seules,' or otherwise.⁴

In 1503 King James IV. presented Master Alexander Gordoun to the chaplainry of Tallirey, vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Kilqwhous.⁵ In 1505 the chaplainry is stated to have been resigned by Master Alexander chanter of Moray, and granted by the same king to Sir George Gordoun.⁶ In 1506 King James presented Sir Thomas Tarbart to the same chaplainry, when it should be vacant by the demission of Sir Alexander Gordoun, then chaplain.⁷ In 1529 King James V. presented Sir Robert Mailuile chaplain to the prebend or prebendary chaplainry called Tarlogy in the college church of Thane, when vacant, in exchange for the vicarage of Abirtarf.⁸ In 1559 Sir Robert Mailuile, perpetual chaplain of Tallarky, granted in liferent to George Monro of Dawachcarty, and to Donald Monro his son and his male heirs, with remainder to the male heirs of George Monro, and to the eldest of his female heirs without division, the lands of Tallarky in the sherrifilom of Innernes, for payment to the chaplain yearly of 29 marks 4s. 6d., with two dozen of capons, and 2s. 10d. in augmentation of the rental.⁹ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.¹⁰ Between 1561 and 1566 Sir Robert Melvill was still chaplain, and George Munro feuar of Tarlaquhy.¹¹ In 1574 King James VI. granted for seven years to George Monro, the son of Donald Monro of Talrawky, for his education at school, the chaplainry of Talrawky, vacant by the demission of Master George Monro, who was promoted to the chancellorry of Ross.¹² In 1580 the same king granted to Donald Monro's son Huchecoun for the same period and purpose the chaplainry of Talrekie, not exceeding £20 yearly, and in 1586 he renewed the grant.¹³

In 1526 King James V. presented Sir Donald Henrisone to the chaplainry of Morineh in the church of Saint Duthac of Thane, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Donald Morisone.¹ In 1536 the same king presented Sir John Scott to the chaplainry, then vacant by the decease of Sir John Moresoun.² In 1545 (8 July), and in the same year and month (14 July), Queen Mary presented Sir Symon Blyith and Sir David Weir successively to the prebend of Morinche, vacant by the decease of Sir John Scott.³ In 1547 she presented Sir Thomas Fergusoun chaplain to the same prebend, vacant or when vacant by the demission of Sir Symon Blyth.⁴ In 1574 King James VI. granted for seven years to Thomas Ros, the lawful son of the deceased John Ross or Reid in Annet, for his education, the same chaplainry of Moirinehe, not exceeding yearly 20 marks Scots, vacant by the decease of Sir Jeromy Paip.⁵ In 1580 he granted the chaplainry for seven years to Walter Ros the son of Master Thomas Ros in Tane for his education at school.⁶ In 1584 King James confirmed a grant made by Sir Jerome Pape (before or in 1574), with the consent of Nicholas Ros provost of Tayne and commendator of Ferne, and of the prebendaries of the college, to Donald Ros Hendersoun and his heirs, of the following lands (apparently those of the chaplainry of Morinche), namely, the two Thesklaris lying on the west side of the town of Tayne, extending to the sowing of three bolls of bear or thereby—the lands lying above the lands of Enycht, extending to the sowing of six pecks of bear—two rigs of land extending to the sowing of six pecks of bear—one rig of land extending to the sowing of one peck of bear, lying at the west end of the town of Tayne—one rig of land lying near the lands of the provost of Tayne, of the sowing of half a firloft of bear—one rig of land lying between the roads, of the sowing of a firloft of bear—one rig of land lying at the west end of the town of Tayne, extending to the sowing of three pecks of bear—the lands called the Buttis lying on the west side of the provost's lands, extending to the sowing of one firloft of bear—one rig of land extending to the sowing of three pecks of bear—one croft of land called Croftmatak, containing seven buttis, extending to the sowing of two firlots of bear or thereby—one rig of land of the sowing of 3 pecks of bear—one butt (sulcus) of land of the sowing of one peck of bear—one small butt, and another butt, with four rigs of land lying contiguously, extending to the sowing of two firlots of bear—one rig of land of the sowing of two pecks of bear—one rig of land extending to the sowing of two firlots of bear or thereby, at least to the sowing of one firloft—one rig extending to the sowing of one firloft of bear—one rig of the sowing of three pecks of bear—another rig of the sowing of three pecks of bear—one rig of the sowing of a firloft of bear—one rig of the sowing of two pecks of bear—one rig of the sowing of two pecks—six rigs called Watleyth Croft, of the sowing of three firlots of bear—one rig of the sowing of three pecks of bear—another rig of the same sowing—two rigs extending to the sowing of six pecks of bear lying contiguously—one rig with one butt lying upon Poltak—one rig of the sowing of three pecks of bear—another of the sowing of two pecks—and also the sowing of a boll of bear at the north end of the town of Tayne; namely,

In 1506 King James IV. presented Sir Thomas Heriot to the chaplainry of Cambuscurry, vacant by the decease or inhability of Sir Donald Rede.³ In 1515 King James V. presented Sir Thomas Fergusson chaplain to the same chaplainry, when it should be vacant by the resignation of the same Sir Donald Rede.⁴ In 1544 Queen Mary presented Sir Symon Blyth to the same prebend, vacant or when vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Fergusson.⁵ In 1547 (2 June) the same queen presented Master John Giffert to the prebend of Cammiscurre, vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Fergusson, or when it should be vacant otherwise.⁶ In the same year (20 September) she again presented Sir Symon Blyth chaplain to the same prebend, then vacant or when vacant by the demission of Sir Thomas Fergusson.⁷ In 1550 the same queen presented Master Alexander Dingwell to the chaplainry, then stated to be vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Fergusson.⁸ The prebend of Cambuscurry seems to be the ‘prebendrie of Than perteing to Symond Blyth,’ for which he accounted to the collector of thirds in 1561-1566.⁹ In 1578 King James VI. granted to Robert Coluill, the son of Master John Coluill chanter of Glasgow, for his education during seven years, the chaplainry of Cambuscurry, not exceeding 20 marks yearly, vacant by the decease of Master Alexander Dingwall.¹⁰ In 1580 Mr. John Coluill demitted the chaplainry, which King James then granted for the same time and purpose to Gillicallum Ros the son of Alexander Ros of Balnagoune.¹¹ In 1618 David Ross of Pitearline was served heir to his uncle Malcolm Ros of Cambuscurrie in the half of Cambuscurrie with the salmon fishings and other privileges, of the extent of 7 marks feuferme — the half of the alehouse and croft of the same, extent 6s. 8d. feuferme and grassum — the half of the boat and ferryboat in the harbour of Portinculter, with the rights of port belonging to that half, extent 6s. 8d. feuferme — and the other arriages and carriages of the same lands, extent 2s. 6d.¹²

In 1507 King James IV. presented Sir William Fudes to the sacristy of the church of Saint Duthace of Tane, founded on the mill of Morinche, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Donald Rede.¹³ In 1532 King James V. presented Sir James Wythand to the same

sacristy, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Malcolm Mortimer.¹ In 1539 (5 June) the same king presented Sir Florimund Hume chaplain to the sacristy, vacant or when vacant by the inability of Sir James Wythhand, or otherwise.² In the same year (29 June) he presented George Ogiluy to the same sacristy, vacant by the inability of Sir James Withhand, who had committed murder.³ In 1541 (4 October) the same king presented Master Hugh Guthrie his servitor, and (5 October) Alexander Vddart, to the same prebend or office of sacrist, vacant by the decease of Sir James Withhand last possessor.⁴ In 1544 Queen Mary presented Stephen Kincaid to the office of sacrist in the college church of Thane, then vacant by the decease of Sir James Wythhand, or when it should be vacant by the inability or deprivation of Alexander Vddart, or by any other means.⁵ In 1546 the Queen issued a second presentation in favour of Stephen Kincaid, and the sacristy was again stated to be vacant by the decease of Sir James Wythhand and the deprivation and inability of Alexander Vddart, or otherwise.⁶ In 1557 she presented Robert Kincaid to the same office, then vacant by the demission of Stephen Kincaid.⁷ At the Reformation the mill of Morinch, on which the sacristy of Tain was founded, was held of the bishop of Ross by George Moreis for the yearly payment of 2 chalders of victual.⁸ In 1618 David Ross of Pitcarline was served heir to his uncle Malcolm Ros of Cambusecurrie in the grain mill of Morinschie with the mill croft and multure, of the extent of 20 marks and 6s. 8d. in augmentation.⁹

Besides the chaplainries originally founded in the collegiate church of Tain by King James III. there was a chaplainry subsequently founded by King James IV. In 1495 and subsequently the sum of £5 was paid every half year to Sir Donald Rede chaplain, who was appointed to sing for the soul of King James III. in Saint Duthois chapel at Tain.¹⁰ In 1517 King James V. presented Sir John Ferne chaplain to the chaplainry pensionary of £10 Scots, to be yearly raised from the fermes of the earldom of Ross, founded by King James IV. in the college church of Tayne, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Donald Rede.¹¹ In 1543 (26 March) Queen Mary presented Sir John Nycholsoun to the same chaplainry, then vacant or when vacant by the demission or decease of Sir Hugh Farny.¹² In the same year (2 April) that queen presented Sir William Home chaplain to the same chaplainry, stated to be vacant by the decease of Sir John Farny.¹³

The church, dedicated to Saint Duthace, appears to have stood on the low beach north of the town, where its ruins, composed of strongly cemented granite blocks, and now known as the chapel of Saint Duthace, may still be seen.¹⁴ The chapel of Saint Duthace stood in the town or close to it, and, as above detailed, was in 1487 erected into the collegiate church of Tain, the fabric of which is still standing.¹ This church consists of a chancel, nave, a chapel at the south east end of the chancel (a complete ruin), a south porch, a detached tower in the middle of the town, and a detached chapel a little south of the former, still nearly perfect.² It has a pulpit bestowed by James Stewart Earl of Moray, 'the good Regent.'³ Above a porch at the west end of the church is a niche with a stone image of a priest in eucharistic garments; and in a niche on its north side is the effigy of a bishop, supposed to be Saint Duthace.⁴ The present parish church, built in 1815, stands at the east end of the town.⁵

About the year 1790 the remains of a small chapel were to be seen in the neighbourhood of Lochslin three miles east from Tain.⁶

The shirt of Saint Duthace (camissa Sancti Duthaci) was in the fourteenth century preserved and revered at Tain, and Saint Duthace's cairn is still shown.⁷

A well, covered by the sea at high water, and of old believed to be a cure for consumption, is known as Saint Mary's Well.⁸

In the Libellus Taxationum the provostry of Tayne is valued at £40; in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. it is rated at £12, 8s., and in Balamund (perhaps the rating is that of the church of Tayne in 1270) at £4.⁹ At the Reformation the rental of the provostry was stated by Mr. Henrie Kinros as follows — 'The said haill provestrie consistit in offrandis and the vicarage of Tayne, of the quhilk vicarage the kirk kow and clayth with the pash offrandis ceiss, and only restis teind lamb and teind lynt, quhilk will not extend to xx. lib. or thairby.'¹⁰ At the same period the other tithes of the parish, then annexed to the subdeanery of Ross, were given as follows — The town of Tayne, occupied by Nicolas Ros commendator of Ferne, Thomas Fiddes, Andro Ros and his mother, Nicolas Ros, and Mitchell Furde, paid 104 marks; Morinchie, a half davach, occupied by Nicolas Ros, 12 marks; Talraquhy, a davach, occupied by Alexander Ros laird of Balnagowne, 22 marks; Cambuseurry, three-fourths of a davach, occupied by Adame Hay, 21 marks; Plaiddes, three-fourths of a davach, by Alexander Innes of Catboll, 8 marks; Pettogarty, half a davach, by the same Alexander, 8 marks; Ballecherye, a quarter davach, by the same, 4 marks; Innerartie and Balnatouch, half a davach, by Michall Furde, 6 marks; Petgerello, half a davach, by John Drumond, 8 marks; Balnagaw, half a davach, by Walter Innes, 4 marks; Lochislyne and Newtown, a davach, one half belonging to the bishop, and the other to the subdean, 6 marks; Skardy with the pendicles, occupied by Agnes Ros, 6 marks; Kerskeith, by Andro Ross, 3 marks; Auley, by Agnes Ros, 2 marks.¹¹ In 1574 Finlaw Mansoun, the minister serving Tayn, Eddirtayn, Nyg, and Tarbert, had for his stipend £66, 13s. 4d.,

The rental of the chaplainry of Tarlaquhy, held in feu by George Munro of Sir Robert Melvill the chaplain, is stated at the same period at £20.³

Sir Simon Blyth at the same era gives in to the collector of thirds the rental of his prebend (apparently that of Cambuscurry) as follows— 'The rental of the prebendrie of Than perteing to Symond Blyth, quhilk sould pay yeirlic to him iiiii. lib., and serve the self, albeit I haif gottin na payment thairof this vi. yeiris bygane.'⁴

The girth (immunitas or libertas) of Tayne or of Saint Duthace was nearly coextensive with the parish. By an inquest held in 1439, of which a notarial copy is preserved among the burgh records, the girth, included between four crosses which marked the four corners called the girth crosses, is averred tó have been founded by King Malcolm Canmore, and afterwards confirmed by King David II. and some of his successors.⁵ In 1306 or 1307, while King Robert Bruce was in the island of Rachryn, his queen and her daughter Marjory left the castle of Kildrumy in Aberdeenshire, and took refuge in the girth of Tane.

In the year 1439 Alexander Earl of Ross became bound, in case he should lawfully obtain certain lands from Alexander of Suthirland and his wife Maryoun of the Ilys the Earl's sister, to grant to them in heritage lands of equal yearly value between the bridge of Alnes and the gyirth of Tayne.² In 1458 John of Ile, Earl of Ross, Lord of the Isles, and sheriff of Innernys, addressed to John M'Culloch, bailie of the girth of Sanct Duthowis, a letter requiring him to protect the privileges of the burgh of Innernys in that quarter.³ In 1487, as we have seen, the foundation charter of the collegiate church places the towns of Tallirky, Morinehy, and Cambuscurrey, within the immunity of Tayne.⁴ Among the acts of parliament in 1503 occurs the following memorandum — 'Anent the girthit, that my lord of Ros and the kirkmen prouide tharfor as they think to be doвне.'⁵ In 1512 King James IV. granted anew to William Makeculloch of Pladdis the lands of Scardy, Pladdis, Petnely, Pettogarty, Balmoduthy (apparently Bailedhuich or Tain), and Ballecarew, with the office of bailie of the immunity of Tane, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys, which William had resigned, reserving to the King the escheats of the bailie courts, for the usual services and the yearly payment of 5 marks to a perpetual chaplain in the cathedral church of Ross.⁶ In 1533 William M'Culloch of Pladis sold to Walter Innes of Towchis two-thirds of Pitnely with the tofts and crofts, and the half of Balmathoche with the tofts and crofts, to be held of the granter and of the King as Earl of Ross, to the latter of whom were reserved the right of the escheats of court, of bludewitis, and of theft.⁷ In the same year King James V. granted to Walter Innes a crown charter of the lands.⁸ In 1535 William M'Culloch sold to William Dunnon a minor (puero), lord of the third part of Arkboll, with remainder to his brother David Dunnon and his heirs, to John Dunnon and his heirs, and to Andrew Dunnon and his heirs, the lands of Pittogartye lying within the immunity of Saint Duthace of Tain, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys.⁹ In 1536 King James V. granted to William Dunnon a crown charter of the lands, and to William M'Culloch a letter of reversion to the same.¹⁰ In 1539 the same king granted to the same William a letter of reversion to two-thirds of Pitnely and the half of Ballethoche, alienated by him in 1533 to Walter Innes of Towchis.¹¹ In the same year William Makeculloch sold those lands to William Dunnone of Pittogerte, and King James V. granted to the latter a crown charter, and to the former reversion to the lands.¹² In 1540 he seems to have granted another letter of reversion to the same William M'Culloch.¹ In that year he confirmed the same lands to William Dunnone of Pittogarte, and in special warrandice of them the lands of Plaidis; the two-thirds of Pitnele and the half of Ballecouth, which formerly belonged to the deceased William Makeculloche of Plaidis, having been alienated by him under reversion to the deceased Walter Innes of Touchis, and now belonging to William Dunnone as assignee of William Makculloche, who redeemed the lands from Walter Innes.² In the same year King James confirmed to Mariot Grant her liferent of the same lands granted to her by William Dunnone.³ In 1541 he granted to Thomas Makculloch, the son and heir of the deceased William Makculloch of Pladdis, the nonentry and other dues of Pladdis, Skardy, Belleairich, and the office of bailie of the immunity of Thane, which had been in the King's hands for the last two terms.⁴ In 1547 William Dunnone of Petnelie granted to Elizabeth Vrqhart, the relict of the deceased John Vause of Lochslune, and now his own wife, as compensation for her dowry, the liferent of the lands of Petnelie and Pettogarty.⁵ In 1548 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1550 a charter is witnessed by Robert Makculloch of Pladis.⁷ In 1552 the same Robert sold to his uncle Alexander Innes of Catboll captain of Orknay, and to Elizabeth Innes his wife, the lands and lordship of Plaidis, Pettogarte, Balleguith, Ballekere, Petnele, Scarde with the mill, Torane with the office of bailie of Tayne, and Litill Kintes with the mills and other pertinents, lying in the lordship and barony of Plaidis, in the bailiary of Tayne, and sheriffdom of Innernes.⁸ In the same year Queen Mary granted Alexander Innes and his wife a crown charter of the lands.⁹ In 1562 that queen confirmed a charter of William Denwne of Petnele, granting, with the consent of his curators Master Thomas Denowne rector of Kincarné and Alexander Clunes burgess of Cromertie, to Katherine Vaus, the daughter of Jasper Vaus of Lochslyn, the liferent of the lands of Petnele, then occupied by Master Thomas Denowne and John Makculloch.¹⁰ At the Reformation the lands of the parish were occupied as above.¹¹ They subsequently passed into various hands, and the office of bailie of Tayne within the four girth crosses was held in 1579 by Alexander Innes of Cromy (to whom it was sold with the barony of Pladdis by Alexander Innes of Pladdis), in 1617 by Sir William Sinclair of Catbol (who in that year was served heir in the same barony to his father Sir George Sinclair of May), and in 1681 by Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbett.¹²

Tain, said to be the Norse thing (a place of judgement), and locally styled in Gaelic Balegowich or Balduich (the town of Saint Duthace), was formerly asserted to have been created a royal burgh by King Malcolm Canmore before the year 1093.¹³ By the fictitious grant of that king, said to have been confirmed by some of his successors, the inhabitants had power to

The burgh with the lands perambulated yearly within the four corner crosses called the girth crosses — 2. The lands of Innerrathie, Gorlinges, Clerk-island, and Priest-island, belonging to the burgh from time immemorial — 3. The harbour and shore adjacent to the burgh, with the customs and privileges of a free port, the fishings of salmon and of white fish in fresh water and in salt, and also of chouses and rock chouses, mussel-scape, and mussels, within the flowing of the sea within sight of the burgh and the boundaries called Duthois Scape, with wrack and ware within the bounds of the crosses and both above and below the bounds of the adjacent sands.¹⁰ In 1675 King Charles II. confirmed all the former grants made to the burgh.¹¹

At Inver in the eastern extremity of the parish there is a village with a fishing population.¹

In 1496, 1497, 1501, 1503, 1504, 1507, and 1513, King James IV. made pilgrimages to the shrine of Saint Duthace at Tain (the last having been performed within a month of his death at Flodden), and on these occasions he made offerings (usually of the sum of 14 shillings), in 'Sanct Duthois chapell quhair he was borne,' in 'Sanct Duthois chapell in the kirkzaird of Tayn,' in 'Sanct Duthois kirk,' and at 'the stok of Sanct Duthois town,' and generally gave a gratuity to the man that bore 'Sanct Duthois bell.'² He possessed a 'relict of Sanct Dutho set in silver' (of what kind does not appear), which was doubtless preserved as having a miraculous power of healing, and which continued in the hands of his son King James V. down at least to the year 1534.³ In 1528, previously to the condemnation of Patrick Hamilton, the bishops and clergy tried to persuade King James V. to 'pass in pilgrimage to Sanct Dothess in Rosse,' but it is not recorded that he went.⁴ In the upper part of the parish of Tain a footpath leading across a moor is known as the King's Causeway, and may possibly be the old bridle road by which King James IV. 'raid to Sanct Duthowis.'⁵

TILL the year 1628 the parish of Tarbat included the present parish of Fearn, which was separated from it 'by the special consent of the bishop and whole diocese,' each parish having 10 davachs land.¹⁴

The old parish of Tarbat thus consisted of two districts — Fearn, generally level and arable, and Tarbat, a low bare promontory terminating eastward in the point known as Tarbatness, probably the Torfnaes of the Norwegian chroniclers.¹⁵

In the year 1227 Andrew the vicar of Arterbert was present at Kenedor in Moray with others of the clergy of Ross on the occasion of the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Ross and Moray about the diocesan right of the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹ Before the year 1529 one of the bishops of Ross granted to the canons of New Ferne the vicarage of the church of Saint Colman situated in the place called Terbert.² The canons had also the teindsheaves in the town called Alen in Terbert belonging to the vicarage, four acres of land beside the church of Terbert, and an acre of land in the town called Terbert.³ In 1529 all these were with their other possessions confirmed to the canons by Pope Clement VII.⁴ At the Reformation the parish church of Tarbat was included in the rental of the bishoprick of Ross given up to the collector of thirds, being probably a mensal church of the bishop.⁵ In 1586 King James VI. granted for life to Andro Wod his comptroller a yearly pension of £200 Scots, and to John Fentoun the comptroller's clerk a yearly pension of 200 marks Scots, out of two-thirds of the bishoprick of Ross, to begin respectively in 1585 and 1588; and assigned as payment to the former 10 chalders bear at £20 the chalders, and to the latter 6 chalders 10 bolls bear, out of the fruits of the parish of Tarbert, being part of the bishoprick.⁶

The church, dedicated, as appears, to Saint Colman the bishop, stood at Tarbat on the Dornoch Firth.⁷ It was probably rebuilt on the same site about the year 1628, when the parish was divided.⁸ Under it till the year 1707 or later there was a vault 30 feet long, said to have been built as a church by Saint Columba (Colman?).⁹ A new church was built in 1756.¹⁰

On the coast near the old castle of Tarbat or Ballone there was a chapel known as Teampul Eraich, and near it a well named Tobair Mhuir or Mary's Well.¹¹

At Portmahomack, styled, says a writer of the seventeenth century, in old charters Portus Columbi, but probably meaning the port of Saint Colmac or Calmaig, there is a green hill known as Chapellhill or Knoekshorty, on which a chapel appears to have stood.¹²

Between 1486 and 1516 Thomas M'Culloch abbot of Fearn built a chapel at Midd Genie, which afterwards came to be known as Chapel Barr, being probably dedicated to Saint Barr.¹³

Before the year 1529 Pope Clement VII. confirmed to the canons of Fearn the chapel of Saint Mary situated in the place called Cathabul.¹⁴ This is probably the small chapel, the outlines of which are still to be seen amid a clump of trees in a field named Baleachan (Hector's town) on the farm of Cadboll Mount formerly named Hill of Geanies.¹⁵

There is a ruined chapel at Hilton on the Moray Firth.¹⁶

In 1633 Alexander Corbatt of Arkboll was served heir male to his father John Corbat of Arkboll in two-thirds of the lands of Arkboll, including Portnawest or the harbour of Saint John, with the chapel of Saint John.¹ The chapel stood at Wester Arbol, and was dedicated to Saint John the Baptist.²

There was also a chapel at Alhansallach, apparently dedicated to Saint Bride.³

Early in the thirteenth century (probably about 1227) Ferquhard Earl of Ross founded an abbey of Premonstratensian monks at 'Farne beside Kincardin in Stracharrin.'⁴ Whatever truth may be in the alleged origin of Ferne, the abbey long acknowledged its dependence upon the mother house of Whitherne. Malcolm was the first abbot, ruled for fifteen years, and after his death 'was holden amongis the peopill as a sanct.'⁵ He was succeeded by Malcolm of Nig, during whose rule (apparently about the year 1238) Earl Ferquhard removed the abbey to the parish of Tarbat, after which it was styled New Ferne, latinised Nova Farina.⁶ Between the years 1252 and 1274 appears Machabeus Makersin third abbot, during whose rule probably between 1261 and 1264 the convent was established and their regulations confirmed by Pope Urban IV.⁷ Between 1274 and 1323 there appear to have been four abbots, Sir Colin, who was abbot in 1281, Mertein and John (canons of Quhythorne), and Mark Ross the son of Sir Mark Ross, who became abbot in 1321.⁸ The last three were presented by the prior of Quhythorne.⁹ In 1336 the abbey being built only of rough stones and clay, and appearing ruinous, William Earl of Ross suggested that it should be rebuilt with hewn stone, and seven brethren were appointed to 'beg and thig' through the country for contributions.¹⁰ The rebuilding was begun in 1338 under abbot Mark, who died about 1350 and was buried within the abbey church.¹¹ Abbot Mark Ross was succeeded by Donald Pupill, who was elected by the convent, and whose election was confirmed by the prior of Quhythorne.¹² In 1356 William Earl of Ross, on the narrative that the abbey of New Ferne was founded and strengthened with privileges by its founders, as appeared from charters granted to it by Alexander King of Scotland, to the effect that it should be free from all royal exactions and contributions, confirmed its freedom from the same, with the exception only of that clerical tax (clericatura) proclaimed by Ottobon the Pope's legate in Scotland, of which the collectors were Roger bishop of Ross and Donald abbot of Ferne.¹ Between the years 1350 and 1372 various charters are witnessed by abbot Donald, and in 1372, while he still ruled, the rebuilding of the abbey was finished.¹⁴ In the last named year Earl William, who built and repaired the abbey church, is said to have granted to the canons 'the kirk of Tarridie in Ross.¹ Abbot Donald died in 1383.² Adam Monilaw, his successor, was abbot in 1398, died in 1407, and appears to have been succeeded by Thomas Kethirathie, who was appointed by the prior of Quhythorne, and after ruling for a short time resigned.³ The next abbot was Finlaw, the nephew of Sir William Feriar vicar of Tayne, who after having 'theikit the kirk of Ferne' died in 1436.⁴ He appears to have been succeeded by Finlay Macfaid, who was abbot in 1442.⁵ During his rule, by a will dated 1456, Alexander Sutherland of Dunbeath bequeathed to the 'chanon' of Ferne for a daily mass with a note of the Regina 6 marks from the lands of Mulfayle and Drumerne, and, failing these, from the lands of Dumbeath; and of 30 trentals to be said for his soul he appointed four to be said in Feyrne.⁶ All his goods not specially disposed of were left at the disposal of abbot Finlay and others.⁷ Finlay Macfaid died in 1485 and was buried within the abbey church.⁸ His successor was Master John Fearn, who built Saint Michael's aisle on the south side of the church, founded the dormitory, built the cloister, and purchased in Flanders for the abbey a tabernacle and lettron of brass, the organ, chalices, vestments, and various other ornaments.⁹ He appears to have ruled about a year, having died in 1486.¹⁰ Thomas M'Culloch succeeded to the abbacy in 1486, and appears in record in 1487 and 1488.¹¹ He completed the dormitory, but, being deprived of the possessions and revenues of the abbey, except the mill of Fearn and the town of Mid Geny, by Andrew Stewart bishop of Caithness, who was appointed abbot on a false representation to the Pope, he retired to Mid Geny, where, as before stated, he built a chapel.¹² He died in 1516.¹³ Bishop Stewart, after being actual abbot for a year, died at Skibo in 1517.¹⁴ 'And after him succeeded Master Patrick Hamiltoun, who was accused for heresie be James Beaton archbishop of Saint Andrews, primat of Scotland, with the counsell of the haill clergie of Scotland, and was decerned to be burnt and delivered in the seculars hands for diverse articles of heresie grounded upon Luther's laws . . . upon the whilk articles the said Archbishop gave sentence definitive at the metropolitan kirk of Saint Andrews the last day of February 1527 [1528], where the said Master Patrick Hamiltoun was burnt in presence of Gavin bishop of Glasgow, George bishop of Dunkeld, John bishop of Brechin, William bishop of Dunblane, Patrick prior of Saint Andrews, David abbot of Arbrothok, George abbot of Dumfermling, Alexander abbot of Cambuschkynoch, Henry abbot of Lindores, John prior of Pittenwemyss, the dean and subdean of Glasgow, Mr. Hugh Spence, Thomas Ramsay, and Allan Meldrum.'¹⁵ The successor of Patrick Hamilton was Donald Denoon.¹⁶ In 1529 Pope Clement VII. confirmed to the canons of New Ferne all their in the parish of Tarbert, extending yearly to 80 bolls (teinds which arose from the lands of the abbacy), 'without preiudice of the said Alexanderis executioun vpon the reddiest vthir fruitis of the said bischoprik in cais he be not thankfullie ansuerit of the saidis fruitis assignit.'¹ In 1571 he leased some of the abbey lands to the same Alexander.² In the same year (10 July) King James VI. granted to Issobell Rois, the relict of the deceased Thomas Rois, the escheat of the goods of the deceased Thomas Rois the son of Nicolas Ros abbot of Ferne, a rebel and at the horn for not paying to Andro Monro, the chamberlain of the bishoprick of Rois, certain teinds of the lands of Eister Gany and Tarrall in the parish of Tarbet for the years 1569 and 1570; and (2 December) he granted the same to Alexander Suthirland.³ In 1574 the same king confirmed a grant in heritage, made to Alexander Ferne by the deceased Nicolas commendator of Ferne, of the conventual lands of Cullyne with the alehouse and croft then occupied by Donald Makeonachie, lying between the ditches of the monastery commonly called the ward dykis towards the north and the lands of Eister Rarecheis as the march stones and the fauld dyk extend towards the south, the meadows of the lands of Eister Rarecheis towards the west and the common road descending to Tulloch towards the east—also of a croft of land called the smythis croft lying between the public road on the west and the lands of Kilpot on the north, and the lands and crofts of Ballechyrich on the south and east—and of the crofts of the monastery and the 'meringis' of Ballechericht formerly called Waltir Makrorreis crofts, lying between the said smith's croft and the public road on the west, Toburnayngor, Graystane, the pasture and the moss of Ferne on the east, the lands of Eister Kilpot and Rynmoir on the north, and the common pasture of the monastery adjacent and extending to the lands of Catbollfischear and Tulloch on the south—all within the abbacy of Ferne and sheriffdom of Innernes.⁴ In 1584 King James VI. granted to Walter Ros for life the abbacy or commend of Ferne with the provostry of Tayne, resigned by Thomas commendator of the same, reserving to Thomas the liferent with reversion to the abbacy in the case of Walter's death occurring before his, and to the ministers serving the parish churches of the abbey and provostry the liferent of their stipends.⁵ In 1587 the same king confirmed three grants made by Thomas Ros commendator of Ferne—one to Donald Ros in Littil Rany and his heirs of the lands then in his hands lying between the lands of Lytill and Mekill Allanis towards the west, the lands of Arthreis, Coillen, and Balleuith on the south, the feu-ferme lands (terras feudifirmas) of the monastery of Ferne belonging to the laird of Ballingown on the east, and the lands of Ballinblair, Brigend, Mylncroft, Dowcateroft, and Weitlandis, on the north, with the four alehouses and brewlands of the monastery lying near it and occupied by John M'Allane, John Reid, John Murray, and Andrew Dowglas, the kill commonly called the kill of Ferne, the gardens occupied by Andrew Dowglas, David Reid, and John Murray, and the mill of Ferne with the astricted and other usual multures—another to Donald Ros Hucheinsoun in Ballemakie and his heirs of the lands of Ballemakie extending to a davach, resigned by Alexander Ros of Balnagowne formerly feuffermar of the same — and a third to John Ros of Litill Allane and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, of the lands of Muldearge and Knokandow, resigned by George Ros of Balnagowne — all lying within the abbacy of Ferne and sheriffdom of Inverness.¹ Abbot Thomas Ross died at Tain in 1596, and was buried at Fearn in Saint Michael's aisle.² In 1606 James Gordoune of Letterfurie was served heir to his father Patrick Gordoune of Letterfurie in the manor of Ferne, of old called the monastery of Ferne, the demesne lands and lands of Ferne, the lands and towns of Eister and Wester Ferne, the mill of Ferne, the lands of Invercarrone, the lands of Downe Westra, the lands of Muldarge, Ukades, Miltoone, Ballemochie, Midganie, Pitkerie, Easterganie, Wasterganie, Mikillrane, Balblair, Dowcroft, Brighthouse, Mylcroft, Veitland and the fishing of Bronache, Catboll-fischer, Lachclawy, Tulliche, Littilrane, Arnote, Ryland, the four alehouses of Fearn, the lands called Smythisland, Hartecroft (or Bartyscroft), the croft called Robesoun's (Roresoun's?) croft, the croft called Baidnaseucht (or Balleneserachè) or the Cotteris Deillings, and eight acres of land occupied by the fishers of Ferne, with the mill, all formerly belonging to the abbacy of Ferne as part of its patrimony, and of the extent of £337, 13s.³ In 1615 David Ros of Balnagowne was served heir to his father George in the lands of Wester Ferne, Downie and fishings of Bonack, Ruylome, Meikill Rayny, Pitkerie, Muldarg, Torrendow, the half of Wester Ganie, Cullin, Ballinsirach, the croft of Ballinsirach, Easter Drum and Ferne, four acres of Catbollfischer, the limekiln of Ferne, the mill of Ferne, the demesne lands of Wester Drum and Ferne, with the dues and feuffermes of the same, and half of the manor, buildings, and gardens of Ferne, of old named the monastery of Ferne, in the barony of Gaynes and sheriffdom of Inverness, of the extent of £222, 11s. 2½d. of old ferne and augmentation.⁴ In 1617 King James VI. annexed the abbacy to the bishoprick of Ross in favour of Bishop Patrick, and in 1633 King Charles I. renewed or confirmed the annexation in favour of Bishop John.⁵ At an earlier period of the same century the abbacy came to be known as the barony of Ganyes (now Geanies); and in 1643 Sir James Sinclair of Cannesbye Baronet was served heir male to his grandfather George Sinclair of May in half the manor of Ferne of old called the monastery of Ferne, the lands and towns of Eister Ganny and Mid Ganye, and the alehouse and croft of the same, the lands of Bellamuthie and Ballavaiche, the lands of Cadboll-fischer and Tulloche, the lands of Lachelavèig, Sallachie, and Muckirnach, with the alehouse and alehouse crofts, half the lands of Cotteris Delvingis and eight acres of old occupied by the fishers of Ferne, the lands of Litle Myntoun of Ferne, the lands of Litle Ranny, the lands of Belblaire with the alehouse and its croft, the lands of Dowcroft, Brighthouse with alehouse and croft, Milcroft, Weitland, Almet, Innercharrone, with alehouse and croft, and Eister Ferne, all in the barony of Ganyes and sheriffdom of Inverness, and united into the barony of Cadboll, of the extent of £170, 6s. 10¾d. feufferme.⁶

1519 Sir Donald M'Gillemeil canon; in 1525 John Monclaws canon; in 1543 Sir William Caldour canon; in 1548 Sir John M'Culloch canon, and Patriek Davidson chaplain of the altar of the Virgin Mary; in 1549 James Reid, who built the well in the cloister, and died at Ferne; in 1552 Donald Faid canon and subprior; in 1554 George Baxter faber lignarius; in 1557 Robert Strabrok canon, mentioned above in 1538; in 1564 Andrew Dauson monk; in 1588 Dean David Reid canon; in 1592 David Clepen citizen of Leyth, who died at Ferne in the house of Alexander Ferne at Balnasyraeh, and was buried at Tane; and in 1596 Alexander Ferne, who died at Balnaclune and was buried in Ferne.

The abbey church consisted of a choir with two chapels, and a nave, on the north of which the conventual buildings appear to have stood.¹ The choir, still standing, and measuring 99 feet by 25½, was used as the parish church from 1628 when the parish of Fearn was erected till 1742, when the roof fell in while the people were assembled for worship, and killed 36 persons.² It appears to have been disused till 1772, when it was repaired and again used as the parish church.³ Within it there is a stone effigy of a warrior shown as that of Ferquhard Earl of Ross.⁴ In Saint Michael's aisle is the effigy of abbot Finlay M'Fead, with the inscription, *Hic jacet Finlains M'Fead abbas de Fern qui obiit anno mccccxxxv.*⁵

In the rental of the bishoprick of Ross, as given up to the collector of thirds by Bishop Henry Sinclair between the years 1561 and 1564, the teinds of the parish church of Tarbat are stated at 33½ chalders victual, £26, 8s. teind silver, and 40 muttuns.⁶ Among the 'sowmes of money and vietuall giwen out of the bishoprick of Ros in ordinar now yeirlic' the bishop includes as given to the curates of Nyg and Terbat £40, and to the preacher of the kirks of Nyg and Terbat £50.⁷ In 1574 Gawin Dunbar reader at Tarbert had for his stipend 20 marks and the kirklands.⁸

Among the sums given out of the bishoprick yearly at the era of the Reformation the bishop includes also 12 bolls of victual to the chaplain of Allane, probably the same as Alhansallach before mentioned.⁹

In the Taxatio Sec. XVI. the monastery of Ferne is rated at £82, 13s. 1d., and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at 400 marks.¹⁰

In the year 1281 William Earl of Ros, as the compensation exaected of him and his by Archebald bishop of Moray for injuries done to the churches of Petyn and Brachuli, granted to the bishop the two davachs of land in Ros which were called Kattepoll, and a quarter (quarterium) of land which was called Petkenny, for the maintenance of the Friars Minorites who should for any time dwell at Elgyn in their house near the cathedral church; so that the bishop with the advice of his chapter should appoint some discreet and faithful person as distributor, to receive yearly the whole ferme of the said lands, and to distribute it as he should see fit for the maintenance and necessary uses of the said friars; but, should the friars not be in the place or refuse to remain there, the ferme of the lands was to be wholly converted at the discretion of the bishop and chapter to the maintenance of two chaplains who should minister continually in the cathedral church of Elgyn for the souls of all the faithful dead; and the Earl bound himself and his heirs, if they should ever contravene the arrangement, to submit to the jurisdiction of the bishop, or, in case of the vacancy of the see, of the dean and chapter, who should compel them by the censures of the church to observe it.¹ In 1375 William of Clyn, claiming to be tenant of the town of Cathboll belonging to the bishop of Moray, appeared in presence of witnesses at the town of Nyg in Ross, and requested of Master William of Chesholme treasurer of Moray and John of Forbes lord of that ilk, the procurators of Alexander bishop of Moray, that the lands and his corns of the said town, arrested by those procurators for the fermes of the town both past and present, should be given him to pledge (ad plegium)—promising on his oath, which he of his own accord gave by the hands of the said treasurer, that he would settle with the bishop about the said town and fermes against the feast of Saint Andrew the apostle next instant, or, if he could not come to an agreement within that time, that he would not thenceforth intromit with the town, or raise any controversy with the bishop or his church regarding it, or publicly or privately offer any obstruction to them or to those to whom they might lease the town; on which Master William of Chesholme, with the consent of his comprocurator, forthwith restored to William of Clyn to pledge a certain glove in lieu of the lands of the town and of his corns, and suspended all inhibition before made by the procurators till the feast of Saint Andrew the apostle immediately following.² In 1478 William bishop of Moray, with the consent of his chapter and of Gilbert Richardson and John Williamson the chaplains of Catbollis, for the promotion of divine worship and the augmentation of the salary of the chaplains, leased to John M'Culloch and three successive heirs either lineal or collateral the lands of Catpolle lying in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernis, which the deceased William Earl of Ross granted for the maintenance of two chaplains in the church of Moray, for payment of 14 marks Scots yearly in the cathedral church of Ross at the usual terms, and making one suit either in person or by deputy at the bishop's head court to be held yearly at Elgyn after Easter.³ In subsequent records occur the names Catboll or Cadboll, Wester Catboll, Catboll-abbot, and Catboll-fisher, applying probably to only two towns or properties, Cadboll perhaps being the lands granted to the bishop of Moray, and the other three being but different designations of a Cadboll belonging to the abbot of Fearn. In 1552 appears in record Alexander Innes of Catboll captain of Orknay, to whom the lands of Plaidis and others were sold by his nephew Robert M'Culloch, perhaps the descendant of John M'Culloch to whom the chaplains' lands of Cadboll were granted in 1478.⁴

In 1534 there appears in record Andrew Dunnune of Wester Catboll.⁵ In 1536 John Denowne of Daidstoun grants a charter at Catboll (in this instance apparently Wester Catboll) to Dowy Makeulloch (of the Plaidis family) and her heirs by his own son Donald Denowne.¹ In 1562 Andrew Denowne of Wester Catbole again appears in record, and about the same period, as we have seen, the lands of Catboll-fisher were among those leased to the Dwnwnis by the abbot of Fearn.² In 1606 John Denone was served heir to his father Andrew Denone of Catboll-abbot in the lands of Catboll-abbot, Tulloch, half of Sallochic, half of Lachelawak, and half of Muikarniche, in the earldom of Ross, of the extent of £14, 7s. (a part of those held of the abbot of Fearn by the Dwnwnis of the previous century).³ In 1643, as we have seen, the same lands, including those of Cadboll-fischer, were part of the barony of Ganyes or Cadboll held by Sir James Sinclair of Cannesbye.⁴ In 1649 Andrew Denone was served heir to his father John Denone of Catboll in nearly the same lands, including Catboll-abbat, and of the same extent, £14, 7s., in the subdeanery and sheriffdom of Ross.⁵ In 1666 Master John M'Keinzie was served heir male to his father Master Thomas M'Keinzie of Inverlawell in various lands, including those of Wester Catboll or Fisher, of the extent of £9 feuferme.⁶

In 1351 Hugh of Ross, the son of the deceased Hugh Earl of Ross, confirmed to William of Marischal and Mariot his wife 6 marks of valued rent of Tarbart, granted to them by his father Hugh and brother William Earls of Ross.⁷ In 1368 Mariot of Hirdmannystoun, the daughter of the deceased Andrew of Hirdmannystoun, and widow of William Mariscall, quitclaimed to the same Hugh of Ross the same 6 marks of yearly revenue of Tarbart, which were then confirmed to him by his brother Earl William.⁸ In 1374 or 1375 King Robert II. confirmed to Hew of Ross the same 6 marks or £4.⁹ In 1375 there appears in record Sir Walter of Tarbard (whether clerical or lay is not apparent).¹⁰ In 1476 King James III. granted to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, the wife of John Lord of the Isles, for her maintenance certain lands in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, including 5 marklands of Tarwat; and in 1477 on attaining his majority he confirmed the grant.¹¹ In 1485 (25 January) the Lords of Council ordained that James of Dunbar should pay to Elisabeth Countess of Ross the sum of 100 marks of the mails of her lands of Ross (including, as afterwards appears, those of Easter Tarbart) due at the term of Whitsunday last.¹² They further ordained that the consideration of a claim made by the Countess against James of Dunbar for 13 chalders of victual and 100 marks received on her behalf from the Earl of Huntle should be deferred till the 24th of March, and that the Earl should be summoned to appear for his interest.¹³ An action raised by the same James against the Countess for payment of £40 of fee which he alleged remained due by her for five years, and for fulfilment of a condition under which he alleged that he held her lands, namely, that the dues should be diminished when the lands were waste, the Lords deferred till the same 24th of March.¹⁴ In 1489 (21 January) the Lords Auditors ordained that James of Dunbar of Cumnok should pay to Elizabeth Countess of Ross the sum of 736 marks Scots due by him for the mails of the lands of Ros which he held of her in lease, as proved by a bond under his seal and subscription; that his lease should be declared null because he had failed in payment of the dues at the terms contained in his bond; and that his lands and goods should be distrained for payment.¹ James of Dunbar, though regularly summoned in the case, failed to appear.² He seems however still to have held the lands, as in the following year (25 February 1490) the Lords of Council ordained him to pay to the Countess 200 marks Scots as the dues of the lands for Martinmas preceding, as shewn by his bond.³ In the same year King James IV., as tutor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted to David Ross, the nephew and apparent heir of John Ross of Balnagown, a yearly revenue of 6 marks from the lands of Tarbat, with certain lands in Ross, resigned by John Ross and reserving to him the liferent.⁴ In the same year he appears to have granted to him the lands of Tarbat.⁵ In 1494 (9 December) the Countess of Ross brought another action against James of Dunbar for wrongfully withholding from her £42, 'with the mare of the Witsunday terme' of her lands of Ros, and four score head of oxen and cows, and for wrongfully occupying her lands of Dolguy (Delgny?) and Estir Tarbart with the rest of her lands of Ros; in which case the Lords Auditors in presence of the parties ordained that James of Dunbar did wrong, that he should cease to occupy the lands, that he should give to the Countess the dues and cattle in question in so far as she could prove her case before William Monroo of Fowlis, that the latter should be empowered to hear the case, and, if it was proved, to distrain accordingly, and that the lands should forthwith be 'red' to the Countess.⁶ In 1506 King James IV. commissioned Andro bishop of Caithnes to let all the lands in the lordships of Ross and Ardmannach which formerly belonged to Elisabeth Countess of Ross, except the lands of Tarbat, for the term of five years to the tenants by whom they were formerly held or to others.⁷ In 1507 the same king granted his lands of Tarbart in Ross, with power to sublet, to Master Gawine Dunbar archdeacon of Saint Andrews.⁸ In 1514 James Dunbar of Tarbart appears in record.⁹ In 1516 King James V. granted to James Dunbar, the son of David Dunbar of Durris, the King's lands of Tarbart in the earldom of Ross, then occupied by him, for nine years from the following Whitsunday, with power to sublet.¹⁰ In 1526 the same king granted in ferme to James Dunbar of Tulyglennis his lands of Estir Tarbert with the fishings in fresh and salt water.¹¹ In 1531, 1538, 1540, and 1542 James Dunbar of Terbart or of Tullyglennis appears in record.¹² In 1542 King James V. confirmed to James Dunbar of Tuliglennis and Elizabeth Leslie his wife, and to their heirs male, with remainder to James's own heirs male, to his uncle Robert Dunbar and his heirs male, and to his own heirs whomsoever, Arde, and a fourth of the four crofts called Ladycroft, Makhuecounecroft, Scheipherdercroft, and the croft cultivated by Megot Enymawaise, to be held for yearly payment of one penny blencherme.¹ In the same year King James V. granted to John Corbet a crown charter of those lands.² In 1542 that king granted to John M'Culloch, the nephew and heir apparent of Angus M'Culloch of Terrell, with remainder to Hugh and Angus the sons of Angus M'Culloch, a yearly revenue of 50s. from the lands of Estir Hard, which Angus had resigned.³ In the same year he granted to George Monro of Davacharty a crown charter of a fourth of the lands of Ester Arde, called the Intoune of Estir Arde, sold to him by his kinsman James Dunbar of Terbert.⁴ In 1545 James Dunbar of Terbat sold to John Corbat of Arkeboill the fourth of Eistir Ard, and the fourth of the crofts called Ladycroft, M'Hutcheoncroft, Croft-nageracht, and Croftnacon (spelled also Croftnatoun and Croftnarone); and in 1546 Queen Mary granted to John Corbat a crown charter.⁵ In 1552 that queen confirmed to Andrew Munro and Katherine Vrquhard his wife the fourth of the lands of Eistir Ard, granted to them by George Monro of Dalcarty.⁶ In the same year she granted to George Monro of Dalcarty and Jonet Fraser his wife a crown charter of the fourth part of Eister Ard called the Intoun, and of other lands in Ros sold to them by James Dunbar of Terbert, to whom at the same time she granted the right of reversion.⁷ In 1553 John Makculloch of Tarrell, in fulfilment of a marriage contract, granted in liferent to Christina Monypenny the sister of Thomas Monypenny of Kingkell, with remainder in succession to his heirs by her, and to his own heirs whomsoever, a yearly revenue of 50s. Scots from the lands of Eistir Aird; and Queen Mary in the same year confirmed the grant.⁸ In 1556 that queen confirmed to Marjory Ogiluy, the daughter of Walter Ogiluy of the Boyne, the liferent of the lands of Eister Airdis called Corbettisland, granted to her in 1555 by James Dunbar of Terbert and Eistir Airdis.⁹ In 1558 she granted to James Dunbar, the son and heir apparent of James Dunbar of Eister Terbert, the same lands of Eistir Airdis, which his father had resigned, reserving the liferent to the same Marjory Ogiluy.¹⁰ In 1559 she granted to John M'Culloch of Mckle Terrell a letter of reversion to the yearly revenue of 50s. from the lands of Eistir Hard, alienated by him under reversion to Thomas Monypenny of Kinkell.¹¹ In 1567 she granted in heritage to Master David Chalmer the ward and other dues of the property belonging to the deceased John M'Culloch of Terrell, including the same yearly revenue of 50s.¹² In 1568 it was forfeited by Master David Chalmer, and granted by King James VI. to Andrew Monro of Newmore, to whom in 1571 it was confirmed by the same king.¹ In 1577 Mariot M'Cullo was served heir to her father John M'Cullo of Mekill Tarrell in the same yearly revenue from the lands of Eister Ard.² In the same year King James VI. granted to Hugh Monro of Assint and Cristina Monro his wife a crown charter of the lands of half the Intoun of Easter Aird, occupied by Hugh Monro, and alienated in heritage to him and his wife by James Dunbar of Tarbart with consent of his wife Marjory Ogilbie; granting at the same time to the latter parties a letter of reversion to the lands.³ In 1578 the above yearly revenue of 50s. was resigned by Mariot M'Culloch, and granted in heritage by King James VI. to her and her future spouse George Munro the son and apparent heir of Andrew Monro of Newmoir.⁴ In 1601 Alexander Dumbar of Tarbert was served heir to his father James Dumbar of Tarbert in the lands of Eistir Aird called Corbettisland with the mill, of the old extent of 17s.⁵ In 1604 Master James Dumbar of Sanquhar, now of Tarbert, was served heir male and of entail to his brother Alexander Dumbar of Tarbert in the lands of Eistir Aird called Corbetsland, with the mill and fishings in salt and fresh water, of the old extent of £3.⁶ In 1627 John M'Kenzie of Tarbat was served heir male to his father Sir Rotheric M'Kenzie of Coegache in the lands of Eistir Aird of the old extent of £3, 6s. 8d., and in a yearly revenue of 50s. from the same lands of the old extent of 23s. 4d.⁷

In the parish are three fishing villages, Ballintore, Hiltown, and Portmahomack.⁸

On a small creek near Tarbatness, named Port-chaistal, is the site of an ancient castle or fort, defended on the land side by a deep ditch, and by some supposed to be the ancient Ethirdover.⁹ From it the first Earl of Cromarty took the style of Castlehaven.¹⁰ On the Black Moor in its neighbourhood are vestiges of an encampment.¹¹

The castle of Ballone or Tarbat stands on the east shore of the parish, and is still nearly entire.¹²

There was a castle at Cadboll on the same coast, of which there seem to be few or no remains.¹³

In the north east of the parish, near a lake variously named Locheye, Lochlin, and Lochslin (which belonged of old to the abbot of Fearn), stands the castle of Lochslin, the old dwelling of the Vauses, consisting of two towers 60 feet high, and respectively 38 and 20 feet square.¹⁴ In it was born in the year 1630 Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbat, afterwards first Earl of Cromertie, one of a family who succeeded the Dunbars in the possession of the Tarbat estates.¹⁵

There seem to have been several other castles in the parish, one of which belonged to the Sinclairs of Dunbeath.¹⁶

At Hilton stands one of three obelisks supposed without much foundation to commemorate the three sons of a Danish king who perished at sea off the neighbouring coast.² One side is richly sculptured; the other, from which the sculptures were erased about two centuries ago, bears a rude shield and label with an unmeaning Scotch inscription.³

Nig⁴ — Nyg⁵ — Nigg.⁶ (Map, No. 11.)

THIS parish consists of the Hill of Nigg, of old called the Bishop's Forest, about 500 feet in height, and forming about one-third of the whole parish; a fertile slope on the north west side of the hill; a considerable extent of plain; and a level tract called the Sands of Nigg covered by the sea at high water.⁷ The cliffs extending along the Moray Firth and the entrance to the Firth of Cromarty, where the Hill of Nigg takes the name of the Northern Sutor, have an average height of 300 feet above the sea.

In the year 1296 John of Dunbretan parson of the church of Nig of the county of Ros swore fealty to King Edward I. of England.⁸ Thenceforward till the Reformation there seems to be no mention of this church, but it appears to have been a mensal church of the bishop of Ross.⁹ In 1569 King James VI. presented Finlaii Mansoun reader at Nig to the vicarage of that church, vacant and in the King's hands 'as omittit and not gevin vp in rental be the last possessour thairof or vthirwyis quhatsumeuir.'¹⁰ In 1574 it was vacant, and in 1578 and again in 1581 King James VI. presented Alexander Clunes to the vicarage of Nig, vacant by the demission of Fynla Mansoun.¹¹

The church, built in 1626, and repaired in 1725 and 1786, stands at Nigg near the Sands, apparently on the site of its predecessors.¹²

At Culiss there is a small enclosure named the Chapel Park, in which in last century were some slight vestiges of a chapel.¹³

At the Reformation the bishop of Ross gave up the teinds of the parish of Nig to the collector of thirds at 19 chalders 5 bolls of victual, £15, 0s. 9d. in teind silver, and 29 muttuns.³ Among the sums yearly given from the bishoprick the bishop enumerates as given to the curates of Nyg and Terbat the sum of £40, and to the preacher of the same churches £50.⁴ In 1568 Fynlay Mansone as reader had for his stipend £20, and in 1569 as vicar he had £40; the sum assigned as stipend to the reader at Nyg in 1574 was 20 marks, and in 1576 it was £6, 13s. 4d. the amount of the vicarage.⁵

In the year 1333 Hugh Earl of Ross, who died in that year, granted to his son Hugh of Ross the four davachs of Rarechys.⁶ This Hugh of Ross is styled the first laird of Rarichies and Balnagown.⁷ In 1351 he dates a charter at Culuys.⁸ In 1368 he is styled Hugh of Ross lord of Raricheis.⁹ He was succeeded by William of Ross, apparently his son.¹⁰ In 1394 Walter of Ross was infefted in the lands of Rarichies on a precept of Euphame Countess of Ross.¹¹ In 1398 Alexander of Lesley Earl of Ross, the son and heir of the deceased lady Eufamia Countess of Ross, granted to Walter of Ross lord of Raricheis a davaeh of Culluys in the mairdom of Delgeny.¹² Walter was succeeded by Hugh Ross, whose son John was infefted in the same lands on a precept of Alexander of Ile Earl of Ross between the years 1429 and 1449.¹³ In 1490 King James IV., as tutor and governor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted to David Ross, the nephew and apparent heir of John Ross of Balnagown, the lands of Rareche, with the mills, brewhouses, tenants, and tenandries, and the lands of Estir Rareche, resigned by John Ross, and with reservation of the liferent to him; and to the same David Ross and his wife Helen Kethel the lands of Westir Rareche and Culleis.¹⁴ In the same year David Ross on a precept of the same king was infefted in the lordship of Balnagowne (which included Rareche) as heir to his grandfather John Ross of Balnagowne.¹⁵ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to Alexander Ross of Balnagowne and Jonet Sinclare his wife the lands of Eistir Rereyche, with the pasture, alehouses, and fishings in salt water, and other lands in the lordship of Balnagowne, which Alexander had resigned.¹⁶ In 1550 Alexander Ros of Balnagoun sold to William Carnecors of Colmis-hill (or Colmislie) the lands of Westir Rarechy and the lands and mill of Culles in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, and in special warrandice of those lands the land of Balnagoun, the mains and mill of the same, the lands of Mylhill, Garthie, Knockgarthie, and Culcarne.¹⁷ At the same time he sold to the same William the lands of Estir Rarechy, and in special warrandice of them the lands of Mylntoun of Westray with the mill, the lands of Ballinleich, and the lands of Mekill Doles.¹ In the same year Queen Mary granted to William Carnecors, a crown charter of all the lands thus sold to him by Alexander Ross.² In 1554 she granted to Sir John Bellen-den of Auchnoul the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Rarechys Eistir and Westir, with the mill and lands of Cullis, in her hands since the decease of William Carnecors of Colmslie.³ In 1557 she granted to Robert Carnecors of Colmslie and Barbara Hume his wife the same lands and mill, which he had resigned to the Queen's mother as Regent of Scotland.⁴ In 1577 William Carnecors of Colmslie was served heir to his father Robert Carnecors of Colmslie in the same lands and mill, of the old extent of £43, 3s. 2d., and in the lands granted in warrandice of the same.⁵ In 1578—on the narrative, notwithstanding that Alexander Ros of Balnagowne had sold in heritage to William Carnecors of Colmslie the lands of Westir Rarechie with the lands and mill of Culles, and in special warrandice of them the lands of Balnagowne, the demesne lands and mill of the same, and the lands of Mylnhill, Garthe, Knockgarthe, and Culcarne—and notwithstanding that the said William had granted to the said Alexander two letters of reversion to the same, namely, one to the lands of Westir Rarechie on the payment of 2455 marks 5 shillings and 10 pence Scots, together with a letter of lease of the lands for five years following their redemption, the lessee paying yearly 9 chalders of bear and meal and 10 bolls of dry multure, or 10 marks for each chalder, 1 mart or 30 shillings, 8 muttuns or 4s. 2d. for each, 12 dozen of poultry or 4 pence for each poultry, and 12 bolls of oats or 4s. 2d. for each boll, with various other conditions specified in the letter of reversion, dated 5 April 1550; and another letter concerning the lands and mill of Culles, redeemable on payment of 1000 marks Scots, together with a letter of lease of the lands and mill for five years after their redemption, the lessee paying yearly 4 chalders 13 bolls of victual, bear and meal, or 10 marks for each chalder, 6 capons or 8 pence for each, and 100 eggs or 12 pence Scots, with other conditions specified in the letter of reversion of the same date as the former; which reversions Alexander Ros had assigned to Alexander Innes of Plaidis and his heirs, and which reversions and assignation Alexander Innes had sold in heritage to George Sinclare chancellor of Cathanes—King James VI. granted to the same George and his heirs that, as soon as those conditions should be fulfilled by William Carnecors of Colmslie or his heirs, and the sums of money specified in the letters should be paid by them, George and his heirs should have full and free reversion to the said lands and mill, both the principal lands and those granted in warrandice, as Alexander Ros had before his alienation of the lands; and the King constituted George and his heirs immediate hereditary tenants of the same.⁶ In 1617 Sir William Sinclair of Catbol was served heir to his father George Sinclair of May in the lands of Wester and Eister Rarichies, and the lands and mill of Cullis, as principal, of the old extent of £15, and in the lands of Rarichies, of the old extent of £10; and in the lands formerly granted in warrandice of the same.⁷ Rarichies and Culles soon after became the property of the Roses of Kilravock through intermarriage with the Sinclairs of Dunbeath.⁸

A transaction in 1375 relating to the lands of Cathboll in Tarbat took place at the town of Nyg in the diocese of Ros, and was witnessed by brother Adam of Nyg, probably one of the canons of Fearn.¹ The mairdom of Nig, which included the lands of Logy extending to a davach, with the brewhouse and brewlands of the same, belonged at the Reformation to the bishop of Ross.² The third of the dues of that mairdom, as stated by Bishop Sinclair, amounted to £161, 18s. 3d., 1 chalder 6 bolls 2 firlots of victual, 8½ marts, 42 muttons, 36 kids, and 16 dozen and 6 capons.³ Among the sums of money and victual yearly given out of the bishoprick the same authority states as given to the 'gantar' men of Nyg and Terbat 18 bolls victual and £10.⁴ In 1581 King James VI. confirmed three grants of land in the barony of Nyg—1. A grant by John Jacksoun, chancellor of Cathanes and commissary of the deceased Henry bishop of Ross, with consent of the dean and chapter, to Alexander Ferne and his male heirs, with remainder to his eldest female heir without division, of the fourth part of the town and lands of Nyg extending to a quarter davach, a fourth of the alehouse of Nyg occupied by the grantee, an oxgang of the same lands formerly occupied by Thomas Tulloch, and the half of the town and lands of Pitcalzeane, extending to half a davach, occupied by Alexander and his son, reserving to the bishop the manor-place, mansion, orchard, garden, moothill, stanks (stagnis), and granary of Nyg; 2. A grant by the deceased John bishop of Ross, with the consent of the dean and chapter, to the same Alexander Ferne and his male heirs, with remainder as before, of an oxgang of the town and lands of Pitcalzeane besides the half davaeh contained in the above grant of Bishop Henry; and 3. A grant by Bishop John to Donald Fiddes in Nyg and his heirs of an oxgang of the lands and town of Nyg, with a fourth of the alehouse and its croft, and half an oxgang of the town and lands of Pitcalzean.⁵ In 1582 the same king confirmed a grant by John bishop of Ross, commendator of Lundoris, to Fynlay Mansoun in Pitcalzeane and his heirs of a fourth of the town and lands of Pitcalzean in the barony of Nyg, which Fynlay then occupied.⁶ In the same year he confirmed a grant, made by the same bishop to Andrew Monro of Nig, of the half of the lands and town of Nig, and half the alehouse and its croft, with the keeping of the place and manor of Nig.⁷ In 1584 he confirmed a grant by the deceased John bishop of Ross to Donald Gibsoun in Pitcalzeane and his heirs of half an oxgang of the town and lands of Pitcalzeane, and the brewhouse and its croft then occupied and laboured by the same Donald.⁸ In 1598 George Munro of Mekle Tarrell became bound 'to releve and skaythles keip' Elizabeth Ros the widow of Waltir Vrquhart sheriff of Cromertie, William Gordoun of Bredland her husband, William Ros of Kilrawak tutor testamentary to Alexander Vrquhart the son of the said Waltir, and Alexander himself and his heirs—at the hands of Donald Ros, Magnus Ferne, David Ferne, and Finlay Manson, the assignees appointed by the deceased Alexander Ferne portioner of Pitcalzeane to his right of reversion to the 'eister half dawine land' of the lands of Pitcalzeane granted to him by the deceased Waltir

Vrquhart and Alexander Ferne — of their renunciation of the reversion to Andro Munro the son and heir of the deceased David Munro and to his tutor testamentary.¹ In 1662 Andrew Fearn of Pitcahane was served heir to his great-grandfather Alexander Fearn of Balnasturache in a fourth of the town and lands of Nyg, extending to a quarter davach, of the extent of 33s. 4d. feuferme; a fourth of the alehouse of the same, of the extent of 5s. feuferme; an oxgang of the town and lands of Nyg, of the extent of 16s. 8d. feuferme; and half of the town and lands of Pitcahane, a half davach, of the extent of 53s. 4d. feuferme; formerly in the sheriffdom of Innernes, but then in the sheriffdom of Ross.²

Behind the parish church were to be seen about 1790 the foundations of a building 90 feet long styled the bishop's house, and doubtless the remains of the old manor-place of Nigg mentioned in the above grants.⁵

In the year 1179 King William the Lion during an expedition into Ross built or fortified the castle of Dunscaith.⁶ Its site is believed to have been a little green knoll on a farm still named Castle Craig, situated at the foot of a steep declivity, where the slope of the south end of the Hill of Nigg or Northern Sutor of Cromarty terminates about 150 feet above the level of the sea.⁷ The moat and part of an outwork on the land side may still be traced.⁸ The lands of Dunskaith seem to have continued to be royal property till the erection of the college church of Tain in 1487, when with a revenue of two marks Scots from the royal ferry of Cromarty they were assigned by King James IV. to the chaplainry of Dunskaith in that foundation.⁹

A ledge of rock running for some miles along the east coast of the parish about half a mile from the shore, and covered at high water, is locally known as the King's Sons; a cave on the adjacent shore is named the King's Cave; and near it is Port-an-righ (the King's Harbour); and a path winding to the top of the rocks is styled the King's Path.¹⁰ These names are traditionally connected with three sons of a king of Denmark, whose vessel or vessels are believed to have been wrecked on the ledge which bears their name.¹¹ It is further believed that the three young men were buried respectively at Hiltown in Fearn already noticed, and at Shandwick and Nigg in this parish, at each of which places a sculptured obelisk is still to be seen.¹² The obelisk at Shandwick, which stood in the ancient cemetery near the chapel, and which bore on one side a sculptured cross, and on the other sculptures of various kinds, was some

The old church stood on the bay of Nigg, where the present was built in 1798, and succeeded one built in 1621.¹ Beside the present church is a round tower dated 1616.²

In 1368 Mariot of Hirdmannystoun, the daughter of the deceased Andrew of Hirdmannystoun, resigned the patronage of the chapel of Balnagown.³ About the same time William Earl of Ross granted to his brother Hugh of Ross lord of Philorth the lands of Balnagown and others, resigned by the same Mariot, the grantee finding a chaplain to officiate twice or thrice in the week at the altar of the Virgin Mary in her chapel at Balnagown.⁴ This chaplainry (whether in the mansion-house or otherwise does not appear), founded for daily prayers in behalf of the reigning sovereign, and supported by the yearly payment of £4 from the lands and fishings of Estir Terbert, was held in 1542 by James Dunbar of Tuliglennis and Elizabeth Leslie his wife, and in 1558 by James Dunbar his son and apparent heir.⁵ In 1642 Robert Lord Ros of Halkheid and Melvill was served heir to his brother William Lord Ros of Halkheid and Melvill in the barony of Balnagoune, including the advowson of the chaplainry of Balnagoune, and the kirklands, the last being of the extent of £4 feuferme.⁶

In 1512 the yearly payment made by Andrew Monro for the croft called the markland of Tulloch, then granted to him by King James IV., was one pound of wax to be paid at Midsummer within the chapel of Delny.⁷ In 1521 King James V. presented Alexander Dunbar to the chaplainry of Delny.⁸ In 1529 he presented David Dunbar to the same chaplainry, vacant or when vacant by the resignation of Alexander Dunbar.⁹ In 1541 Master David Dunbar, chaplain of the chaplainry of the Virgin Mary in the parish of Kilmure Madath, with the consent of the King and of the bishop of Ross, granted to Thomas Ros of Ballintraith and Elizabeth Dunbar his wife and their male heirs, with remainder to John Dunbar of Bannagefield and his male heirs, and to George Monro of Dalcarty and his male heirs, the churchlands called Preistishill and Vlladule, with the croft of John the Baptist, and the glebe, manse, houses, buildings, gardens, and pertinents of the same, belonging to the chaplainry, reserving to himself and his successors one acre of the lands of Preistishill, lying near the manse on the south side, for a manse and garden to be there constructed—all which were rented by husbandmen and tenants for 12 marks yearly—the grantee paying yearly 12 marks, and 40s. in augmentation of the chaplain's rental, in all £10 Scots.¹⁰ In 1580 King James VI. granted for seven years to Colin Dunbar the son of George Dunbar of Awach, 'for help of his sustentatioun and intertenement at the scoles,' the chaplainry of Delny, vacant by the decease of Master David Dunbar.¹¹ The chapel, dedicated, as we have seen, to the Virgin Mary, stood with its cemetery on a bank at Delny till near the end of the last century, when the stones of the building were removed and otherwise used, and the ground ploughed up, although it was afterwards enclosed and sown with grass.¹ At the same period an eminence near the chapel continued to bear the name Cnoc-an-tagairt or Priestshill, and in the same neighbourhood were the remains of a cross at the extremity of a village, the seat of the old baronial court of Delny.²

In Baiamund's Roll the church of Kylemure is taxed at £4; in the Taxatio Sec. XVI. at £12, 8d.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £40.³ At the Reformation the parsonage and vicarage of Kilmowr, as given up by the parson George Dunbar to the collector of thirds, amounted yearly to 100 marks or £66, 13s. 4d.⁴ In 1572 the reader at Kilmuir Eistir had for his stipend £20, and in 1574 he had £12, 13s. 4d.⁵

The chaplainry of Delny, as we have seen, rented before 1541 at 12 marks 8 shillings, and let in that year for £10 Scots, did not in 1580 exceed the value of 20 marks yearly.⁶

The mairdom (maragium) of Delny, a district including various lands in Kilmuir and other parishes, belonged of old to the Earls of Ross, one of whom, Earl William, died at Delny in 1323.⁸ In 1356 a charter of William Earl of Ross (the grandson of the former) is dated at Delgeny in Ross.⁹ In 1362 William Earl of Ross and lord of Sky granted certain lands in the mairdom of Delgeny to Henry Stewart and his wife Mariot the Earl's kinswoman.¹⁰ In 1368 an indenture between Mariot of Hirdmanystoun lady of Balnagown and Hugh of Ross lord of Raricheis is dated at Delgeny.¹¹ Earl William died at Delny in 1372.¹² In 1384 Alexander Earl of Buchan, lord of Ross and of Badenoch, dates a charter at Delgeny.¹³ In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to Thomas the younger of Dingvale the lands of Vsuy in exchange for other lands in the mairdom of Delny.¹⁴ In 1476 King James III. granted to Elisabeth Countess of Ross, the widow of John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, for her maintenance certain lands in Ross which she held in conjunct infeftment with her husband before his forfeiture; and besides these, for her gratuitous services to the King's father and his consort, and considering that she took no part with her husband in his rebellion, he granted to her £100 of land and yearly revenue in Ross, including 20 marks of Delne and other lands.¹⁵ In 1477, on attaining his majority, he confirmed the grant.¹⁶ In 1485, 1489, and 1494 the lands belonging to the Countess, including Delgeny, were the subject of a long litigation between her and James of Dunbar of Cumnok, by the latter of whom they were occupied.¹⁷ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to his domestic servant William Keith master of his wardrobe, for his good service and for other reasons, certain lands in

Ross, including Delny, its alehouse with toft and croft, its two alehouses without toft and croft, and the orchard of Delny, for the yearly payment of 3 chalders bear and oatmeal, 8s. of bondage silver, and 6 poultry, for Delny—13s. 4d., and the same sum every 5 years as gressum, for the alehouse with toft and croft—13s. 4d. for the alehouses without toft and croft—and 30s. for the orchard and the croft called Gardinaris Croft.¹

In the year 1333 Hugh Earl of Ross appears to have granted the lands of Balnagown to Hugh Ross his son, the first laird of Balnagown.² Between 1336 and 1341 or 1351 William Earl of Ross (the son and successor of Earl Hugh) granted to Marion, the kinswoman and alumpna of Emma the wife of Thomas of the Abbacy, the davach of Awchale, which belonged to Andrew of Erwynd, who witnesses the grant.³ In 1341 a charter of the same earl is witnessed by William Marischal of Balnagown.⁴ In 1351 Hugh of Ross, the son of the deceased Hugh Earl of Ross, confirmed to the same William and Mariot his wife the lands of Balnagown and Achawyl, granted to them by his father Hugh and his brother William Earls of Ross.⁵ In 1368 Mariot of Hirdmanystoun, the daughter of the deceased Andrew of Hirdmanystoun (and the widow of William Marischal), appears as lady of Balnagown.⁶ In that year, by a deed dated at Balnagown, she resigned the lands of Balnagown, Achenwyl, and Gorty.⁷ Apparently in the same year William Earl of Ross and lord of Sky granted the same lands to his brother Hugh of Ross lord of Philorth.⁸ In 1374 or 1375 they were confirmed to the same Hugh by King Robert II.⁹ In 1384 there appear in record William Ross of Balnagown (the son of Hugh) and his wife the daughter of Lord Livingstone, and in 1394 and 1398 Walter Ross his heir.¹⁰ The latter, who was surnamed Clugganache, married Catherine the daughter of Paul M^cTyre.¹¹ Between 1429 and 1449 appears John Ross of Balnagown, the son and heir of Hugh Ross.¹² In 1451, in the chapel of Saint Nicolas in the cathedral church of Ross, in presence of Andrew of Munro archdeacon of Ross, commissary of Bishop Thomas and auditor of consistorial cases, and of other witnesses, John Ross lord of Balnagown produced certain charters, of which a transumpt was then made.¹³ By an indenture made at Dingwall in 1475, and publicly recorded in 1494, it was agreed that a son of Alexander Ross, the son and heir of John of Balnagovin, should marry a daughter of Hector M^cGilleoin of Lochboy.¹⁴ In 1488, in presence of Thomas bishop of Ross and of Thomas abbot of Fearn, John Ross of Balnagown resigned his house and living to Sir Gilbert Keith of Inverugie and to David his 'oye' and apparent heir.¹⁵ In 1490 King James IV., as tutor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted to David Ross, the nephew and apparent heir of John Ross of Balnagown, the lands of the lordship of Balnagown with the castle and manor, and other lands in Ross, with the mills, brewhouses, tenants, and tenandries, resigned by John Ross, and reserving the liferent to him.¹⁶ In 1492 David

Ross of Balnagovn appears in record.¹ In 1527 King James V. granted to Walter Ross, the son and heir of the deceased Sir David Ross of Ballingovn, all the lands and rents which belonged to the latter.² In 1528 the same king granted the ward, relief, and nonentry of some of the lands of the barony to William Ros the brother of the deceased Walter Ros of Ballangowne.³ In 1546 Queen Mary granted to Alexander Ros of Balnagovn and Jonet Sinclair his wife Ballinlone and other lands, with the woods, parks, and other pertinents of the lordship of Balnagovn, which Alexander had resigned.⁴ In 1550 the same Alexander granted to William Carnecors of Colmislie the lands of Balnagoun, the demesne lands and mill of the same, and other lands of the barony, in special warrandice of the lands of Westir Rarechy and Cullis, which he had sold to William Carnecors.⁵ In 1560 he granted the lordship of Balnagoun to his son and apparent heir George Ross.⁶ In 1567 Master John Douglas, rector of the university of Saint Andrews, grants a receipt for £32, 2d. Scots as the board of George Ross younger of Balnagoun 'for all the time that he remainit student with me in the New College.'⁷ In 1576 the same Alexander Ros of Balnagoun and George Ros his son and heir appear in record.⁸ In 1578 the lands and barony of Balnagoun, including the demesne lands and mill, with other lands, formerly belonging in heritage to the same Alexander and George, and held by them of the bishop of Ros, the commendator of Ferne, and the sacrist of Thane, were appraised in favour of James Scryngeour of Duddop, constable of Dundie.⁹ In the same year King James VI. constituted George Sinclare chancellor of Cathanes and his heirs immediate hereditary tenants of the lands of Balnagovne and others granted in special warrandice of those sold to William Carnecors of Colmislie in 1550.¹⁰ In 1581 George Ros fear of Balnagovne gave the liferent of certain lands of the barony, with the mill of Balnagovne and the astricted multures, to Marjory Campbell the daughter of the deceased Sir John Campbell of Calder, to whom King James VI. in the same year granted a crown charter of the lands.¹¹ In 1582 the same king granted to George Ros of Balnagowin and the male heirs of his body, with remainder to his male heirs whomsoever, several baronies, including the lands and barony of Balnagowin, the demesne lands of the same and others in that barony, formerly belonging to James Scrymgeour of Dudop, and resigned by him, to be held for the services formerly due.¹²

In 1362 William Earl of Ross and lord of Sky granted to Henry Stewart and his wife Mariot the Earl's kinswoman his land of Kennachrowe and Strathury, with all the men inhabiting the same, and the other pertinents lying in the mairdom of Delgeny, for yearly payment of one silver penny called sterling at Kennachrowe.¹³ In 1372 the grant was confirmed by King Robert II.¹⁴ In 1536 John Denowne of Daidstoun, in implement of a contract between him and William McCulloch of Pladdis, granted to Dowy Makculloch and her heirs by his son Donald Denowne, with remainder to his own heirs, the three 'eist oxgangis' of his land of Candoroy.¹ In 1547 Queen Mary granted to William Dennonwe of Petnele the nonentry and other dues of the lands of Candenrew and others in Ross, in her hands since the decease of Alexander Dunnone of Daidstoun.² In 1549 John Denone, lord of half the lands of Daweistoun and of all the lands of Kanderwif and Strathworie, sold to Walter Innes dweller in Calrossy the lands of Kanderwiff and Strathworie in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys; and in the same year Queen Mary granted to Walter Innes a crown charter of the lands.³ In 1556 the same queen confirmed the grant of 1536, and Donald Donowne, the son and heir of the deceased John Donowne of Daidstoun, appears also as Donald Donowne of Kenroy.⁴ In 1563 Queen Mary granted the lands of Cayndruiff and Straithworie to Walter Innes of Cayndruiff and Margaret Makintosche his wife.⁵ In 1575 William Innes was served heir to his father Walter in the same lands, lying in the lordship of Ross, of the old extent of 40s.⁶ In 1577 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Innes of Candereuff and Katharine M'Kanze his wife, with remainder to William's heirs whomsoever, the lands of Candereuff which he had resigned, to be held of the crown for the usual services.⁷ In 1628 Beatrix, Margaret, and Agnes Innes were served heirs portioners to their father William Innes of Calrossie, and Donald Monro the lawful son of George Monro of Tarloggie was served heir portioner to the same William his maternal grandfather, in the lands of Kendriue and Strathworie.⁸

In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to Thomas the younger of Dingvale, with remainder to his brother John of Dingvale and his heirs, and to the better and more worthy successor of their relatives of the name of Dinguale, the lands of Vsuy in the earldom of Ross in exchange for the third part of Arkboll, and the lands of Inchfure in the mairdom of Delny.⁹ In 1464 King James III. confirmed the grant.¹⁰ Among the £100 of lands and rents in Ross granted by King James III. in 1476, and confirmed by him in 1477, to Elizabeth Countess of Ross were included 10 marks in victual of the lands and town of Meithaite with its two mills, and 10 marks of Mekle Meithaute.¹¹ In 1512 King James IV. granted to Andrew Monro the lands of Myltoun of Meath with the mill, the office of chief mair of the earldom of Ross, and the croft called the markland of Tulloch, in the earldom of Ross, which lands of Myltoun with the mill and mairdom had been granted to Andrew and one heir by a letter under the privy seal, the grantee paying yearly for Myltoun 8 chalders 4 bolls of victual half bear half meal of the lesser measure of the earldom and to augment the rental by 8 bolls, and for the croft of Tulloch one pound of wax on the feast of Saint John the Baptist (24 June) within the chapel of Delny.¹² In 1527 King James V. granted to Thomas Ross of Ballintred the lands of Arnagaig, Ballintred, Feauchtelauchy, and Knoknapark, extending in the

There are villages at Milntown, Bartaraville, and Portlich, the first of which has a population of 200.⁶

On the coast near New Tarbat House are the ruins of the castle of New Tarbat the seat of the Earls of Cromarty.⁷

In the year 1590 Catharine Ross, Lady Fowlis, one of the Balnagown family, was tried and condemned to be burned for witchcraft.⁸

At Kenrive (the ancient Kennachrowe or Kanderuiff) on a hill still bearing that name there is a large cairn, and close to it the foundation of a large building (probably the remains of the old mansion-house and chief message of the property).⁹

LOGIE EASTER.

Logy¹—Logy Eistir²—Logie.³ (Map, No. 13.)

THIS parish, the name of which in Gaelic signifies 'a hollow,' is chiefly composed of the upper part of the strath of the water of Rorie, named in Gaelic 'Abher' (the river), and latterly known as the water of Balnagown.⁴

Of this parish we have but scanty notices, and no early notice except its entry in Bisset's copy of Baiamund's Roll.⁵ In 1497 King James IV. presented Sir Donald Morisoun to the vicarage of Logy (probably that of Logy Easter) in the diocese of Ross, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir John Rathre.⁶ The church appears in records of the sixteenth century, and about the period of the Reformation the rector appears to have been Thomas Hay, and the vicar Sir Donald Reid.⁷ In 1581 King James VI. presented Master John Ros to the parsonage and vicarage of Logy Eister, vacant by the decease of Master Thomas Hay abbot of Glenluce.⁸ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a grant by Master Thomas Hay rector of Logie, given with consent of Alexander bishop of Ross and the dean and canons of the cathedral to John Irving burgess of Rosemarkie and Margaret Cumming his wife, and to John's male heirs, of the croft of the rectory of Logie lying in the canony of Ross (showing the church to have been a prebend of the cathedral).⁹ In 1619 Thomas Irwing was served heir to his father, Andrew Irwing in the canony of Ross, in the manse of the rectory of Logie with the garden within the same canony.¹⁰

The church originally stood in a hollow on the water of Rorie, which gave name to the parish.¹¹ The present church was built about the middle of the last century on a small eminence at a short distance from the former site.¹²

The eminence on which the modern church is built is named Chapelhill, implying the previous existence of a chapel, the name and dedication of which seem to be unknown.¹³

In Baiamund's Roll the rectory of Logy is taxed at £5, 6s. 8d.; in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £16, 10s. 3d.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £53, 6s. 8d.¹⁴ At the Reformation the parsonage of 'Logy and Channonry in Ros' was let yearly for 100 marks, or £66, 13s. 4d.; and the vicarage extended yearly to the sum of £12.¹ In 1572 William Ross Thomassone, exhorter at Logy Eistir, had for his stipend £40, and in 1574 Donald Reid, reader, had £13, 6s. 8d. and the kirklands.²

The history of the lands of Strathworie, which lay partly in this parish, seems to have been the same as that of the lands of Kanderuiff or Kenrive in Kilmuir.³

In 1370 William Earl of Ross granted to William of Ross, the son and heir of the deceased Hugh of Ross, the lands of Pitmadwy within the bailiary of Delgeny, although he had formerly granted the same land in liferent to Master William of Dyngueal.⁴ In 1476 King James III. granted to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, in addition to lands granted to her for her maintenance, £100 of yearly revenue from certain other lands in Ross, including 10 marks of Drumgill and 10 marks of Glossery (probably Calrossy).⁵ In 1556 a charter is witnessed by Walter Innes in Calrossy.⁶ In 1578 the lands of Pettecowy (Pitmadowy) were included in the barony of Balnagowne, formerly belonging in heritage to Alexander Ros of Balnagowne, and in that year appraised with other lands in favour of James Seryngeour of Duddop constable of Dundie.⁷ In 1582 the same lands were appraised by James Seryngeour in favour of Alexander Ros, and granted by King James VI. to Alexander's son George Ros of Balnagowin and the male heirs of his body, with remainder to his male heirs whomsoever.⁸ In 1586 the same king granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe, for his good service and other reasons, various lands in Ross, including Calrossie, Drummediat, Glastowlic, and Drumgillie; the grantee paying for Calrossy 3 chalders bear and oatmeal, 8s. 4d. of bondage silver, and 4 poultry, with the usual services—for Drummediat 3 chalders bear and oatmeal of the measure of Leyth, 8s. of bondage silver, and 4 poultry, with the usual services—and for Glastowlic 6 chalders bear and oatmeal of Leith measure, 16s. of bondage silver, 9 poultry, and the usual services.⁹ In 1619 John Monro was served heir to Andrew Monro of Daan his father in the town and lands of Pitmadowie in the earldom of Ross, of the old extent of £4.¹⁰ In 1623 Walter Ros of Kindeis was served heir male to his father Hugh Ros of Kindeis in the lands of Morachwater with that part of them called Litill Rasches in the barony of Balnagown pro principali, and in warrandice of those lands in the south and lower quarter of the town and davochland of Pitmaduthie, lying next the lands of Drumgill, commonly called Auchownatone, in the same barony, of the extent of 20s.¹¹ In 1642 Robert Lord Ros of Halkheid and Melvill was served heir to his brother german Lord William in the lands of Pitticowry or Pitmadowy, included as before in the barony of Balnagowne.¹² In 1644 Master Thomas Rig of Athernie was served heir to his father William Rig of Athernie in the barony of Balnagown, including the town and lands of Pitmaduthie.¹ In 1652 David M'Culloch was served heir to his immediate elder lawful brother James M'Culloch of Kindeis in the fourth part of the town and davochlands of Drumgillie, in the barony of Delny and earldom and sheriffdom of Ross, of the extent of the fourth part of three chalders of bear and other dues.²

In the year 1586 King James VI. confirmed a grant by John bishop of Ross and commendator of Lindoris, with the consent of his dean and chapter, to William Ros in Logy and Margaret Monro his wife, and to their heirs, with remainder to William's heirs whomsoever, of the lands of Logy extending to the quarter of a davach, with the brewhouse and brewlands, then occupied by William Ros, in the barony of Nig and sheriffdom of Innernes.³

At Blackhill there is a cattle market in the month of May.⁴

About the middle of the parish is a ridge of small hills, on one of which, partly surrounded by a ditch, stood a gallows.⁵ Near the end of the ridge is a deep narrow pool of water named Poll-a-bhaidh (the pool of death), in which the last feudal execution, that of a woman for child-murder, took place about the middle of the last century.⁶

Rosken⁷ — Roskene⁸ — Roskyne⁹ — Roskin¹⁰ — Roskein¹¹ — Roschene¹² — Roskyin¹³ — Roscuyn.¹⁴ (Map, No. 14.)

THIS parish, lying on the north of the water of Alnes and Loch Moir, is level along the coast of the Firth of Cromarty, rises gently for a few miles inland, when it becomes hilly, and attains its greatest height in Cairn Coinneag, said to be 3000 feet above the sea.¹⁵ In the upper part is an extensive valley named Strathrusdale.¹⁶

In 1528 Master James Knollis (or Knowis) was a canon of Ross, prebendary of Roskene, and preceptor of the Hospital of the Virgin Mary beside Linlithgw.¹⁷ In 1533 the same Master James appears as rector, and in 1534 Andrew Ros was vicar of Roskene.¹⁸ In 1555 and between 1561 and 1566 the rector was Master Gawin Dunbar.¹⁹ In 1573 (1 January) King James VI. presented Master James Hering to the parsonage and vicarage of Roskene, and to the parsonage and vicarage of the kirk of Newnakle, vacant by the decease of Gawin Dunbar.¹ In the same year (14 March) he presented William Ros to the same parsonage and vicarage, which belonged to the deceased Gawane Dunbar.² In 1574 and 1576 William Ros Thomassoun was minister, and William Monro Huchesoun was reader at Roskene and Newynkill.³ In 1575 William Ros is styled parson of Roskin, and in that year resigned the vicarage of Kilmure Meddett.⁴ The rector of Roskene as a prebendary had a manse with garden and croft within the canonry of Ross.⁵

The church, apparently dedicated to Saint Ninian, seems to have originally stood at Noinikil a short way from the coast, where its ruins still remain, and the site seems to have been afterwards changed to Roskeen nearer the coast, where the present church was built in 1832.⁶ There are still two glebes, one beside each church.⁷

In Baiamund's Roll the rectory is taxed at £8, and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s.⁸ In the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.⁹ The rental of the parsonage at the Reformation, wholly received in money from the tenants, amounted to £101, 6s. 8d., of which £10 yearly were paid to the choristers.¹⁰ In 1574 the minister at Roskene had a stipend of £85, 15s. 2d., and the reader £20; in 1576 they had respectively £105, 15s. 2d. and £20; the reader being paid by the minister.¹¹

In 1361 James Prat of Kerdale, the son of the deceased John Prat lord of Estir Glenarundy, sold to Hugh Ross lord of Philorth a yearly revenue of 6 marks sterling due to him from the lands of Fraswiln, Okyngil, and Harpsdol, for 35 marks sterling to be paid by Hugh on recovering the same by law.¹² In 1384 Alexander Earl of Buchan, lord of Ross and of Badenoch, ordered Hugh of Munro, his baillie of the earldom of Ross, to give to William of Ross seisin of the lands of Innerkstelane and Hospostyl.¹³ In 1490 King James IV., as tutor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted to David Ross, the nephew and apparent heir of John Ross of Balnagovn, certain lands, including the lands of Hospitall, resigned by John Ross, to whom the liferent was reserved.¹⁴ In 1597 Gilbert Gray was served heir to his father John Gray of Fordell in the lands and town of Hospitill in the earldom of Ross, of the old extent of 10 shillings.¹⁵ The lands of Hospitill appear to be the same as those of Obstuill or Obsdale, on which a chaplainry was founded in the cathedral church of Ross.¹⁶

In the year 1473 appears in record Andro Merser of Inchbreky.¹⁷ In 1511 King James IV. granted in heritage to Andrew Stewart, the son of Jonet Terrell lady of Innachbreky, with remainder to Jonet and her heirs, the lands of Innachbreky and Balnegall in the sheriffdom of Innernys, resigned by Jonet, and reserving the liferent to her.¹⁸ In 1512 the same king granted to Jonet Terrell and her heirs the lands of Innerbreky and Balnegall in the earldom of Ross, formerly resigned by her to the King as Earl of Ross in favour of the deceased Andrew Stewart her son and his heirs, after which resignation Andrew died without lawful heirs, and the lands fell to the crown by reason of nonentry.¹ In 1529 Jonet Terrell resigned the same lands, which King James V. then granted in heritage to her and her husband Walter Innes of Touchis.² In 1533 William M'Culloch of Pladis dates a charter to Walter Innes of Towchis at Innerbreke.³ In 1534 the same Walter, with consent of his wife Jonet Terrall, granted to John Innes his son the lands of Innerbreky and Balnegall, on condition that John should marry in facie ecclesie Mariot the daughter of Donald Terrall, whom James Innes the son and heir of Walter ought to have married in terms of a contract between Walter and Jonet.⁴ In the same year King James V. confirmed the grant.⁵ In 1547 Queen Mary granted the same lands with the tofts and crofts, which John Innes of Innerbreky had resigned, to Walter Innes his son and apparent heir, to be held of the Queen as Countess of Ross, and reserving the liferent to John Innes and a reasonable terce to Mariot Terroll his wife.⁶ In 1557 the same Walter, the son and apparent heir of John Innes of Innerbrakye, in implement of a marriage contract, granted to Margaret the daughter of Kenneth Mackenze of Brawne the liferent of the lands of Balingall in the earldom of Ross, reserving the terce to Mariot the wife of John.⁷ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.⁸ In 1608 James Innes of Uvachbrekie was served heir to his father Walter in the town and lands of Uvachbrekie, of the old extent of 23s. 4d., and the town and lands of Innerachnegall, of the same old extent.⁹

Among the lands from which a yearly revenue of £100 was granted by King James III. to Elizabeth Countess of Ross in 1476, and confirmed by him in 1477, were included 10 marklands of Kinceragy and 10 marklands of Culquhunze.¹⁰ The same lands were in 1586 included in a grant by King James VI. to William Keith the master of his wardrobe, the grantee paying yearly for Kincraig with its alehouses £4, 13s. 4d, 20s. of bondage silver, 12 bolls of bear, 12 bolls of oatmeal, 2 marts, 2 muttuns, and 12 bolls of oats, and for Culkenzie £5, 10s. 8d., 12 bolls of bear, 12 bolls of oatmeal of Leyth measure, 4 marts, 4 muttuns, and as grassum every five years £5, 10s. 8d.¹¹ In 1615 Arthur Sutherland was served heir to his father Alexander Sutherland of Inschefure in three oxgangs and a sheaf [garbata] of land, commonly called 'the thrie oxgang and schafeland' of the town and lands of Culkenzie, in the barony of Delny and earldom of Ross, of the extent of 43s. 10d. and other dues.¹² In 1635 Iver M'Iver of Culkenzie was served heir to his father Iver M'Iver of Lackmaline, portioner of Culkenzie, in 10 sheaves and a half of the town and dauchland of Culkenzie, commonly called ten 'scheaffis and ane halfe scheaffland,' in the barony of Delny then newly erected, of the extent of 24s. 7d. and other dues; and in 7 sheafflands of the same lands of Culkenzie, extending to an oxgang and a half, in the same barony, and of the extent of 16s. 4½d. and other dues.¹³

In 1538 King James V. granted to Huehoun Ros for five years the three marklands of Brekauche, the five marklands of Auchneclayeh, the ten marklands of Tuliehmeanyeh, and the mill of Cragmylne in the earldom of Ros and sheriffdom of Innernys, for the yearly payment of £12 for the lands and of 18 bolls of ferme for the mill, or in all £18.¹ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith master of his wardrobe, for his good services and other reasons, lands in Ross including Craigmynl with the multures and alehouses, Tullichmanich, Tullichmoir, and Brekhauch; the grantee paying yearly for the Mill of Craig with the multures 1 chalder 2 bolls of bear, and for the alehouse 6s. 8d. and the same sum every five years as gressum — for Tullichmanich £4, 6s. 8d., 2 marts, 2 muttuns, 6 bolls of dry multure half bear half meal, and 16s. 8d. of bondage silver — for Tullichmoir £5, 18s., 1 chalder 14 bolls of bear, 12 bolls of oats, and 4 muttuns — and for Brekhauch 50s., one poultry, 4s. of bondage silver, and 50s. every five years as gressum.²

In 1582 King James VI. confirmed a grant in heritage, by John bishop of Ross to the deceased John Innes of Innerbrekie, of the mill of Roskeyn and the astricted multures and dues.³ In 1607 Thomas Urquhart sheriff of Cromertie was served heir to his unele John Urquhart in a davach of the lands of Roskeyn, of the old extent of £9, 11s. 4d.⁴ In 1623 Walter Innes of Auchintoul was served heir male, of entail, and of provision, to James Innes of Calrossy his kinsman in the lands of Roskene, a davach, of the extent of £8 and other dues — the alehouse of Roskene with its croft, of the extent of 13s. 4d. and other dues — and the lands of Debadaill, of the same extent as the alehouse of Roskene.⁵

In 1586 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the deceased John bishop of Ross, perpetual commendator of the monastery of Lundoris, granting to Alexander Ros of Litill Terrell and Issobel Ros his wife and their heirs, with remainder to Alexander's heirs whomsoever, the lands of Newmekill extending to half a davach, and the alehouse of Newmekill with the brewlands, then occupied by Alexander Ros and his tenants.⁶ In 1652 Hew Ross was served heir to his father Alexander Ros of Pitkerie in the three oxgangs of the lands of Newnakill with the teind sheaves, of old in the bishoprick of Ross, then in the sheriffdom of Ross, of the extent of 6 marks of feu duty.⁷

Near Loch Achnaclòich is a large cairn measuring 130 yards in circumference, and surrounded by a number of tumuli.¹ On Knocknavie is a cairn named Cairn-na-croiche, the cairn of the gallows.² In the parish is another cairn named Carn-nam-Fiann, and interpreted 'the cairn of the Fingalians.'³

Throughout the parish are several places composed of upright flagstones, and supposed to be places of sepulture, the largest of which measures 14 feet by 3.⁴

Alenes⁵ — Alnes⁶ — Alness.⁷ (Map, No. 15.)

THE general features of this parish are similar to those of Roskeen.⁸ It lies chiefly between the rivers of Alness and Aultgrande, and is partly composed of a hilly district attaining its greatest height in the hill of Fyrish about 1000 feet above the level of the sea.⁹ It has two lakes, Lochglass and Lochmuire.¹⁰

In the year 1227 Adam Bur the parson of Alenes, and James the vicar of that church, were present with others of the clergy of Ross at Kenedor in Moray on the occasion of a settlement between the bishops of Moray and Ross respecting the diocesan right of the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹¹ There appears to be no farther notice of the church till the year 1384, when either the church of Alnes or the bridge is stated to have been built by William Ros of Balnagown or by his wife the daughter of Lord Livingstone.¹² In 1528 Master Robert Schand was rector of Alnes.¹³ In 1547 (19 October) Queen Mary presented Master John Daudisoun, student of theology and regent of the college in the city of Aberdeen, to the vicarage of Alnes, vacant by the decease of Master Alexander Galloway.¹⁴ In the same year (31 October) she granted to Master Alexander Galloway parson of Kinkell the escheat of all the goods that belonged to Master Alexander Galloway the vicar of Alnes.¹⁵ At the period of the Reformation Master Thomas Ros (afterwards provost of Tayne and abbot of Ferne) was parson of Alnes, and the vicar was Master John Daudisoun 'Maister of the Peddagog of Glasgow,' apparently the person presented to the vicarage in 1547.¹ In 1571 Alexander Morison was exhorter, and in 1574 he was reader at Alnes.² The rector of Alnes as a prebendary of the cathedral of Ross had a croft in the canonry.³

The church appears to have always occupied the site of the present building, erected in 1780 in the east end of the parish on the right bank of the burn of Teaninich.⁴

In 1549 Queen Mary presented Sir James Buchat or Buschart (apparently the same as Wischart) to the chaplainry called Towy (or Tolly) in the diocese of Ross, when it should be vacant by the demission of Sir Thomas Stevinsoun.⁵ In 1567 she granted to John Chalmer, servitor to Master David Chalmer chancellor of Ross, the same chaplainry, then vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Stevinstoun.⁶ In 1569 King James VI. presented Finlay Mansoun to the chaplainry of Tolly, vacant by the decease of John Chalmer.⁷ In 1622 Hugh Ross of Auchnacloch was served heir male to his grandfather Hugh Ross of Tollie in the lands of Tollie in the earldom of Ross, formerly belonging to the chaplainry of Kildermorie or Tollie as part of its temporality, of the extent of 13 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence, with 6s. 8d. in augmentation.⁸ The chapel of Tollie was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and its walls, 40 feet by 18, and about 4 feet thick, and its cemetery may still be seen in a small valley named Glenmoir or Gildermory at the head of Lochmuire.⁹ Near it is Tobair-na-Muire, Mary's Well, anciently believed to possess healing virtues.¹⁰

In the cathedral church of Ross there were three chaplainries named the chaplainries of Alnes, one of which appears to have been founded on the lands of Fyrish or Fyres in this parish, and another on those of Culcragy.¹¹

At the Reformation Master Thomas Ros, styled the principal parson of Alnes, stated the parsonage at 100 marks or £66, 13s. 4d., out of which a yearly pension of 20 marks was paid to Sir Andro Robertssoun.¹² Other three persons, Sir James Buschart, Master Alexander M'Kenzie, and John Robertssoun, called the other three portioners, had each about 36 bolls of victual yearly out of the same parsonage, the whole victual amounting to 6 chalders 12 bolls.¹³ Master John Daudssoun states the vicarage thus -- 'The quhilk gaiff quhen payment was maid the sowme of xx lib. be yeir with ane plaid with the plenassing &c.; bot the laird of Fowlis and his freindis hes not lattin me gett ane penny thair of this fyve yeiris bygane.'¹⁴ In 1571 the exhorter at Alnes had for his stipend £22, 4s. 5½d., the third of the parsonage, and in 1574 the reader had 20 marks and the kirklands.¹⁵

The chaplainry of Tollie, Kildermory, or Lochmuire, seems to have been of the yearly value given above, namely, 13 marks and a half.¹⁶

Among lands from which a yearly revenue of £100 was granted by King James III. to Elizabeth Countess of Ross in 1476, and confirmed by that king in 1477, were included 10 marklands of the two Queneleiches (or Quentleiches, apparently Contulichs), 10 marklands of Culcragy, and 10 marklands of Culmyllache.² In 1526 King James V. granted to Walter Innes of Tulchis the lands of Nethir Culmelloquhy extending in the King's rental to 46s. 8d.; Ovir Culmelloquhy extending to the same sum; the mill of Culmelloquhy, called in the King's rental the mill of Culcragy, with its lands and houses, extending to £3, 6s. 8d.; and other lands in the earldom of Ross, all united into the tenandry of Culmelloquhy—for the yearly payment of £26, 13s. 4d., in order to augment the King's rental by the sum of £5, 6s. 8d.³ In 1527 King James appears to have renewed the grant, the grantee however paying yearly for Culmelloquhy £6, and for the mill £4, 3s. 4d., and the dues of the other lands of the tenandry being proportionally altered, in order to increase the whole rental by the sum of £6.⁴ In 1528 the same king granted to the same Walter Innes the lands of Culcragy and Kirkfarbarne in the earldom of Ross, and annexed them to the tenandry of Culmelloquhy.⁵ In 1538 Walter Innes seems to have resigned the lands of the tenandry, as in that year they were again granted to him for five years by King James V., and including the two Culmelloquhies, the mill and alehouse of Culcragy, and the lands of Culcragy (apparently Culcragy in Alness and Culcragy in Contin), were let to him for the yearly payment of £28, 13s. 4d., two marts, and two muttuns.⁶ In 1536 the half davach commonly called the half davach lands of Culmalochie, the lands of Culcragie, Culcragie with the mill, multures, and alehouse (apparently both Culcragies), the mylntoun of Culmalochie, and the lands of Ovirculmalochie, were included in a grant of lands in Ross made by King James VI. to William Keith the master of his wardrobe; the grantee paying yearly for the half davach lands of Culmalochie, the lands of Culcragie, and other lands included in the grant but not in the tenandry, £7, 12s., 2 chalders bear and oatmeal, 12 capons, 16s. of bondage silver, 2 marts, 2 muttuns, 5 reek hens, and as grassum every 5 years £4, 13s. 4d.—for the mill of Culcragie or Culmalochie with the multures 1 chalders bear, and 1 chalders oatmeal—for the alehouse of Culcragie 20s. and the same sum as grassum—for the milntoun of Culmalochie £3, the same sum as grassum, 8s. of bondage silver, and 1 poultry—and for Ovirculmalochie £3, with 7s. of bondage silver, 1 poultry, and 45s. 8d. as grassum.⁷ In 1589 Master Hector Monro was served heir male and of entail to his father Robert Monro of Fowlis the elder in the lands of Contulich Over and other lands in Ross and Sutherland, of the old extent of £10.⁸ In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male of entail and provision to his father Master Hector Monro in a davach of Contulich

Over and Nether, with the mill, pertinents, and outsets, namely, Ardaehie, Auchvaiche, with the brewhouse and its croft, and the superiority of the chaplainry of Obstaile and its salmon fishings—and in other lands, together of the old extent of £80.¹ In 1635 Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovat was served heir male to his father Symon Lord Fraser of Lovat in the barony of Foullis, in which the lands specified in 1608 were included.²

In 1490 King James IV., as tutor of his brother James Duke of Ross, granted to David Ross, the nephew and heir apparent of John Ross of Balnagown, certain lands in Ross, including Culcarn, Badcall, and Multowy, resigned by John Ross, and reserving the liferent to him.³ In 1550 Alexander Ros of Balnagown granted to William Carnecors of Colmislie the lands of Culcarne and others, in special warrandice of Westir Rarechy and Cules sold by him to William Carnecors.⁴ In 1578 the lands of Culcarne were probably included in the barony of Balnagown as then disposed of.⁵ In 1581 George Ros fear of Balnagovne sold in liferent to Marjory Campbell the daughter of the deceased Sir John Campbell of Calder the lands of Culcarne and others in the barony of Balnagowne, of which King James VI. then granted to Marjory a crown charter.⁶ In 1582 that king granted to George Ros of Balnagowin and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, the barony of Balnagown and other lands, including Culthearne, Badcall, and Multowy.⁷ In 1617 Sir William Sinclair of Catbol was served heir to his father George Sinclair of May in the lands of Culcairne and others included in the barony of Balnagowne, in special warrandice of Rarichies and Cullis.⁸ In 1622 Hugh Ros of Auchnacloch was served heir male to his grandfather Hugh Ross of Tollie in the lands of Multowy and Lealdy in the barony of Balnagown, of the extent of 5 marks, and in warrandice of these in the lands and town of Culeayrne in the same barony and of the same extent.⁹

In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter of John bishop of Ross, granting to Hugh Monro the brother german of Robert Monro of Foulis and to the male heirs of his body, with remainder to Robert Monro and his heirs whomsoever, the lands of Assint and Inchecultir in the diocese of Ross or mairdom of Farndonald.¹⁰ In 1614 Patrick Kynnaird of that Ilk was served heir to his great-grandfather in the lands of Assint in the sheriffdom of Innernes.¹¹ In 1616 John Kynnaird of that Ilk was served heir in the same lands to his father Patrick.¹²

In 1583 King James VI. confirmed a charter of John bishop of Ross pro tempore, granting to Robert Monro of Foulis and to the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, the lands of Kandlochglass, Balnacoule, Hauchnagall, and Bothmore, in the diocese of Ross called the mairdom of Farndonald.¹³ In 1584 the same king confirmed a grant by the same bishop to Hector Monro the brother of Robert Monro of Foulis and his heirs male, with remainder to Robert and his heirs male whomsoever, of the lands of Kilteremore and

There is at Alness a village which lies partly within the parish of Roskeen.⁵

There appears to have been a bridge at Alness, probably built by William Ros of Balnagown about the year 1384.⁶ The bridge of Alnes occurs in record in 1439.⁷

At the eastern boundary of the parish there is a large stone named Clach-airidh-a-mhinister, the stone of the minister's shealing, and on the moor near the chapel of Gildermory are two large stones placed one above the other known as the Clach-nam-ban or stone of the women — in both cases connected with local traditions.⁸

THIS parish, now united to Lumlair, lies chiefly on the south of Lochglass and the river Aultgrande, terminating eastward on the shore of the Cromarty Firth, and extending on the north west to the borders of Lochbroom, its marches with which and with the neighbouring parishes are not very clearly defined. It lies partly on the northern slope of Ben Wyvis, which is 3720 feet above the sea. The Aultgrande at one part of its course passes through a deep and narrow chasm of great picturesque beauty.⁹

In the year 1227 Andrew the parson of Keltierny was present at Kenedor in Moray on the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the diocesan right of the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹⁰ In 1296 William of Kyngorn parson of the church of Keltyern of the county of Inernys swore fealty to King Edward I. of England.¹¹ In 1487 Thomas Padesone was vicar of Kilteirn.¹² In 1539 King James V. presented Sir John Auchinlek to the vicarage of Kylterne, vacant by the decease of Master John Gardinar.¹³ In 1546 Queen Mary presented James Hammiltoun, the son of James Hammiltoun of Innerwik, to the same vicarage, vacant through the inability of Sir John Auchinlek, who was convicted of certain treasonable acts and of being art and part in the slaughter of the deceased David cardinal of Saint Andrews.¹⁴ In 1547 the same queen presented Lancelot Hammiltoun, the son of the deceased James Hammiltoun of Innerwik, to the vicarage of Kilterne, vacant by the inability of Sir John Auchinlek, convicted of treason, of being art and part in the slaughter of the cardinal, and of holding the castle of Saint Andrews against the tenor of the mandates directed thereanent.¹⁵ In the same year she granted to Lancelot Hammiltoun the fruits of the vicarage, in her hands by the escheat of Sir John Auchinlek, who was denounced rebel and at the horn for the above crimes.¹⁶ In 1548 Sir John Auchinlek had a remission for assisting Norman Leslie

Master of Rothes, James Kirkaldy of the Grange, and their accomplices, in holding the castle of Saint Andrews against the Queen, and for taking part with the English.¹ In 1550 Queen Mary presented John Siderserf to the vicarage of Kilterne, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Lancelot Hammiltoun.² John Saidserff continued to be vicar between the years 1561 and 1566, at which time the parson was John Sandelandis.³ In 1568 the reader at Kilterne was Angus Neilson, and in 1574 Ferquhard Monro.⁴ In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a grant in heritage by Master John Sandelandis rector of Kilterne to Gavin Reid carpenter in Innernes of the houses of the manse of Kilterne (apparently in the canonry) with the garden and pertinents, then occupied by Thomas Smyth.⁵ In 1583 the same king confirmed a grant by Sir John Sadserf vicar of the parish church of Kilterne, with consent of Master Quintigern Monepenny dean of Ros and vicar general, and of the chapter, to the deceased John Monro in Kilterne and his heirs, of the lands of the vicar's croft of Kilterne, reserving to the vicar the manse and croft as then occupied.⁶ In 1585 the same king presented Master Archibald Monereif to the parsonage and vicarage of Kiltarne, vacant by the decease of Master John Sandilandis.⁷

The church, built in 1790, stands near the shore of the Cromarty Firth on the right bank of the burn of Skiach, apparently the site of its predecessors.⁸

In 1546 Master John Monro chaplain of Balkny in the parish of Kilterne, with the consent of Queen Mary, the Earl of Aran, and Master Kentigern Monypenny dean and vicar general of Ross, his ordinary during the vacancy of the see, let to John Munro and his heirs male the churchlands of Toulise (or Tewlyis) with the brewhouse and the croft called Brewmer's-croft in the same parish, for the yearly payment of 5 marks 2 shillings and 8 pence and of a dozen of capons wont to be paid, and of 4 shillings in augmentation of the rental.⁹ In 1550 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.¹⁰ In 1551 she presented Sir William Monro to the chaplainry of Saint Monan on the lands of Balcony, vacant by the decease of Master John Monro.¹¹ Between 1561 and 1566 the chaplainry of Saint Monanis was held by Mr. William Munro minister and vicar at Dingwall, apparently the presentee of 1551.¹² In 1573 King James VI. granted for seven years to Alexander Monro Donaldsoun 'for his sustentatioun at the scuillis' the chaplainry called 'Sanct Monanis chaplainrie' in the parish of Kilterne and sheriffdome of Innernes, of which the yearly value did not exceed £8 Scots.¹³ In 1577 he granted for seven years to John Monro, the son of William Monro in the Cannogait, the same chaplainry, vacant by the demission of Alexander Monro.¹⁴ In 1583 he granted the chaplainry with the place and chapel of the same for seven years to George Monro the son of the same William.¹⁵ In 1623 Hugh Monro was served heir to John Monro of Urquhart his father in the kirklands of the chaplainry or bursary

There was a chapel at Culnaskeath, and one at Wester Fowlis.² Blacu gives Kilmabryd apparently in this parish.³

There was a chaplainry in the chanonry of Ross founded on the lands of Drummond in this parish.⁴

In Baiamund's Roll the church of Kyltarne is taxed at £5, 6s. 8d. ; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £53, 6s. 4d. ; and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. it is taxed at £16, 10s. 3d.⁵ At the Reformation the parsonage was let to the laird of Fowlis yearly for £96, 13s. 4d., 'of the quhilk,' says Master John Sandelandis the parson, 'I pay in pensiou to Sir Donald Sherar yeirlic the soume of £12, item to Johne Sandilandis sonne to the laird of St. Ninianis 42 merkis yeirlic, with the yeirlic dewteis alsua to the minister.'⁶ The vicarage, as stated at the same period by Master Alexander Pedder procurator for John Saidserff the vicar, 'gaif yeirlic in assedatioun to the said Mr. Johne the soume of xl. merkis, and now be yeir nathing be reasoun the paroshineris will not pay quhill farder ordour be put to the kirk of the samin.'⁷ The reader at Kilterne had for his stipend in 1568 and 1573 £20, and in 1574 £16.

The yearly value of the chaplainries of Saint Monanis and Applecroce, as stated at the Reformation, amounted together to 36 marks, the former, as we have seen, being valued at less than £8 Scots.⁹

The possession of the lands of Fowlis by the family of Monro is locally ascribed to a period previous to the date of almost any existing record.¹⁰ Nisbet asserts that William Earl of Sutherland between the years 1214 and 1249 granted a charter charissimo et fidelissimo consanguineo Georgio Munro de Foulis.¹¹ In 1341, 1368, and between 1362 and 1372 appears in record Robert of Monro, and in 1398 Hugh of Monro, probably both of Foulis.¹² George of Monro of Foulis appears in 1437, 1440, and 1449.¹³ In 1487 John of Monro was lord of Foulis.¹⁴ He was dead in 1500, and appears to have been succeeded by his brother William.¹⁵ There appear in record in 1502 William Monro of Fowlis, in 1515 and 1541 Hector Monro of Foulis, and in 1542 Robert Monro of Foulis the son and heir of the deceased Hector.¹⁶ In 1542 King James V. granted to Robert Monro of Foulis the relief of the lands and other property belonging to his deceased father Hector, which was due to the King for giving him seisin of the same.¹⁷ In 1552 Robert Monro of Fowlis sold to Margaret Ogiluy lady of Moy in liferent the lands of Wester Fowlis in the barony of Fowlis and sheriffdom of Inverness.¹⁸ In 1553 Queen

Mary granted to Margaret Ogilvy a crown charter of the same lands.¹ In 1563 a charter is granted at Foulis by Robert Munro of Foulis, and is witnessed by his brother George Munro and by William Munro vicar of Dingwell.² Robert Monro of Foulis (apparently the same person) appears in record in 1571, 1574, 1577, 1580, 1583, 1584, and 1589.³ In the last named year Master Hector Monro was served heir male and of entail to his father Robert Monro of Fowlis the elder in certain lands, including the 10 davachs of Estir Fowlis, Westir Fowlis, Nether Catboll, and other lands not in this parish.⁴ In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male and of entail and provision to Master Hector Monro of Foullis his father in the lands of Eister Foullis and their pertinents, namely—Culskea; Teachatt; Wester Ballachladich; Achlich with the brewhouse, alehouse, smiddie, smiddiecroft, and other crofts of the same; the pastures and shealings of Clearmoir, Altnagerrack, and the forest of Weyes; the lands of Wester Foullis with the shealings and Arbisak; a davach of the lands of Keatoll, with the pendicles, outsets, and pertinents, namely, Eister Ballachladich and the pastures and grassings of Badnagarne.⁵ In 1635 Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovat was served heir male in the same lands to his father Symon Lord Fraser of Lovat.⁶ It is said that the forest of Wyvis mentioned in the above services was held of the King on condition that the grantee should furnish a snowball on any day of the year if required.⁷

In the year 1455 Beatrice Countess of Ross submitted to King James II., who then granted to her the barony of Balknie.⁸ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith master of his wardrobe, for his good service, various lands in Ross, including Balconie with the alehouse and the Flukeris croft, the 'stell' of Ardroy, and the 'yair' of Balconie with the alehouse of the same.⁹

In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Master Quintigern Monypenny vicar general and dean of Ross, granting to Robert Monro of Foulis and his heirs the lands of Kilterne, with the mill, astricted miltures, and fishings, which were formerly held by John Cokburne of Kilterne and Jonet Forres his wife, and were escheat to Queen Mary by reason that John Cokburne was born and died illegitimate without lawful heirs.¹⁰ In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male, of entail, and of provision, to his father Master Hector Monro of Foullis in the salmon fishing of Kilterne, and the superiority of the lands and mill of Kilterne, of the extent of £9, 6s. 8d.¹¹

Balcony Castle, of old a residence of the Earls of Ross, and named on that account Balcony Vic Dhonail, stands on the banks of the Skiach, and has apparently been modernised or rebuilt.¹ In 1333 Hugh Earl of Ross, and in 1341 William Earl of Ross, date some of their charters at Balkenny.²

Lemnelar⁴—Lymnolar⁵—Lumlar⁶—Lymmalar⁷—Limlair⁸—Lymlair⁹—

THIS parish seems to have been composed of only the western and smaller portion of the present parish of Kiltearn, stretching from the shore of the Cromarty Firth to the foot of Ben Wyvis, and thus having a gradual ascent from south east to north west.

In the year 1227 William Poer parson of Lemnelar was present at Kenedor in Moray at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross.¹³ The church became afterwards a prebend of the cathedral. In 1548 (21 March) Queen Mary presented John Kincaid to the prebend of Lymnolar in the cathedral church of Ross, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Master John Bellindene.¹⁴ In the same year (10 November) he was presented by the Queen to the same prebend, then vacant by the decease of Master John Bellenden.¹⁵ At the Reformation Henry Kincaid was parson of Lymmalar, and seems to have still been parson in 1584.¹⁶ The rector of Lymnolair as prebendary had a manse and croft in the canonry of Ross.¹⁷

The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and in modern times known as Saint Mary's chapel, stood at Lumlair near the sea shore.¹⁸

In 1586 King James VI. granted to George Monro, the son of George Monro chancellor of Ros, for seven years, 'for his support in sustenyng him at the sculis,' the chaplainry of Clyne in the diocese of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes.¹⁹

There was a chapel at Kilchoan, dedicated, as its name implies, to Saint Congan of Lochalsh.¹

In Baiamund's Roll the church is taxed at £3, 6s. 8d. ; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £33, 6s. 8d.² The parsonage, as stated by Henry Kincaid between 1561 and 1566, was 100 marks or £66, 13s. 4d. yearly.³ In 1574 the reader at Lymlair had for his stipend 20 marks and the kirklands.⁴

Between 1224 and 1231 Ferkar Earl of Ros granted in heritage to Walter of Moray the son of the deceased Hugh of Moray two davachs of land in Ros, namely, Clon with its pertinents, the grantee paying yearly to the granter a pound of pepper at the feast of Saint Martin (11 November), and doing to the King the forinsec service belonging to the land.⁵ In 1263 Sir Fergus of Ardrossen, for the weal of his own soul, and specially for the weal of the soul of the deceased Friskin of Moray lord of Duffus his overlord, granted for ever to Archebald bishop of Moray his land of Ros, namely, the two davachs of Clon which he held of Friskin, for the maintenance of two chaplains in the cathedral church of Elgyn to minister perpetually for the souls of all the faithful dead, to be held freely and fully according to Friskin's charter to him, saving the forinsec service of the King and the liferent of the lady Eufamia the mother of Friskin, and with the exceptive clause that Sir Fergus and his heirs should not be bound to warrant the land to the church.⁶ In 1264 the lady Eufemia, the widow of Sir Walter of Moray lord of Duffus, quitclaimed to Archebald bishop of Moray the land which she had in Ros in name of her dowry, namely, the third part of the whole lands of Clonys near Dyngvall, which formerly belonged to Sir Walter her deceased lord, for the maintenance of two chaplains to minister for the living and the dead in the cathedral church of Elgyn according to the charter of Sir Fergus of Ardrossan.⁷ In 1269 William Earl of Ros confirmed to Bishop Archebald the same two davachs of Clon in Ros, granted by the deceased Freskin of Moray lord of Duffus, quitclaiming for ever the yearly revenue of a pound of pepper due from the lands, and engaging for himself and his heirs to perform the forinsec service due to the King.⁸ Between the years 1350 and 1372 various charters are witnessed by William of Clyne.⁹ In 1375 William of Clyn, apparently the same person, held the lands of Cadboll in Tarbat of the bishop of Moray.¹⁰ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Sir Alexander Douglas, chaplain of the chaplainry of Saint [Mary] Magdalen, and Sir James Spens chaplain of the chaplainry of Saint Laurence in the cathedral church of Moray, granting, with consent of the bishop, canons, and chapter, to Robert Monro of Foulis in liferent, and to his second son Hugh Monro and his male heirs, with remainder to Hector Monro his other son and his male heirs, and to Robert's own male heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Monro, the towns and lands of Mekill and Litill Clynis, with the mills, salmon fishings, and other fishings in salt and fresh water, lying in the earldom of Ross, regality of Spynie, and sheriffdom of Innernes.¹ In 1589 Master Hector Monro was served heir male and of entail to his brother german Hugh Monro of Clynes in the lands and towns of Mekle Clyne and Lytill Clyne, with the mill and multures, and the salmon fishings, lying as above, with the power of building and cultivating, of the extent of £21, 6s. 8d. feufferme.² In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male of entail and provision in the same lands to Master Hector Monro of Foulis his father.³

In 1557 David bishop of Ross, perpetual commendator of Cambuskynneth, with the consent of his dean and chapter, granted to his brother Robert Leslie the lands and baronies of [in?] Ferindonald and Ardmanoch, the patrimony and property of the bishoprick, the lands in Ferindonald being those of Kilquhoane, for which the grantee was to pay yearly 4 marks with 17s. 9½d. as grassum, the fourth part of a custom mart, one mutton, 6 poultry, one kid, 20 eggs or 3 pence, and one boll of custom oats; paying for the whole lands as arriage and carriage, and turf or fuel, 30s. with 13s. 4d. yearly in augmentation of the rental, and furnishing also three suits at the three head courts yearly held at the canony of Ros.⁴ The bishop's lands of [in?] the mairdom of Ferindonald, as held by the laird of Fowlis and his brothers between the years 1561 and 1566, paid yearly £40, 9s. 1¼d., 11 bolls oats, 8¼ marts, 25 muttons, 24 kids, 82 capons, and 69 poultry.⁵ The lands held by the Monroes appear to have been those of Pellok and Lymclair with the alehouse, and some lands in Alness, which were granted by John bishop of Ross to Robert Monro of Foulis and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, and in 1583 were confirmed to him by King James VI.⁶ In 1587 that king confirmed a charter by William Sinclare rector of Olrik, canon of Caithnes, and commissary of Henry bishop of Ross, granting the lands of Kilquhone extending to the quarter of a davach, and other lands of the bishoprick, to Thomas Vrquhart the son of the deceased Alexander Vrquhart sheriff of Crombathy, and to the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his brother german Arthur Vrquhart and his male heirs, to their brother german James Vrquhart and his male heirs, to their brother german John Vrquhart and his male heirs, and to their eldest brother Walter Vrquhart and his male heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Vrquhart.⁷

At Clyne is a small eminence, around which are three circles, one at the foot 80 paces in circumference, a second higher up 50 paces, and a third at the top 35 paces and enclosing two ovals formed of erect stones, each 13 feet by 10.⁸ At some distance westward from the eminence there is a cairn about 30 paces in diameter, having a few graves composed of flags, one in the centre of the cairn, and the others at the circumference.⁹

THIS parish occupies a small area of scarcely two miles square extending from Ben Wyvis to the mouth of the river Conan, the lower part being a rich plain lying chiefly between that river and the Peffer or Pefferay burn.

Between the years 1350 and 1372 a charter by Hugh of Ross is witnessed by Thomas the clerk of Dyngwall.⁵ In 1504 a charter by John bishop of Ross is witnessed by John Fresell rector of Dingwell.⁶ In 1532 the vicar of Dingwell was Sir Alexander Rorisoun.⁷ In 1547 (November 2) Queen Mary presented Sir William Monro, the nearest of blood to the deceased Sir Alexander Roresoun, to the vicarage of Dingwell, then vacant by Sir Alexander's death.⁸ In the same year (6 November) she presented Master Thomas Ker to the rectory of Dingwell, vacant by the decease of Sir John Stevinsoun.⁹ Between 1561 and 1566 William Munro appears as minister and vicar of Dingwell.¹⁰ In 1569 Donald Adamsoun was exhorter at Dingwell and Vrray, and in 1574 Master Walter Ross was reader at Dingwell.¹¹ In 1579 King James VI. presented Robert Philp to the vicarage of Dingwell, vacant by the demission of Donald Adamesoun.¹² In 1587 he presented William Makkynnane to the parsonage and vicarage of Dingwell, vacant by the decease of Master Thomas Ker last parson and Master Robert Philp last vicar.¹³

The present church, built in 1801, stands on the north side of the town of Dingwall.¹⁴ About the year 1790 the church was ruinous, and attached to it were several chapels.¹⁵

In 1516 King James V. presented Sir Thomas Kemp chaplain to the chaplainry of Saint Laurence in the castle of Dingwell, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir John Auchtlek.¹⁶ In 1547 Queen Mary presented Sir Andrew Dow to the same chaplainry vacant by the decease of Sir Alexander Roresoun.¹⁷ Between 1561 and 1566 Sir David Barquhan held the chaplainries 'of Sanct Lawrent and Arfaill' in the diocese of Ros.¹⁸ In 1569 King James VI. presented Donald Adamsoun, 'instructar and teichar of the youth within the burch of Dingwall,' to the chaplainries of Saint Lawrance in Dingwall and Ardafaily in Ardmannoch, vacant by the decease of David Barchan.¹ In 1575 that king granted for seven years to James Davidsoun the son of John Davidsoun in Edinburgh, 'in support of his sustentatioun at the seule,' the chaplainry of Saint Lawrence and Ardfield in Dingwall (meaning evidently the same two chaplainries), vacant by the demission of Donald Adamesoun promoted to the subchantry of Ross.² In 1582, the chaplainry of 'Sanctlaurence and Ardfail in Dingwall' being vacant by the expiration of the above grant, King James granted it for life to the same James Davidsoun, 'in respect of his continewance at his studie, in forder support of his sustentatioun at the scolis and intertenement vtherwayis.'³

In Baiamund's Roll the church of Dingwell is taxed at 53s. 4d.; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £26, 13s. 4d.⁴ At the Reformation William Monro minister and vicar at Dingill, states, 'And, becaus I gett nathing of the said vicarag except v merkis of twa cobillis fishing, I am content the Quenis Grace dispone thairon, becaus I can gett na lyf thairin without hir Grace caus me haue ane lyf lyk ane minister and be speciallie exercit.'⁵ In 1574 Robert Monro, minister at Dingwell and other churches, had for his stipend £66, 13s. 4d.; and the reader, Master Walter Ross, had £10.⁶ In 1576 Donald Adamsoun minister had for his stipend £102, 13s. 4d. 'with the gleib and kirkland of Urray newlie providit to him, &c.,' and Robert Philp (afterwards, as we have seen, presented to the vicarage) had 'the hail vicarage of Dingwell, vacant, £40.'⁷

The earldom of Ross included the modern counties of Ross and Cromarty, or the more ancient districts of Cromarty, Ross proper, and North Argyle, the last including Kintail, Lochalsh, Lochcarron, Applecross, and Garloch, perhaps also Loehbroom.⁹ In a manuscript of the thirteenth or fourteenth century the land of Ros is said to be 24 leagues in breadth and upwards of 40 in length.¹⁰ At an early period it was subject to local rulers named Maormors, of whom the first on record is Finlaoich, Finlach, or Finleg, the son of Ruadri, styled by the Irish annalists 'Ri Alban' and 'Mormaer of the sons of Croeb,' and by the Norse sagas 'Finnleikr Jarl the Scot.'¹¹ In the year 1020 he was slain by the sons of his brother Malbrigid.¹² His son and successor was Macbeatha or Macbeth, styled by Nennius 'the vigorous Macbrethach,' and by Wyntoun 'thane of Crwmbawchty,' who became King of Scotland in 1040, and was slain in 1056.¹³

Macbeth apparently had no son, and has on record no successor as Maormor of Ross; and we hear no more of the rulers of that district till about the year 1160, when King Malcolm IV. ordered Malcolm Earl of Ros and others to protect the monks of Dunfermelyn.¹ In 1161 the earldom of Ross is said to have been granted to Florence Count of Holland in marriage with Ada the sister of the King of Scots.² In 1215 Machentagar or Mackinsagart (a person whose name signifies 'the priest's son') was knighted by King Alexander II. for his good service in quelling an insurrection in Moray.³ In 1235 the same Mackinsagart appears as Earl of Ross, and as assisting the same king in suppressing a rising of the men of Galloway.⁴ If these dates are correct, Machentagar the priest's son was the same as Ferchar or Ferquhard usually styled first Earl of Ross, who appears in that capacity from 1212 to 1252, and who died in the latter year.⁵ William, the son and heir of Ferkar Earl of Ros, witnesses a charter between 1224 and 1231, witnesses another in 1232, grants a charter as Earl of Ros in 1269, and is said to have died in 1274.⁶ William Earl of Ros (apparently the son of William) appears as Earl in 1281.⁷ In 1291 he swore fealty to King Edward I.⁸ In 1292 the lands of the Earl of Ros in North Argail were by an ordinance of King John Balliol included in the sheriffdom of Skey.⁹ In 1296 King Edward I. ordered the barons and lieges of Ergile, Nicholas Campbell bailie of Leghor and Ardescothyn, and William de la Haye warden of the earldom of Ros, and the men of that earldom, to assist Alexander Earl of Meneteth as warden of the castles of those lands.¹⁰ In 1308 King Robert Bruce restored to William Earl of Ros all his lands 'with free forests.'¹¹ About the same date the marches between the earldoms of Ros and Moray are described as running between Glennelg and North Ergile (the latter of which belonged to the Earl of Ros), and thence along the boundary of Ros to the water of Forne (Beauly), and thence along that water to the eastern sea.¹² Earl William died in 1323, and was succeeded by his son Hugh, who is said to have been 'made' Earl on Saint Patrick's day of that year (17 March).¹³ In 1333 (10 May) Hugh Earl of Ross granted to his son Hugh the lands which were then in the hands of Margaret of Ross by reason of her terce when it should happen, except certain lands in Aberdeenshire reserved for William of Ross his son and heir.¹⁴ On Saint Magdalen's day (22 July) of the same year Earl Hugh was killed at the battle of Halidonhill.¹⁵ He was succeeded by his son William, who appears to have been in Norway at the time of his father's death, and to have assumed the earldom only in 1336.¹ In the year 1350 Earl William, styled also lord of Sky, at the instance of all the nobles of the earldom of Ross, with the consent of his sister the lady Marjory Countess of Caithness and Orkney, and on condition that the consent of the King (David II.) should be obtained, appointed his brother Hugh of Ross his heir in the event of his own death without male issue.² Hugh of Ross was dead in 1370, and in that year Earl William resigned the earldom of Ross and the lordship of Sky, which King David II. then granted anew to him and his heirs male, with remainder in succession to Sir Walter of Lesley and Eufame his wife (the Earl's daughter), to the male heirs of Eufame and her eldest female heir without division; and to Johanna the Earl's younger daughter and her male heirs or eldest female heir without division.³ In 1371 Earl William represented to King Robert II. that King David had given all his lands and tenements, and also the lands and tenements of his brother Hugh in Buchan, to Sir Walter of Lesly without the Earl's consent — that he had been thwarted in his attempts to recover them — that King David had taken the lands into his own hands, but had restored them to the Earl on his making certain concessions to Sir Walter — that his daughter (Eufame) had not been married to Sir Walter with his consent — and that he had neither given Sir Walter any grant of land, nor made any agreement with him respecting the succession down to the day of King David's death.⁴ The result of this representation is not on record, and Earl William died in 1372, and was succeeded in the earldom by his daughter Eufame and her husband Sir Walter Lesley styled Lord of Ross, who had issue, Alexander afterwards Earl of Ross, and Mary married to Donald Lord of the Isles.⁵ Sir Walter died in 1382, and in that year or the following King Robert II. confirmed a grant of the earldom of Ross by Euphame Lady of Ross to Alexander Stewart Earl of Buchan (whom she married).⁶ In 1384 and 1387 the same Alexander appears as Earl of Buchan and Lord of Ross and of Badenach.⁷ A separation having taken place between him and his wife Eufame the Countess, the matter was referred to ecclesiastical arbitration, and in 1389 was determined as follows by Alexander bishop of Moray and Alexander bishop of Ross — That the Countess of Ross and her possessions should be restored to the Earl of Buchan as to her husband, and that she should be treated with all conjugal affection and receive every right becoming her state — that Mariot the daughter of Athyn should be removed — that the Earl should not again put away Eufame — and that, whereas the Countess alleged that she was in fear of her life and of injury to her men (homines nativi), her nobles, and others, the Earl should find the security of noble and well known persons and engage under a penalty of two hundred pounds that he would treat the Countess honourably in all things and without putting her in fear of her life, and not stint her nativi, nobles, and others, in any way contrary to common law.⁸ The Earl became bound according to the sentence of the bishops, and with the consent of the parties gave as his sureties for its fulfilment Robert Earl of

Suthirland, Alexander de Moravia lord of Culbyn, and Thomas of Chesholme.¹ In 1394 (10 May) Alexander of Lesly (the son of Sir Walter by the Countess Eufame) appears as heir of Ross.² His mother was alive on 8 August 1394, but was dead before 13 August 1398, and he then appears as Earl of Ross.³ He died in 1402, and was succeeded by his daughter Eufame as Countess of Ross.⁴ Her title to the earldom was disputed by Donald Lord of the Isles, the husband of her aunt Mary the daughter of Sir Walter Lesley and the former Countess Eufame, a claim which led to the battle of Harlaw in 1411, when Donald was defeated by Alexander Earl of Mar.⁵ In 1415 Euphame Leslie Countess of Ross resigned the earldom, which the Regent Albany her grandfather then granted to her anew, with remainder to his son John Stewart Earl of Buchan, and to John's brother Robert Stewart, and to their heirs male respectively, whom failing, to revert to the crown.⁶ The countess Eufame is said to have become a nun, and the Earl of Buchan was thenceforth acknowledged as Earl of Ross till his death in 1424.⁷ It appears however that Mary Lesley had continued to claim the earldom, as in 1420 she styles herself 'Dame Mary of the Ile lady of the Ylis and of Rosse.'⁸ In 1427 her son Alexander of Yle Lord of the Isles adopts the additional style Master of Ross.⁹ In the same year both were apprehended as rebels; in 1429 (in which year the lady Mary appears to have died) the Lord of the Isles was set at liberty, but afterwards rebelled, and in 1431 submitted to King James I., by whom he was imprisoned in the castle of Temptalone.¹⁰ Till that period the claim of the lady Mary and her son to the earldom of Ross seems not to have been admitted, as the King in that year continued to hold the ward of the earldom since the death of John Stewart.¹¹ Alexander of Ile however was afterwards undoubted Earl of Ross, in 1443 was justiciar north of the river Forth, and died in 1449.¹² At that time and for nearly 30 years afterwards flourished Sir Donald Balloch of Isla, erroneously styled by some Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross.¹³ Alexander of Ile was in 1449 succeeded as Earl of Ross by John of Yle, his son by Elizabeth the daughter of Alexander Seton Lord of Gordon and Huntly.¹⁴ This John of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, was the chief party on the side of the Scotch in the treaty of Ardtornish concluded in 1462 with King Edward IV. of England.¹⁵ In 1475 he was attainted for treason, and in 1476, on his resignation of all his lands, King James III. restored them to him, with certain exceptions, including the earldom of Ross, which was perpetually annexed to the crown.¹⁶ In 1476 the same king granted to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, the wife of John of Yle, for her honourable maintenance certain lands in Ross which she had in conjunct infeftment with her husband before his forfeiture, and in addition £100 of land and yearly revenue within the earldom on account of her gratuitous services to the King's father and his consort, and because she had taken no part with her husband in his rebellion.¹ In 1477 the King on attaining his majority confirmed the grant.² In 1481 he granted in heritage to his second son James Marquis of Ormond the lands of the earldom of Rosse and the castle of Dingwale, forfeited by John Lord of the Isles and Earl of Rosse; and in 1488 he created him Duke of Ross.³ In 1490 (4 November) King James IV., as tutor to his brother James Duke of Ros, brought an action before the Lords of Council against William Keth, the son and heir apparent of Sir Gilbert Keth of Innerrwy, as bailie of Elizabeth Countess of Ros, for the ' wrangwis intrometting and withholding fra our Souerane Lord as tutour forsaid of a parte of the malez of the lands of Fingask of the termes of Witsunday and Mertymes bipast.'⁴ William of Keth, being summoned to produce his warrant, failed to appear, and a charter under the seal of the deceased Alexander of the Ilis Earl of Ross, showing that the lands of Fyngask were a tenandry of the earldom, was produced on behalf of the King.⁵ The Lords ordained that William of Keth did wrong in intromitting with the mails and profits of the lands, that he should thenceforth cease from so doing, and that he should pay to the King the mails and profits for the terms in question in so far as the King could prove them due—for which proof they assigned to the King's advocates the third day of March following (3 March 1491).⁶ A litigation which lasted from 1484 to 1494 between Elizabeth Countess of Ross and James of Dunbar of Cumnok the tenant of her lands of Ross has been already detailed.⁷ About the year 1503 James Duke of Ross resigned the earldom.⁸ In 1524 King James V. granted the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmannach to James Earl of Murray (his natural brother).⁹ In 1565 (May 15) Queen Mary granted the earldom to Henry Stewart Lord Darnley, to whom she was married on 29 July following.¹⁰

The lordship of Dingwall (apparently the same as the lordship of Ross) appears in record in 1263. In that year Ralph de Lasceles and others, deputies (attornati) of Alexander Cumming Earl of Buchan and bailie of Digneuwall, declined giving an account of the bailiary on the ground that they were uncertain of the amount of its fermes as testified by the chapel roll, and therefore the account remained incomplete (indefinitum).¹¹ In the same year Alexander Earl of Buchan appears as sheriff of Digneuall.¹² In 1308 King Robert Bruce granted to William Earl of Ross the lands of Dingwal with the castle and town, a grant which he seems to have confirmed in 1321 or 1322.¹³ In 1382 or 1383 Euphame lady of Ross resigned the thanedom and castle of Dingwall, which King Robert II. then granted to her and to her husband Alexander Stewart Earl of Buchan his son.¹ In 1455 the barony of Eddirdaill called Ardmanache, and the Redcastell with the lordships of Ros belonging to it (including apparently the lordship of Ros or Dingwall), were annexed to the crown.² In 1506 King James IV. appointed Andro bishop of Cathnes for 9 years chamberlain and captain of the lands and lordships of Ross and Ardmannach.³ In 1507 (22 March) he appointed that bishop and another person his chamberlains and bailies of the lands and lordships of Ross and Ardmanach, and captains and keepers of the castles of Dingvile in Ross and Redecastle in Ardmanach, with all their fees and pertinents.⁴ In the same year and month (23 March) he appointed the same bishop for nine years his chamberlain and bailie of all the King's proper lands and lordships of Ross and Ardmannach, and keeper of the same castles, assigning to him for those offices all his 'manys laundis,' profits, and dues, as others had before him.⁵ In the same year (13 April) the same king commissioned Andro bishop of Cathnes and others to examine the infetments of the tenants and inhabitants of the lordships of Dingwell and Ardmanach, and, if any should be found to occupy lands not contained in their infetments, to send to the King copies of the infetments under the seal of the commissioners, that the offenders might be punished.⁶ In the same year (22 April) King James granted to the same bishop for three years the fishings on the water of Conane, and all his other fishings in the lordships of Ross and Ardmannach, for the yearly payment of four lasts of salmon 'full, rede, and suete,' and 2000 'keling' (cod) sufficient merchandise, to be delivered free on the shore of Leith, the King paying the 'aventure' of the same and the freight from Dignwell to Leith.⁷ On 6 May of the same year the King commissioned Bishop Andro to let for five years all the lands in the lordships of Ross and Ardmannach formerly belonging to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, except the lands of Tarbat, to those by whom they were held or other sufficient tenants.⁸ In 1511 the same king granted to the same bishop, then his treasurer, 'for grete sovmes of money gevin be him to the Kingis Hienes, and vthir grete servuice and expens maid to his plesour,' for two terms of nine years, notwithstanding any act of parliament or other deed to the contrary, the lands and lordships of Ros and Ardmannach, with the woods, forests, waters, lochs, yairs, and fishings, both fresh and salt, with the power either to occupy the lands or to let them to others, with the power also of bailie and of holding courts, for payment of the dues specified in the King's rental, and without the usual grassum, which the King granted to the bishop for the repairing or building of the castles of Dingwell and Reidcastell, 'putin and kepin of gude reule in the said landis, danting of wild peple, with diuers vtheris costis and charges,' to be held till £1000 should be paid to him on one day by any of the King's successors who might desire possession of the same.⁹ In 1561 Queen Mary granted during her pleasure to George Monro of Dawcarty the bailiary and chamberlainship of her lands and lordships of Ros and Ardmannach.¹⁰ In 1568 King James VI. appointed the same George to the same offices during the will of the King and the Regent.¹ In 1567 the same king granted for three years from 1 December of that year to Thomas Murray, the brother german of David Murray of Cars, a lease of his salmon fishing on the water of Conan, belonging to the King as part of the patrimony of the crown; ordering the Lords of Council, Session, and Exchequer to address letters to the chamberlain of Ros and the tenants of the lands of the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmanoch, and to all others concerned, to obey Thomas Murray 'in inputting of the cruvis vpoun the said wattir and vther seruice aucht be thame to the said fischeing in conuenient and dew tyme of yeir according to vse and wount,' the grantee paying yearly the sum of £133, 6s. 8d. Scots.² In 1584 (3 February) King James granted the fishings on the Connan to Coliu M'Kainzie of Kintail for five years from the feast of Andermes (30 November) 1585, for the yearly payment of 200 marks Scots at the usual terms.³ In the same year (5 March) he granted certain lands and the fishings of Connan to Sir Andrew Keith of Svessa (or Fressa), as the near relation of Marischal Earl of Keith (Keith Earl Marischal), and to the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever bearing the surname of Keith and the arms of the principal house or messuage of the earldom of Merschall called Dynnotter, the grantee paying yearly for the fishings £133 as fermes, feuffermes, dues, and services.⁴ In the same year and month (18 March) he granted to the same Sir Andrew, of the most ancient and noble family of George Earl Mareschal, for many services both at home and abroad, the castle of Dingwall with the houses, buildings, and wards of the same — the superiority of the town of Dingwall with the burgh fermes — the demesne lands commonly called Kynnairdie — the lands of Glakkis, which were the fourth part of the same demesne lands — and the lands of Dalmaloak (contained in the previous grant) — united into one free lordship and barony, to be called the lordship of Dingwall; Sir Andrew and his heirs to have the style Lords and Barons of Dingwall and a seat in parliament; the castle to be the chief messuage; and the grantee to pay one penny of silver yearly on the feast of Pentecost for the castle, the town, the burgh fermes, and the lands of Kynnairdie and Glakkis.⁵ In 1587, on attaining his majority, King James renewed the grant.⁶

In the year 1342 a charter by William Earl of Ross is witnessed by John Yong of Dyngvale; and between 1350 and 1372 a charter by the same earl is witnessed by John called Yong and Thomas his brother.⁷ In 1350, 1368, and 1370 there appears in record Thomas of Dyngvale, and in the last named year also Master William of Dyngvale, probably the same who in 1389 appears as dean of Ross.⁸ In 1451 we have as witness to a charter Thomas of Dyngvale canon.⁹ In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted certain lands to Thomas the younger of Dingvale, with remainder to his brother John of Dingvale and his heirs, and to the better and more worthy successor of their relatives of the name of Dinguale, with reservation of the franktenement to Sir Thomas of Dingwall the Earl's chamberlain (probably the canon of 1451).¹ In 1464 King James III. confirmed the grant.² From some of these Dingwalls were descended the family who afterwards held the lands of Kildun near Dingwall, one of whom, Thomas Dingwell of Kildun, appears in record in 1506 and 1507.³ In 1526, in which year appear Donald and William Dingwell (probably burgesses of the town), the lands of Kildun, marching with those of the burgh of Dingwall, formed a separate lordship.⁴ In 1527 King James V. granted certain lands near Dingwall and elsewhere to William Dingvale of Kildun.⁵ In the same year he granted to Sir John Dingwall, provost of the Trinity College beside Edinburgh (perhaps the same who in 1524 appears as archdeacon of Caithness), the ward of all the lands and rents that belonged to the deceased William Dingwall of Kildone.⁶ In 1541, 1543, 1544, 1552, 1554, and 1556 there appears in record Thomas Dingwell of Kildun, a charter by whom in 1541 is witnessed by Thomas Dingwell burges of Dingwell, and who in 1543 grants a charter at Kildone.⁷ Thomas Dingwell of Kildun was dead in 1573, and John Dingwell of Kildun his son and heir appears in record in 1575.⁸ In 1583 John Dingwall of Kildun sold to Colin M'Kainzie of Kintail some of the lands granted to Thomas the younger of Dingvale in 1463.⁹

Among the lands granted by King James III. in 1476 for the maintenance of Elizabeth Countess of Ross, and confirmed to her by that king in 1477, were the lands of Davachearne.¹⁰ In 1542 King James V. granted to Duncan Bayne (along with the lands of Tulche and others) the astricted multures and suckin of the lands of Dunglust, the four Glakkis, Mekle Kynnardy, Lital Kynnardy, Westir Dryne, and Dawachearne.¹¹ In the same year he granted the lands of Dawachearne and others in the lordship of Ross to James Fraser the brother of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet, Davachearne extending in the King's rental to £8, 4s. 4d. in ferme and grassum, 16s. in bondage silver, and 6 reek hens.¹² In 1584 King James VI. granted to Sir Andrew Keith in heritage, with remainder as in the case of the fishings of Conan, the lands of Drumglust, for yearly payment of £6, 18s. 8d., 1 chalder 2 bolls bear, 1 chalder 2 bolls oatmeal, 1 chalder 2 bolls oats, 6 marts, 6 muttuns, 24 shillings of bondage silver, and 13 reek hens.¹³ In 1600 Duncane Bane of Tullich was served heir to his father Alexander Bane of Tullich in the astricted multures and suckin granted to Duncan Bayne in 1542, which together with those of some other lands were of the extent of £10, 16s.¹⁴ In 1619 Colin lord of Kintail was served heir male to his grandfather Colin Makkeinzie of Kyntail in the demesne lands called the Maynes of Kynnairdie, the ward called the ward of Dingwall, of the extent of 1 chalder 2 bolls of meal and other dues; the lands of Glakkis, being the fourth part of the said lands of Maynes, of the extent of 1 chalder 12 bolls of meal and other dues; the lands of Drumglust, of the extent of £6, 18s. 8d.; and other lands, all included in the lordship and barony of Dingwall.¹

In 1507 King James IV. granted to Andro bishop of Caithnes the ward of a mark's worth of land of old extent of the Tulloch in the lordship of Ross, which was in the King's hands by the decease of Ferquhar Ouresoun.² In 1542 King James V. granted to Duncan Bayne the lands of Tuleh and others in the earldom of Ross, for the yearly payment of £18, 4s., 4 bolls of bear and meal, 1 mart, and 2 reek hens, to augment the rental by 20 shillings.³ Duncan Bayne of Tuleh appears in record in 1553, 1554, 1555, and 1556.⁴ Alexander Bane of Tullieh (apparently the son of Duncan) appears in 1563, 1579, 1581, 1600, 1607, and 1611, and was dead in 1624.⁵ In 1600 Duncan Bane of Tullieh was served heir to his father Alexander in the lands of Tullieh of the extent of 3 marks and other dues, and in other lands, extending in all to £18, 4s.⁶ In 1611 Duncan Baine of Tulliehe appears as heir to his grandfather Duncan and his father Alexander.⁷ In 1635 we have Alexander Bayne the heir male and of provision of his father Duncan Bayne of Tullieh.⁸

In 1541, 1542, 1543, 1553, 1554, 1555, 1556, 1561, 1567, and 1568 George Monro of Dalcarty or Davacharty appears in record, and in the year 1579 he was dead.⁹ In 1553 he sold the lands of Dawacharty to Duncan Bane of Tuleh, and in the same year Queen Mary granted to the latter a crown charter of the lands, and to the former a letter of reversion to the same.¹⁰ In 1555 George Monro of Dawacharty sold to Donald Makaneroy the fourth part of his lands of Dawacharty, then occupied by John Maklauchlane M'Gilley and John Makferquhair M'Gillebane, and in 1556 Queen Mary granted to Donald Makaneroy a crown charter of the lands.¹¹ In 1561 that queen appointed George Monro of Dawcarty during her pleasure bailie and chamberlain of her lands and lordships of Ros and Ardmannauch.¹² In 1567 she exempted him for life on account of his age from all service as a soldier, from sitting on assizes, and from appearing as a witness in any court.¹³ In 1568 the same George was appointed bailie and chamberlain of the same lands and lordships as in 1561 during the will of King James VI. and his Regent.¹⁴ In the same year King James granted to Donald Roy and his heirs a crown charter of the half of the east quarter of the lands of Dalehartie, namely, an oxgang then occupied by Moriaeh

Makdonald Makwillame M'Kay, and an oxgang of the west quarter of the same lands then occupied by Gillepatrick Makdonald Roy, both sold to Donald Roy by George Monro of Dalchartie, to whom in the same year the King granted a letter of reversion to the lands.¹ In 1579 the same king granted in heritage to Alexander Bane of Tullich and Agnes Fraser his wife, with remainder to the heirs of Alexander, a crown charter of half the lands of Dalcarthie in the lordship and earldom of Ros, then occupied by Donald Makanero and his tenants and others, and sold to Alexander Bane and his wife by Andrew Monro of Newmoir the son and heir of the deceased George Monro formerly of Dalcarthie.² In 1581 the same king granted in heritage to Alexander Bayne of Tullich the nonentry and other dues of half the lands of Daacartie, then occupied by Donald Monro and his cottars, tenants, and servants, and in the King's hands since the decease of George Monro of Daacartie or last lawful possessor.³ In 1611 Duncan Baine of Tulliche was served heir to his father Alexander and to his grandfather Duncan Baine of Tulliche in half the lands of Dawachartye, of the old extent of 23s. 4d.⁴

In the year 1227 King Alexander II. erected a royal burgh 'at Dingwell in Ros,' and granted to the burgesses all the liberties and free customs which the burgesses of Invernes had.⁵ He appointed a weekly market to be held in the burgh every Monday, and granted to the burgesses that persons coming to the burgh and settling in it should be ker secum for ten years from the feast of Saint Martin (11 November) of the year 1226, and that they should be for ever free from toll and every other custom exigible for their cattle throughout the land.⁶ He granted also his peace to all who should come to dwell in the burgh, and commanded that all resorting thither to sell or buy should have his peace, should traffic there, and return thence in peace, saving the rights of the burgh.⁷ In 1296 the Knights Templars and the Knights of the Hospital of Saint John of Jerusalem had property in the town of Dynguale, which the sheriff of Dynguale was ordered to restore to them on the Masters having sworn fealty to King Edward I.⁸ In 1308 King Robert Bruce granted to William Earl of Ross the burgh of Dingwall and its liberties — a grant which in 1321 or 1322 he seems to have confirmed.⁹ In 1475 John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles before his forfeiture was summoned by the Unicorn Pursuivant as sheriff of Invernes, among other places at the market cross of the burgh of Dingvale, to appear in parliament and answer for certain crimes.¹⁰ In 1498 King James IV., on the narrative that the privileges of his burgh of Dingwell had gone into desuetude through the insults of war and the depopulation of the country to the great loss and grievance of the same, confirmed its erection and the privileges granted by King Alexander II. ; and granted moreover to the burgesses and inhabitants the power of electing yearly an alderman and bailies, of making guild brothers, and generally of enjoying all the privileges held by the burgh of Invernes, saving the rights formerly due to the

King by the burgh and burgesses of Dingwell.¹ In 1503 a sheriff appointed by the Scotch parliament to be made and called the sheriff of Ross was to sit in Thane or Dingwale as the case required, and the justices depute and sheriffs for the North Isles were by the same authority appointed to sit in Innernes or Dingwale.² In 1505 King James IV. granted to Andro Aytoun, captain of the castle of Striueling, the customs of all the burghs between Banf and Orknay, including Dingwell, for the yearly payment of £50 to the King's comptroller and others.³ In 1507 the burgesses and community of Dingwell were as tenants of the lordship included among those whose infeftments Andro bishop of Cathnes and others were commissioned to examine.⁴ In the same year Dingwell was the port at which the salmon due by that bishop to King James IV. for the fishings on Conane were shipped for Leith.⁵ In the same year John Mowat of Loscragy and Freswick granted to his brother Alexander Mowat, under reversion to himself and his heirs, certain lands in the lordship of Ross, and his tofts and crofts in the burgh of Dingwell, the grantee giving the forinsec service to the King and a penny sterling yearly to the granter.⁶ In 1508 King James IV. confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1509 that king appointed Alexander Earl of Huntlie sheriff of the whole sherifdom of Innernys, with the power of sitting daily when necessary in the towns of Tane and Dingwell for the bounds of Ross.⁸ In 1526 King James V. granted to Walter Innes of Tulchis seven roods of land in Petglasse on the south side of the lands of Donald Dingwell—half an acre in Petglasse between the lands of William Dingwell on the south and the lands called Blakearisland on the north—an acre lying at the Gray Stane between the lands of Patrik Kempt on the west and of John Nicholsoun on the east—a piece of land near the mill of Brigend called Schortaker between the public street and the mill on the east and the march of Fesallich on the west—a piece of land between the water of Peferay on the north and the lands of the lordship of Kildun on the south—a rood of land in Thombane between the lands of William Candich on the west and the lands of William Makmular on the south (east ?)—and an acre of land in the field of Acris-Scotte between the lands of the lordship of Kildun on the south and the lands of John Vaus on the north—all within the territory of the burgh of Dingwell, and in the King's hands as escheat by the decease of John Makedoy in Dauchauchpolo who died without lawful heirs.⁹ In 1541 a charter of Thomas Dingwell of Kildun is witnessed by Thomas Dingwell burghess of Dingwell.¹⁰ In 1543 and 1555 charters by the same Thomas Dingwell of Kildun are given at Dingwell (apparently the town).¹¹ In 1545 Queen Mary appointed Master Thomas Marioribanks, burghess of Edinburgh, custumar (apparently of the burghs) within all the bounds of Ros and neighbouring parts.¹² In 1556 a charter is witnessed by Donald Makgillewan burghess of Dingwall.¹³ In 1563 Alexander Bane of Tullich granted to

Robert Monro of Foulis certain lands in Sutherland in exchange for lands in Ross and for infeftment in his arable lands in the burgh of Dingwell.¹ His charter, given at Foulis, is witnessed by Donald Kemp burgess of Dingwell.² In 1584 King James VI. granted to Sir Andrew Keith of Svessa (or Fressa) the superiority of the town of Dingwall with the burgh fermes, included in the lordship or barony of Dingwall.³ In 1587 he confirmed the privileges of the burgh as granted by King Alexander II. and King James IV.⁴ In 1655 Sir George M'Keinzie of Tarbit was served heir male to his father Sir George in various lands and baronies, and among these the Boig of Dingwall within the burgh thereof called Boigmoir, including the bogs called Boigmore or Westerboig, the Midboig, and the Eister Boig, within the parish of Dingwall, of the extent of £6.⁵ Some circumstances existing in the end of the last century, such as the cross standing at the east end of the burgh, and a street 200 yards long running to the north east, seemed to indicate that the town was formerly of greater extent.⁶

In 1292 William of Braytoft, keeper of the castles of Invernesse and Dingwall, was ordered by King Edward I. to deliver them to King John Balliol.⁸ In 1308, as we have seen, King Robert Bruce granted the castle of Dingwall with the lands to William Earl of Ross, and in 1321 or 1322 he confirmed the grant.⁹ In 1350, 1356, and 1370 William Earl of Ross (the grandson of the former) gives charters at Dingwall (apparently the castle of Dingwall).¹⁰ In 1382 or 1383 the castle with the thanedom were resigned by Euphame Countess of Ross, and were granted by King Robert II. to her and her husband Alexander Stewart Earl of Buchan the King's son.¹¹ In 1394 Eufame Countess of Ross grants a charter at Dyngvale (apparently the castle).¹² In 1398 Alexander of Lesley Earl of Ross grants a charter at his castle of Dyngwall.¹³ In 1411 Robert Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, after the battle of Harlaw, took the castle of Dingwall which belonged to the Lord of the Isles (or was held by him as claiming the earldom of Ross).¹⁴ In 1443 Alexander of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, justiciar north of the Forth, dates a charter at the castle of Dyngwele, and in 1463 and 1464 his son and successor John of Yle gives charters at the same place.¹⁵ An indenture above detailed, made in 1475 between David Ross of Balnagovin and John M'Gilleone of Lochboy, with the consent of John of Yle Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, was made at Dingwall in Ross, apparently at the castle.¹⁶ In 1475 the Scotch parliament ordered the sheriffs of Innernys to cite the same John of Yle, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, either at the castle of Dyngvale or at the market cross of Edinburgh, to appear before the next parliament at Edinburgh to answer for certain crimes.¹⁷ On the 16th of October of that year he was summoned by the Unicorn Pursuivant

as sheriff of Innernes at various places, and among these at the gate of the castle of Dingwall, because he could not get admittance into the castle itself.¹ In 1481 King James III., as above stated, granted in heritage to James his second son, Marquis of Ormond, the castle of Dingwall with the lands of the earldom of Ross, forfeited by John Lord of the Isles and Earl of Rosse.² In 1484 (26 October) the Lords of Council ordained that for the offence of 'lichtlying and contempcioun done to our Souerane Lordis Hienes' by Archbald of Douglas, Stevin M'Kerbrycht, John Thomsoun, James Thomsoun, John Wallace, Patriek Nelesoun, James Ker, Patriek Ker, and James of Douglas the son of Archbald, in having violently taken from their beds Sir David Purdy subchanter of Glasgow and Sir Alexander Panther his chaplane, dragging them to the fields, and with threats compelling Sir David to let his church, and to remit certain sums due to him, with other great injuries, therefore Archbald of Douglas, Stevin M'Kerbrycht, and John Thomsoun should enter their persons in ward in the castle of Dingwell within twenty days, and the rest in the castles of Redecastell and Innernes, and should remain there on their own expenses till released by the King under pain of rebellion.³ About 1503, when James Duke of Ross resigned the earldom, he reserved to himself for life the moothill (montem) of Dingwall beside the town, in order to preserve his title of Duke.⁴ In 1506 Andro bishop of Cathnes was appointed by King James IV. captain of the castle of Dyngwell in Ross for 9 years.⁵ In 1507 the same bishop and another person not named were appointed by King James IV. captains and keepers of the castle of Dingwell.⁶ In 1511, as we have seen, the same king, in granting to the same bishop the lordships of Ros and Ardmannoch, granted to him also the usual grassum of the lands for repairing or building the castles of Dingwell and Reid-castell.⁷ In 1564 a part of the dues of the lands of Drumdarveth in Ardmannoch, consisting of 80 loads of fuel, was to be delivered in the castle of Dingwell.⁸ In 1584 and 1587 the castle of Dingwall, with the houses, buildings, and wards, was included in grants of the lordship or barony made in those years by King James VI. to Sir Andrew Keith.⁹ The castle, of which a small fragment and the ditch and glacis still remain, stood on the shore north-east of the town, occupied about half an acre of ground, and was flanked on two sides by a small deep muddy stream.¹⁰ About the end of the last century the office of constable was said to be hereditary in the family of the proprietor of Tulloch, and had attached to it a salary of 20 marks Scots.¹¹

Fothirdy¹ — Fothartye² — Feddirdy³ — Foddertie⁴ — Foddartie⁵ —
Fodderty.⁶ (Map, No. 19).

THE present parish of Fodderty includes the ancient parish of Kinnettes, and consists chiefly of the valley of the river Peferay known as Strathpeffer. On its north side lies Benwyvis, the highest hill in Ross-shire, on its north Knockfarril, and on its west Craig-an-fhiach (the raven's rock).⁷ The parish of Kinnettes appears to have had Craig-an-fhiach on the west and Knockfarril or the Peferay on the south, and to have occupied a comparatively small portion of the united parish, including Loch Usie. Fodderty includes several detached glens or straths.⁸

Between the years 1350 and 1372 a charter of William Earl of Ross is witnessed by Robert the vicar of Fothirdy.⁹ In 1548 Queen Mary presented Sir Andrew Robertsoun chaplain to the vicarage of Fothartye, vacant by the resignation of Master William Vrquhart.¹⁰ Sir Andrew Robertsoun was vicar between 1561 and 1566.¹¹ In 1572 King James VI. presented William Hay, 'admittit be the kirk redar in the kirk of Foddertie,' to the vicarage of Foddertie then vacant by 'simoniacall paction' between Sir John Smyth last vicar and Sir William Chalmer.¹² In 1574 Alexander Anthane was reader at Foddertie.¹³ In the same year King James VI. presented Alexander Antone to the vicarage, vacant by the decease of Rorie Bane.¹⁴ In 1583 he presented Evir M'Evir to the same vicarage, vacant by the decease of Alexander Anthone.¹⁵

The church, of which the cemetery is still in use, stood on the left bank of the Pefferay burn.¹⁶ The modern church, built in 1807 about a mile from the village of Strathpeffer, stands at a considerable distance from the former.¹⁷

At Inchrory, on the right bank of the Pefferay, immediately opposite the old burying-ground of Fodderty, and within this parish or Kinnettes, stood a chapel, held at the Reformation by Sir Andrew Robertsoun the vicar of Fodderty.¹⁸

At the Reformation it was stated that the vicarage, 'quhen all dewties vsit and wont was payit gaiff be yeir in assedatioun to the vicar xx merkis.'¹⁹ In 1574 the reader at Foddertie had for his stipend yearly £13, 6s. 8d. (the amount of the vicarage).²⁰

The chaplainry of Inchrory at the Reformation was worth £5 yearly.¹

Among the lands granted by King James III. to Elizabeth Countess of Ross in 1476, and confirmed by that king in 1477, were included the lands of Wethirnyde (now Auchterneid) and the lands of Pollane, either wholly or partly in this parish.² In 1526 or previously the lands of Dauchauchpollo were held by John Makanedoy, who died without lawful heirs.³ In 1527 they were included with the lands of the forest of Strathvaich (being respectively of the extent of 6 marks, and of 4 bolls victual and a mart) in a grant by King James V. to William Dingvale of Kildun.⁴ In 1542 (28 July) that king granted to Duncan Bayne the lands of Ballafreis, Strathskey, the forest of Strathrannoch, and other lands, either wholly or partly in Fodderty.⁵ In the same year (24 October) he granted the lands of Dawachpollo and others to James Fraser the brother of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet.⁶ In 1554 and 1555 appears in record Alexander Bayne in Inchevayneyl (or Enchewaney), apparently the modern Inehvandie.⁷ In 1578 Hugh Fraser of Gvisachane, hereditary fear of the lands of Dawachpolloch, in fulfilment of a contract between him and Alexander Bane of Tulloch, sold the half of the town and lands in heritage to Alexander and his wife Agnes Fraser, with remainder to the heirs of the former.⁸ In 1579 King James VI. granted to Alexander Bane a crown charter of the lands, and to Hugh Fraser a letter of reversion to the same.⁹ In 1583 King James seems to have confirmed both grants.¹⁰ In 1584 he granted in heritage to Sir Andrew Keith the lands of Dalmalook, Inchevandie, and Ochterneid, with other lands; the grantee paying yearly for Dalmalook £6, 13s. 4d., 16 shillings of bondage silver, and 7 reek hens—for Inchevandie £4, with 8 shillings of bondage silver, and 3 reek hens—and for Ochterneid £6, 13s. 4d., 4 muttuns, 6s. bondage silver, and 9 reek hens.¹¹ In the same year the lands of Dalmalook were included in the lordship or barony of Dingwall granted by the same king to the same Sir Andrew Keith.¹² In 1600 Duncan Bane of Tullich was served heir to his father Alexander Bane of Tullich in the lands of Ballafreis, of the old extent of 3 marks 4 shillings and other dues; Sthraithskey, of the extent of 3 marks and other dues; and the forest of Strathrannoch, of the extent of 4 bolls of bear and other dues.¹³ In 1619 Colin lord of Kintail was served heir male to his grandfather Colin Makkenzie of Kyntail in the lands of Dalmalook, Inchevandie, and Ochterneid, respectively of the extent of £6, 13s. 4d., £4, and £6, 13s. 4d.¹⁴ In the same year Issobel M'Kenzie was served heir to her father John the heir apparent of Garloche in the davach of Davachpollay, of the extent of £6, 8s. and 8s. in augmentation.¹ In 1635 Alexander Bayne was served heir male and of provision to his father Duncan Bayne of Tullich in the half of the forest of Strathrannach, namely Straithewaich and Straintirie, of the extent of 2 bolls of victual and other dues.²

In 1508 Alexander Seytoun of Tulybody sold to Alexander Earl of Huntlie the lands of Fothirty with the mill and brewhouse.³ In that year or the following the Earl had from King James VI. a crown charter of the same.⁴ In 1532 King James V. granted in heritage to John Mackeneth of Kentaill the lands of Fotherty, which he had acquired from the hereditary proprietor Master John Calder, and had resigned to the King.⁵ In 1543 Thomas Dingvale of Kildone sold to John Makkenze of Kintail the lands and fishings of Lochbryne in exchange for the lands of Fotherty with the mill, to be held of the Queen as Earl of Ross for payment of 6 pennies as blenchferme at Whitsunday.⁶ In 1543 and 1544 Queen Mary granted to these parties crown charters of the respective lands exchanged.⁷ In 1583 King James VI. granted in heritage to Colin M'Kainze of Kintail the lands of the Kirktoun of Foddartie, Balmuldie, and others, alienated to him by John Dingwall of Kildun.⁸ In 1633 George M'Keinzie was served heir male to his brother Colin Earl of Seaforth, Lord M'Keinzie of Kintail, in the lands of Foddertie, Mulnaan with the mill, Ballamulich, and others, of the old extent of £5, included in the barony of Ellendonan.⁹ The lands of Mulnaan, with the mill of Fodderty and the multures, the Kirk-toun of Fodderty, and Ballamulloche, were together of the old extent of 3 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence.¹⁰

In 1533 or previously Thomas Vrquhard sheriff of Cromerty granted to his son and heir apparent Alexander Vrquhard, and to his wife Beatrix Innes, the lands of Inchrory and Dauachnaclear with the mill (either in Fodderty or in Kinnettes).¹¹ In 1533 King James V. confirmed the grant.¹² In 1549 the same Alexander appears in record as Alexander Vrquhart of Ynchrorie.¹³ In 1599 Thomas Urquhart was served heir to his father Henry Urquhart, sheriff apparent of Cromerthie, in the lands, mill, multures, and mill-lands of Incherorie, the davach of Davach-naclerache, and the shealing called Garbet, of the old extent of £4.¹⁴

On the north of the burying-ground at Fodderty lies a croft named Croicht-an-teampuil, in which stone coffins have been found.¹⁵

On the east side of the church are two erect stones, probably the remains of a circle, but without any known history.¹⁶

On the heights of Hilton are a large cairn measuring 260 feet by 20, and the remains of two stone circles.¹⁷

Kennetis¹ — Kynnattas² — Kynnettis³ — Kinnettes.⁴ (Map, No. 20.)

THIS parish, now united to Fodderty, seems, as already stated, to have included the southern and smaller portion of the united parish, extending either from the Pefferay or Knockfarril on the north, and from the Craig-an-fhiach on the west, to Brahan and the river Conan on the south and east, and thus including the small lake named Loch Usie.

There appears to be no notice of this church till the era of the Reformation. It was annexed to the chancellery of Ross. Between 1561 and 1566 Master Duncan Chalmere was chancellor or 'vsufructuare,' and the parsonage and vicarage of Kennetis and the rest of the fruits of the chancellery were held in lease by Mr. David Chalmer titular and Richard Wrwing his factor.⁵ In 1574 Master George Monro was minister at Suddy and Kynnattas, and Alexander Bane younger was reader at the latter.⁶ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Master Duncan Chalmer chancellor of Ross, granting with the consent of the dean and chapter to Sir Patrick Johnestoun vicar pensioner of Kynnettis in liferent, and to Patrick Johnestoun his natural son and male heirs, with remainder to Patrick's brother-german William Johnestoun and his male heirs, and to their father's male heirs whomsoever, the town and lands of Kynnettis with the parsonage tithes included, then occupied by Patrick Johnestoun.⁷ In 1592 the same king granted to Master David Chalmer of Ormound the glebes and manses of the chancellery of Ros and the vicarage of Suddie, and the glebe, manse, and kirklands of Kynnettis with tithes included, lying in the canony of Ros at the kirks of Suddy and Kynnettis respectively.⁸ In 1655 Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbit was served heir male to his father Sir George in the kirklands of Kinnettes with the teinds within the parish of Kinnettes, of the extent of 8 marks, 5 shillings and 4 pence, which in 1681 were with the patronage of the church included in the barony of Tarbet then confirmed by King Charles II. to the same Sir George and John Mackenzie his son.⁹

The church, of which the cemetery still exists, stood to the westward of Knockfarril.¹⁰

Near Craig-an-fhiach is a well named Saint's well, and beside Knockfarril is the well of John the Baptist.¹²

The chapel and lands of Inchrory, described under Fodderty, may have been within the bounds of this parish.¹

The whole chancellery of Ross, as given up at the Reformation by Master David Chalmer titular of the teinds, amounted to £173, 6s. 8d.² In 1574 Master George Monro the minister had the whole chancellery, out of which he paid the readers at Suddy and Kynnattas each 20 marks, they having also the kirklands.³

In 1463 John of Yle, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to Thomas the younger of Dingvale the lands of Vsuy in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernys, in exchange for the third part of Arkboll and the lands of Inchfure in the mairdom of Delny, with remainder to his brother John of Dingvale and his heirs, and to their better and more worthy successor and relative of the name of Dinguale; reserving to the Earl the old mill with the usual toft and croft, and the usual multures and sequels (except those of the town of Vsuy), and the use of the stream descending from the lake of Vsuy, all as formerly — and reserving to Sir Thomas of Dingvale the Earl's chamberlain the liferent of the lands of Vsuy; for a yearly payment of 6 pennies in name of blenchferme.⁴ In 1464 the grant was confirmed by King James III.⁵ In 1476 that king granted to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, the wife of John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, for her maintenance certain lands in Ross, including Park, Elodil, Ouse, and the mill and brewhouse of Tympane, all which she had held in conjunct infestment with her husband before his forfeiture.⁶ In 1477 on attaining his majority he confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1527 King James V. granted to William Dingvale of Kildun various lands in Ross, including the mill of Housy with the house and lands of the extent of 10 marks.⁸ In 1542 the mill of Ousse with its croft and alehouse, and the astricted multures and suckin of Tolle and other lands, were included in a grant by the same king to Duncan Bayne.⁹ In 1583 King James VI. confirmed a charter by John Dingwall of Kildun, alienating in heritage to Colin M'Kainzie of Kintail the lands of Lytill Vsui and Mekill Vsui, with other lands in the earldom of Ross.¹⁰ In 1586 the same king granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe various lands in Ross, including Ardwall with the mill called Tympane Myln and multures, the alehouse of Kennetis alias Ardwell, the lands of Park, and the lands of Vlladaill; the grantee paying yearly for Ardwell 53s. 4d., 6 bolls meal, 6 bolls bear, 6 bolls oats, 2 marts, 2 muttuns, 6 poultry, 60 'girthstingis,' 60 loads of fuel, 100 draughts of fuel, 8s. of bondage silver, and 40s. every 5 years as grassum — for the mill of Ardwell or Tympane Myln with the multures, 1 chalder 2 bolls victual of the measure of Leith — for the alehouse of Kynnettis or Ardwell 13s. 4d., and the same sum as grassum — for Park 46s. 8d., 4s. of bondage silver, 3 poultry, 40s. as grassum, and 40 loads of fuel, with the usual services — and for Vlladaill, 40s., 8s. of bondage silver, 3 poultry, 40s. as grassum, and 40 loads of fuel, with the usual services.¹¹ In 1600 Duncan Bayne of Tullich was served heir to his father Contaneloid or Cultelloid were subsequently known as Culeloid, and have been modernised into Castle Leod.

The village of Strathpeffer, famous as a watering-place, and the villages of Maryburgh and Keithtown, appear to lie within the bounds of the parish of Kinnettes.¹

On the west side of Strathpeffer is Castle Leod, a seat of the Earls of Cromertie, bearing the date 1616.²

On the summit of Knockfarril is a vitrified wall enclosing about an acre, and connected in tradition with the Fions or Fingalians.³ Near the same hill there is a circular hollow surrounded with stones, and in another part of the parish one of the same kind—both locally termed Fairy folds.⁴

At Park is a circle of erect stones 15 feet in diameter, from which run eastward two rows 9 feet in length and 6 feet apart.⁵ It is traditionally connected with the battle of Blar-na-paire fought about 1480 between the Macdonalds and Mackenzies, but is evidently of much older date, though it marks the spot.⁶

Near Castle Leod is a stone sculptured with the figure of an eagle and known as the Clach-an-tioman, supposed to mark the scene of a conflict between the Munroes and Mackenzies.⁷

THIS large and mountainous parish is about 30 miles square, and includes almost every variety of scenery. It is watered by Loch Fannich, Loch Luichart, Loch Rusque, and many smaller lakes, and by the rivers Bran, Garve, Rasay, Conan, Orrin, and others. It is entirely inland, and on its western border is skirted by no fewer than five large parishes.

In the year 1227 John the vicar of Conten was present at Kenedor in Moray with others of the clergy of Ross at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.¹⁵ The Aberdeen Breviary, without giving the date, informs us that about 500 Islanders invaded Ross, set fire to the church of Saint Malrube of Contan while the inhabitants were celebrating his anniversary (27 August or 21 April), and by fire and sword destroyed about 100 men and women.¹ The men of Ross, we are informed by the same authority, encouraged by the appearance of the deceased saint bearing a staff or crosier, though inferior in numbers, attacked and defeated the Islanders, leaving scarce 30 of them alive.² In 1529 the canons of Fearn had a yearly revenue of 8 lbs. of wax in the town called Contan.³ In 1550 Queen Mary presented David Stewart to the rectory of the parish church of Qwentan, vacant by the decease of a person of the surname of Fores.⁴ At the Reformation the parsonage and vicarage of Contane belonged to Master Robert Burnet.⁵ In 1574 Donald Adamsoun was minister of Contane and several other parishes, and the office of reader at Contane was vacant.⁶ In 1575 occurs the legitimation of Alexander and Robert the sons of Master Robert Burnet rector of Contan.⁷ In 1587 the same Master Robert appears as vicar of Cowtane and canon of Ross.⁸

The church dedicated to Saint Malrube seems to have always stood in the extreme east of the parish on an island in the river Rasay near its confluence with the Conan.⁹ The date of the present building is unknown.¹⁰ A church was built at Keanlochluichart in 1825, and another at Strathconan in 1830.¹¹

In Baiamund's Roll the church is rated at 53s. 4d.; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £26, 13s. 4d.¹² At the Reformation the parsonage and vicarage were let yearly for the sum of £40.¹³ In 1574 the reader at Contane had for his stipend 20 marks and the kirklands.¹⁴

About the year 1309 King Robert Bruce granted the lands of Strathconan to Hugh of Ross.¹⁵ In 1538 King James V. by a letter under his privy seal declared John M'Kanze of Kintaile to be heritable proprietor of the lands of Meyn in Strachonane, and of the lands of Eschadillis, Innermany, Innerquhonray, and Kinlochbanquhare, in the lordship of Ros and sheriffdom of Innernys; and ordered his comptroller and auditors of his exchequer to 'delete and put furth' the lands from the exchequer rolls.¹⁶ At the same time he united those lands, namely, two marklands of Kinlochbanquhar, three marklands of Innerquhonray, three marklands of Innermany, four marklands of Meyne in Strachonane, and four marklands of Eschadillis, to the barony of Eleandonnan belonging to the same John M'Kanze of Kintaile.¹⁷ In 1543 Queen Mary granted in heritage to Kenneth Mackenze, the son and apparent heir of John Mackenze of Kintail, and to Isabel Stewart his wife, along with lands in the lordship of Kintail, the lands of Maneye and Eskadillis in the lordship of Straconnan, and others, which John Mackenze had resigned.¹⁸ In 1571 Colin Makcanze of Kintail, in fulfilment of a contract between himself on the one side and John Grant of Frewchie for himself and Barbara Grant on the other, granted to Barbara, who was his affianced spouse, certain lands, including those of Kinlochbeancharan and Innerchonray.¹ In 1572 King James VI. confirmed the grant.² In 1574 Colin M'Keinzie of Kintail was served heir to Kenneth M'Keinzie his father in the four marklands of Meynen and the four marklands of the davach of Eschidaill, and other lands, in the barony of Ellendonane, of the old extent of 5 marks.³ In 1633 George M'Keinzie was served heir male to his brother Colin Earl of Seaforth, Lord M'Keinzie of Kintail, in the lands and barony of Ellendonan, including among others the two marks of Kenlochbencharran, three marks of Innerchonran, three marks of Innervenane, four marks of Mainzie, and four marks of the davach of Eskidillis.⁴

Among the lands granted by King James III. to Elizabeth Countess of Ross for her honourable maintenance in 1476, and confirmed to her by that king in 1477, were included the lands of Rew and the lands of Cwyl.⁵ In 1526 the lands of Rewy extending in the King's rental to 53s. 8d., and the lands of Achnaeroch (or Achnacherach) extending in the same rental to 33s. 4d., were included in the tenandry of Culmelloquhy then granted by King James V. to Walter Innes of Tulchis.⁶ In a subsequent grant by the same king in 1527, given in order to augment his rental by the sum of £6 yearly, Rewy was let at £3, 6s. 8d., and Auchnaclerauch at 40s.⁷ In 1528 the same king granted to Walter Innes the lands of Culcragy (apparently in Contin), and annexed them to the tenandry of Culmaloquhy.⁸ In 1538 he granted to the same Walter for five years the same tenandry, including the lands of Auchinaglerauch, the lands of Rewey, and the lands of Culcragy.⁹ In 1584 King James VI. granted to Sir Andrew Keith the lands of Auchnaclerauche, for the yearly payment of 53s. 4d., a reek hen, and 4s. of bondage silver.¹⁰ In 1586 the same king granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe various lands in Ross, including the lands of Culcragy and Rewy, the alehouse of Coull with a croft, and the alehouse of Coull without a croft; the grantee paying yearly for Rewy £3, 6s. 8d., with 8s. of bondage silver, and 1 poultry, and £3, 6s. 8d. every five years as grassum—for the alehouse of Coull with croft 26s. 8d. and the same sum as grassum—for the alehouse without croft 13s. 4d. and the same sum as grassum—and for Culcragy certain dues not specified, but included in one payment with those of some other lands.¹¹ In 1619 Colin Lord of Kintail was served heir male to his grandfather Colin Makkeinzie of Kyntail in the lands of Auchnaclerach, of the extent of 26s. 8d.¹²

In 1528 King James V. granted to John M'Kenze of Kintail the £4 lands of Estir Hecheley and Westir Hecheley, the 4 marklands of Cumerly, the £4 lands of Mekle Scathole, and other lands in the earldom of Ross, for yearly payment of £18, 13s. 4d., in order to augment his rental by the sum of £4.¹³ In 1529 the same king granted to Roderick or Rory Makkenze the two

A fair is held twice a year at Contin Inn.⁶

At the eastern end of Loch Achilty there is a circle of stones, within which were found some empty urns.⁷

Near Loch Kinellan is Blair-nan-ceann (the field of heads), a name supposed to commemorate the same conflict as Blair-na-paire.⁸ In the loch is an artificial island on which it is said that the Seaforth family had formerly a stronghold.⁹

In Loch Achilty, also on an island believed to be artificial, are some ruins pointed out as once the residence of a person known as Maclea Mor, and a vault formerly existing in the parish church was known as Cruist Mhic Lea and said to have been the burial place of that family.¹⁰ which unite to form the Beauly. Its chief lakes, formed in the courses of those streams, are Loch Affarie, Loch Beneiran, Loch Moyley, and Loch Monar. The falls of Kilmorack and other scenes on the Beauly are noted for their beauty.

A charter granted in 1437 by Hugh Fraser lord of Lovet to Alexander of Ile Earl of Ross is witnessed by Sir John the vicar of Kilmorok.¹ Robert bishop of Ross, who died in 1521, granted to Thomas Fraser of Lovet and his heirs the lands of the Kirkton of Kilmoricht, with the 'craig' and fishing of that town commonly called the Ess of Kilmorichte, belonging to the church of Kilmorichte, in the earldom of Ross—for the yearly payment of £10, 6s. 8d. Scots, namely, £8, 6s. 8d. for 4 barrels of salmon according to the common valuation of the yearly fishing called the Ess, and 40s. as the old ferme of the Kirkton and the 'craig'—with £3 in augmentation of the rental.² In 1532 Hugh Fraser of Lovet as heir of Thomas petitioned Silvester the Pope's legate for confirmation of the grant; and the legate in compliance with his request issued in a mandate addressed to Robert abbot of Killoss and Donald abbot of Ferne, who consequently cited all concerned to appear before them on the 28th of August of that year in the aisle of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the cathedral church of Ross to witness the confirmation.³ There seems to be no farther notice of this church till the Reformation, at which time the vicar was Sir John Nicoloun.⁴ In 1573 King James VI. presented Donald Dow to the vicarage, then vacant by the resignation of the same Sir John.⁵ In 1574 Donald Dow was minister of Kilmorak and several other churches, and there was no reader at Kilmorak.⁶

The church, dedicated apparently to Saint Moroc (who is said to have been a Culdee abbot at Dunkeld, and was commemorated on the 8th of November) stood near the falls of Kilmorack on the left bank of the Beauly.⁷ It was rebuilt in the end of the last century, apparently on the same site.⁸

In 1230 the priory of Beauly (prioratus de Bello Loco, Beaulieu, Beuling, Bewlie) was founded by Sir John Byseth (Biset, Bissate, Bisset) of Lovat for monks of the order of Vallis Caulium.⁹ The terms of the foundation are said to have been—that the monks should pray for the founder during his life; that they should receive his body when dead; and that they should commemorate him by continual sacrifices and works of piety.¹⁰ One of the Popes named Gregory (apparently Pope Gregory IX. who filled the chair from 1227 to 1241) confirmed and took under his protection the property of the monks of Beauly, especially Fitheney and Karcurri and the fishing of the Forne granted to them by John Biseth.¹¹ Between the years 1230 and 1242 William Byseth, the brother of John, granted to the monks the church of Aberterth (Abirtarf in the diocese of Moray).¹² Between the same years Andrew (de Moravia) bishop of Moray confirmed to the monks of Beaully (Belli Loci juxta Beaufort) the teinds of the church of Aberterf, the churchlands of the same, and the tithe of all the salmon fishings in that parish, which were granted to them by William Byseth.¹ In 1255 Laurence the soldier (miles), the son of Patrick the gateward (janitor) of Innernis, quitclaimed to the monks all right which he had in Bromihalw and in the Island.² Between the years 1275 and 1294 David of Innerlunan, with the consent of Gillicrist Macgilliduff, quitclaimed to the monks his land of Ouchterwaddale (or Onachtervadal) extending to half a davach, which he held in lease of Gillicrist, by whom the same land was granted to the monks.³ In 1278 Andrew de Boscho and Elisabeth (Byseth) his wife granted to them two marks to be yearly received at their castle of Eddyrdor from them and their heirs or from their bailies for the time, or in their tenement of Eddirdor.⁴ In 1279 the prior of Beaully was one of the sub-deputies appointed by the abbot of Der, who was commissioned by the Pope (Nicolas III.) to settle a dispute about the kirklands of Keltalargyn between Archibald bishop of Moray and William of Fenthon lord of Beuford.⁵ Subsequently to the year 1280 Cecilia Byseth, the widow of Sir William of Fentoun, granted to the monks of Beaully her third part of Altyr falling to her as heir.⁶ Apparently between 1309 and 1325 Patrick of Graham granted to the same monks his third part of Altre in exchange for the multures of the lands of Loueth, Fyngask, Dofnaldistun, and others—also in compensation for 40 marks due by him to them as the third of 120 marks in which the deceased Sir John Byseth (his grandfather) had bound himself and his heirs to the fabric of Beaully—also in compensation for 25 marks in which he (Patrick of Graham) was bound to them by occasion of the unjust detention of the multure of the said lands—and also in compensation for 17 marks in which he was bound to them of the debt of Sir David his father; and, should he or his heirs recall this grant, the multures of the lands should revert to the monks for ever.⁷ In 1329 William of Fenton lord of Beuford granted to them two marks yearly from the mill of Beuford, to be paid by his bailies of Beuford or by the farmers of the mill.⁸ In 1340, by a charter dated apud Bellum Locum, John called of Urchard, perpetual vicar of Abbertherff, quitclaimed to the monks all right which he had in the tithe of the fishing of Abbertherff, granted (or confirmed) to them by the deceased Andrew bishop of Moray.⁹ In 1341, 1356, and 1357 Robert prior of Beaully appears in record.¹⁰ In 1362 we have Symon prior de Bello Loco.¹¹ Apparently between that date and 1372, and certainly between 1336 and 1372, a charter by William Earl of Ross is witnessed by Sir Maurice prior Belli Loci.¹² One of the popes named Gregory, said to be Gregory XI., by a bull dated at Lyons on 15 March in the third year of his pontificate, confirmed all the privileges of the monks of Beaully.¹³ In 1471 is recorded the death of Alexander Frisale prior of Bewly.¹ In 1480 appear in record Sir John Fynla prior, and Sir Patrick Morra and Sir John Duncan monks.² Sir John Fynla appears to have been succeeded by Hugh Frezel, who died extra Romanam curiam.³ In 1497 Pope Alexander VI. presented Dougald M'Rory (Roderici) clerk to the priorate, then vacant by the death of Hugh Frezel, commanding the bishops of Aberdeen and Ros, the official of Ros, the abbot and convent of Vallis Caulium, and the subprior and brethren de Bello Loco or of Beulie, to receive Dougald, if qualified, as a monk, and to induct him into the priorate, whose fruits he alleged did not exceed £40 yearly.⁴ Andrew bishop of Moray was commissioned to give effect to the appointment; and in 1501 the same pope issued a similar mandate in Dougald's favour.⁵ In 1506 James Courtois (or Quartus), prior general of the order of Vallis Caulium (Val des Choux), commissioned the prior of Beuling to visit the priory of Ardquhattan (in Argyll), which belonged to the same order.⁶ In the same year (18 December) the prior general, styling himself 'brother James Courtois, prior of the monastery of Valliscaulium, head or general of that order situated in the duchy of Burgundy near Chatillon on the Seine,' addressed a letter to the prior of Beaully to the following effect—That on the date of his letter a Scottish priest named William Thomson appeared in the priory of Valliscaulium, and presented certain letters unsigned and unsealed, dated 10 November preceding, and addressed to the prior general by the prior of Beaully; that, whereas the latter complained that the bishop of Ross or his official claimed the right of visiting the monastery of Beaully, and the prior maintained that the order was exempt from episcopal jurisdiction, which was not true, the prior general informed him that in France the order had but thirteen small houses situated in five dioceses, and that they were regularly visited by the bishops; that, whereas the prior of Beaully desired an authentic copy of the institution and confirmation of the privileges of the order, the prior general could not then furnish it, as the original lay in their treasury at Bivion, and he on account of the approaching feast of the Nativity (25 December) and his own ill health could not go thither; that he wondered how the prior could rule the priory of Beaully and its dependent monasteries without either coming or sending to the prior general to have institution and confirmation of the same; that he therefore exhorted him under the usual penalties to appear in a chapter of the order to be held on the next feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross (3 May 1507), that he might there show him the confirmation, statutes, and privileges of the order; that the prior's last predecessor (Hugh Frezel) had promised that he or his procurator would appear in the general chapter once every four years, and yet, though the prior general on account of the distance had extended the interval to six years, neither the deceased prior, nor his procurator, nor the present prior, nor any person for him, had appeared, with which he thought he (the prior general) should not rest satisfied; and that moreover, although the prior's predecessor or his procurator had promised to send salmon named from their country, or rivers, or waters, to the town of Bruges or Valenciennes, whither the prior general had commissioned merchants to receive them and carry them to Bivion, yet he had never received any from the deceased prior or his procurator; but that, as the said William, the bearer of this letter, had assured him that the present prior was a man of nobility, of veracity, and of good religion, he believed that during the following summer he would do him reason not only for his predecessor but also for himself.¹ In 1513 Pope Julius II. granted a bull in favour of Dougall prior of Beaulie and the convent, threatening with excommunication all who had intermeddled with their property, unless they made restitution within a certain time.² In 1514 the bull was published by Robert Fresel dean and official of Ross.³ In 1529 King James V. promoted Master James Haswell, chaplain of the chapel of Saint Margaret in the castle of Edinburgh, to the dignity of prior of Bewlie.⁴ About the year 1530 Robert Reid abbot of Kinloss was appointed commendator of Bewlie; in 1540 he was made bishop of Orkney, and appears to have held those three offices till his death in 1558.⁵ In 1537 he received seven young men into the priory as monks, and was engaged in preparing material for building the nave of the church.⁶ In 1540, on his appointment to the bishoprick of Orkney, he went into that district, and on his return brought five young monks of Beaulie to Kynlos, and put them under the charge of John Ferrerius, whom he had brought from France in 1528 to instruct the monks of Kynlos.⁷ The five monks were Sir Thomas Togny, Sir David Dason, Sir John Crauford, Sir James Pop, and Sir Gilbert Gray.⁸ In 1540 the commendator built the nave of the church at a great expense, and roofed it with oak; and repaired the belfry which had been struck with lightning.⁹ The changes which arose on the death of King James V. in 1542 interrupted the labours of Ferrerius, and having sent back the monks to Beaulie, he resolved himself to return to France.¹⁰ In 1543 Sir James Haisty a monk of Bewlie found surety before the civil court for his appearance to answer for being art and part in the oppression done to Master Gawin Dunbar treasurer of Ross in coming upon him with the bishop and his accomplices in the cathedral church, in laying hands upon him, and in cruelly wounding him to the effusion of his blood.¹¹ In 1544 the commendator took down the old rickety house of the prior, and built in its stead a large and elegant house with six vaults below.¹² Between 1561 and 1566 we have the following rental of the priory given up to the collector of thirds by John abbot of Kinloss the commendator—‘The rental of the priorie of Bowlyne, baith of the maillis, silver, fearmis, teindis, martis, wedderis, and vtheris dewties, as efter followis. The rental of silver—Item in primis the silver maill of the barronie of Bewlyne with the maynis of the samin extendis to lxi lib.—Item the kirkis of Convith and Cumer sould pay in silver in the yeir the sowme of xxxiii lib.—Item the kirk of Abirtarf sould pay in silver the sowme of xlii lib.—Summa of the haill silver in maillis and teindis extendis to i^c xxxvi lib. xiii s. iiii d. ; The rental of the victuall of the said pryorie—Item in the haill victuale of the barronie of Bowlyne with the maynis of the samin extendis to iiii ch. victuall—Item the kirkis of Conveith and Cumer in victuale extendis to vii ch. xi bs.—Item the twa mylnes of Bowlyne sett

Remember, my lord comptrollar, and speir the rentall of thir twa, Kinlos and Bewlyne, for they are suspicious anent the fishing.¹ In 1568 Walter abbot of Kinloss and prior of Bewlie leased for 19 years to John Clerk in Bewlie, and, he failing, to Alexander Clerk his lawful son, and to their heirs of no higher degree than themselves, the eighteenth part of the town and lands of Reyndoun in the barony and priory of Bewlie and sheriffdom of Innernes, with the 'pateland' called John Clerk's land, lying 'betwix our said abbaye and place of Bewlie betwix the twa getis eist and west, ascendant up fra the croft callit Alexandr Wrichtis croft to the get passand eist and west throch the Cuthill, as the said auchtant part and pateland callit John Wrichtis (Clerkis?) land lvis in lenth and braid,' then and long before occupied by John Clerk, together with the kilnhouse, barn, tofts, wastes, and buildings, used and wont, with power to brew and sell the malt made from corn grown by themselves, provided they did so without prejudice to the principal alehouse of the priory—

the grantees paying yearly for Reyndoun 12s. 6d. Scots, 2 bolls 2 pecks of ferme, one firlot of oats, one-fourth of a mart, three-fourths of a mutton, 6 poultry, one kid, and 24 eggs valued at a penny; and for the 'pateland' called John Clerk's land £4 Scots, a dozen of poultry, 'ane —— to the water,' and a hook (a reaper) in harvest; extending in all to £4, 12s. 6d. Scots — the lease to be void if the dues should remain unpaid for two successive terms.¹ The lease is subscribed by abbot Walter, brother John Crawford, James Rox, Sir Thomas Taynam monk, and George Moray.² In 1573 King James VI. appointed Master John Fraser prior and commendator of Bewlie, the priorate being vacant by the resignation of Walter abbot of Kinlos.³ One of those two priors (it does not appear which) granted to Hew Lord Fraser of Lovat and his heirs male the barony, towns, and lands of Bewlie, namely, the village and lands of Ardingrosk; Rewindoun; Incherorie; Alter; Craigsorie; Plathaycht; Grome; Ferinellie with the forests and woods; Thaynok with the pendicles, namely, Ouircroarss, the Reliet, and Grenefauld, with the cottage of the same; the lands of Vrquhany with the woods; the lands called the Half Dawaucht; the lands of Boycht, Couharbric; a third of the lands of Mekle Culmulang; a third of Eister Glen of Conveith, and a fourth of the lands of Faynblair; Ferrieous with its croft; Ainocht; Auldtoun called the common pasture; Thacfrische with the cottage; the lands called Masounland; the lands called John Cuiakis land; a croft called M'Hueheonis croft and common cottage; the lands called the mains of Bewlie, with the yards and orchards belonging to the priory, and the pertinents and crofts of the said lands and lordships; a croft called Dean James Papis croft; a croft called Merschellis croft; a croft called M'Alisteris croft, then occupied by David Lowsoun; and also two mills called Thaynok and Bewlie mills, with the thirled multures of the whole barony of Bewlie and of all the lands above written with their sequels; and also the whole salmon fishing on the water of Forne, marching from Cairncot to the sea or to any other part on the said water among Hew Lord Fraser's fishings of Kilmarok, with the cruves and other commodities; within the priory of Bewlie and sheriffdom of Innernes — for the yearly payment of £211, 15s.⁴ In 1579 King James VI. confirmed the grant, with a special clause confirming the yearly payment, and appointing the third of the rental of the fishings to be paid according thereto.⁵ In 1584 the same king, for the good service done by the deceased Hew Lord Fraser of Lovat, and his son and heir Symon then Lord Fraser of Lovat, confirmed the prior's grant, the seisin given to Hew Lord Fraser, the seisin given to Symon as his son and heir, and the King's own charter of 1579, and specially that clause of it relating to the yearly payment and the collection of the third.⁶ An entry in the records of the Scotch parliament, dated 1612, is as follows — 'Ratification to the Lord Hay of Sala of his erection of Beaulie.'⁷ The remains of the priory church, consisting chiefly of bare walls without sculpture or ornament, are still to be seen near the mouth of the Beauly in the east end of the parish.⁸ Within it are numerous tombstones and monuments, apparently of the Bissets and other early lords of Beauly, and also of the later proprietors the Frasers, the clan Chisholm, and others; and among the rest is the tombstone of Sir Kenneth MacKenzie of Kintail dated 1493.¹ At Wellhouse in the neighbourhood was a consecrated spring, and also a lofty cross, the shaft of which is still to be seen at the modern village of Beauly.² In the end of last century Beauly was locally known as Vanechan (the land of the monks), and the river as Avin-na-manich (the river of the monks).³

At the Reformation the vicarage of Kilmorak was given by Sir Alexander Pedder, in name of the vicar Sir John Nicolsoun, as having yielded when leased the sum of £26, 13s. 4d., 'quhen teindis and oblatiounis was payit.'⁴ We have another statement by Master Henry Kinros, who says that 'the vicarage of Kilmorak gaif of auld xx lib. in assedatioun, and now nothing payit thir tua yeiris quhill vniversall ordour be tane.'⁵

In the Libellus Taxationum the priory of Beuling is valued at 400 marks; and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. it is rated at £62.⁶

Before the thirteenth century the lands of Herkele (Erchless) and of Cumber (Comer), each extending to a davach, formed part of the old parish of Conveth (or Conway) in the diocese of Moray, the church of which then belonged to the bishop.⁷ In the end of the twelfth or beginning of the thirteenth century the lands of the parish were granted in fee to John Byseth (of Lovat).⁸ Between 1203 and 1222 Bricius bishop of Moray had a controversy with John Byseth respecting the patronage of the churches of Coneway and Dulbatelauch (now Kirkhill), and the tithes of the crown rents due from the lands.⁹ It was settled by John Byseth on the one hand resigning to the bishop the patronage and ecclesiastical dues of Dulbatelauch, and the bishop on the other resigning to him the patronage and dues of Coneway, with the exception of 20s. yearly retained by the bishop as the title of £10 paid yearly by John Byseth to the King for the lands which he held at ferme within those parishes.¹⁰ In 1258 a controversy arose between Archibald bishop of Moray and the same John Byseth, the former maintaining that a davach of the churchland of Cuneway and another davach in Ros called Herchelys belonged to his table, and the latter that they belonged to his fief of the Ard—the bishop moreover claiming from John Byseth the 'cane' of his land of the Ard and a stone of wax, which he alleged were wont to be paid to himself and his predecessors for a long period.¹¹ Robert bishop of Ross and his dean being appointed arbiters in the matter by the Pope (Alexander IV.), the bishop of Moray renounced his claim, and John Byseth of his mere good will granted to him for ever a yearly revenue of 60 shillings sterling from the lands of Munyoch in the Ard.¹² John Bisset left three daughters, Mary (married to Sir David Graham, and afterwards, it is said, to Simon Fraser of Lovat), Cecilia (married to Sir William of Fenton), and Elizabeth (married to Sir Andrew de Bosco), each of whom seems to have inherited a third of their father's property.¹³ The lands of the Ard, including Erchless, were probably held by Steuene of Arde (how acquired is unknown), whose son William, designated of the county of Innerness, swore fealty to King Edward I. in 1296; and also by Sir Cristin of Ard, who appears in record from that year to 1366, and whose son John appears between 1296 and 1325.¹ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Hugh of Ross the lands of Straglass (probably including Erchless).² Weland of Ard (of what descent does not appear) married Matilda, the only daughter of Malise Earl of Stratherne by his first wife Matilda the daughter of the Earl of Menteth.³ Their son Alexander of Ard inherited in right of his mother the earldoms of Stratherne and Caithness, and lands in Banff, Sutherland, and Orkney, all which he resigned apparently between the years 1375 and 1377.⁴ He appears to have previously resigned the lands of the Ard, and died without issue.⁵ About 20 years before his resignation of the other lands the three portioners of the Ard were William of Fenton lord of Bewfourd, Hugh Fraser Lord of Loveth, and Alexander of Chesolme.⁶ In the year 1368, on the feast of the Blessed Trinity, in the chamber of Alexander bishop of Moray at Spynny, in the presence of the whole multitude of canons and chaplains and others invited thither to dinner, Alexander of Chesolme portioner of the Ard with joined hands and uncovered head did homage to the bishop for the lands of the Ess and of Kyntallirgy.⁷ Between the years 1360 and 1398 there appear in record John of the Ard subchanter of Moray, William of Chesholme treasurer, and Thomas of Chesholm, a person of some consequence at the time, all by birth apparently connected with the families of the Ard.⁸ In 1394, in an agreement made between Thomas of Dunbar Earl of Moray and Alexander of the Isles lord of Lochalse, by which it was settled that Alexander of the Isles should have the custody of all the lands of the regality of Moray and the ecclesiastical lands, there were excepted the lands of Hugh Fraser, Thomas of Cheshelme, and Sir William of Fodrynham (apparently the portioners of the Ard); among whom there was a certain agreement concerning their lands.⁹ In 1398 there occurs in record John of Cheshelm of the Arde.¹⁰ In 1401, by an indenture dated at Dvnbathlach between Margaret of the Ard lady of that Ilk and Angus the son of Goffred of Ile, it was agreed that Angus should marry Margaret the Young the daughter of the lady Margaret of the Ard, with whom he should have from her mother 15 marklands, namely, the davach of Croychel and the half davach of Comyr Kynbady, within the bounds of Strathglas, to be held by Angus and his heirs by Margaret—that, should Margaret die without heirs, the half of those lands and the half of the goods then jointly possessed by Angus and his wife should revert to the lady Margaret and her heirs, the other half to remain with Angus for life — that after his death the whole should freely revert to the lady Margaret and her sons for recovery of the davach of Brebach Carynnes and Innvyrnavyr in Strathnavyr, the two Gartyis in the earldom of Suthyrland, and Larnyse in the earldom of Caithness — and that, in so far as the lady Margaret and her sons might recover the said lands through the advice, assistance, and power of Angus, he and his heirs by her daughter Margaret should have the fourth part of the recovered lands, and the other three-fourths should remain with the lady Margaret and her sons; the entry of Angus to be at the feast of Pentecost following, so that the fermes of that term should remain with the lady Margaret, and that the lands should thenceforth be at the will of Angus.¹ In 1403, by an indenture dated at Kinrossy in the barony of Cullace (in Perthshire) between William of Fentoun of Baky on the one side and Margaret of the Ard of Arcles and Thomas of Cheisholm her son and heir on the other, dividing between them the lands of which they were heirs portioners, and which lay in the sheriffdoms of Perth, Forfar, Lanark, Aberdeen, and Inverness, it was agreed that the lands of the Ard should stand divided as of old.² Between the years 1406 and 1415 the agreement was confirmed by Robert Duke of Albany Regent of Scotland.³ Between 1406 and 1410 the Regent granted the lands of Straglashe to Eupham Leslie Countess of Ross, with remainder to John Stewart Earl of Buchan and to Robert Stewart his brother, and they failing the lands were to revert to the crown.⁴ In 1464 John of Halyburtoun of the Arde or of Kynrossy was prosecuted by the abbot of Abirbrothoc for alienating the lands of Bucht which he held of the abbot.⁵ In the year 1492 Alexander and William of Cheshelm appear among the arbiters in a dispute between Andrew bishop of Moray and Hugh Ros baron of Kilravok.⁶ In 1512 King James IV. granted in heritage to James Haliburtoun of Gask certain lands in the barony of Ard and sheriffdom of Innernys, and the lands of the two Arcles in the earldom of Ross, which he had resigned — and erected into the free barony of Arcles the same lands, together with the lands of Kirk-toun and Inqlistoun in the barony of Ard, and the lands of Westir Strus, Estir Strus, Culguyry, Estir Croychell, Westir Croychell, Westir Comyr, Kilbaddy, and Dalheny, with the fishings and outsets of the same, lying in Strathglasch, in the earldom of Ross, and in the sheriffdom of Innernys, which formerly belonged to James Haliburtoun in heritage, and after alienation by him had been redeemed — granting to him all the King's right and title to the lands and their fermes, which he had by reason of the forfeiture of the Earls of Moray or of Ross, of whom they were formerly held.⁷ In 1513 the same king confirmed the indenture of 1403.⁸ In 1529 James Haliburtoun of Gask resigned the lands granted to him in 1512, which King James V. then granted in heritage to Hugh Fraser of Lovat.⁹ In 1539 King James granted to Hugh Lord Frasare of Lovet and his male heirs of the name and arms of Frasere, with remainder to his heirs whomsoever, the lands and baronies of Lovet, Strathawrick, Ard, Abirtarff, Hereiclis or Straglass, the fishings in the water of Forne, the lands of Comerkle in the barony of the Ard, and other lands in the sheriffdom of Innernys—the lands of Comerkle and some others having been appraised in the hands of King James IV. for certain sums of money due to him by the deceased Thomas Lord Lovet, and the rest resigned by Hugh—and the whole were then erected into the free barony of Lovet.¹

In 1500 Welland Chesholme of Comar appears as party in a raid against the lands of Ardnamach and the Redecastell.² In 1513 King James IV. granted in heritage to Wiland Chesholm of Comyr the lands of Knockfyn, Comymr, the two Inverchaynayas, and the two Brekachyis, in Straglasch in the earldom of Ross, which Wiland had resigned to the King as Earl.³ In 1539 King James V. granted in heritage to John Chesholme, the son and apparent heir of Wiland Chesholme of Comyr, the lands of Knokfyn, Comermore, the two Innerchannais, and the two Brakachies, with the outsets and the forests of Affrik, Cullove, and Bramulich, in Straglasche in the earldom of Ross, which formerly belonged to Wiland Chesholme, and were appraised in the hands of King James IV. for certain sums of money due to him by Wiland, and which King James V. then united into the barony of Comermore.⁴ In 1555 Queen Mary granted to John Earl of Suthirland the lands of Comyr Straglasche and all others belonging to the deceased John Cheisholme of Comyr, in her hands since his decease.⁵ In 1577 King James VI. confirmed a grant in liferent by Alexander Chisholme of Comber to Jonet M'Kenze the sister german of Colin M'Kenze of Kintaill, of the lands and mill of Brakeches in the earldom of Ross, to be held of the crown.⁶ In 1584 appear in record Alexander Cheisholme of Cwmer and Wiland (Vallanus) Cheisholme his youngest son.⁷ In 1590 John Chisholm was served heir to his father Alexander Chisholme of Commirmore in the lands of Knokfyne, Commirmore, the two Innerchannais with the mill, Brakacheis, the woods and forest of Auffrage, Cawloue, and Bramaleche, extending to three davachs, united into the barony of Commermoir, lying in Strathglass, in the earldom of Ross, and, excepting the lands of Wester Innerchannay with the mill, and the lands of Comirmoir, of the old extent of £4.⁸

There seems to have been a town or village at Beauly in 1562.⁹ There is a modern village in the neighbourhood, but apparently not on the same site.¹⁰

Fairs are held at Beauly in May, August, October, and November.¹¹ The Muir of Ord Market is held on the third Wednesday of April, on the second Wednesday of May, on the third Wednesday of June, on the third Tuesday of July, on the third Tuesday of August, on the third Tuesday of September, on the third Tuesday of October, and on the second Wednesday of November.¹²

Erchless Castle, the seat of the Chisholms, built between 1594 and 1610, lies on the Beauly, where its stream is formed by the union of the Glass and the Farrar, about five miles above Kilmorack, and near an eminence the site of an older building and now enclosed as a family cemetery.¹

On the Muir of Ord are two upright stones, 6 feet high, said to commemorate some feat of warfare.²

In different parts of the parish are the sites or remains of cairns, and the ruins of small hill forts.³

Vrray⁴ — Wrray, Vurray⁵ — Urray.⁶ (Map, No. 23.)

THIS parish, now united with Kilchrist (or Tarradale) is chiefly a well cultivated plain with patches of wood and moor interspersed, stretching from east to west along the banks of the rivers Conan and Orrin, which meet about its centre.⁷ It includes also a davach of land in Strathconan, distant about 10 miles from the rest of the parish.⁸

The church of Urray was the prebend of the subchanter of Ross, and was from 1541 to 1561 or longer held by Master David Haliburtoun.⁹ In 1546 Queen Mary presented Donald Symsoun to the vicarage of Vrray, when it should be vacant by the demission or decease of Sir Alexander Gray, collation to the benefice during the vacancy of the see belonging to the cardinal of Saint Andrews.¹⁰ In 1548 the same queen presented Sir Andrew Dow chaplain to the vicarage, vacant or when vacant by the resignation of Master John Carnceors precentor of Ross, collation in this case (the see being still vacant) belonging to Master Kentigern Monypenny dean and vicar general of Ross.¹¹ At the Reformation the vicar was Sir Alexander Peddir, who in the rental of the assumption of thirds (1561-1566) is stated to have been vicar 'the space of thir four yeiris bygane or thairby.'¹² In 1569 (11 October) King James VI. presented Alexander Greirsoun to the vicarage of Vrray, vacant by the decease of Sir Alexander Pedder.¹³ In the same year (13 December) he presented to the vicarage, vacant by the decease of the same Alexander, Donald Adamsoun exhorter at the kirks of Dingwell and Vrray.¹⁴ In 1573 the same king presented Donald Adamesoun minister at Vrray to the parsonage of Vrray, 'quhilk is the subchanterie of Ros, quhilk pertenet of befoir to Mr. David Halyburtoun provest of Methven, and throw his inobedience and nocht geving of his assent and subscribing the actis of religioun contentin in the actis

The church, apparently built about the year 1780, stands near the confluence of the Conan and the Orrin (styled by Blaeu Avon Forbarin), but, from the frequent shifting of the bed of the latter, probably not on the original site.⁴

In Baiamund the subchantry of Ross is taxed at £4; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £40.⁶ At the Reformation the rental of the parsonage of Vrray, presented by Mr John Dumbar, was in effect as follows — The teinds of Brain extending yearly to 20 marks; Kings Vrray 11 marks; Arckyne 26 marks; Eistir Farbrownne 5 marks; Andirquhenren 40s.; Killquhilliedrum 7 marks; Mekill Moy with Murdoch M'Centzie's feu lands £50; in all £102, 13s. 4d.⁷ At the same date Sir Alexander Peddir the vicar states that the vicarage 'was quhen guid payment was maid worth yeirlic xx lib., and now nothing gottin thir thrie yeiris.'⁸ Between 1569 and 1573 Donald Adamsone exhorter had as his stipend £40 (apparently the parsonage), and £8, 7s. 1d. the amount of the vicarage.⁹ In 1574 and 1576 the same Donald Adamsoun as minister had for his stipend £102, 13s. 4d., the kirklands, and apparently other perquisites, and the reader had yearly £16.¹⁰

In the year 1370 William Earl of Ross granted to William of Ross, the son and heir of the deceased Hugh of Ross, the half davach of Moy in the mairdom (maragium) of Strapeffer.¹¹ Among the lands granted by King James III. to Elizabeth Countess of Ross in 1476, and confirmed to her by that king in 1477, were included Owra, Ballibrahede, Hilculdrum, Ballingovne, and Balliblare.¹² In the tenandry of Culmelloquhy, granted by King James V. to Walter Innes of Tulchis in 1526 and 1527, were included the mill of Kilquhillodrum with its land and houses, and the lands of Ord, extending respectively in the king's rental to £3 and 26s. 8d., the respective yearly payments according to the grant of 1527 being £4, 6s. 8d. and 40s.¹³ In the latter between them, with remainder to Alexander's heirs whomsoever, the lands of Vrray, extending to a quarter davach, then in Alexander's hands; and also a charter by the same bishop, granting to Alexander M'Culloch of Stronomadie for life, and to William M'Culloch his first-born son and his heirs male, with remainder to his second son Duncan and his heirs male, his third son Alexander and his heirs male, his fourth son (unnamed) and his heirs male, and to the male heirs whomsoever of the elder Alexander, the lands of Litill Moy, extending to the fourth of a davach, then occupied by Alexander, with the salmon fishing on the water of Connan belonging to the lands, if any.¹ In 1586 the same king granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe, for his good service and other causes, certain lands in Ross, including Vrra, Kilquhillardrum, Ord with the mill and alehouse of Bawblair, Balnagoun, and others; the grantee paying yearly for Vrra 40s., with 4s. of bondage silver, and 4 poultry, and every five years £4 as grassum—for Kilquhillardrum £6, with 8s. of bondage silver, a reek hen, and £6 as grassum—for Ord 40s., with 4s. of bondage silver, 8 poultry, 26s. 8d. grassum, and the usual services—for the mill of Kilquhillardrum with the multures, 2 chalders victual half bear half meal, and for the alehouse 40s., with the same sum as grassum—for Bawblair 40s., with 2s. of bondage silver, one poultry, 40s. of grassum, and the usual services—and for Balnagoun 46s. 8d., with 4s. of bondage silver, 2 reek hens, 46s. 8d. grassum, and the usual services.² In 1590 Alexander M'Kenzie was served heir to his father Murdoc M'Kenze of Ferbrone in the lands of Mid Ferbrone of the extent of £5, 16s. feuferme, the lands of Kyrk Ferbrone alias Eglis of the extent of £3 and other dues, the lands of Auclinsauil of the extent of £3, 5s. 4d. feuferme, the lands of Ballebraid of the extent of £7, 4s. feuferme, the fishing of Ballebraid called the Es of the extent of £3, 4s. feuferme, and the lands of Moymoir of the extent of £6, 13s. 4d.³ In 1619 Colin lord of Kintail was served heir male to his grandfather Colin Makkeinzie of Kyntail in the lordship and barony of Dinguall, including the lands of Wester Fairbrune of the extent of £4, 13s. and other dues, and the lands of Areon of the extent of £4, 4s. 4d.⁴

In 1526 King James V. granted to his familiar servitor Robert Gib the lands of Branmore in the lordship of Ros, extending in the King's rental to £6 yearly, for the yearly payment of 10 marks.⁵ In 1538 he granted to the same Robert the same lands, extending yearly to 10 marks 10 shillings and 8 pence, for the yearly payment of 10 marks 17 shillings in augmentation of his rental by 6s. 4d.⁶ In 1541 the same king granted to John M'Kenze of Kintale the lands of Mekill Brawane, extending yearly to £6 in the King's rental, and in grassum and other dues to 24 shillings, for the yearly payment of £8 Scots in augmentation of the rental by 16 shillings.⁷ In 1542 he granted to Duncan Bayne the lands of Tulche and others, with the astricted multures and suckin of certain other lands including Brawane.⁸ In 1543 Queen Mary granted in heritage to Kenneth Mackenze the son and apparent heir of John Mackenze of Kintail, and to Isabel

On the left bank of the river Orrin stands the ruined tower of Fairburn (of old Ferbrune, Ferbarin, or Forbarin, originally built without a door, and accessible only by a ladder through one of the windows.)⁵

On the north of the Conan is Brahan Castle, the seat of the Mackenzies.⁶ In a barrow near it, opened during the last century, was found an urn, polished or varnished inside and outside, and containing a few pieces of bone.⁷ Other barrows opened about the same date contained human bones, and fragments of armour apparently of copper.⁸

convent as often as required.¹ In the year 1372 William Earl of Ross is said to have granted 'the kirk of Tarridie in Ross' to the canons of Fearn.² About the year 1569 Master Alexander Makkenze was reader at Kyllarnane and Kylechristan.³ In 1574 the churches of Urray, Contane, Kirkchrist, and Foddertie, were under one minister, and the office of reader at Kirkchrist was vacant.⁴ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Alexander Horne canon of the church of Ross, granting with consent of the dean and chapter to George Monro of Dalquhartie in heritage the churchlands of his prebend called Killecreist with the parsonage tithes included, lying in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, and also the prebendary's manse with its pertinents lying as above.⁵

The church, dedicated to the Saviour, stood about three miles south east from the church of Urray, where its ruins and cemetery still remain.⁶

About 1569 the reader at Kyllarnane and Kylechristan had for his stipend £20.⁷ In 1574 Donald Adamsoun, minister at Kirkchrist and other churches, had for his stipend £102, 13s. 4d., the kirklands, and other dues; and the reader at Kirkchrist had 20 marks and the kirklands.⁸

Between the years 1275 and 1294 David of Innerlunan, with the consent of Gillierist Macgilliduff, quit-claimed to the monks of Beaully his land of Ouchterwaddale (or Onachtervadal) extending to a half davach, which he held on lease from Gillierist, who granted the land to the monks.⁹ In 1309 King Robert Bruce granted to Hugh Ross the lands of Taruedelle and Inucrasren.¹⁰ In 1476, on the forfeiture of John Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, King James III. granted to Elizabeth Countess of Ross for her maintenance certain lands, including Ballingovne, Hiltountardel, Balliblare, and the lands of the castle of Tardale, in the earldom of Ross, which she had in conjunct infestment with her husband before his forfeiture.¹¹ In 1477 on attaining his majority he confirmed the grant.¹² In 1526 and 1527 the mill of Tarradale, and the lands, crofts, and houses, were included in the tenandry of Culmelloquhy granted by James V. to Walter Innes of Tulehis, the grantee paying yearly in 1526 the sum of 26s. 8d., and in 1527 the sum of 33s. 4d.¹³ In 1538 the mill was included in a grant of the same lands for 5 years by the same king to the same Walter.¹⁴ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe certain lands in Ross, including Bawblair, Balnagown, Balnaknok, and Tarradail with the mill; the grantee paying yearly for Balnaknok or Hiltoun of Tarradail 46s. 8d., with 4s. of bondage silver, 4 reek hens, 60 loads of peats, with the usual services, and 46s. 8d. every five

In the year 1278 a charter by Andrew de Boscho and Elizabeth his wife to the monks of Beaully, dated at Eddyrdor, is witnessed by Colin Gove the constable of Taruedal.⁴ The castle of Tardale, as we have seen, occurs in record in 1476.⁵ 'Two myl thence (that is, from Killearnan),' says a writer of the seventeenth century, 'Tarradill with the old castle of Tarradill; a myl thence is Kilechrist with a kirk.'⁶

'Two myl thence,' continues the same writer, is 'Achaichroisk with manie ancient monuments betwix.'⁷

In 1603 the Clanranald of Glengarry plundered the lands of Kilechrist and the adjacent lands belonging to the Mackenzies, and the inhabitants, who were assembled in the church, were there burned to death by the invaders, whose piper meanwhile marched round the building playing a pibroch which has since been known under the name of Kilechrist as the family tune of the Clanranald.⁸

The parish of Killearnan rises gradually from the shore of the Moray Firth (here called the Beaully Firth or Loch Beaully) to the middle of an extensive moor named the Mulbuy (known of old as Ardmeanach, the central ridge, a name which was applied to the whole peninsula now called the Black Isle).¹

In the year 1278 a charter of Andrew de Boscho and Elisabeth his wife is witnessed by William the vicar of Eddyrdor.² The church, afterwards styled Killearnan, was part of the prebend of the archdeacon of Ross.³ In 1574 and 1576 Robert Grahame, archdeacon, was minister at Killernane, and Alexander Mackenzie was reader.⁴

The church stands on a small eminence on the shore.⁵ It is cruciform, and was originally thatched with heather, but in the end of the last century had its walls heightened and was roofed with slates.⁶

At Redcastle about half a mile west from the church stood a chapel dedicated to Saint Andrew, at which a fair was of old held about Lammas (1 August).⁷

At Spittal there is said to have been a religious foundation belonging to the Knights Hospitallers.⁸ The lands of Spittal occur in record in 1599.⁹

There was a chaplainry in the cathedral church of Ross founded on the lands of Ardafalie in this parish.¹⁰

In Baiamund the archdeaconry of Ross is rated at £8; in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.¹¹ In the rental of the bishoprick given in to the collector of thirds between 1561 and 1566 there is entered 'ane pairt of the teindis of the parochinis of Kilmowir and Kilernane yeirlie riddin, quhyllis les quhyllis mair, estimat to 5 ch. 8 bo. comounly.'¹² About 1569 the reader at Kyllarnane had a stipend of £20.¹³ In 1574 the minister's stipend was 'the haill archidenerie of Ross, extending to xii ch. victuall and xii li. xiii s. iiij d. money, he sustenand his readare at Killernane,' to whom he paid yearly £16.¹⁴ In 1576 the minister had only two-thirds of the archdeaconry, and the reader the same stipend as before.¹⁵

By a charter, dated at Eddyrdor in 1278 on the Friday after the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, Andrew de Boscho and Elisabeth his wife granted to the monks of Beaully two marks, to be received yearly at their castle of Eddyrdor from them and their heirs or from their bailies for the time, or in their tenement of Eddirdor.¹⁶ In 1294, by an agreement made at Lovet in the Ard on Friday 26 March, Hugh of Ross (of Kilravock) and Mary his wife (the daughter of Sir Andrew de Boscho and Elizabeth Byseth) granted in heritage for eight years from Whitsunday of that year to Sir David of Graham (the brother in law of Elizabeth) a davach of land called Culcolly in their tenement of Edirdowyr, of which they had received beforehand from Sir David the ferme for the first four years; the grantee paying yearly for these four years two pennies sterling, namely, one penny on the fifteenth day after the feast of Pentecost, and one on the fifteenth day after the feast of Saint Martin in winter—and for the second four years eight marks sterling at the same terms; reserving to Hugh and his wife and their heirs their wood (bosco) of Culcolly with one acre which John called Dalt formerly held.¹ It was agreed between the parties that, if the land should be laid waste by war (guerram patrie), it should remain in the hands of Sir David and his heirs till they should have received from it as much of the fruits as they should have lost by the war—that, if Sir David and his heirs or tenants (fir-marii) should sustain any loss on the land through the fault of the granters or of their heirs, the land should remain with the grantees until they recovered their loss from it, or until the granters should satisfy them at the sight of trustworthy persons—that, if the granters should sustain any loss through defect of payment of the fermes at the appointed terms, the grantees should satisfy them at the sight of trustworthy persons both for their loss and for the principal debt—and that at the end of eight years the davach of Culcolly, saving those conditions, should peaceably revert to Hugh of Ross and his wife.² For nearly two centuries afterwards the history of the lands known as the lordship of Ardmanach, which included the tenement of Edirdowyr, is almost a blank, and we have only some obscure intimations in writs of the period that they were partly or wholly in the possession of the De Moravias of Duffus and of Bothwell and that the Earl of Ross was overlord.³ In 1455 the barony of Eddirdail called Ardmanache, and the Redcastell with the lordships of Ros belonging thereto, were annexed to the crown by King James II.⁴ In 1481 (5 April) King James III. granted to his second son James Stewart, Marquis of Ormound, the lands of the lordship of Ardmanache called Avauch and Nethirdul, with the moorhill (mons) of Ormound and the castle and fortalice of Redcastell.⁵ In the same year and month (12 April) the King confirmed the grant by a charter under his great seal.⁶ About the same period the lands and 'house' of Arthmannoch were held by George Earl of Huntlie of Queen Margaret, who in a letter without date addressed to that nobleman thanks him for his great labours 'in the recouering of the house, the keping of the samyne, and the defence and plensyng of the landis,' stating her intention to accept as the fermes of the lands for the past terms fifty good marts for her larder at Striueling, granting to him the remainder of the dues for the keeping of the castle during the same terms, and promising that he should have the preference as lessee at next lease.⁷ In 1482 (24 June) the Earl granted to Huchone the Ros of Kilrawok till 8 September following the keeping of the Reidcastell and lands of Ardmanacht, which the Earl had 'in governans of our Souerane ladie the Queyne,' discharging him (in lieu of

and for diverse other 'herschippis, sclacteris, and spowlleis' committed by Kanoch Makkanehy and his kinsmen and accomplices of the Clankanye on the King's 'pur legis and tenandis' in the lordship of Ardmanoch.¹ In a document dated at the Newark on Spey 15 December 1499 the Earl of Huntly declares that 'quhat skath that was done at that tyme to the saidis Clynkane and thair complissis was be the Kyingis commande and ouris as luftanande.'² About the year 1503 James Duke of Ross and Earl of Edradale resigned his lands, including those of Ardmanach.³ In 1506 (6 May) King James IV. commissioned Andro bishop of Caithnes to let for five years to the tenants at the time or others the lands of the lordships of Ross and Ardmannoch formerly belonging to Elizabeth Countess of Ross, except the lands of Tarbat.⁴ In the same year (2 November) he appointed that bishop for nine years chamberlain and captain of the lands and lordships of Ross and Ardmannach, and captain of the castles of Dyngwell in Ross and of Redecastell in Ardmannach.⁵ In 1507 (22 March) he appointed the same bishop and another person chamberlains of the same lands, and captains of the same castles.⁶ On the following day (23 March) he appointed the bishop for nine years to the same offices.⁷ On 13 April following he commissioned the bishop and others to examine the infeftments of the tenants, and to send him copies of the same.⁸ On 22 April he granted to the same bishop for three years all the fishings of both lordships.⁹ In 1511 he granted to the bishop, then his treasurer, for large sums of money and other services, for nine years the same lands and lordships, with the woods, forests, waters, lochs, yairs, and fishings, and also the castles.¹⁰ In 1524 King James V. granted the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmannach to James Earl of Murray.¹¹ In 1561 Queen Mary appointed George Monro of Dawcarty during her pleasure bailie and chamberlain of her lands and lordships of Ros and Ardmannach.¹² In 1568 King James VI. granted the same offices to the same George Monro during the will of the King and his Regent.¹³ In 1576 the same king granted in heritage to Thomas Murray, the brother german of David Murray of Cars, his salmon fishing on the water of Conan for three years from 1 December of that year, commanding the tenants of Ardmanoch and others to perform the services due by them.¹⁴ In 1577 he appointed Robert Monro of Fowlis bailie and chamberlain of the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmanoch for a year or longer according to the will of the King and Regent.¹⁵

In 1294, as we have seen, Hugh of Ross and Mary his wife granted for eight years in heritage to Sir David of Graham the davach land of Culcolly in their tenement of Edirdowyr.¹⁶ In 1511 King James IV. granted to Henry Stewart the lands of Culcowy, Drumnamarge, and Muren, with the mill of Redecastel, in the lordship of Ardmannach, extending in all to 43 marks, for the yearly payment of £41, in order to augment the King's rental by the sum of 21 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence.¹ In 1554 Queen Mary granted the same lands and mill, resigned by Robert Stewart of Muren, to John Stewart his son and apparent heir.² In 1557 a charter granted by Walter Innes, the son and heir apparent of Walter Innes of Innerbrakye, is witnessed by Thomas Leslie in Culcowy.³ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by John Stewart of Mureane, alienating in heritage to Rodoric M'Kainzie of Arthirfairthlie the mill of Reidcastell in the lordship of Ardmanoch.⁴ In 1616 Robert Stewart was served heir male of entail and provision to his uncle Sir James Stewart of Muren in the lands of Culcowie, Drumnarnage, and Muren, in the same lordship, and of the extent of £39, 13s. 4d. feuferme.⁵ The lands of Culcowie (now Kilcoy) were afterwards held by Mackenzies, one of whom Alexander Mackenzie of Culcowie appears in record about the year 1642.⁶ In 1662 Colin M'Keanzie of Reidcastell was served heir male to his father Roderic in the mill of Reidcastell of the extent of 3 marks.⁷

In 1526 King James V. granted in heritage to Henry Dingnevale certain lands in the lordship of Ardmanach, including the lands of Ardirfalie of the extent of £5, two muttons, and 24 capons.⁸ In 1537 he granted the same lands to Patrick Dingwall the son and heir of the deceased Henry.⁹ In 1584 and 1599 Rodoric M'Kainzie of Arthirfairthlie or Ardafalie appears in record, and in the latter year we have also Murdoch M'Kenzie his son and apparent heir.¹⁰ In 1639 Rorie M'Kenze appears as heritable proprietor of the lands of Ardafalie.¹¹

In the parish are held two yearly fairs, one in March, the other in July, the latter apparently the same that is mentioned in the seventeenth century as being held at Saint Andrew's chapel at Redcastle.¹²

In the year 1179 King William the Lion, his brother Earl David, and his nobles, went into Ros with a great army, and built or fortified two castles, one of which is named Edirdovar, Ethirdover, or Ewerdover.¹³ In 1278, as we have seen, two marks granted to the monks of Beaully by Andrew de Boscho and Elisabeth his wife were to be paid yearly at their castle of Eddyrdor or in their tenement of Eddirdor, and the grant is dated at Eddyrdor.¹⁴ The grant of Culcolly in 1294 by Hugh of Ross and Mary his wife, although the castle is not mentioned, fixes the locality of the tenement of Edirdowyr, and consequently of the castle.¹⁵ In 1455, as we have seen, the barony of Eddirdaill called Ardmanache was with the Redcastell annexed to the crown.¹⁶ In 1481 the same barony or lordship appears as Ardmanache; its chief lands or tenement as Eddirdule, Nethirdul, or Neuerdaill; and its castle as the Redcastell.¹⁷ About the year 1482 the castle appears under the same name and also as the house of Arthmannoch.¹ In 1484 the Lords of Council sentenced certain persons to enter themselves in ward in various castles, and of these James Thomsoun, John Wallace, and Patrick Nelesoun were ordered to enter their persons in the Redecastell.² In 1488, as we have seen, King James IV. created his son James Stewart Earl of Edradale or Ardmanach; and about 1503, when the latter resigned his lands, he retained the Redcastle of Ardmanoch in order to preserve his style of Earl.³ The rest of the history of the Redcastle or castle of Ardmanoch previously to the year 1526 is given above.⁴ In that year King James V. granted to his familiär servant Henry Kempt the lands of Gargestoun, then extending in his rental to £6, 13s. 4d., 8 bolls of bear, one mart, and one mutton, and the lands of Hiltoun of the samè extent, in the lordship of Ardmanach; and also the lands of Newtown in the same lordship belonging to the ward of the castle of Reidcastell, together with the constabulary and keeping of that castle also in that lordship, with all its lands and dues, and the power of making constables; the grantee paying yearly for Gargestoun and Hiltoun £17, 24 bolls of bear, 2 marts, and 2 muttons, in augmentation of the King's rental by £3, 13s. 4d.⁵ In 1531 the same king granted to Robert Innes, the son and heir apparent of Robert Innes of Innermarky, and to his tenants, the same lands and castle for 19 years, for the same yearly payment, 'defalcand to him and thame for the saidis martis and mvtonis in payment of the said sovm siclike as is defalcate to vthiris tennentis of the said lordship in tymis bygane.'⁶ In 1533 he granted the same lands with the mill and alehouse and the keeping of the Reidcastell for 19 years to Robert Innes of Innermarky for his good service on the borders in the army of the Regent Murray.⁷ In 1545 Queen Mary granted to (apparently) the same Robert Innes of Innermarky the same lands and castle, stated in the grant to have been resigned by Henry Kempt of Thomastoun.⁸ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe various lands in Ross, including the lands and towns of Gargastoun, Newtown of Reidcastell with the alehouse, and Hiltoun; the grantee paying yearly for Gargastoun £7, 14s. 8d., with 8 bolls 2 firlots of bear, one mart, one mutton, 20s. of bondage silver, 5 reek hens, and 80 loads of fuel, and every 5 years £7, 14s. 8d. as grassum — for Newtown £14, 6s. 8d., with 2 chalders 2 bolls of bear, 2 marts, 2 muttons, 40s. of bondage silver, one reek hen, and £14, 6s. 8d. as grassum — for the alehouse of Newtown 26s. 8d., and the same sum as grassum — and for Hiltoun £7, 4s. 8d., with 1 chaldèr 1 boll of bear, one mart, one mutton, 20s. of bondage silver, 8 poultrey, 80 loads of fuel, and £7, 4s. 8d. grassum.⁹ In 1599, by a contract dated at the canony of Ros on the 13th of June, it was agreed between William Ros of Kilravok and Rorie M'Kenzie of Ardafallie, that Murdoch M'Kenzie, the son and apparent heir of Rorie, should marry Margaret Ros the daughter of William — that Rorie should infett Murdoch and Margaret in the davach land of Killewnan and Spittal with the alehouse and its croft, the three quarter lands of the town and lands of Gargastoun, and the quarter lands of Hiltoun of Tarradell — and that William Ros should pay to Rorie and his daughter the sum of 4500 marks Scots.¹ In 1662 Colin M'Keanzie of Reidecastell was served heir-male to his father Roderic M'Keanzie of Reidecastell in the lands of Gargristoun, of the extent of £7, 13s. 8d.; the town and lands of Newtoun of Reidecastell, of the extent of £13, 6s. 8d.; the alehouse of Newtoun of the extent of 26s. 8d.; and the smith's croft of the same extent, in the same town of Newtoun of Reidecastell.² A writer of the same century styles the castle 'Castel Riwy' and 'the house of Redcastle.'³ A writer of the last century says that the castle was a place of considerable strength, and that it had the rights of a burgh of barony, of a free port, of weekly markets, of levying tolls and anchorage dues, and all other baronial privileges not abrogated in 1748.⁴ The Redcastle, modernised and still inhabited, stands on the shore about a quarter of a mile east from the church.⁵

The castle of Kileoy (Culcolly), now a ruin, stands on the height above the Redcastle, a short distance inland.⁶

The parish formerly abounded with cairns, one of which in the north of the parish bears the name of Cairn Irenan, supposed to be the origin of Killearnan, and to be the name of a Danish prince slain at the place.⁷

In 1756 the parishes of Kilmuir and Suddy were united, a part of each was added to Killearnan, and a part of Killearnan added to the united parish.¹⁸

The parish of Kilmuir Wester seems to have stretched along the shore of the Moray Firth from Kessock to Munlochy Bay, running inland for about three miles, and becoming gradually narrower as it receded from the shore. It has no high hills, and its surface is composed chiefly of cultivated tracts and moor.

This church first appears in record between the years 1561 and 1566, at which time Sir David Barchan was vicar of Suddy and Kilmowr.¹ In 1569 King James VI. presented John Reid (successively reader and exhorter) to the vicarage of Kilmur, vacant by the decease of the same Sir David.² In 1573 he presented John Ros to the vicarage of Kilmure and Suddy, vacant by the decease of John Reid.³ In 1574 Andro Myll was minister at Kilmuir Westir and other three churches, and the reader at Kilmuir Westir was John Ros, apparently the person presented to the vicarage in 1573.⁴ In 1579 Alexander Vrqhart dean of Ross, with the consent of the canons during the vacancy of the see, leased for life to Robert Grahame archdeacon of Ross, for life to his nearest heir, and for 19 years to his nearest heir's heir and his heirs, the teind sheaves and teind wedders of the two Culmawris, Drynys, and Slego, in the parish of Kilmure Westir, beginning at Lammas (1 August) of that year.⁵ In 1585 the lease was confirmed by King James VI.⁶

The church stood on a small eminence in the south-east of the parish on the shore of the Moray Firth.⁷ Its cemetery seems to be still in use.⁸ The church of the united parish, built in 1764, stands at Knockbain on Munloch bay.⁹

There was a chapel at Haudach or Haldach in this parish, the patronage and tithes of which in 1673 belonged to Alexander Brodie of Lethin (in Nairn), and formed part of his lordship, barony, or regality of Kinloss.¹⁰

Between the years 1561 and 1566 the bishop of Ross states a part of the teinds of Kilmowir and Kilernane at 5 chalders 8 bolls.¹¹ At the same period the rental of the vicarages of Suddy and Kilmowr is stated as follows by Sir David Barchan the vicar — 'The saidis twa vicarages in tyme bygane, quhen all dewteis and teindis was dewlie payit, sic as lamb, woll, stirk, buttir, cheis, teind aill, corspresentis, and Pash fynis, and teind lynt and hempt, and teind fishes of the steill of Kissok, was worth in [comoun] yeiris xx merkis, and now thir twa yeiris bygane nothing gottin.'¹² Previously to 1573 we have on record the following statement — 'John Reid, reidar, xx li. Beltym 1568, now exhortar sen November 1569, his stipend xl lib., and now vicare of Kylmuir, extending to iiii li. vi s. ix d., to be allowit in his stipend sen lxx yeiris crope.'¹³ In 1574 the reader at Kilmuir Westir had for his stipend £6, 13s. 4d., the kirklands, and some other perquisites.¹⁴

By a charter dated at Dyngvale 8 August 1394 Eufame Countess of Ros granted to Sir George of Lesly lord of Rothes the ward and relief of the lands of Culmor, which formerly belonged to John of Monymusk; granting him also the lands and their dues till the entry of the lawful heirs.¹⁵ In 1454 Andrew Urrie of Forglen was served heir to his brother John of Monimosk, who died vest and seised in the lands of Culmore.¹⁶ In 1460 the same lands were acquired by Robert Hunter of Balnkirk.¹ In 1474 the same Robert sued John Earl of Ross for withholding from him the lands of Culmor and the dues of the same for 13 years, extending yearly to 20 marks, contrary to various acts of parliament and council, and in contempt of the King's mandates.² The Earl not appearing when cited, the Lords Auditors ordained that Robert Hunter should enjoy the lands of Culmor undisturbed by the Earl, that the latter should pay to Robert the dues for the time specified, and that the nearest lands and goods of the Earl should be distrained for the same.³ In 1482 Master James Hunter of Culmore rector of Cranstoun (the son of Robert Hunter) sold the lands of Culmore to Hugh le Ross baron of Kilrawak, to whom in 1485 King James III. granted a crown charter of the lands.⁴ In 1498 Huchoun Ross of Kilrawok (the son of the former) complained to King James IV. that James Duke of Ross the King's brother had obtained the King's warrant for the restoration of certain 'goods' which Huchoun had lawfully distrained for the dues of his lands of Culmore for three terms.⁵ In consequence of this complaint the King (13 July) ordered Alexander Finlawsone 'mair and serjand' of the lordship of Ardmannoch to appear before him and his council at Aberdeen or elsewhere on 8 November or next lawful day, to answer for withholding from Huchon Ross the sum of 10 marks with the 'mare' of the dues for two terms of the lands of Culmore, and all other dues of the lands for those two terms, assigned by the King to Huchoun a year before his entry to the lands in the year 1495.⁶ In 1517 Hugh Ross of Kilrawok was served heir to his father Hugh Ross in the lands of Culmoir in the earldom of Ross, of the old extent of 15 marks.⁷ In 1527 King James V. granted to James Dunbar, the son of Master Patrick Dunbar, certain subjects in the lordship of Ardmanach, including the lands of Westir Haldach, extending to £4, 10 bolls of bear, 2 bolls of oats, the half of a mart, the half of a mutton, 2 dozen poultry, and 8 loads of turfs, the grantee paying 13s. in lieu of the victual—the lands of Estir Haldach, extending to 40s., 4 bolls of oatmeal, 1 boll of bear, the fourth of a mart, the fourth of a mutton, and 4 loads of turf, the grantee paying 5s. 6d. instead of the victual—the alehouse with its croft, extending to 20s.—the smethy-croft extending to 8s.—the croft of Pettislaw, extending to 12s.—and the Mariscroft extending to 13s. 4d.—with other lands; of all which the chief message was to be Casteltoun (in Avoch).⁸ In 1530 the same king granted to Hugh Ros of Kilrawak and Agnes Urquhard his wife the lands of Coulmore and half the lands of Dawaucht in the lordship of Ardmannach, which Hugh Ros had resigned.⁹ In 1542 the same king, understanding that Huchoun Rose of Kilrawok and his servants had recently resisted the arrestment of their corn by the sheriff of Narne and his deputies at the instance of the bishop of Moray on the lands of Cowlmore in the barony of Kilrawok and sheriffdom of Narne, and had thereby incurred confiscation of their goods and imprisonment of their persons, for the good service done by Huchoun Rose and for other causes remitted to himself and servants all crime incurred on that account.¹⁰ In 1572 King James VI. confirmed a grant by Hugh Ros of Kilrawak to Catherine Falconar his wife of the liferent of the lands of Myd Culmoir and Westir Culmoir.¹ In 1580 he confirmed a grant in liferent by the same Hugh to the same Katharine of the lands of Eister and Mid Culmoir, and the lands of Haldacht with the kiln (torrali) of the same called Toldegormok, with the fishing of the 'yair' and other pertinents, in the lordship of Ardmanach, earldom of Ros, and sheriffdom of Inverness.² In 1586 the same king granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe various lands in Ross, including those of Wester Half Daokis, the grantee paying yearly for the latter £4, 8s. 8d., with 10 bolls, 2 firlots, 2 pecks of bear, 4 bolls of oats, 3½ marts, half a mutton, 10s. bondage silver, 2 dozen poultry, 3 reek hens, and 40 loads of fuel, and as grassum every five years, £4, 8s. 8d.³ In 1611 Hugh Ross of Kilrawock was served heir to his father William Ross in the lands of Culmoir with the 'steall' and 'yearis,' the fishings of herring and salmon, and the 'quhytt fishing,' with the parts called Easter Culmoir, Middle Culmoir, Haddoche, Torgarnoche, the alehouse and alehouse crofts; all which were then of the yearly value of £16, and in time of peace were worth yearly £4.⁴ In 1635, on a complaint by Huchone Ros of Kilrawak against the dean of Ross and others, titulars and tacksmen of the lands of Culmoiris Eister and Westir, Haddoche, and Torgormak, belonging to him in heritage, that through their negligence the teinds of those lands had not been valued according to act of parliament, a new summons of valuation was granted to him by King Charles I.⁵ In 1639 the marches were settled between the lands of Ardaffalie (in Killearnan) belonging in heritage to Rorie M'Kenze of Reidcastell, and the lands of Leadanache (Le Davach ?) and Torgormach (in Kilmuir) belonging in heritage to Houchoun Ros of Kilrauoock.⁶ A controversy which arose in 1640 between Alexander M'Kenzie of Culcowie and Hucheoun Ros of Kilraok respecting the privilege of casting peats in the 'Month of Muilbuy,' which Kilraok claimed in right of his lands of Culmores, and which gave rise to a litigation, seems to have ended only in 1678, when the lands of Culmore were sold to Colin Mackenzie of Redcastle.⁷

In the year 1437 Alexander of Ile, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, granted to the Friars Preachers of Innernys 20s. of yearly rent from his land and ferry of Estir Kessok.⁸ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe Eister Kessok, the ferry of Kessok, and the stell of Kessok with the alehouse; the grantee paying yearly for Eistir Kessok £3, 6s. 8d., 12 capons, 2 muttons, 10 poultry, and 10s. bondage silver, with £3, 6s. 8d. every five years as grassum—for the ferry £6 yearly and £6 every five years as grassum—for the stell 13s. 4d. and the same as grassum—and for the alehouse the same as for the stell.⁹ In 1662 Colin M'Keanzie of Reidcastell was served heir male to his father Roderic in the town and lands of Eister Kessock, of the extent of £3, 6s. 8d.—the ferry of Kessock, of the extent of £6—the stell of Kessock, of the extent of 13s. 4d.—and the alehouse, of the extent of 13s. 8d.¹⁰

In 1526 King James V. granted to Henry Dingnevale certain lands in the lordship of Ardmannach of the extent of £22 and other dues, including the lands of Petlundy, of the yearly extent of £3, 6s. 8d., the half of a mart, the half of a mutton, and 24 poultry.¹ In 1537 he granted the same lands to Patrick Dingwall the son and heir of the deceased Henry.² In 1542 the same king granted to James Fraser the brother of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet; the same lands, extending yearly in fermes and grassum to £4, with 10s. bondage silver, half a mart, and half a mutton.³ In 1583 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Hugh Fraser of Gussoquhan, alienating in heritage the lands of Petlundie and others to John M'Kainzie of Garloche, by whom they were then occupied.⁴ In 1619 Issobel M'Kenzie was served heir to her father John M'Kenzie apparent of Garloche in the half davach of Pitlundy in the barony of Ardmeonache, of the extent of £4, and of 4s. in augmentation.⁵

In 1539 King James V. granted for life to James Fraser the brother german of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet the 10 marklands of Drumdervat in the lordship of Ardmannach and earldom of Ross, for the yearly payment of a penny of silver as blenchferme.⁶ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to Thomas Monypenny of Kinkell the escheat of the goods of Donald Williamesoun, John Noble, and William Alexandersoun, dwelling in Drumderphet belonging to the deanery of Ros in the lordship of Ardmannach, denounced rebels and at the horn for non-payment of the fermes and dues of the crop 1561 to Master Mungo Monypenny dean of Ros.⁷ In 1564 (16 October) the same queen granted to James Gray, one of her body guards, the lands of Drumdarwecht and Westir Kescheok, with the mill, fishings, and other pertinents, then occupied by William Lobane and others; and lying respectively in the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmannach; the grantee paying yearly for Drumdarwecht £9, with 20s. for arriage (arigea pecunia), 36 bolls of victual, one mart, one mutton, 4 dozen poultry, and 4 bolls of horse oats (avenarum equinarum), as the old fermes and dues, and 6s. 8d. in augmentation of the rental—and for Westir Kescheok and the mill £6, with 4 dozen capons, 4 muttons, and 14 bolls victual, as old ferme, and 6s. 8d. in augmentation of the rental.⁸ In the same year (2 November) she renewed the grant; the yearly payment being then fixed at £10, 16s., with 2 chalders 6 bolls 1 firloft bear with 'the charity,' 4 bolls oats, one mart, one mutton, 4 dozen poultry, 9 reek hens, 20s. of bondage silver, and 80 loads of fuel to be laid down in the castle of Dingwell, as the fermes, dues, and services, formerly paid for Drumdarveth—£7, 4s., with 4 muttons, 4 dozen capons, 8 reek hens, 20s. of bondage silver, and 80 loads of fuel to be laid down in the same castle; and the usual services, as the old fermes due for Westir Kescheok—4 bolls of victual for the mill—and 3s. 4d. for Drumdarveth and Westir Kescheok respectively in augmentation of the rental.⁹ In 1578

King James VI. granted during his pleasure to James Gray in Wester Kessok, for his good service 'alsweill in the caus of religioun as in vthiris the common effaris of the realme,' a yearly pension of 14 bolls of victual which formerly belonged to the Black Friars of Innernes, to be received from the fermes of the mill of Kessok, discharging him also of the dues of the same for the years 1576 and 1577.¹ In 1582 he granted to the same James the same pension for life, beginning in the year 1580.² In 1584 he renewed the grant, the 14 bolls being in his hands by the dispersion and demolition of the Black Friars to whom they had belonged.³ In 1586 he granted in heritage to John Wylie writer the mill of Kessok with its croft, houses, buildings, astricted multures, and other dues, formerly belonging to the Friars Preachers of Innernes; the grantee paying yearly 14 bolls of meal or for each boll 13s. 4d. between the feasts of the Nativity of our Lord (25 December) and of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary (2 February).⁴ In 1587 the same king, on attaining his majority, renewed a grant made by his mother Queen Mary to William Keith the master of his wardrobe and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, of the lands and towns of Drumdarvat in the lordship of Ardmenoch, and the lands and towns of Westir Kessoke in the earldom of Ross; the grantee paying yearly for Drumdarvat 2 chalders 4 bolls bear and meal with 'the charity,' 4 bolls oats, one mart, one mutton, 4 dozen poultry, 9 reek hens, £10, 16s. as bondage silver and in augmentation of the rental, and 120 loads of fuel—and for Westir Kessoke £9, 4s. 4d. as bondage silver and in augmentation of the rental, 4 dozen capons, 10 reek hens, 4 muttons, and 120 loads of fuel—as the fermes, canes, customs, and dues specified in the rental.⁵ In 1624 Kenneth M'Keinzie was served heir to his father Thomas, formerly in Breckanord, in the south half of the town and lands of Drumdarfat in the lordship of Ardmeanoche, of the extent of £4, 10s. feuferme.⁶ The family of Loban, one of whom is mentioned above in 1564, have long been tenants of the farm of Larach in Drumderfit, and their supposed or real antiquity has given rise to the proverb, 'as old as the Lobans of Drumderfit.'⁷

In 1574 King James VI. confirmed two grants; 1. A grant by Master William Sinclare rector of Olrik, canon of Cathness, commissary and vicegerent of the deceased Henry bishop of Ross, with consent of the dean, chapter, and canons of Ross—to Oliuer Sinclare of Quhitkirk and Beatrice Rollok his wife, and to the male heirs of Oliuer, with remainder to William Sinclare of Rosling and the heirs male of his body, and to his heirs male whomsoever—of the lands and towns of Allanegrange, of which one-fourth was formerly occupied by Margaret Dunbar, two-fourths by the widow of Finlay Wilky, and by Henry Wilkie, Andrew Richesoun, Andrew Alexandersoun, and William Reoch the younger, and the remaining fourth by the deceased Master Donald Fraser archdeacon of Ross; the alehouse and mill of Allanegrange; and the lands of Drummoir, extending to a half davach, with the alehouse of Drummoir—in the earldom of Ross, and to be held of the bishop; 2. A grant by the same Oliuer with the consent of his wife to Colin M'Kanze of Kintale and his nearest male heirs, with remainder to his next male heirs bearing the name and arms of M'Kanze, and to his nearest heirs whomsoever, of the same lands, mill, and alehouses, to be held as before.¹

In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe the lands of Dryne, for the yearly payment of £4, 15s. 4d., with 2 chalders 4 bolls of bear, 2 bolls for 'the charity,' 4 bolls of oats, one mart, one mutton, 9 poultry, and 80 loads of fuel, the grantee paying also £4, 15s. 4d. every five years as grassum.²

There is a village at Kessoek in the west end of the parish opposite the entrance of the Caledonian Canal.³

In this parish is a large moor with numerous cairns, locally said to have been the scene of a battle between the Macdonalds and the inhabitants of Inverness in the thirteenth or fourteenth century, and known as Blair-na-coi, a name which implies a termination of the fight by the same means as the popular traditional account ends the battle of Luncarty in Perthshire.⁴ The farmers who at Blair-na-coi rallied the fugitives would appear to have been the ancestors of the Lobans, who date their connexion with the place from the era of the alleged battle.⁵

East of Blair-na-coi are the remains of a circle known as James's Temple—west of it are traces of a camp—and on the hill of Kessoek to the south are traces of another camp, and a large cairn named Cairnglas.⁶

The parish of Suddy included the northern and hilly part of the united parish, extending inland from the head of Munloch bay to the middle of the elevated moor named the Mulbuy.

and Ardrosser.¹ The church was afterwards a part of the prebend of the chancellor of Ross.² Between the years 1561 and 1566 the parsonage was held by Master Duncan Chalmere chancellor and 'vsufructuare,' and by him leased to Master David Chalmer titular and Richard Wrwing his factor.³ At the same time Sir David Barchane was vicar of Suddy and Kilmowr.⁴ From 1569 to 1572 Andro Myll, previously exhorter at Awach, seems to have been minister of Awach, Suddy, Kilmuir Westir, and Ardorseir.⁵ In 1569 King James VI. presented Dauid Thomesoun to the vicarage of Suddy, vacant by the decease of Sir Dauid Barrachin.⁶ In 1570 he presented James Buschertt to the same vicarage, then vacant by the decease of Dauid Thomesoun.⁷ In 1573 he presented John Ros to the vicarage of Kilmure and Suddy, vacant by the decease of John Reid.⁸ In 1574 and 1576 Master George Monro was minister, and Alexander Reid was reader at Suddy.⁹ In 1592 King James VI. granted the glebes and manses of the chancellorry of Ros and the vicarage of Suddy to Master David Chalmer of Ormound.¹⁰

The church, probably dedicated to Saint Duthace of Tain, appears to have always stood at Meikle Suddy in the east end of the parish about a mile due north from the bay of Munlochry.¹¹ Its cemetery seems to be still in use.¹² The church of the united parish, now known as Knockbain, stands at Knockbain near the head of Munlochry bay.¹³

In the year 1328 there was a controversy between Hugh Earl of Ross and Sir Andrew de Moravia about the lands of Dromcudyn, Munlochry, and others, of which neither the origin nor the termination is on record.¹⁴ In 1605 Duncan Fraser of Mullochie was served heir to his brother german Alexander Fraser of Mullochie in the lands and mill of Mullochie within the chaplainry of Mulvoche in the bishoprick of Ross.¹⁵ In 1612 William Fraser of Mullochie was served heir to his brother german Duncan Fraser of Mullochie in the lands and town of Mulloche, with the mill, mill-lands, multures, and sequels, within the chaplainry of Mullochie and earldom of Ross, of the extent of £4.¹⁶

On a small hill north west from the church, named Hurdyhill, there was in the seventeenth century a well, imagined to have the virtue of curing sick children when left one night beside it.¹⁷

In Baiamund's Roll the chancellorry of Ross is taxed at £8; in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.¹⁸ In the rental of assumptions

In 1389 and 1399 appears in record John Bard or John le Barde.⁶ In 1492 Thomas Bard of Ordinhuf (in Banffshire) was on an assize of perambulation of the vicarage lands of Abirkerdor.⁷ In 1526 King James V. granted to his familiar servitor William Bard the lands of Balmaduthy, extending in his rental to £6, 13s. 4d., with 1 chaldar of bear, 1 mart, 1 mutton, and 4 dozen poultry, and the lands of Sudy, extending to £8, with 1 chaldar 4 bolls of bear, 1 mart, 1 mutton, and 4 dozen poultry, in the lordship of Ardmanach, for yearly payment of £20, with 2 chalders 4 bolls of bear, 2 marts, 2 muttons, and 8 dozen of poultry, in augmentation of the King's rental by £5, 6s. 8d.⁸ In the same year he granted to Henry Dingnevale the alehouse of Mekle Suddie with its croft and toft, extending to 20s., and the mill of Mekle Suddie with its toft and croft, extending to 18 bolls of meal and malt, and 18 capons.⁹ In 1537 the same king granted the same alehouse and mill to Patrick Dingwall the son and heir of the deceased Henry.¹⁰ In 1538 he granted the lands of Bowmalduthy and Sydde to William Bard for 19 years.¹¹ In 1542 he appears to have renewed the grant, and fixed the yearly payment at £22 Scots, 8 bolls of bear, 8 bolls of oats, 2 marts, 2 muttons, and 8 dozen of poultry.¹² In 1543 and 1544 James Dunbar in Sudy deceased appears in record.¹³ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to David Dunbar of Bennetisfield all the goods that belonged to the deceased James the son of Alexander Dunbar of Sudy.¹⁴ In 1560 she granted to Master David Chalmer provost of Creichtoun in heritage the towns and lands of Castletoun (in Avoch), Achtirflo, Balmaduthie, and Mekill Suddie, with the mill, mill-lands, alehouse, and alehouse croft, in the canonry of Ross and lordship of Ardmanoch.¹⁵ In 1567 she confirmed the grant.¹⁶ In 1568 King James VI. granted to Andrew Monro of Newmore, the son and apparent heir of George Monro of Dalcarthie, and to Katherine Vrqhart his wife, and to their male heirs, the town and lands of Casteltoun with the fishing croft and its pertinents—the town and lands of Balmadwthie—the town and lands of Swdy with the brewhouse (bruerium), croft, and mill—the town and lands of Ochtercloy—and all the pendicles and pertinents of those towns and lands—lying in

THIS parish extends along the shore of the Moray Firth from the bay of Munloch on the south west to the Craigland burn on the north east, and inland to the height of the Mulbuy, there rising to 500 feet above the level of the sea.¹¹ Parallel to the Mulbuy are two lower ridges gently sloping towards the north.¹² The bay of Avoch divides the coast into two nearly equal parts, the more northern being high and rocky, while a portion of the more southern is flat and sandy, and the remainder a mixture of rock and high gravelly beach.¹³

In 1493 (16 October) the abbot of Kynlos (in Moray) sued William lord of Saint John's for 400 marks Scots of the dues of the churches of Alvach in Ros and Ellone in Buchane, and of the lands of Strathylay, for one year.¹⁴ The abbot declared in court that he should hold himself satisfied of 50 marks of the money, if the lord of Saint John's would produce the receipt of Master Hew Mertynne to whom he affirmed he had paid them. The Lords of Council therefore assigned to him the third day of February following to produce it. And, as the same lord asserted that he had by command of the abbot paid to Master Hew the sum of 200 ducats amounting to 300 marks Scots, and the abbot denied that he had given any order to that effect — and also, because the lord of Saint John's affirmed that he had given up to the abbot certain lands of the abbey as payment of about £60, and that the abbot had accepted them — the Lords assigned him the same day to prove his allegations. The church of Awach was afterwards a prebend in the cathedral of Ross.¹⁵ In 1558 Queen Mary presented Sir James Ker chaplain to the vicarage of Awoch, vacant or when vacant by the resignation of Sir Alexander Pedder.¹⁶ Between 1561 and 1566 Sir Alexander was still vicar of Awoch.¹⁷ In 1569 Queen Mary presented Andro Mylne to the vicarage, then vacant by Sir Alexander's death.¹⁸ From that year till 1576 Andro Myll appears successively as exhorter, minister, and vicar.¹⁹ In 1604 John Urquhart was served heir male of entail and provision to his father Walter sheriff of Cromartie in the manse or croft of the rector of Awach in the canonry of

Ross, of the extent of 40 shillings.¹ In 1621 George Dunbar was served heir to his father James Dunbar of Newtown in three-fourths of the town and kirklands of Awache, extending to 6 oxgangs of a davaeh of land, with the mill of the town of Avache, of the extent of £6 — the alehouse of Avache and its crofts, with the yair and salmon fishing, if any, with wrack and wair, groves and woods, of the extent of 25s. — and the town and lands of Killen with the tithes included, extending to a half davaeh, in the parish of Awache, of the old extent of 8 shillings.²

The church, built in 1670, stands on a height near the shore apparently on the site of former churches at the village and on the left bank of the burn of Avoch.³

In 1528 King James V. presented Sir John Scherar to the chaplainry of the Virgin Mary of Ormondhill in the lordship of 'Arde mannach, extending yearly to £5, vacant or when vacant by the demission of Sir Seuer Stewart.⁴ In 1546 Queen Mary presented Sir Thomas Rag chaplain to the chaplainry of the Mount of Ormond, vacant or when vacant by the resignation of Sir Seuerin Stewart.⁵ In 1567 she granted for life to Master James Chalmer, servant to Master David Chalmer chancellor of Ross, the chaplainry of Ormondie, vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Rag.⁶ In 1607 William Chalmer apparent of Ormond was served heir male to his father Master David Chalmer of Ormond in the croft of Castletoun called the chapel croft, of the extent of 26s. 8d.⁷ In 1673 Alexander Brodie of Lethin was served heir to his father Alexander in the patronage of the chaplainry of Castiltoun with the tithes, as part of the lordship, barony, and regality of Kinloss.⁸ In 1677 John M'Kenzie of Aplecross, the eldest son of the deceased Roderic M'Kenzie of Aplecross, who was the eldest lawful son of Alexander M'Kenzie of Coull, was served heir to the latter in the half of the croft called the chapel croft of Casteltoun.⁹ In 1681 Kenneth Earl of Seaforth, Lord M'Kenzie of Kintail, was served heir male to his great-grandfather Kenneth Lord M'Kenzie and Kintail, formerly styled Lord Kenneth M'Kenzie of Kintail, in the same chapel croft, of the extent of 28s. 4d.¹⁰

In 1673 Alexander Brodie of Lethin was served heir to his father Alexander in the patronage and tithes of the chaplainry of Killen, as part of the lordship, barony, and regality of Kinloss.¹¹

In the parish are three wells, named Hainuck, Charles's Well, and Craiguick, the last of which is still believed to effect miraculous cures, and is frequented for that purpose on the morning of the first Sabbath of May.¹²

At the Reformation between the years 1561 and 1566 Sir Alexander Peddir, who had then been vicar 'the space of thir four yeiris bygane or thairby,' stated that 'the vicarage of Awach was quhen guid payment was maid worth be yeir xx merkis, and now not worth x merkis.'¹³ Between 1569 and 1572 we have on record the following two statements — 1. Awach, Andro Myll exhorte, xl li., now ane minister sen November 1569, i^c merkis, and now vicar of Awache, extending to viii li. vii s. i d., to be allowit in part of payment of his stipend of lx yeiris crope. 2. The chaplainry of Ormondhill, as we have seen, was in 1528 valued at £5 yearly.⁴

About the year 1328 King Robert Bruce appears to have settled a dispute between Andrew Murray and Sir Hugh of Ross about the barony of Auach in Ross.⁵ ‘Andrew Murray’ was doubtless Sir Andrew de Moravia of Bothwell and Avoch, fifth in succession of that branch of the De Moravia family.⁶ He was Panetarius, and latterly Warden of Scotland, ‘the good Warden eminent in an age of heroes and patriots,’ and died at Avoch in 1338.⁷ John de Moravia, the son of Sir Andrew, and also Panetarius Scocie, was lord of Botheuyle and Auauch from 1338 to 1351.⁸ During the same period appears in record John de Mor bailie of the barony of Auauch.⁹ John de Moravia was succeeded by his brother Thomas, also Panetarius, who died in 1361, and whose daughter Joan carried the family estates, including Avoch, to Archibald the Grim, third Earl of Douglas.¹⁰ In 1398 among reasons given by the bishop of Moray against a judgement of the sheriff of Innernys, declaring that the bishop was bound to give suit in the sheriff courts, was the following—That the court in which the judgement was given was null, because in such a court there ought to be present the sheriff or his lieutenant, three or four suiters (sectatores), a clerk of fee, and a judge of fee, while in the court in question there was present but one suiter, namely, John the son of Michael (Macmichael) the suiter of Avach, and neither clerk nor judge of fee, but that the same John Macmichael who was the only suiter in court acted as judge, gave the judgement in question, and thus performed the office both of court and of judge.¹¹ The Douglasses seem to have held the lands and barony of Avoch till their forfeiture in 1455, and before that date, apparently between the years 1440 and 1448, King James II. conferred the title of Earl of Ormond on Hugh of Douglas, the hero of Sark, and fourth son of James the seventh earl.¹² In 1455 King James II. on attaining his majority recalled all grants which he had previously made, excepting among others the grants of land in the sheriffdoms of Innernes and Bamf made to the bishop of Moray from the lands forfeited by the deceased Hugh of Douglas Earl of Ormond and John of Douglas formerly of Balwanye, and held by them of the bishop in chief.¹ Between the years 1460 and 1481 King James III. created James Stewart his younger son Marquis of Ormond.² In 1481 (5 April) he granted to the Marquis of Ormond the lands of the lordship of Ardmannach called Avauch and Nethirdul, with the moothill of Ormond and the fortalice of Redcastell.³ In the same year (12 April) he confirmed the grant by a charter under his great seal.⁴ About the year 1503 the Marquis, having become an ecclesiastic, resigned his lands to his brother King James IV., retaining only the principal messuage or the moothill of each property in order to preserve his titles.⁵ In 1527 King James V. granted to James Dunbar the son of Master Patrick Dunbar certain lands in the lordship of Ardmannach, including the lands of Casteltoun, extending to £8, 20 bolls of bear, 4 bolls of oats, 1 mart, 1 mutton, 4 dozen poultry, 16 loads of turf—the grantee paying yearly 22s. in lieu of the victual—and the crofts of Casteltoun, extending to 13s. 4d. and 1 boll of bear—the lands of Casteltoun to be the principal messuage or ‘cheif chymmise’ of the whole.⁶ In 1560 Queen Mary granted to Master David Chalmer provost of Creichtoun the towns and lands of Casteltoun and others in the earldom of Ross and lordship of Ardmannoch; and in 1567 she confirmed the grant.⁷ In 1568 King James VI. granted to Andrew Monro of Newmore the son and apparent heir of George Monro of Dalcarnhie, and to Katherine Vrqhart his wife, and to their male heirs, the town and lands of Casteltoun, with the fishing croft commonly called Casteltoun Croft, and other lands in the earldom of Ros and lordship of Ardmannoch, which belonged in heritage to Master David Chalmer formerly chancellor of Ros, and were forfeited by him for treason and lese majesty.⁸ In 1607 William Chalmer apparent of Ormond was served heir male to his father Master David Chalmer of Ormond in the town and lands of Castiltoun, of the extent of £11, 10s. 6d., and the croft of Castiltoun called the chapel croft, of the extent of 26s. 8d., united with other lands into the free portion or part of contiguous land called Castiltoun.⁹

In 1563 Master William Sinclair rector of Olrik, as commissioner of Henry bishop of Ross for leasing the lands of the bishoprick, granted to George Dunbar and his heirs male, with remainder to his natural son George Dunbar and his heirs male, to Patrick Dunbar the brother of George the younger and his heirs male, and to the heirs male whomsoever of George the elder, three-fourths of the town and lands of Avauch with the mill and multures (except the mill-lands occupied by Master Alexander M’Kainze), with the yair and salmon fishing, if any, and also the wrack, wair, and woods within the bounds of the town and mill, and the alehouse of Avach with its lands, occupied by George Dunbar.¹⁰ Between the years 1564 and 1571 John bishop of Ross granted to Master Alexander M’Kenze in liferent, and to his eldest son

Between the years 1338 and 1351 Muriel de Roys the widow of Sir William de Roys lord of Kytrauke, daughter and one of the heirs of the deceased Andrew of Doun, with the consent of her overlord John de Moravia lord of Botheuyle and of Auauach, granted to her second son Andrew de Roys and his heirs her whole share of the lands of Kyllayn and Pethfouyr in the barony of Auauach belonging to her in heritage, to be held as freely as by her deceased father, the grantee doing to the overlord the service due for his portion of the land.⁴ In 1525 (4 July) King James V. granted in heritage to John Dunbar the kinsman of Gawin bishop of Abirden the lands of Bannethfeild and Killane in the earldom of Ross and Ardmanach, extending in his rental to £7 yearly, for the yearly payment of £9 to augment the rental by 40s.; the grantee being bound to construct on the lands houses of stone and lime, orchards, gardens, pigeonhouses, fish-pools, and rabbit warrens, if the ground were suitable.⁵ In the same year (17 July) the King and parliament confirmed the grant.⁶ In 1526 the same king granted to Henry Dingnevale the lands of Petfuyr, extending yearly to 44s. ferme—the mill of Petfuyr called the Denemyne with its toft and croft, extending to £6—and the mill of Petteuoehy with its toft and croft, extending to 2 chalders of meal and malt, and 18 capons—with other lands in the lordship of Ardmanach—extending in all to £17, 6s. 8d., 3 chalders 2 bolls of oatmeal and malt, 2 quarters of a mart, 2 muttons and two quarters, 5 dozen capons, and 24 poultry—for the yearly payment of £22 and other dues, in augmentation of the King's rental by £6, 9s. 4d.⁷ In 1527 the same king granted to James Dunbar the son of Master Patrick Dunbar a number of lands in Ardmanach, of which the lands of Casteltoun were to be the chief messuage, and which included the lands of Petconnoquhy, extending to £6, 13s. 4d., 20 bolls of bear, 4 bolls of oats, 1 mart, 1 mutton, 4 dozen poultry, 16 loads of turf—the grantee paying yearly 22s. in lieu of the victual—three alchouses called the alchouses of Petconnoquhy, extending to 3s.—and the mill of Petconnoquhy, extending to 2 chalders bear and 3 dozen capons, which belonged to the King in property, was held of him in chief by Henry Dingvale, and was resigned by Henry in favour of James Dunbar the grantee.⁸ In 1537 King James V. granted to Patrick Dingwall the son and heir of the deceased Henry Dingwall, the same lands that were granted to his father in 1526.⁹ In 1548 Queen Mary granted to David Dunbar of Bennetisfeild the goods which belonged to the deceased James Dunbar the son of the deceased Alexander Dunbar of

In 1586 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the deceased Alexander bishop of Ross, granting to Thomas Wilsoun the son and heir of the deceased John Wilsoun in the canony of Ross and to his male heirs, with remainder to his heirs whomsoever, the lands of Arkyndwycht, Tempilland, and Boigshangie in the diocese of Ross.³ In 1611 Edward Lord Bruce of Kinloss was served heir male to his father Lord Edward in the lordship of Kinloss, including among lands formerly belonging to the abbey of Kinloss the lands of Mureailhous, Auchindeuch, and a manse within the canony of Ross, in the parish of Avach.⁴ In 1617 Thomas Lord Bruce of Kinloss was served heir to his brother Lord Edward in the same lands.⁵

In the last century there were in the parish three villages named Seatown, Kirktown, and Milntown, having respectively 378, 99, and 80 inhabitants.⁶ At present there seems to be but one village, named Avoch.⁷

From the castle of Avoch, known also as the castle of Ormond, Ormondy, or Ormondhill, and Douglas Castle, Hugh of Douglas between 1440 and 1448 drew the style Earl of Ormond, and James Stewart the second son of King James III. between 1460 and 1481 drew the style Marquis of Ormond.⁸ In 1481, as we have seen, King James III. granted the lands of Avauch with the moothill of Ormond to the Marquis of Ormond, who about 1503 resigned the lands, but retained the moothill in order to preserve his title.⁹ A writer of the seventeenth century mentions Ormondhill south-west from the church with the remains of a castle, and elsewhere describes it as ‘ Casteltoun with the ruynes of a castell called the castell of Ormond, which hath gevin styles to sundrie earls and last to the Princes of Scotland.’¹⁰ The foundations of the castle remain on the top of a hill near Castletown point on the bay of Munloch about 200 feet above the level of the sea.¹¹ They occupy a space 350 feet by 160, and the castle seems to have been built of coarse red stone and lime, with a ditch on one side.¹² The hill of Castletown is now known as Ormondhill or Ladyhill (the latter name having arisen evidently from the dedication of its chapel).¹³

Of the tower of Arkendeith, situated on a farm of the same name, only the lower story remains.¹⁴

Logy³ — Logie⁴ — Logy Westir⁵ — Logywreid.⁶ (Map, No. 29.)

ABOUT the year 1669 the parishes of Logie Wester and Urquhart were united.⁷

Logie Wester, forming the southern portion of the united parish, rises gradually from the banks of the Conan and the Firth of Cromarty to the ridge of the Mulbuy, the lower part being generally cultivated, and the upper waste.⁸

In 1498 King James IV. presented Master John Monroo to the vicarage of Logy-Vrquhard (meaning apparently the vicarages of Logy and Vrquhard), when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir Dugall Ruresoun.⁹ In 1560 Queen Mary presented Robert Monro to the vicarages of the parish churches of Vrquhart and Logie, vacant or when vacant by the resignation or the inability of John Monro, or in any other way.¹⁰ At the Reformation the church of Logy was part of the prebend of the treasurer of Ross.¹¹ In 1569 Robert Monro was reader at Urquhart and Logy Wester, afterwards exhorter at the same churches, and then minister of them and others.¹² In 1659 Simoun Fraisser of Innerallochie was served heir to his grandfather Sir Simone of Innerallochie in the advowson of the parish church of Logie both parsonage and vicarage.¹³

The church stood on the right bank of the Conan at a place anciently known as Logyreyth or Logywreid, where its ruins remained in the end of last century.¹⁴ The church of the united parish, rebuilt in 1795, but apparently not on its former site, stands at Urquhart on the Cromarty Firth.¹⁵

In Baiamund's Roll the treasury of Ross is taxed at £8; in the Taxatio Seculi xvi. at £24, 16s.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.¹⁶ At the Reformation the treasury, including the churches of Logy and Urquhart, and the fourth of the churches of Cromarty and Rosemarkie, was stated at 300 marks, of which 100 marks were appropriated 'for the vphold of the kirkis and to the ministaris.'¹⁷ In 1569 Robert Monro as reader at

Urquhart and Logy Wester had a stipend of £20, and afterwards as exhorter a stipend of £40.¹ In 1574 as minister of the same and other churches he had £66, 13s. 4d. and the kirklands, and the reader at Urquhart and Logy had £20.² In 1576 the same minister had for his stipend £72, 4s. 5d., the kirklands of Urquhart, and other perquisites; and David Monro reader at Urquhart and Logy had £20, paid out of the third of the treasury of Ross by the tacksmen and parishioners of Logie Wester.³

Between 1336 and 1357 appears in record John of Kynkellee dean of Ross.⁴ In 1527 King James V. granted to William Dingvale of Kildun the lands of Kinkell-Clairsair, with the Ferryhouse croft and the privilege belonging to the same, then extending in the King's rental to 7 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence, and other lands in Ross, extending in all to £23, 13s. 4d., 4 bolls victual, and 1 mart, for the yearly payment of £33, 6s. 8d., and the other dues, to augment the rental by £9, 13s. 4d.⁵ In 1542 the same king granted to James Fraser, the brother of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet, the lands of Kynkell-Clarschae, extending in the King's rental to £7, 8s. in ferme and grassum, 8s. of bondage silver, and 3 reek hens — with other lands in Ross and Ardmannach — the grantee paying for the whole yearly £51, 3s., 21 reek hens, 2½ marts, 2½ muttons, and 8 dozen poultry.⁶ In 1553 and 1563 appears in record Thomas Monypenny of Kinkell.⁷ In 1583 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Hugh Fraser of Gussokuhan, alienating to John M'Kainzie of Garloche and his heirs the lands and towns of Kinkell-Clarsache in the lordship of Ross, then occupied by John M'Kainzie.⁸ In 1584 the same king confirmed two grants by the deceased John bishop of Ross — 1. A grant to Murdoc M'Kainzie and his heirs of the brewhouse of Kinkell and the lands belonging to it, then occupied by Murdoc and his tenants; and 2. A grant to Alexander Cheisholme of Cwmer for life, and to his youngest son Wiland (Vallano) Cheisholme and his male heirs, with remainder in succession to his second son Alexander and his male heirs, and to his eldest son Thomas and his heirs whomsoever, of the lands and town of Kinkell, extending to a half davach, then occupied by Alexander Cheisholme the elder.⁹ In 1590 Alexander M'Kenze was served heir to his father Murdoc M'Kenze of Ferbrone in the alehouse of Kinkell with the brewlands, of the extent of 49s. feuferme.¹⁰ In 1638 Kenneth M'Keinzie of Garloch was served heir male to his father Alexander M'Keinzie of Garloche in the lands and barony of Garloche, including Kinkell-Clairsach, of the extent of £7, 8s. feuferme and other dues, and in the manor place of Kinkell, of the extent of 3s. 4d. feuferme.¹¹ In 1647 Hector M'Kenzie was served heir male to his brother John M'Kenzie of Fairburne in the same alehouse and lands, of the extent of 49s. 1d.¹² In 1673 Alexander Mackenzie of Garloch was served heir male to his father Kenneth Mackenzie of Garloche in the lands of Kinkell-Clairsach and in the manor-place of Kinkell, as in 1638.¹³ The barony of Kinkell-Fraser, stated in 1669 to have been of old called Ferintosh, is still known by the latter name.¹ In 1690 it was held by Duncan Forbes of Culloden, to whom in compensation for losses sustained during his absence in Holland on government service the Scotch parliament granted an exemption from the excise duties on spirits distilled from corn grown upon the lands.² In 1786 the privilege was abolished, and a sum of money granted to the proprietor as compensation for £30,000 of debt incurred in the service of government by his father the well known president of the Court of Session in 1745.³

In 1542 King James V. granted to James Fraser, the brother of Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovet, the lands of Culboky, extending to £18, 8s. in ferme and grassum, 41s. of bondage silver, 2 marts, 2 muttons, 8 reek hens, and 8 dozen poultry — and the alehouse of Culboky, extending in ferme, grassum, and other dues, to 12 shillings.⁴ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to Hugh Fraser of Gussachane and Margaret Munro his wife the western half of Eistir Culboky and the eastern half of Westir Culboky, with the houses and gardens made and to be made near the shore in the place called the Querrell, in the lordship of Ardmanach, resigned by Hugh.⁵ In 1581 King James VI. granted to Hugh Fraser of Gussachan and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, the mill of Culboky, with the croft, multures, and profits, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes, extending yearly in the King's rental to 16 bolls of victual — for the yearly payment of 16 bolls 'good and sufficient merchandise' with 'the charity,' as the ferme contained in the rental, and one boll of bear in augmentation, in all 17 bolls, to be paid between Christmas and Candlemas.⁶ In 1586 the same king granted the mill of Culboky in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe for the yearly payment of 15 bolls of victual with 3 firlots 3 pecks as 'charity.'⁷

In 1563 Alexander Bane of Tullich exchanged with Robert Monro of Foulis the half of the lands and fishings of Ferrintosky in Braquhat (in Sutherland) for the lands of Wester Logy with the mill and alehouse in the earldom of Ross, and for certain arable lands in the burgh of Dingwall.⁸ In the same year Queen Mary granted to the respective parties crown charters of the lands exchanged.⁹ In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe the ferry of Scuttoll and the lands and alehouse of Logyreyth; the grantee paying yearly for the ferry 20s., and every 5 years the same sum as grassum — for Logyreyth £3, with 8s. of bondage silver, 4 poultry, £3 grassum, and the usual services — and for the alehouse 40s. and the same sum as grassum.¹⁰ In 1681 Kenneth Earl of Seaforth, Lord M'Kenzie and Kintaill, was served heir male to his great-grandfather Kenneth Lord M'Kenzie and Kintaill, formerly styled Lord Kenneth M'Kenzie of Kintaill, in the ferry (freto lie ferrie) of Scuttell with the land of the same, the lands of Logiereth, and the alehouse of Logiereth, respectively of the same extent as in 1586.¹¹

In 722 Saint Malrube of Applecross is said to have been murdered by Norwegians at Vrquhard in Ross.¹² There was erected, says the Aberdeen Breviary, on the spot where he was slain a chapel of oak which afterwards became the parish church of Vrquhard.¹³ The church was afterwards a part of the prebend of the treasurer of Ross.¹⁴ In 1498 King James IV. presented Master John Monro to the vicarage of Logy Vrquhard (Logy and Vrquhard), when vacant by the resignation of Sir Dugall Ruresoun.¹⁵ In 1560 he presented Robert Monro to the vicarages of the parish churches of Vrquhart and Logie, vacant or when vacant by the demission or inability of John Monro, or in any other way.¹⁶ From 1569 till about 1572 Master John Robesone seems to have been treasurer of Ross and minister at Urquhart and Logy Wester.¹⁷ During the same period Robert Monro was successively reader and exhorter at the same churches.¹⁸ In 1574 Robert Monro was minister, and the office of reader was vacant; in 1576 the same Robert was minister, and the reader was David Monro.¹⁹ In 1659 Simoun Fraisser of Innerallochie was served heir to his grandfather Sir Simoun in the advowson, parsonage, and vicarage of Urquhairt and Logie.²⁰

The valuations of the treasury of Ross and of the churches of Urquhart and Logie have been given above.² The only additional statements with which we are furnished on the subject are, that between 1569 and 1572 Master John Robesone, treasurer and minister, had as his stipend the third of his own benefice amounting to £66, 13s. 4d., and that after November 1571 the reader had 19 marks additional, apparently for the church of Urquhart.³

The lands of Culboky, described above, lay partly in this parish, and partly in Logie Wester.⁴

In 1574 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Robert Monro of Foulis to Marjory Mackanze the sister of Colin Mackanze of Kintaila in her virginity, granting to her the liferent of the lands of Mekle Findoun, extending to a davach, in the earldom of Ross, to be held of the crown.⁵ In 1587 the same king confirmed a charter of John bishop of Ross, granting in heritage to Hugh Monro in Litle Findoun the lands of Litle Findoun in the diocese of Ross.⁶ In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male of entail and provision to Master Hector Monro of Foullis his father in the lands of Meikill Findon with the pertinents, namely, Baddrean, Ballegyle, and Toazet, with the brewhouse and its croft, in the lordship of Ardmeanach.⁷ In 1635 Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovat was served heir male to his father Symon Lord Fraser of Lovat in the same lands, included in the barony of Foullis.⁸

and then rises again gradually to the top of the Mulbuy, at that part 800 feet above the sea.¹ Cullieudden included the western portion of the united parish.²

In the year 1227 Jeronimus the parson of Culicuden was present at Kenedor in Moray at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and of Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser.³ In 1275 the church appears to have been taxed along with other Scotch benefices for relief of the holy land.⁴ At the Reformation the parson of Cullieudden was David Dunbar.⁵ In 1574 William Monro Hucheson was reader at the same church.⁶ In 1580 (14 October) King James VI. presented Master George Thomsoun to the parsonage of Killecuddin, vacant by the decease of Master David Dunbar.⁷ In the same year (1 December) he presented William Monro Huchconsoun to the same parsonage, vacant by decease of the same Master David.⁸ The parson of Cullyeuddin was a canon of the cathedral.⁹ In 1662 the commissioners for the plantation of kirks united the parishes of Cullieudden and Kirkmichaell into one parish church, to be called the parish and church of Kirkmichael, and to be built at Reisolace, in favour of Sir John Wrwhart of Cromertie, and ordained that, until the new church should be built, the parishioners should attend at the church of Cullieuddin then standing; the stipend to be paid by Sir John, and to consist of 400 marks, 2 chalders bear and 2 chalders meal Linlithgow measure, with the vicarage teinds of both parishes and 50 marks for communion elements; and Sir John to have right to the glebes of Cullieudden and Kirkmichael on the entry of the minister to the new glebe designed for him at Reisolace.¹⁰ In the same year the union of the two parishes was ratified by King Charles II. and the parliament.¹¹

The church of Cullieudden, dedicated to Saint Martin, stood originally at Kilmartin or Saint Martin's in the west end of the parish, where its foundations and the burying-ground (now disused) may still be seen.¹² The site appears to have been changed previously to the year 1641, and the church built at Cullieudden on the shore of the Firth, where one of its gables is still standing.¹³ The parish is still locally known as Sgire-a-Mhartinn, the parish of Saint Martin.¹⁴

In Baiamund's Roll the church is taxed at 53s. 4d., and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £26, 13s. 4d.¹⁵ At the Reformation the rental of the parsonage was stated as follows by Sir Alexander Pedder procurator for the parson—The town of Cullieudden, 42 bolls; Drumneucydne, 22 bolls; Sanct Martenis, 9 bolls; Kynebarch, 10 bolls; the Craighouse, 4 bolls; Eistir Culboll, 14 bolls; Wastir Culboll, 20 bolls; the Wodheid, 4 bolls; the town of Braire, 16 marks; amounting in all to 7 chalders 13 bolls of victual and £10, 13s. 4d. in money.¹⁶ In 1574 the reader at Cullieuddin had for his stipend 20 marks and the kirklands.¹⁷

In 1328 King Robert Bruce appears to have settled a controversy between Hugh Earl of Ross and Sir Andrew de Moravia about the lands of Dromcudyn and Munloch. The town of Drumneudyne, as we have seen, is about 1561 enumerated among the lands of this parish.² In 1586 King James VI. granted in heritage to William Keith the master of his wardrobe the lands of Drumquhidden, for the yearly payment of £6, 13s. 4d., 2 chalders 6 bolls 1 firloft of bear, 4 bolls of oats, 1 mart, 1 mutton, 48 poultry, 20s. of bondage silver, 10 reek hens, and 80 loads of fuel.³ In 1666 John Monro of Ardulzie was served heir to his father Hugh Monro of Ardulzie in the davach of the town and lands of Drumcuddin in the barony of Delnie, lordship of Ardmeanach, and sheriffdom of Ross.⁴

In 1350 William Earl of Ross and Lord of Sky granted to Adam of Vrchard the son of the deceased William of Vrchard the davach of Brehe within the maresium of Fernewyr in the sheriffdom of Innernes.⁵ In 1369 King David confirmed a grant, which William Earl of Ross made to Alexander of Saint Clair the son of the deceased Thomas of Saint Clair, of the whole davach of land of Bray infra maresium de Fernewyr in the sheriffdom of Innernys.⁶ In 1533 King James V. confirmed a charter, granted by Thomas Vrchard sheriff of Cromerty to his son and apparent heir Alexander and Beatrix Innes his wife, of three oxgangs of the lands of Brey in the earldom of Ross.⁷ In 1564 Walter Urquhart was served heir to his father Alexander Urquhart sheriff of Cromartie in the 5 oxgangs of Brey in the lordship of Ardmanache, of the old extent of £8, 8s. 2½d.⁸ The town of Braire is enumerated above among the lands of the parish as stated between 1561 and 1566.⁹ In 1577 King James VI. confirmed a grant by Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromartie to Elizabeth Makkanze his wife of the liferent of a davach of land called the lands of Bray, and of a davach called Bralangall, in the sheriffdoms of Innernes and Cromartie respectively, as full satisfaction for her terce of all the lands and other property belonging to Walter which she might claim in the event of his death.¹⁰ In 1599 Thomas Urquhart was served heir to his grandfather Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromerthie in the 5 oxgangs of the lands of Brey in the lordship of Ardmanach, of the old extent of £4.¹¹ In 1617 the same lands were resigned by John Urquhart in favour of James Fraser of Brey.¹²

In 1557 David bishop of Ross, perpetual commendator of Cambuskyneth, granted to his brother Robert Leslie the lands of the baronies of Ferindonald and Ardmanoch, including among others the lands of Eister Culbo and the alehouse and alehouse croft of Saint Martin; the grantee paying yearly for Eister Culbo 6 marks and as grassum 26s. 8d., 4 bolls of ferme victual, half a custom mart, 2 muttons, 12 poultry, 2 kids, 40 eggs valued at 6d., 100 loads of custom fuel, 8 loads 'lie takturris,' 2 bolls of custom oats, and 1 boll of 'suggeroun aitis'—and for the alehouse and croft of Saint Martin 10s. with 3s. 4d. as grassum; paying also as arriage and carriage, and turf or fuel, for the whole lands 30s. with 13s. 4d. in augmentation of the rental, and performing three suits at the three head courts held yearly at the canony of Ross.¹ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.² Between 1561 and 1566, as we have seen, the lands of Eistir and Westir Culboll and of Sanct Martenis are enumerated among the lands of the parish.³ About the same period William Sinclare rector of Olrik, canon of Caithnes, and commissioner of Henry bishop of Ross, granted to Thomas Vrquhart the son of the deceased Alexander Vrquhart sheriff of Crombathy, and to the heirs male of his body, with remainder to Arthur Vrquhart his brother german and his male heirs, to James their brother german and his male heirs, to John their brother german and his male heirs, and to Walter Vrquhart their eldest brother and his male heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Vrquhart, the lands of Kilquhone (in Lumlair) extending to a quarter davach, and the lands of Eister Culbo extending to a half davach, belonging to the bishop as part of the patrimony of the bishoprick.⁴ In 1578 Alexander bishop of Ross, with the consent of the dean and canons, granted for life to his servitor William Fergusson 'chirurgeane' a yearly pension out of the dues belonging to the bishop from certain lands in Ross which belonged in heritage to Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromartie, including Sanctmartynis paying yearly 26s. 8d. mail, 8s. 11d. gersum, 7s. 1½d. in augmentation of mail and gersum, the quarter of a mart, 1 mutton, 3 capons, 3 poultry, 1 kid with eggs, 2 firlots 'sudgerone' oats, and 1 pound of hemp—and the alehouse of Sanctmartynis paying in mail 26s. 8d., in gersum 8s. 11d., and in augmentation 2s. 8d.⁵ In 1585 King James VI. confirmed the grant of Saint Martin's, and in 1587 he confirmed the grant of Eister Culbo.⁶

The lands of Kynebarch, as above stated, appear among the lands of this parish between 1561 and 1566.⁷ Between the years 1565 and 1571 John bishop of Ross granted for life to Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Cromartie and Elisabeth M'Kenzie his wife, and to Henry Urquhart their second son and his heirs male, with remainder to Walter's heirs whomsoever bearing the surname and arms of Vrquhart the lands of Kinbeachie extending to a half davach, the brewhouse of Kinbeachie with its croft, and the mill of Kinbeachie, then occupied by Walter and his tenants, in the earldom of Ross and sheriffdom of Innernes.⁸ In 1578 Alexander bishop of Ross granted for life to his servitor William Fergusson 'chirurgeane' a yearly pension out of certain dues belonging to the bishop from the lands of Kinbeachie with the mill, and other lands in the diocese; the lands of Kinbeachie paying yearly £7, 4s. Scots in feu mails, 4 bolls ferme, 2 bolls custom oats, 1 boll 'sudgerone' oats, the half of a custom mart, 2 muttons, 6 poultry, 2 kids with their eggs, as the ferme and dues—and the mill of Kinbeachie paying yearly 20 bolls ferme and 'ane gals.'⁹ In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Walter Urquhart sheriff of Crummarty, granting certain lands to Elizabeth Ros in special warrandice of the lands of Kinbeachy.¹⁰ In 1584 he confirmed the grant of bishop John, and in 1585 the grant of bishop Alexander.¹¹ In 1603 Thomas Urquhart sheriff of Cromarthie was served heir to his father Henry Urquhart sheriff apparent in the lands of Kinbachie extending to a half davach, the

Of eight yearly fairs granted in 1641 by King Charles I. to the burgh of Inverness the fifth was to be held on 10 November called Martimes fair, 'quhilk was haldin of auld at Sanct Martenis kirk in Ardmannoche now lyand waist.'³ In 1661 the grant of those fairs was confirmed by King Charles II.⁴

On the lands of Craighouse, about a mile and a half west from the churchyard of Cullicudden on the Cromarty Firth, stood the castle of Craighouse, named also Castlecraig, and in Gaelic Tigh-na-craig.⁵ In the end of the sixteenth century it is said to have belonged to the Williamsons of Craighouse, and afterwards to have been a seat of the bishops of Ross.⁶ It is mentioned by a writer of the seventeenth century as 'Craighous with a tour of 4 hous height.'⁷ The tower or wing which still remains is 50 feet in height, and consists of four heavily-arched stories, with turrets, bartizans, and stone roof—the lower half having strongly vaulted apartments, and the upper half being furnished with wooden floors.⁸ On the land side it was defended by a ditch and a high wall, and the rock on which it stands is perpendicular towards the sea.⁹

In the united parish are numerous encampments, generally near the shore, and numerous cairns or tumuli which when opened are usually found to contain graves made of slabs, and in these are found ashes and remains of armour.¹⁰

Marioribankis, the son of Master Thomas Marioribankis burghess of Edinburgh, to the same prebend, vacant by the decease of Robert Marioribankis.¹ In 1570 and 1574 Alexander Clunes was reader at Kirkmichael.² In 1580, 1585, and 1586 the rector of Kirkmichell appears to have been Master Thomas Marioribanks.³ In 1587 King James VI. presented Alexander Reid to the vicarage of Kirkmichael, vacant by the decease of Sir James Gray.⁴

The church, dedicated to Saint Michael, stood in the east end of the parish within a few yards of the sea on the Cromarty Firth, where remain its western gable, its belfry, and a bell still used at funerals.⁵ The church of the united parish, apparently built in 1774, stands at Resolis in Kirkmichael on the site of a former.⁶

In Baiamund's Roll the church is taxed at 53s. 4d., and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £18, 12s., its yearly value in the Libellus Taxationum being 40 marks.⁷ The reader at Kirkmichael had as his stipend in 1570 the sum of £20, and 1574 the sum of 20 marks with the kirklands.⁸

In 1551 Queen Mary granted to Elizabeth M'Canzcoch the liferent of half the lands of Bowskaly, Birkis, and Belblair, in the barony and sheriffdom of Cromertye, resigned by the sheriff Thomas Vrquhart.⁹ In 1557 David bishop of Ross, perpetual commendator of Cambuskynneth, granted to his brother Robert Leslie certain lands in the lordship of Ardmanoch, including the lands of Eister Balblair with the alehouse; the grantee paying yearly for those lands, otherwise called Kirkmichaell, 4 marks, with 17s. 10d. grassum, the fourth of a custom mart, 1 mutton, 6 poultry, 1 pound of hemp (canabis), 60 loads of fuel, and 2 bushels (modiis) of 'suggeroun' oats—and for the alehouse of Kirkmichell 12s., 6 capons, 6 geese, and 4s. grassum.¹⁰ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.¹¹ In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Crummarty, granting in liferent to Elisabeth Ros (then unmarried), and in heritage to his heirs by her, with remainder to his own heirs otherwise, the towns and lands of Wester Ballano and Ballaiskaillie, with all their pertinents, namely, Auchnintyne and the other pendicles and outsets, in the barony and sheriffdom of Crummarty, in special warrandice of the lands and town of Kinbeachy, with the mill and other pertinents in the same barony and sheriffdom, and to be held of the crown.¹²

In 1577 King James VI. confirmed a grant of the liferent of Bralangall in the sheriffdom of Cromartie by Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Cromartie to his wife Elisabeth Makkzanze.¹³

On trenching a moor on the glebe of Resolis there were discovered the foundations of a circular building like those known as Piet's houses, and imbedded in the soil a stone vessel four inches in diameter and three-fourths of an inch in thickness.¹⁴

CROMARTY.

Cromarte¹ — Crumarty² — Crumbathy³ — Cromartie⁴ — Cromardy⁵ —
Cromarty⁶ — Cromertie.⁷ (Map, No. 33.)

THIS parish is composed of the north-east portion of the peninsula called the Black Isle, terminating eastward in the precipice called the southern Sutor, and stretches for about 4 miles along the shore of the Moray Firth on the east, and about 6 along that of the Firth of Cromarty on the north and west. On the east it presents to the Moray Firth a range of lofty precipices, attaining the height of about 470 feet above the sea.⁸ On the north and west it slopes gradually towards the other firth, the slope terminating in an abrupt terrace nearly 100 feet above the sea-level, and from its base a lower and level terrace extends to the shore.⁹ The coast in the end of the sixteenth century extended fully a quarter of a mile farther seaward than at present.¹⁰ The bay of Cromarty at the entrance of the Firth, the Sikirsund of Norse writers, is thus correctly described by Buchanan — ‘The German Ocean, opening a way to itself among the stupendous cliffs of the most lofty rocks, expands within into a spacious basin, affording a safe harbour and certain refuge against every tempest; for the passage is not difficult, and once entered the largest fleets may ride secure from the winds and waves.’¹¹

At the Reformation a fourth of the teindsheaves of the parish of Cromarte was part of the prebend of the chancellor of Ross, Master Duncan Chalmer; a fourth was part of the treasury then held in lease by Matthew Hamiltoun of Mylneburne; and a fourth was annexed to the prebend of the dean, Master Mungo Monypenny.¹² At the same period the vicarage was held by Sir John Andirsoun (or Hendirsoun) chamberlain of Moray.¹³ In 1569, 1574, and 1576 James Burnet was reader at Cromartie, and in 1574 and 1576 Master John Robertsoun treasurer of Ross was minister.¹⁴ About the year 1578 Alexander Vrqhart dean of Ross, with the consent of the canons during the vacancy of the see, granted for life to Walter Vrqhart sheriff of Cromartie and to his nearest lawful heir a yearly pension of 3 chalders 12 bolls of victual with

'half cheritie', 5 wedders, and 40s. in money, to be paid out of the quarters of the teinds of the parish of Cromartie belonging to the deanery in the following proportions, namely; Of the quarter teinds of the town of Cromartie 16 bolls of bear with 'half cheritie,' 40s., and a wedder — of the quarter teinds of Navitie 10 bolls of bear, 'half cheritie,' and a wedder — of the quarter teinds of Eistir Farnes 8 bolls of bear, 'half cheritie,' and a wedder — of the quarter teinds of Daidstoun 7 bolls of bear with 'half cheritie' — of the quarter teinds of Peddistoun 8 bolls of bear, 'half cheritie,' and a wedder — of the quarter teinds of Litill Farnes 8 bolls of bear, 'half cheritie,' and a mutton — and of the quarter teinds of Vddall 3 bolls of bear with 'half cheritie;' reserving only the pension given by the dean to John Sympsoun of Bannauis and Mariorie Abirnethy, amounting to 4 bolls of bear, 'half cheritie,' and a wedder, out of the quarter teinds of Eister Farnes; the lease to begin in 1578, saving the rights, services, suffrages, and prayers, formerly due to the King.¹ In 1583 King James VI. presented Master Robert Williamsoun minister to the vicarage of Cromartie, vacant by the decease of Sir John Andersoun.² In 1585 King James VI. confirmed the lease of 1578.³ In 1661, on a petition from Master Patrick Durhame, late minister of Ardnaseir, who had been appointed for life to the deanery of Ross, the parliament ordered the heritors and others to pay to him 40 bolls of teind victual, with certain customs and silver dues, payable to him as dean out of the teinds of Rosemarkie, which for three years they had paid to the minister of Cromertie.⁴

The church stood originally on ground now covered by the sea, and a sand-bank which still retains the name of the Old Kirk apparently marks its site.⁵ About the middle of the last century after a violent storm from the north-east the beach was found to be strowed with human bones, and among them were several blocks of hewn stone.⁶ One of the latter, the cornerstone of a cornice, is still to be seen upon the shore.⁷ The present church stands at the east end of the town near the base of the higher terrace above described.⁸

Between 1561 and 1566 Sir Andro Robertsoun was chaplain of the chaplainry of Saint Regule in the diocese of Ross.⁹ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by James Burnet chaplain of Saint Regula (Regulus) near the burgh of Cromartie, granting, with the consent of Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Cromartie, and of the bailies and community of the burgh, the patrons of the chaplainry, to Alexander Vrquhart the son of Arthur Vrquhart of Balleblair and to his heirs male, with remainder in succession to John Vrquhart the uncle of Alexander and his heirs male bearing the surname and arms of Vrquhart, and to Walter Vrquhart and his heirs male bearing the same surname and arms, the lands of the chaplainry, with the manse, garden, and croft, extending to 4 acres of land, lying between the lands of the sheriff on the west and the lands of Alexander Clunes on the east.¹⁰ The chapel, dedicated to Saint Regulus or Rule, abbot and confessor, who is said to have brought into Scotland the relics of Saint Andrew, stood on a detached wooded knoll east of the town of Cromartie, having on the south a deep ravine with a small stream.¹ The southern wall has been destroyed by the ground giving way from the continued action of the stream; the ruins of the other walls still remain.² Attached to the west end was the tomb of the Urquharts of Cromarty, of which almost the only remains are a single tier of hewn ashler having a sloping base and surmounted by a Gothic moulding.³ Tradition says that at the Reformation a valuable historical record belonging to the chapel was carried to France by the priest.⁴ In the last century there was found in a recess of one of the walls a rubricated manuscript, the nature and subsequent fate of which are unknown.⁵

On a steep ridge overlooking the Moray Firth is the site of a chapel dedicated to Saint Bennet (one of the saints named Benedict) of which the only vestiges are a heap of stones and a grassy mound.⁶ Near it stood a stone trough termed the Fairy's Cradle, destroyed about the year 1745; and in the neighbourhood is Saint Bennet's Well, even in recent times believed to possess the virtue of curing the sick, by whom, when they drank the water, a small rag was left as an offering on a thorn bush overhanging the well.⁷

In the parish were other three chapels, two of which have totally disappeared, and the dedication of which is unknown; the third, dedicated to Saint Duthace, is now represented by a mound and stones like the chapel of Saint Bennet, and has in its vicinity a well which still bears Saint Duthace's name.⁸

There was a chaplainry in the cathedral church endowed from the lands of Navity.⁹ In the seventeenth century it was a popular belief that the inhabitants of the sheriffdom of Cromarty were at the day of final doom to be judged on the moor of Navity.¹⁰

Between 1561 and 1566 the valuation of the church of Cromarty was included in that of the chancellor, treasury, and deanery of Ross, to each of which a fourth of the teinds belonged (the remaining fourth belonging apparently to the bishop).¹¹ At the same date we have on record the following valuation of the vicarage of Cromarty: 'The rental of the vicarage of Crumarty within the dyocie of Ros quhan all dewtie pertening thairto was ansuerit—Payment zeirlic xxii merkis, the curat being sustenit; and now lytill thairof ansuerit except the teind of the yeardis within the town, quhilk will be vi bollis victuall or thairby—Pertenis to Sir Johne Andirsoun chalmerland of Murray. Mr. Thomas Ker at the command of Sir Johne Hendirsoun possessour of the foirsaid benefice.'¹² In 1569 the reader at Cromartie had for his stipend £20; and in 1574 and 1576 he had 20 marks and the kirklands.¹³ In 1574 Master John Robertsoun treasurer had for his stipend as minister at Chanonrie and Cromartie £118, 10s. 8½d.; and in 1576, as minister at Cromartie, 'his stipend fourty pundis, thairof the rest of the thrid of his avin thesaurarie of Ross not assignit to the ministers and reidars serving at the kirkis thairof.'¹⁴

The value of the chaplainry of Saint Regule, as given up between 1561 and 1566 to the collector of thirds by Sir Alexander Pedder procurator of Sir Andro Robertsoun the chaplain, was £10.¹

Of the other chaplainries we have no recorded valuation.

The early history of the parish and district of Cromarty is apparently the same as that of the earldom of Ross.² The barony seems to have been co-extensive with the ancient sheriffdom, and to have been held by the sheriffs, the first of whom on record is William de Monte Alto, who was sheriff of Crumbathyn in 1263.³ The sheriff of Crumbhartyn appears in record in 1296 under King Edward I. of England.⁴ In 1315 King Robert Bruce granted in heritage to Sir Hugh of Ross, the son and heir of William Earl of Ross, and the husband of Mauld the King's sister, the whole sheriffdom and burgh of Crumbathy, the grantee doing the forinsec service belonging to the land, saving to the King the custom called 'malatout.'⁵ Before 1349 King David II. granted to Ada Urquhart the sheriffdom of Crombathie and sheriffship of the same, which William Earl of Ross (the son of Hugh) had resigned.⁶ From that year to 1370 Adam of Urquhard, formerly styled lord of Inchrory, appears as sheriff of Cromady or Crumbathy.⁷ His son John appears with him in 1369 as witness to a charter, and in 1398 John of Urquhard appears as sheriff of Cromardy.⁸ In 1457 William Vrquhard in Crumbathy was one of two appointed by King James II. to assist his chancellor in visiting and reforming the hospitals in the diocese of Ross.⁹ Between 1491 and 1493 occurred 'the herschip of Cromartie,' that is, the plundering of the lands of Cromartie by Huchoun the Ros younger of Kilrawok and his accomplices, of whom the chief seem to have been Doule M'Gillecallum and William Alansone.¹⁰ These carried away from the lands 600 cows, each worth 13s. 4d.—5 score of horses, each 26s. 8d.—50 score of sheep, each 2s.—20 score of goats, each 2s.—200 swine, each 3s.—20 score bolls of victual, each 6s. 8d.—and £200 worth of household goods.¹¹ Master Alexander Vrquhart sheriff of Crommaty, proprietor of the lands, sued the parties for the restitution of the goods, and also for £100 of the mails of his lands 'haldin wast be the said Huchoun younger and his compliceis of twa yeris.'¹² The chiefs of the Clanchattane and Huchoun the Ros baron of Kilrawok became surety for the parties prosecuted; the case was proved in court; and in 1493 (5 February) the Lords of Council ordained that the baron of Kilrawok and Huchoun the Ros his son and apparent heir should pay the value to Master Alexander Vrquhart and his tenants John Vrquhart, Thomas Vrquhart, Thomas Vrquhart, William Smethissone, Andrew Holme, William Donaldsone, and others, and that their lands and goods should be distrained for it, reserving to Kilrawok and his son the right of prosecuting any of the accomplices of the latter for their share of the payment.¹ In 1494 (5 July) the case of Huchoun the Ros of Kilrawok against Sir Alexander of the Ilis of Lochelche, Alane M'Rory, and others, for his relief at the hands of Master Alexander Vrquhart of 600 cows and oxen and other goods was continued by the Lords of Council to 4 August following, that more witnesses might be examined.² In the same year the sheriff of Cromarty and his tenants sued Huchoun Ros of Kilrawok for withholding from them 'the avals and profitis that thai nicht haf haid' of the goods taken from their lands; and the Lords of Council (9 July) continued the case till 8 August, ordaining the sheriff to summon his witnesses.³ By the year 1497 or 1498 the baron of Kilravock had not succeeded in operating his relief against the Mackintoshes; and between 1501 and 1503 the debt of 800 marks due to the Urquharts was by the arbitration of friends settled as follows—That in lieu of 400 marks Huchone Rois the heir of Kilrawok, or, he failing, John Rois, the baron's second son, or any other his eldest son and heir, should marry Agnes Urquhart the sheriff's daughter; and that the other 400 marks should be secured over the lands of Kilravock and paid in yearly instalments of £40.⁴ Master Alexander Vrquhart of Cromarty and sheriff of Cromarty appears in record in 1503 and 1504, and was dead in 1506.⁵ In the last named year King James VI. granted to Alexander Ogilvy of Far the marriage of Thomas Vrquhart the son and heir of the deceased sheriff.⁶ In 1510 Huchoun Ros and Agnes Urquhart were married, and the marriage contract, dated 4 November of that year, is witnessed by the same Thomas Urquhart of Cromarty the son and heir of the deceased Alexander.⁷ In 1533, 1534, 1549, 1551, and 1552, the same Thomas Vrquhart (styled in the last named year Thomas Vrquharde of Fyscharie), appears in record as sheriff of Cromarty.⁸ He seems to have died in 1557.⁹ About the year 1533 he granted the lands of Inchrory and others to his son and apparent heir Alexander Vrquhart and his wife Beatrix Innes, the former of whom appears in 1549 as Alexander Vrquhart of Ynchrorie the son and heir apparent of the same Thomas Vrquhart sheriff of Cromarty.¹⁰ In 1564 Alexander Vrquhart appears as sheriff of Crombathy, and in 1565 he was dead.¹¹ He had five sons, Walter, John, James, Arthur, and Thomas, of whom Walter the eldest succeeded him.¹² Between 1565 and 1571 Walter Vrquhart sheriff of

Cromartie appears in record with his wife Elisabeth M'Kenzie and Henry Vrquhart their second son; in 1577 he again appears in record along with his wife Elisabeth Makkanze; in 1578 Alexander Vrquhart dean of Ros granted to him and his nearest lawful heir for life a yearly pension, above mentioned, from the dean's quarter teinds of the lands of Cromartie, namely, Navitie, Eister Farnes, Daidstoun, Peddistoun, Litill Farnes, and Vddall; and in 1585 he had a confirmation of the grant from King James VI.¹ In 1599 Thomas Urquhart was served heir to his grandfather Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromerthie in the lands and barony of Cromerthie, with the Castlehill called the Mothill of the same, and the yearly revenues of the burgh of Cromerthie, lying in the barony and sheriffdom of Cromerthie—and in the office of sheriff of Cromerthie—together of the old extent of £40, 12s. 7d.² In the same year and in 1603 Thomas Urquhart appears as the heir of his father Henry Urquhart sheriff apparent of Cromerthie.³ In 1599 appears in record John Wrquhart tutor of Cromertie, and in 1604 John Urquhart was served heir male in certain lands to his father Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromartie (then apparently alive).⁴ The latter and his son Henry the apparent sheriff were both dead in 1607, in which year Thomas Urquhart sheriff of Cromertie was served heir in certain lands to his uncle John.⁵ In 1630 Thomas Urquhart (apparently the son of the sheriff, and afterwards Sir Thomas) was served heir in the lands of Kinbeachie to his brother Walter the fear of those lands.⁶ He was born in 1613, knighted by King Charles I. in 1641, succeeded his father soon afterwards, and died in 1661.⁷ In 1644 Master Thomas Rig of Athernie was served heir to his father William Rig of Athernie in a yearly revenue of £2000 from the lands and barony of Cromartie, and specially of those towns and parts of the barony called Daidstoun, Pedistoun, Arnoche, and Farnes, with the mill of Farnes, in the barony and parish of Cromartie, of the extent of £1600 according to act of parliament.⁸ Sir Thomas Urquhart was succeeded by his brother Alexander, who, dying in the course of a year afterwards, was succeeded by Sir John Urquhart of Craigfintrie the representative of another branch of the family.⁹

In 1529 died John of Daidstoun (apparently John Denowne).¹⁰ In 1536 appear in record John Denowne of Daidstoun and his son Donald Denowne.¹¹ In 1547 Queen Mary granted to William Dennowne of Petnele the nonentry and other dues of certain lands which had been in her hands since the decease of Alexander Dunnvne of Daidstoun.¹² In the same year she granted to John Dunnvne, the second son of John Dunnvne of Daidstoun, certain lands resigned by John the elder, to whom the liferent was reserved.¹³ In 1556 John Denowne of Davidstoun was dead, and Donald Denowne of Kenroy appears as his son and heir.¹⁴ In 1578 and 1585, as we have seen, the lands of Daidstoun appear among the lands of the parish, and in 1644 were inherited by Master Thomas Rig of Athernie from William Rig his father.¹⁵

In 1557 David bishop of Ross granted to his brother Robert Leslie his lands in Ferindonald and Ardmanoch, including the lands of Vdwall, the grantee paying yearly for the latter 6 marks 6 shillings and 8 pence with 28s. 11d. as grassum, 8 bolls of ferme victual, the half of a custom mart, 2 muttuns, 12 poultry, 2 kids, 40 eggs valued at 6d., 2 bolls of custom oats, and 1 boll of 'suggarunne' oats.¹ In the same year Queen Mary confirmed the grant.² In 1578 and 1585, as we have seen, Vddall is enumerated among the lands of the parish that paid tithes to the dean of Ross.³

The burgh of Cromarty (Crumbaughtyn) existed in the year 1263, when it appears to have had two provosts or aldermen (prepositi).⁴ In 1296 the Knights Templars had probably some property in the burgh, which King Edward I. by a mandate addressed to the sheriff of Crumbhantyn ordered to be restored to the Master on swearing fealty.⁵ In 1315 King Robert Bruce granted the burgh of Crumbathay, with all the burgesses, liberties, and pertinents, within and without it, to Sir Hugh of Ross the son and heir of William Earl of Ross, reserving to the King the custom called 'malatout.'⁶ In the Inverness Museum is an old seal or cocket, supposed to be of the reign of King Robert II. (1371-1390), and bearing the name of the burgh, Chrombte.⁷ In 1472 William Urquhart was infeft in the burgh of Cromarty on a precept by John Earl of Ross.⁸ In 1483 appears in record Thomas Rede bailie of Cromarty, and in 1492 David Dunnone bailie of the same burgh.⁹ In 1505 King James IV. granted to Andro Aytoun captain of the castle of Striueling the customs of all the burghs and bounds between Banf and Orkney, for the yearly payment of £50 to the King's comptroller and others.¹⁰ In 1533 appear in record Alexander Clwnes, Alexander Forbes, and Thomas Duff, burgesses of Cromarty.¹¹ In 1555 Queen Mary granted to Sir John Denvne a remission for the cruel slaughter of John Maltby dwelling in the Newtoun of Cromarty.¹² Till about this period the burgh of Cromarty stood upon ground now covered by the sea, and before the end of the century another (apparently the 'Newtoun' above mentioned) had been formed farther from the sea, and to the eastward of the present town.¹³ Its cross, bearing the date 1578, still exists.¹⁴ In 1592 among a number of articles referred by parliament to the privy council there was one entitled 'Ane article anent the heaven and port of Cromertie.'¹⁵ In 1593 King James VI. confirmed the privileges of the burgh of Cromarty as a royal burgh, and confirmed anew to the provost and magistrates the burgh lands, namely, those lying between the lands of Murehead, Boghous, and Bogs of Fernes, belonging to the sheriff of Cromarty, on the west—the lands of Ethie and the sea on the south—and the sea on the east and north—with the haven, raid, and harbour of the burgh in all places within the 'craiges callit the Sowteris.'¹⁶

In 1599, as we have seen, Thomas Urquhart was served heir to his grandfather Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromerthie in the yearly revenues of the burgh.¹ In 1641 King Charles I. confirmed the charter granted in 1593 by King James VI.² In 1670 the town council alienated their lands to Sir John Urquhart of Cromarty for 5000 marks Scots and a yearly feu duty of 20 marks.³ In 1672 they represented to Parliament that for a long time there had been no trade within the burgh, and that through the imposition of many burdens it was both impoverished and depopulated; and requested leave to demit their freedom and privileges as a royal burgh.⁴ The request was granted, and Cromarty ordered to be expunged from the rolls of parliament, and no more to be accounted a royal burgh.⁵ From that period the town appears to have gradually sunk into an inconsiderable village till about the year 1750, when its trade revived and its site was changed as at present.⁶ The site of the original burgh, of which the last vestige disappeared in the present century, is now covered every tide by two fathoms of water, but seems to be still marked by the 'Clach Malacha' (or Malloch), a large stone now a quarter of a mile from the shore, but in the seventeenth century surrounded by cornfields and clumps of wood.⁷ Its successor is now represented by a road to the east of the present town bounded by fences and a few old houses, formerly its main street, and still known as the Old Causeway.⁸

In 1292 King Edward I. ordered Thomas of Braytoft, keeper of the castles of Invernar and Crumbarthyn, to deliver them up to King John Balliol.⁹ The castle of Cromarty is traditionally said to have been besieged by the English in the time of Sir William Wallace, who is believed to have raised the siege.¹⁰ It was probably granted, though not expressly mentioned, with the sheriffdom to Sir Hugh of Ross in 1315, and to Adam of Urquhart before 1349, and thenceforward held by the Urquharts as sheriffs and barons of Cromarty.¹¹ In 1557 Andrew (Thomas) Urquhart sheriff of Cromarty is said to have died 'in his own palace.'¹² In 1599, as we have seen, Thomas Urquhart was served heir to his grandfather Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromerthie in the lands and barony of Cromarty with the Castlehill called the Mothill of the same.¹³ In 1643 Heu Ros of Tollie with two of his servants are said to have died suddenly 'in ane chamber in the castell of Cromartie.'¹⁴ The castle stood on an angle of the terrace above the present town on the east side of a deep ravine.¹⁵ It was built in the old turreted style, and defended on the south by a moat and high wall.¹⁶ It was taken down in 1772, and in the surrounding ground were found human skeletons and urns containing human remains, both enclosed in graves made of flags.¹⁷ The lintel of one of its fire-places, preserved at Kinbeakie in Resolis, bears the date 1651, the initials of Sir Thomas Urquhart, the names and eras of some of his supposed ancestors, and several curious devices.¹⁸

Close to the town stood an eminence called the Courthill (apparently now removed), on which the sheriff courts were held in early times.¹

To the west of the present town is another eminence, having a hollow known as the Witch's Hole, and at one time the place of execution.²

The highest part of the Southern Sutor is still named the Gallowhill, and the remains of a cairn which crown it retain the name of the Gallows.³

On a hill behind the town a spot marked by a few shapeless hillocks is supposed to have been the scene of a battle between the English and Sir William Wallace, who is said to have laid an ambush for his enemies in a marshy hollow 4 miles south of Cromarty still known as Wallace' Slack.⁴ The battle is supposed to be mentioned by Blind Harry, the biographer of Wallace, in the following lines—

Wallace raid throu the northland into playne
At Crummade feill Inglismen thai slew
The worthi Scottis till hym thus couth persew
Returnd agayne and come till Abirdeyn
With his blith ost upon the Lammes ewyn.⁵

In the higher parts of the parish, and extending into the neighbouring parishes, is an extensive moor covered with numerous tumuli, supposed to mark the scene of a battle; and within the parish is the site of an encampment supposed to be Danish.⁶ At the east end of the moor about 6 miles from Cromarty is a large heap of stones known as the Grey Cairn.⁷ Near it was another long since destroyed.⁸

THIS parish, extending from near Fortrose to the burn of Ethic, has in its southern part a sandy coast which includes the Ness of Chanonry about a mile in length, and in its northern part a bold rocky coast diversified by perpendicular precipices and wild ravines.¹⁴ From the shore it slopes at some parts to the top of the Mulbuy, and in the interior it is generally arable.¹⁵

The origin of the church of Rosmarky is ascribed to Saint Boniface surnamed Queretinus, an Italian who in the seventh or eighth century is said to have come into Scotland for the purpose of inducing the church there to conform to the practice of the church of Rome, and, after founding churches in many parts of the country, to have settled at Rosmarky, and to have built there a church, in which he was afterwards buried.¹⁶ The church does not appear in any known record from the period of its foundation till the year 1510, in which it is mentioned in the Aberdeen Breviary as the burial-place of Saint Moloc.¹⁷ In 1529 appears in record Sir William Gray vicar of Rosmarky deceased.¹⁸ In 1546 Queen Mary presented Sir Thomas Stevinsoun to the vicarage of Rosmerky, vacant by the decease of Sir Thomas Gray, or by his resignation, or in any other way whatsoever.¹⁹ In 1549 the same queen presented George Dunbar to the vicarage, vacant or when vacant by the resignation of Sir Thomas Stevinsoun.²⁰ Between 1561 and 1566 a fourth of the teinds of Rosmarky belonged to the chancellor of Ross, a fourth to the treasurer, and a fourth to the dean.²¹ At the same period the vicarage was held by George Dunbar parson of Kilmowr (Wester), and apparently the presentee of 1549.²² Between 1569 and 1571 William

Hay was reader at Channonrie; in 1570 the reader was James Buschart; in 1574 Master John Robertsoun was minister at Chanonrie or Rosmarkny, and at Cromartie, and William Hay was reader at the Chanonrie or Rosmarkny; and in 1576 Alexander bishop of Ross was minister, and William Hay reader at Chanonrie and Rosmarkny.¹

The bishoprick of Ross was founded by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, at which period Macbeth its first bishop (Rosmarkensis episcopus) appears in record.² The bishop's seat was perhaps originally at Rosemarkie, from which the bishoprick continued to be occasionally named down to the middle of the thirteenth century, when the original name seems to have finally given place to that of bishoprick of Ross.³ Among the items of the King's revenue accounted for in 1263 by Laurence le Grant sheriff of Innernes were the King's silver (fnis) paid by the bishop of Ross, amounting for that year to 10 marks, and the profits (lucra) of the justiciar in Ros, amounting to £4, 10s., exclusive of the bishop's tithe, which was 10s.⁴ In 1329 the abbot of Dunfermline, depositary of the money ordained pro pace (for fulfilling the stipulations of the Treaty of Northampton, 1328) accounted to the King's exchequer for the sum of £71, 11s. 1d. received for the bishoprick of Ross.⁵ From that period till near the end of the fifteenth century there seems to be almost no recorded notice of the bishoprick, except in the case of its successive rulers.⁶ John Fraser is alleged to have been appointed bishop in 1485; the bishop in 1487 was Thomas the founder of the collegiate church of Tain; and in 1499 there is on record a precept of King James IV. for the admission of John bishop of Ross (apparently John Fraser) to the temporality of the bishoprick, 'the aith of fidelite ressauit of befor.'⁷ In 1507 (1 May) that king granted for a year to Sir Robert Fresale dean of Ross, Alexander Fresale, and James Makysoun, the executors of the deceased John bishop of Ross, the temporality of the lands and possessions of the bishoprick, with power to sublet and to hold courts, with all other liberties.⁸ In the same year (17 August) he granted a precept of admission to the temporality of the bishoprick in favour of Master Robert Cokburn.⁹ In 1516 King James V. granted a letter of protection to Robert bishop of Ross, 'quhilk passis in the Kingis ambassiate and seruice to the King of France and vthir princes in the parts beyond sey,' and to 33 persons his kinsmen, friends, and servants — the letter to be valid for 6 months, or for 15 days after the return of the ambassador, who carried with him two letters 'of credence' written in French and sealed with the privy seal of Scotland.¹⁰ In 1524 (16 September) the same king granted a precept of admission to the temporality of the bishoprick in favour of James bishop of Ross.¹¹ In 1539 (23 June) he granted a similar precept in favour of Robert bishop of Ross.¹² Between the years 1561 and 1566 the following rental of the bishoprick was of Ross and its patrimony.¹ In 1567, for the good service done to her deceased mother and to herself by the same 'Seinzeoure Francisco,' she confirmed the grant.² In 1568 King James VI. confirmed to Gilbert Dowglas the brother german of Frances Dowglas of Borg a grant for life made to him (3 February 1565) of a yearly pension of £200 Scots out of the fruits of the bishoprick of Ros, to be paid 'be the bischop or intrantis quhilkis suld happin than to be prouidit thairto be oure Souerane Lordis moder or be ony vthiris quhatsumeuir'—the grant and the confirmation to be valid 'nochtwithstanding the proces of forfaltour led aganis Johnne now bischop of Ros for certane crymes of tressoun and lesemaestie committit be him.'³ In 1569 the same king confirmed to 'Seigneoure Francisco de Busso' the grant of 1565 and the confirmation of 1567.⁴ In 1570 (15 November), for the good service done by Alexander Suthirland during the regency of James Earl of Murray and afterwards, the King (James VI.) granted to Alexander for life a yearly pension of 80 bolls of victual out of two-thirds of the bishoprick of Ross, then vacant by the forfeiture of Bishop John for treason and lesemajesty—and, as security for payment he granted him the teind victuals of certain lands in the parish of Tarbert extending yearly to 80 bolls of victual, 'without preiudice of the said Alexanderis execution vpon the reddiest vthir fruitis of the said bischoprik in cais he be not thankfullie ansuerit of the saidis fruitis assignit.'⁵ In the same year (21 December) the same king, for the good service done to his 'guidschir and regent' by Robert Leslie of Arthourseir, granted to him for life a yearly pension of £103, 11s. 4d. Scots, together with 300 'laidis of peittis' out of the fruits of the bishoprick of Ros, and, as security, the dues of the lands of Arthourseir and others belonging to the bishoprick.⁶ In 1571 the same king granted in heritage to Henrie Lord Methuen the escheat of all the goods and dues of the bishoprick, its lands and its churches, remaining due since the forfeiture of John bishop of Ros for treason and lesemajesty.⁷ In 1572 (6 January) he confirmed his grant of 1570 to Robert Leslie of Arthourseir.⁸ In the same year (20 February), on the narrative that the presentation of a bishop to the see of Ross after the forfeiture of Bishop John, and certain other privileges, had been promised by the regents Murray and Lennox to Donald Gormsoun of Sky, King James VI. after the decease of both regents granted in lieu a yearly pension of 1000 marks Scots out of the fruits of bishoprick of Abirdene forfeited by Bishop William.⁹ In 1578 the same king granted in heritage to Henrie Lord Methuen the temporality of the bishoprick of Ros, and the castle, house, and place of Channonrie, with all pertinents, vacant by the decease of Alexander bishop of Ros, until a bishop should be appointed.¹⁰ In 1579, for the good service done to him by Alexander Ruthven the brother german of his treasurer William Lord Ruthven, King James granted to Alexander for life a yearly pension of £200 Scots out of the fruits of the bishoprick of Ros, resigned by Gilbert Douglas the brother german of Frances Douglas of Boirg.¹¹ In 1585 (19 May) the same king granted in heritage to Henrie Lord Methuen, the son and apparent heir of the deceased lord of that name, the temporality of the bishoprick of Ross, and the castle, house, and place of the Channonrie, with the lands, mills, fishings, woods, and all dues belonging to it, in the King's hands by the decease of Alexander bishop of Ross, and formerly granted by the King to the deceased lord from the death of the bishop till another should be appointed.¹ In the same year (28 September) the same king granted for life to Roger Aschtoun for his good service a yearly pension of 400 marks out of the fruits of two-thirds of the bishoprick of Ross or any part of it, in the King's hands by the decease of 'Adam and John Bussois,' and to be paid to him even after a bishop should be appointed.² In 1586 (1 February) the King granted for life to Andrew Wod his comptroller a yearly pension of £200 Scots out of two-thirds of the bishoprick of Ross, beginning in 1585 — and for payment assigned to him 10 chalders of bear at £20 per chaldar out of the fruits of the parish of Tarbert.³ In the same year and on the same day he granted for life to John Fentoun his comptroller's clerk a yearly pension of 200 marks Scots from two-thirds of the same bishoprick, to begin in 1585 — and assigned to him for payment 6 chalders 10 bolls of bear out of the fruits of the same parish.⁴ In the same year (4 March) he granted for life to William Keith the master of his wardrobe a yearly pension of 10 chalders of victual out of two-thirds of the same bishoprick, to begin in the year 1585.⁵

In the year 1226 a controversy between Robert bishop of Ross and John Byseth about the patronage of the church of Kyntalargy was settled as follows — The bishop with the consent of the chapter of Rosmarkyn and his other clergy of Ros quitclaimed to John Byseth and his heirs for their homage his right of patronage, if any; and John Byseth and his heirs quitclaimed to the bishop whatever right they had to the kirkland of the said church; and John Biseth besides, for the purpose of settling the controversy and as an atonement for his own sins (pro redemptione peccatorum suorum) contributed 15 marks of silver to the fabrick of the church of Saint Peter of Rosmarkyn, and a stone of wax yearly from himself and his heirs to the light upon the altar of that church; and the bishop and dean and canons gave John and his heirs an interest in the orisons (omnium orationum suffragiis) which should be perpetually presented in praise of the Lord in that church; and, in order to secure unbroken the future observation of the agreement, there were appended to it the seals of both parties and the seal of the chapter of Rosmarkyn.⁶ In 1227, on the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser, the bishop of Ross gave up the stone of wax thus acquired for the use of the cathedral church of Elgyn.⁷ In 1338 Sir Andrew de Moravia, lord of Bothwell and Avoch, died in Ross and was buried in the 'kyrk cathedrale of Rosmarkyne.'⁸ In 1420 (16 August), in the presence of John bishop of Ross and others, in the 'kyrkeyharde of the ehanoury of Rosmarkyng,' William the Grame, the son and heir of the deceased Henry the Grame, resigned the lands of the barony of Kerdale in Inverness to his overlord Thomas Earl of Moray.¹ In 1494 or 1495 Hugh Ros of Kilrawok, John Ros his son, John Urquhard, Gillepatrik Makfleger, Donald Makevne, John Ros in Financefeild, William Ros, Cristus Makmullmory, John Huchonsoun, Duugal Clerk, John Roy Makhuchone, and Ewin Makevne, slew within the cemetery of the cathedral church of Ross Alexander Nobill, John Nobill, William Gawane (Galkane, or Gollan), and a chaplain named Sir Maurice.² For this crime Hugh Ros appears to have been tried before the circuit court at Inverness, and to have compounded for the sum of £42 to the King, for payment of which Sir Alexander Gordoun of Migmar, Henry Chene of Essilmont, and John the Ross of Auchinlosk, became his sureties.³ In 1495 (8 February) Henry abbot of Cambuskenneth, treasurer to King James IV. granted to those parties a discharge for that sum, which the king had forgiven to Hugh Ross.⁴ In 1498 (26 January) the King granted to Hugh Ross and the other eleven who were art and part in the murder a remission for the same, and for all crimes with which they might be chargeable on that occasion, on condition that they should make amends to the parents and friends of the parties slain.⁵ In 1543 Master Mungo Monypenny archdeacon of Ross, and Sir Thomas Haisty a monk of Bewlie, found surety for their appearance in court to answer for being art and part in the oppression done to Master Gawin Dunbar treasurer of Ross by their coming upon him in company with Robert bishop of Ross and his accomplices within the cathedral church, laying hands upon him, and cruelly wounding him to the effusion of his blood.⁶ In 1546 a charter by Master John Monro, chaplain of Balkny, is given at the cathedral church, with consent of the Queen, the Earl of Aran, and the same Master Mungo or Kentigern dean and vicar-general of Ross.⁷ In 1572 King James VI. granted in heritage to his treasurer William Lord Ruthuen 'the haill leid quhairwith the cathedrall kirk of Ros wes theikit, alsweill principall kirk as queir and ilis thairof, ellis tyrvit, tane of, and disponit vpoun as to be intro-mettit with and in place vnhandillit,' formerly belonging to the bishop and canons, and now in the King's hands, 'throw being of the said cathedrall kirk na paroch kirk, bot ane monasterie to sustene ydill belleis,' and through the forfeiture of the bishop for treason and lese-majesty — with power to 'intromet and tak vp the saidis haill leid theikit vpoun the said cathedrall kirk queir and ylis thairof, ellis tirvit, tane of, and disponit vpoun, as alsua as yit restand vntro-mettit with,' and to sell or otherwise dispose of it at his pleasure.⁸ Bishop Leslie about the year 1578 says that not far from Rosmarky is situated the cathedral church of Ross, named not from the town but from the province.⁹ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Alexander bishop of Ross, granting in heritage to William Robertsoun indweller in the canonry of Ross a piece of land or particate of the cemetery of the cathedral church, partly built and partly waste, extending to the space of 106 feet or 8 'cupill bigging' in length, reckoning 12

A charter of King Alexander II., dated 5 July 1224, is addressed to the bishop of Catanes, the abbot of Kynlos, and the dean of Rosmarkyn.⁵ The last named person was probably Henry dean of Ross or of Rosmarkyn and vicar of Dunbathlach (in Moray), who appears in record in the years 1224 (19 July), 1226, and 1227.⁶ In 1258 and 1280 the dean of Ross appears in record without being named.⁷ Between 1338 and 1350 a charter of Muriel of Roys, the widow of Sir William of Roys lord of Kylrauoke, is witnessed by Master John of Kynkellee dean of Ross.⁸ In 1350 and 1368 Master Alexander dean of Ross appears in record.⁹ In 1389 Master William of Dyngwale was dean of Ross.¹⁰ In 1420 the dean was Sir William Fayrhar, and in 1451 John Caldor.¹¹ In 1478 and 1487 various charters are witnessed by Master Martin Vaus dean of Ross.¹² In 1507 and 1514 appears in record Sir Robert Fresale dean of Ross, who was official in 1514, and is said to have died in 1523.¹³ In 1544 Sir Paul Fresall chaplain was dean of Ross.¹⁴ He had four sons, Donald, Robert, William, and John, who in that year were legitimised by Queen Mary; and Sir Paul's death is recorded to have taken place in 1545.¹⁵ In 1546, 1547, and between 1561 and 1566, Master Kentigern or Mungo Monypenny was dean of Ross, and in the first two of those years vicar general.¹⁶ In 1572 King James VI. granted in heritage to Robert Leslie of Arthourseir the escheat of the goods that belonged to Master Mungo, then rebel and at the horn for non-payment of the third of his deanery for the year 1567 to Patrick Daudisoun 'Ros Herald,' collector of the thirds of the benefices within the bounds of Ros, Sutherland, and Caitnes.¹ In 1576 the same king presented Alexander Vrquhart to the deanery of Ros, then vacant by the demission of Master Mungo Monypenny.² In 1578 the same Alexander dean of Ros granted for life to Walter Vrquhart Sheriff of Cromartie, and for life to his nearest heir, a yearly pension out of the quarter teinds of the parish of Cromartie belonging to the deanery.³ In 1583 he presented Hector Monro, the son of Robert Monro of Foulis, to the deanery, vacant by the deposition of Alexander Vrquhart, or by his abiding at the horn for more than a year and a day, or by his demission from whatever other cause.⁴ In 1584 (22 August) he confirmed two charters— One by the deceased Quintigern Monypenny dean and vicar general of Ross, granting in heritage to Helen Tailzeour, the relict of the deceased Gilbert Dick, the dean's croft lying within the bounds of the canony of Ross between the croft of the rector of Alnes on the east and the croft of the rector of Roschene on the west, and between the lands, manse, or garden of the dean on the north, and the common pasture of the Deanis Pot on the south; and another by dean Alexander Vrquhart, granting in heritage to Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Cromartie his manse and garden lying between his croft which belonged to Donald Vrquhart on the south, the residuum of his manse occupied by William Hay on the east, the King's common road on the north, and the manse of the rector of Roskene on the west, in the earldom and canony of Ross.⁵ In 1585 the same king confirmed dean Alexander's grant of the quarter teinds of Cromartie made to the sheriff in 1578.⁶ In 1607 Thomas Urquhart of Cromertie was served heir to his grandfather Walter sheriff of Cromertie in the manse of the deanery of Ross in the canony with the croft, and a piece or rood of land of the same manse with a stone house built on it, of the extent of 10s. 4d. feuferme.⁷ In 1661, on a petition from Master Patrick Durhame late minister of Ardnaseir, who had been appointed for life to the deanery of Ross, the parliament ordered the heritors and others to pay to him 40 bolls of teind victual with certain customs and silver duty, payable to him as dean out of the teinds of Rosemarkie, which for three years they had paid to the minister of Cromertie.⁸

In 1255 appears in record Master R. of Eglinton chanter of Ross.⁹ In the year 1281 a charter of William Earl of Ros is witnessed by Master Ada of Derlingtun precentor of Ros.¹⁰ Between 1350 and 1372 Sir Isaac Olivar precentor of Ross appears in record.¹¹ In 1451 the precentor was Thomas Fauconer.¹² In 1505, 1513, and 1516 Sir John Calder chanter of Ross appears in record, and in 1520 he was dead.¹³ In 1532 and 1541 the chanter was Sir Walter Stewart, and between 1561 and 1566 Master John Caircroce.¹⁴

Of the chancellors of Ross appear in record, in 1255 Sir R., in 1333 William of Lindors, and in 1451 and 1456 Master Thomas of Lochmalony or Loucholony.¹ In 1520 King James V. granted to Duncan Chalmer chancellor of Ros all the property that belonged to William Wedman and James Crag (the latter residing in Litill Ferry), which was escheat to the King 'throw thare remaning and biding at hame fra our Souerane Lordis oist and army quhilk passit with his derest brothir and counsalour James Erle of Murray in Cathnes for invading and perseving of his rebellis being tharin and putting of gud reule in thai partis.'² The same person, afterwards Master Duncan, and in 1553 official of Ross, appears in record in 1543, 1549, 1553, and 1556.³ At the Reformation he was still chancellor or 'vsufructuare,' and Master David Chalmer was titular.⁴ In 1568 King James VI. granted in heritage to Master James Kirkcaldy, the brother german of Sir William Kirkcaldy of Grange, the escheat of all the goods and of the fruits of all the benefices that belonged to Master David Chalmer, especially the provostry of Creichtoun and the chancellary of Ros, forfeited by him as 'fugitive fra the law, at the horne, or in will' for art and part in the battle of Langsyid, and for art and part in the slaughter of James Balany in Prestoun, James Douglas 'suddart,' and William Purves servitor to Alexander Hume of Manderstoun, at the same place.⁵ Master Duncan Chalmer died in 1571, and in that year (1 July) King James VI. presented Master George Monro to the chancellary of Rois, vacant by the decease of Master Duncan, or by the forfeiture of his pretended successor Master David Chalmer for treason and lese-majesty.⁶ In the same year (4 July) the King granted to Robert Monro of Foulis the escheat of all the goods that belonged to the deceased Master Duncan, and to his pretended successor Master David, who was then rebel and at the horn for non-payment of the third of his benefice to the collectors.⁷ In 1572 the King confirmed the grant of the chancellary to Master George Monro.⁸ In 1585 he confirmed a charter by Master George Monro chancellor of Ross, granting, with consent of Alexander bishop of Ross, the dean, and the canons, to Master John Robert-soun treasurer of Ross and Elizabeth Baillie his wife, and their heirs, with remainder to John's heirs whomsoever, the chancellor's manse with the houses and buildings both built and to be built, and the garden and croft of the same lying contiguously, in the canonry of Ross.⁹ In 1592 the same king granted to Master David Chalmer of Ormound the glebes and manses of the chancellary of Ros.¹⁰ In 1649 Master George Monro, minister of the word of God at the church of Rosmarkie, was served heir to his father Master George, minister at Suddie, in the manse, house, and croft of the same, which of old belonged to the chancellor of Ross within the canonry and bishoprick of the same, of the extent of 46s. 8d. feuferme; and in a piece or perticate of land of the garden or cemetery of the cathedral church of Ross, 72 feet long by 5 ells wide, in the same canonry, of the extent of 6 shillings feuferme.¹¹

In 1227 an agreement respecting the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser, made at Kenedor in Moray between the bishops of Moray and Ross, was subscribed among others by William the treasurer of Rosmarkyn.¹ In 1451 a transumpt of certain charters made in the chapel of Saint Nicolas in the cathedral church of Ross is witnessed by Thomas Tulloch treasurer.² In 1518 is recorded the death of Thomas Heriot treasurer of Ross.³ In 1543 the treasurer was Master Gawin Dunbar, the subject of an affray in the cathedral church above described.⁴ Master Gavin died in 1546, and in that year (13 September) Queen Mary presented Master John Hammiltoun of Mylburne to the treasurership, vacant by Master Gauin's decease.⁵ The same Master John appears as treasurer in 1547, and was dead in 1548, in which year (22 April) Queen Mary presented John Robesoun to the treasurership, vacant by the decease of the former.⁶ Master John Robertsoun was treasurer at the Reformation, when the treasurership was leased to Matthew Hamiltoun of Mylneburne.⁷ In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the same Master John, granting in heritage to Donald Reid the treasurer's croft in the canony lying between the croft and garden of the chancellor of Ross on the west, and the croft of the chanter on the east, and between the treasurer's principal dwelling on the south and the hill called Craiglaw on the north—and also a piece of the treasurer's manse on the east side extending to 20 ells in breadth and destroyed to the foundation, lying between his croft on the north and the King's common road on the south, and between the manse of the precentor of Ross on the east and the residuum of the treasurer's manse on the east (west?)⁸ In 1585 the same king confirmed a charter by the same treasurer, granting in heritage to Thomas Orok in the canony of Ross and Bessy Gardin his wife a piece of the manse of the treasury lying in the canony and extending in length and breadth respectively to 20 ells, between the King's common road on the south, the principal manse of the treasury on the north, the part of the manse formerly let to Donald Reid on the east, and the entrance to the manse on the west.⁹ In 1586 the same king confirmed two charters by the same Master John Robertsoun treasurer of Ross—1. Granting in heritage to Archibald Hammiltoun dwelling in Linlithgow a part of the manse of the treasury within the canony, lying between the croft of the treasury occupied by William Robertsoun in the canony towards the north, another part of the said manse occupied by Robert Leslie on the east, the manse of the chancellor on the west, and another piece of the manse of the treasury let to Thomas Robertsoun in the canony on the south; and 2. Granting in liferent to Robert Leslie in the canony and Margaret Robertsoun his wife, and in heritage to John Leslie their son, with remainder to the other lawful heirs of Robert and Margaret and their heirs, and to John Robertsoun the brother of Margaret and his heirs whomsoever, a part of the land of the treasury of Ross on the east side of the same extending to 20 ells, lying in the canony between the precentor's manse on the east and the residuum of the treasury manse on the west, and extending in

In 1487 the foundation charter of the collegiate church of Tain was witnessed among others by Thomas Ros subdean of Ross.² In 1494 during the vacancy of the see King James IV. presented Master James Forster to the subdeanery.³ In the same year (3 July) that king prosecuted Master John Maitland for contempt of his authority and violation of the acts of parliament in having passed to the court of Rome without the King's license, and in having obtained the subdeanery of Ross and published certain bulls contrary to the royal prerogative, by which acts he had incurred the penalties of proscription and banishment—and also for disturbing Master James Forster in his possession of the subdeanery.⁴ Master John protested against the auditors, but produced no exculpatory evidence; and the Lords of Council ordained that meantime Master James Forster should enjoy the benefice, and assigned to him and to the King's advocates the eighth day of August following to prove that Master John Maitland had acted contrary to statute and in what manner.⁵ In the year 1549 Pope Paul III., with the consent of Master John Thorntoun subdean of Ros and Master James Thorntoun parson of Anerum, granted for life to Master Henry Thorntoun a yearly pension of £100 Scots out of the fruits of the subdeanery, and of a like sum out of those of the parsonage of Anerum.⁶ Between 1561 and 1566 Master James Thorntoun was subdean of Ros.⁷ In 1569 (14 November) Master John Thorntoun was dead, and King James VI. confirmed the grant of 1549.⁸ In 1578 that king presented William Makquene parson of Assent to the subdeanery of Ros, vacant by the decease of Master James Thorntoun.⁹ In 1583 he confirmed a grant in heritage by the same William, to William Barbour in the canony, of his manse of the subdeanery with all its pendicles, pertinents, houses, gardens, and buildings, and the kiln (vstrina) and its croft lying contiguous to the manse, in the canony of Ross.¹⁰

In 1296 John of Hedlam subchanter of the church of Ros swore fealty to King Edward I.¹¹ In 1514 a mandate of Robert Fresel dean and official of Ross is witnessed by Anselm Robertsoun (Roberti) the subchanter.¹² In 1541 and between 1561 and 1566 Master David Haliburtoun was subchanter of Ross.¹³ In 1573 King James VI. presented Donald Adamesoun minister at Vrray to the parsonage of Vrray or subchantry of Ross, vacant by the deprivation or forfeiture of Master David Halyburtoun.¹⁴ In 1574 that king confirmed a charter by Master David Halyburtoun, provost of the collegiate church of Methuen and subchanter of the cathedral church of Ross, granting with the consent of the bishop, dean, vicar general, and canons, to Donald Vrqhart in Ferrietoun and his heirs the manse with the houses, buildings, gardens, tofts, and crofts, belonging to the subchantry, then occupied by John Frissell and John Wilsoun, in the city of the canony of Ross, between the chanter's manse on the west, the Watergate

Robert archdeacon and canon of Ross appears in record in 1226 and 1227, and in the latter year was present at Kenedor in Moray at the settlement of a dispute between the bishops of Moray and Ross.⁴ Between 1362 and 1372 charters are witnessed by Thomas of Urchard archdeacon of Ross.⁵ In 1451 the archdeacon of Ross was Andrew of Monro, who was also commissioner of the bishop and auditor of consistorial cases.⁶ In 1484 Sir David Lichtone archdeacon of Ross and clerk of the King's treasury was elected abbot of Arbroath.⁷ In 1487 the archdeacon was Richard Murhed, one of the witnesses to the foundation charter of the collegiate church of Tain.⁸ In 1510 King James IV. granted a letter of protection to Master Robert Elphinstoun archdeacon of Ross.⁹ In 1543 the archdeacon was Master Mungo Monypenny, afterwards dean.¹⁰ Between 1561 and 1566 the archdeacon of Ross was Master Duncan (Donald?) Fraser.¹¹ In 1572 Master Donald Fraser archdeacon of Ross was slain at Awfurd.¹² In 1573 King James VI. presented Robert Grahame to the archdeaconry, vacant by the decease of Master Donald Fraser.¹³ In 1576 that king confirmed a charter by William Sinclare rector of Olrik, canon of Cathanes, and commissioner and vicegerent of the deceased Henry bishop of Ross, granting to the deceased Master Donald Fraser archdeacon of Ross and his nearest heirs, with remainder to his heirs whomsoever, the lands and town of Mureheid, with their pertinents except the lands of Craighaid, in the diocese of Ross—with the clause inserted by the bishop at the foot of the charter, confirming it under his seal and subscription.¹⁴ In 1581 the same king confirmed a charter by Robert Grahame archdeacon of Ross, granting to William Stewart in the canony of Ross and Besset Irving his wife, and to their heirs born between them, with remainder to the heirs of William, his portion of the manse of the archdeaconry within the canony, with the houses, buildings, gardens, and others, constructed or to be constructed by them.¹⁵ In 1582 King James confirmed a charter by Master Donald Fraser archdeacon of Ross, granting to Donald Reid chaplain in the cathedral church for life, and to Alexander Reid his natural son, and his heirs male, with remainder to John Reid the brother german of Alexander and to his heirs male, and to the heirs male whomsoever of Donald Reid, that piece of land of his manse

Granting in heritage to William Robertsoun, dwelling in the canony and college of Ross, and to Eufame Basok his wife, a piece of the lands of the manse of the archdeaconry in the canony occupied by William, and extending to 65 measured ells in length, namely, from the common road called the 'calsay' on the east to the archdeacon's croft on the west, and 14 ells in breadth, namely, from the principal manse of the rector of Kirkmichell on the south to the other side of the archdeacon's manse on the north; and 2. Granting to the same parties in heritage a croft of land in the canony called the archdeacon's croft, occupied by Helen Tailzeour.² In 1584 the same king confirmed another charter by the deceased Master Donald Fraser the archdeacon, granting to Thomas Legat and Elisabeth Besck his wife, and to their heirs born between them, with remainder to the heirs whomsoever of Thomas, a piece of the land of the archdeacon's manse in the canony, between the King's common road in front on the north, the lands of William Robertsoun on the south, the King's common road and the archdeacon's lands occupied by Donald Reid on the east, and the archdeacon's lands occupied by James Fraser on the west—which piece of land was then occupied by Thomas Legat and John Patersoun, or was at least in their hands by reason of a lease granted to them for 19 years.³ In 1585 King James confirmed a charter by John Fraser feuar, with the consent of Isobel Marlioun liferenter, granting in heritage to his brother german William Fraser the west piece of the manse of the archdeaconry, with the houses, gardens, and buildings of the same, lying between the croft of the archdeaconry then belonging in heritage to William Robertsoun towards the west, the garden of the same William Robertsoun towards the south, a part of the said manse of John Fraser towards the east, and the King's common road, commonly called the 'calsay,' on the north.⁴ In 1627 Kenneth Grant was served heir to his father Robert Grant, burgess of the canony, in the principal stone house of the archdeaconry of Ros with part of the garden of the archdeaconry lying in the canony, of the extent of 7s. and 4d. in augmentation—in another part of the archdeacon's manse in the canony, of the extent of 6s. 8d. and 4d. in augmentation—and in the fifth part of the lands of Bromehill with the tithes, also in the canony, and of the extent of £6.⁵

In 1226 an agreement between Robert bishop of Ross and John Byseth was witnessed by the canons of Rosmarkyn.⁷ In 1227 a settlement made between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser was subscribed by Robert bishop and canon of Ross, Robert archdeacon and canon of the church of Ross, Edward Beket canon of Ross, Archebald canon of Ross, Maurice canon of Rosmarkyn and parson of Ardrosser, and Peter canon both of Moray and of Ross.¹ In the year 1296 Thomas of Iar prebendary of the church of Ros swore fealty to King Edward I.² In 1312 an agreement between Bernard abbot of Abirbrothoc and Rayner the son of Alan was witnessed among others by Thomas of Salthor canon of Ross.³ Between 1338 and 1357 a charter of Muriel of Roys was witnessed by Master Andrew de Bosco canon of Ross.⁴ In 1398 Robert M'Chanter (Cantoris) witnessed among others a protest by William bishop of Moray against a sentence pronounced on him for not giving suit at the sheriff court of Innernys.⁵ There appear in record, in 1451 Thomas of Dyngvale, in 1514 John Fresell, in 1524 Alexander Dunbar, and in 1546 Sir John Stephenson, canons of Ross.⁶ Besides the dignitaries the chapter in later times seems to have included the rectors of Kirkmichael, Cullicuddin, Kiltearn, Lumlair, Logie Easter, Roskene, Alnes, Contin, Avoch, Kilmuir Easter, and Kincardine.⁷

In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Master Thomas Marioribanks rector of Kirkmichell intra ecclesiam cathedralem Rossen. fundat., granting in heritage to John Wilsoun in the canonry of Ross a piece of the waste manse (mansi vasti) belonging to Master Thomas, and lying within the bounds of the canonry between the lands of William Barbour towards the north, the manse of the rector of Cullycuddin towards the south, the public road on the east, and the seashore on the west.⁸ In 1585 the same king confirmed a charter by the same Master Thomas, rector of Carmichaell within the cathedral church of Ross, granting, with consent of the dean and canons during the vacancy of the see, to William Robertsoun dwelling in the canonry and Eufame Basak his wife and their heirs, with remainder to William's heirs whomsoever, a waste piece of ground of the manse of the rectory within the canonry on its north side, 5 ells or thereby in length, lying between the manse on the south, the manse of the archdeacon on the north, the street commonly called the 'calsay' and the common ferry (commune passagium) on the east, and the high water mark (fluxum maris) on the west.⁹ In 1586 the same king confirmed a charter by the same rector, granting in heritage to Walter Vrquhart sheriff of Cromartie his principal house and manse of Kirkmichall, with its enclosure, garden, and tail, then almost destroyed to the foundation, waste, and burned, lying in the canonry of Ross between the feu lands (terras feudales) of William Robertsoun, which he held in heritage of the rector, towards the north, the feu lands of William Barbour towards the south, the common road on one side (towards the east?), and the seashore on the west—for the restoration, construction, and repair of the same house and manse, and of its enclosure, garden, and ditches.¹⁰

In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter of Master John Sandilandis rector of Kilterne, granting to Gavin Reid carpenter in Innernes the houses of the manse of Kilterne, with the garden and pertinents, then occupied by Thomas Smyth.¹¹ In 1583 he confirmed a charter by Sir John Sadserf vicar of the parish church of Kilterne, granting, with consent of Master

In 1584 (4 February) King James VI. confirmed a charter by Henry Kineaid, rector of the parish church of Lymnolair and canon of the cathedral church of Ross, granting to Master John Robertsoun treasurer and his wife Elisabeth Baillie and their heirs, with remainder to John's heirs whomsoever, the croft called Lymnolair lying within the bounds of the canonry.² In the same year (15 February) he confirmed a charter by the same Henry, granting to John Irving and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his heirs male whomsoever, the tenement and manse with the garden called 'the personis of Lumlair' in the canonry of Ros, situated between the lands of the rector of Roskein on the east and the lands of the same John on the west and north respectively.³

In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Master Thomas Hay rector of Logie, granting to John Irving burghess of Rosmarkie and Margaret Cumming his wife, and to John's male heirs, the croft of the rectory of Logie in the canonry, earldom, and diocese of Ross.⁴ In 1619 Thomas Irwing was served heir to his father Andrew Irwing in the canonry of Ross in the manse of the rectory of Logie in the canonry, with the garden of the same, of the extent of 6s. 8d.⁵

In 1584 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the deceased Gavin Dunbar rector of Roschene, granting in heritage to Helen Tailzeour the relict of the deceased Gilbert Dick a croft lying in the canonry of Ross between the croft of the dean on the east and the croft belonging to the rector of Lymnolair on the west, the common pasture of Deanis Pot on the south and the garden of the said Gavin on the north.⁶ In 1607 Thomas Urquhart of Cromertie was served heir to his grandfather Walter Urquhart sheriff of Cromertie in the croft of the rectory of Roskein with a piece of land called the Rig in the Field 'lie Middilschede' within the canonry, of the extent of 10 shillings feuferme.⁷ In 1621 George Dunbar was served heir to his father James Dunbar of Newtoun in the manse and garden of the rector of Roskene in the canonry of Ross, of the extent of 2s. 4d.⁸

The rector of Alnes had a croft in the canonry lying on the east side of the dean's croft.⁹

In 1587 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Master Robert Burnet vicar of Cowtane, granting in heritage to John Irving in the canonry of Ross the manse of the vicarage lying between the manse of the vicar of Kilmure on the east, the manse of Kincardin on the west, the common road on the south, and the common vennel descending between the vicar's manse and the Middilschede on the north.¹⁰

In 1621 George Dunbar was served heir to his father James Dunbar of Newtoun in the manse and garden of Kilmuir Easter in the canonry of Ross, of the extent of 2s. 4d.⁴

In 1624 Duncan Bayne of Logye, the son of the deceased Alexander Bane by his wife Agnes Fraser, was served heir male to his grandfather Alexander Bayne of Tullich in the manse of the rectory of Kincairdyne in the canonry of Ross, of the extent of a penny blench ferme.⁵

The church of Rosmarky, dedicated to Saint Boniface, stood in the town of Rosmarky on a bank of sand near the sea shore.⁶ In repairing it in 1735 there were found in a vault under an ancient steeple some stone coffins of rude workmanship.⁷ A new church was built in 1821 on the same site.⁸ A well at Rosmarkie is still known as Saint Boniface' Well.⁹

The cathedral church, dedicated to Saint Peter and Saint Boniface, stood at the canonry (now Fortrose) about a mile west from the parish church.¹⁰ When entire, it consisted of choir and nave with aisles, eastern Lady chapel, western tower, and chapterhouse at the north-east end; its remains consist of 'the south aisle to chancel and nave, and the detached chapterhouse,' all in the Middle-pointed style.¹¹ The seal of the chapter, now used as that of the burgh, bears the figures of Saint Peter and Saint Boniface, and the inscription SIGILLVM SANCTORVM PETRI ET BONEFACII DE ROSMARKIN.¹² A large old bell, now hung in a modern spire, bears the name of Thomas Tulloch bishop of Ross, the date 1460, and an inscription intimating its dedication to the Virgin Mary and Saint Boniface.¹³

In the cathedral church was a number of chaplainries, the chaplains of which held some lands and revenues in common. In 1451 two chaplains (apparently of the cathedral), Sir John Yonge and Sir David Faw, witnessed a transumpt of certain charters made within it.¹⁴ In 1504 John bishop of Ross granted, and King James IV. confirmed to the chaplains of the cathedral church of Ross a yearly revenue of £10 from a tenement of land in the burgh of Linlithgw.¹⁵ Among the particulars of the rental of assumptions, given in by Bishop Henry Sinclair at the Reformation to the collector of thirds, are stated 13½ muttons as given to the 'cheplane of the bishopruck.'¹⁶ In 1580 King James VI. granted in heritage to Robert Grahame the three crofts of land called the lands of the chaplains of the cathedral church of Ross and belonging to the chaplains and

There was a chapel in the cathedral church dedicated to Saint Nicolas, in which in the year 1451 a transumpt of certain charters produced by John Ross lord of Balnagowan was made in presence of Andrew Munro archdeacon of Ross.²

In 1512 King James IV. granted anew to William Makculloch of Pladdis certain lands resigned by him (including Balmuduthy, or Baillieduich), for payment of the usual services and of 5 marks Scots yearly to a perpetual chaplain officiating in the cathedral church of Ross.³ In 1621 John Barbour was served heir to his father William Barbour in the canony of Ross in the lands of the chaplainry of Ballacuithe founded within the canony, of the extent of 33s. 4d., and in lands of the sowing of 3 firlots of bear in the croft called Grantiscroft in the canony of Ross and burgh of Rosemarkie.⁴

In 1529 (18 May and 22 June) King James V. presented Sir William Spens to the chaplainry founded by the King’s predecessors in the cathedral church of Ross on £5 of yearly revenue from the lands of Ardifaly (or Arthifale) in the lordship of Ardmanach assigned to that chaplainry, when it should be vacant by the resignation of Sir John Spens.⁵ In 1537 the same king presented Sir Patrick Hay to the chaplainry of Ardorfaily in the cathedral church of Ross, vacant by the decease of Sir William Spens.⁶ In 1543 Sir Patrick Hay, styled chaplain of the chaplainry of Ardewalie in the diocese of Ross, with the consent of Queen Mary, of the Earl of Arran, and of Robert bishop of Ross, granted to John Chalmer the kirklands of the chaplainry with all their pertinents, extending in his rental to 10 marks Scots, 2 muttuns, and 2 dozen of poultry, for the yearly payment of £7 Scots and the other dues, in augmentation of the rental by 6s. 8d.⁷ In 1546 Queen Mary presented Sir David Barchan to the chaplainry of Ardinfall in the cathedral church of Ross, vacant or when vacant by the demission or decease of Sir Patrick Hay.⁸ Between 1561 and 1566 Sir David Barquhan held the chaplainries

In 1547 Queen Mary presented Master Thomas Ker to the chaplainry and altarage of Obstule in the cathedral church of Ross, vacant by the decease of Sir John Stevinsoun.¹⁰ Between 1561 and 1566 the chaplainry called Obstull in the diocese of Ross was held by Master John Dumbar parson of Cumnok, and by him leased to George Monro of Dalcarty.¹¹ In 1583 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Hector Monro chaplain of the chaplainry of Obstuill in the earldom of Ross, granting, with the consent of Robert Monro of Foulis the patron of the same, to George Monro the patron's son the town and lands of Obstuill, with the boat, fishing, and yair of the same, belonging to the chaplainry.¹ In 1635 Hugh Lord Fraser of Lovat was served heir male to his father Symon Lord Fraser in various subjects including the superiority and advowson of the chaplainry of Obstuill and the salmon fishing of the same in the earldom of Ros.²

In 1549 Queen Mary presented George Dunbar, as we have seen, to the vicarage of Roismerky; and at the same time she presented him to the chaplainry of the chapel of Saint John of Ellen; both in the diocese of Ross and vacant by the demission of Sir Thomas Stevensoun.³

In 1574 King James VI. granted for seven years to Patrick Dunbar the son of George Dunbar of Avach, 'in support of his sustentatioun at the scule,' the chaplainry of Drimmen in the diocese of Ross, situated in the chapel of Saint Boneface, vacant by the decease of Sir Donald Reid, and not exceeding in yearly value the sum of 20 marks Scots.⁴ In 1580 the same king granted for seven years to John Dunbar the son of George Dunbar of Avache for the same purpose the same chaplainry, styled of Drummis, vacant 'be ressoun the gift maid be his Hienes to Patrick Dunbar student and bursar in grammer of the said chaplanerie for the space of sevin yeiris is alredie expyrit and furthrun.'⁵ In 1584 he confirmed a grant of the churchlands of the chaplainry of Drum in the diocese and earldom of Ross, made by Sir Homer Fraser the chaplain to Robert Monro of Foulis with the consent of Master Quintigern Monypenny dean and vicar general, and of the canons and chapter.⁶ In 1608 Robert Monro was served heir male of entail and provision to his father Master Hector Monro of Foullis in the lands of the chaplainry of Drummond, with the mill, brewhouse, and brewhouse croft, of the extent of £8, 13s. 4d.⁷

In 1578 King James VI. granted to Thomas Davidsoun the son of John Davidsoun in Edinburch, 'in support of his sustentatioun at the scole for the space of sevin yeiris,' the chaplainry of Nevitie in the diocese of Ross, 'pertenying to the chanrie kirk thairof,' vacant by the decease of Sir Symon Blyth.⁸ In 1580, and again in 1582, he granted to the same Thomas for life the common lands of Navitie, extending to 12 bolls of victual, and formerly belonging to the chaplains of the cathedral church of Ross.⁹ In 1585 (2 June) the same king confirmed a charter by Thomas Ros principal chaplain of Alnes—William Hay, Donald Reid, and John Greirsoun, vicars of the cathedral church of Ross—and Jerome (Hieronimus) Paip and James Vischert chaplains of Cullis and of Alnes—with the consent of John bishop of Ross, and of the dean and chapter—granting to Master David Chalmeris of Casteltoun of Ormont and his heirs the two oxgangs of Navitie in the sheriffdom of Cromartie, lying between the lands of the sheriff of Cromartie on the west, the lands of Thomas Duff on the east, the seashore on the south, and the King's common road or the common pasture of the town of Navitie on the north.¹⁰ In the same year (24 September) King James granted for seven years from 1584 to John Mowat

'for his intertenement at the scules,' the chaplainry of Navitie belonging of old in common to the canons of Ross.¹ In 1592 he granted or confirmed to Master David Chalmer of Ormound the two oxgangs of Nautie in the sheriffdom of Cromertie.² In 1607 William Chalmer apparent of Ormond was served heir male to his father Master David in the same two oxgangs, of the extent of 12 bolls of meal and other dues.³ In 1681 the chaplainry of Navity was included in a confirmation of the barony of Tarbet by King Charles II. in favour of Sir George M'Kenzie of Tarbett and John M'Kenzie his son.⁴

From one of the above notices (1585) it would appear that the chaplainry of Cullis was served within the cathedral church.⁵

The chaplainry of Munloch, noticed above, seems also to have been founded in the cathedral of Ross.⁶

At the Reformation the vicarage of Rosmarky, as given up by Alexander Pedder, procurator for George Dumbar parson of Kilmowr and vicar of Rosmarky, was stated at £20 'quhen all teindis and small offrandis was in vse of payment;' but the vicar had received nothing for three years.⁷ About 1569 William Hay reader at Channonrie had for his stipend 40 marks, and about 1571 he had 50 marks.⁸ In 1570 James Buschart as reader had £20.⁹ In 1574 the minister at Chanonrie or Rosmarkny and Cromartie had a stipend of £118, 10s. 8½d.; and the reader had £20, the kirklands, and other perquisites.¹⁰ In 1576 Alexander bishop of Ross, minister at Chanonrie and Rosmarkny, had for his living two-thirds of his bishoprick; and the reader had £20, the vicar's manse at Rosemarkny, the kirkland, and other perquisites.¹¹

According to the ancient taxation of the thirteenth century the bishoprick of Ross was valued at the yearly sum of £351, 19s. 8½d., which, when taxed at the rate of 5d. per mark, gave £10, 19s. 11¼d. and the half of ¼d.¹² In the Taxatio Seculi xvi. it is taxed at the rate of £248, and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at 1200 marks.¹³ At the Reformation according to the rental already cited the bishoprick was worth yearly £462, 4s. 2d.¹⁴

In Baiamund's Roll the deanery of Ross is taxed at £8; in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.¹⁵ At the Reformation it was stated to the collector of thirds at 20 bolls of victual, of which 5 chalders were paid from the teinds of Ardrosser, and 6 chalders 1 boll from the quarter teinds of Rosmerkin and Crumbathy, together with £35 in money, deducing yearly 20 marks 'to the chorislatt for his fie.'¹⁶

The chantry is taxed in Baiamund at £6, 13s. 4d., and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £20, 13s. 3d.; and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £66, 13s. 4d.¹⁷ The rental of the chantry at the Reformation is thus stated by the chanter—'In victuall viii chalder; in silver

In Baiamund the chancellor is taxed at £8, and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s.; in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £80.² The rental of assumptions between 1561 and 1566 gives us the following statement—‘The rental of the chansellarie of Ros pertenant to Master Duncan Chalmere vsufructuare. The personage of Suddye, the personage and vicarage of Kennetis, with the fourt pairt of the teind shavis of Cromarte and Rosmerkie, sett in assedatioun to Master David Chalmer titular of the samin and Richard Wrwing his factour for the sowme of xiii^{xx} merkis—of the quhilk thair is to be deducit to the vicaris and chaplandis ministaris of the samin the sowme of l merkis.’³

In Baiamund, the Taxatio Sec. xvi., and the Libellus, the treasurership is given at the same sums as the chancellor.⁴ In the rental of the assumption of thirds we have it as follows—‘The rental of the thesaurarie of Ros. Item the fruitis of the said thesaurarie and teind shavis of the samin, videlicet, the kirkis of Logy and Vrquhart, and the quarter of Crumarty and Rosmerky, sett in assedatioun to Mathow Hamiltoun of Myneburne for the sowme of iii^c merkis—of the quhilk thair is to be deducit for the vphold of the kirkis and to the ministaris i^c merkis—and sua restis ii^c merkis.’⁵

The subdeanery is rated in Baiamund at £12, and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £37, 4s.; and in the Libellus it is valued at £120.⁶ The subdean’s prebend consisted of the churches of Tayne and Eddirtane, which at the Reformation yielded together the sum of 300 marks 6s. 8d.⁷

The subchantry is taxed in Baiamund at £4, and in the Libellus Taxationum it is valued at £40.⁸ At the Reformation it was stated at £102, 13s. 4d.⁹

The archdeaconry, taxed in Baiamund at £8, and in the Taxatio Sec. xvi. at £24, 16s., is valued in the Libellus at £80, and in the rental of assumptions at £12, 13s. 4d. and xx chalders of victual.¹⁰

The valuations of the prebends of the other canons are given above under the heads of their respective parishes.¹¹

The chaplainry of Ballacuithe, as we have seen, was of the yearly value of 5 marks Scots.¹²

The chaplainry of Ardifaly, originally of the yearly value of £5, was latterly valued at £7.¹³ At the Reformation the united value of the chaplainries of Saint Laurence and Arfaill, ‘set in few be chartour and seasing,’ was £15.¹⁴

The chaplainry of Drummond appears to have been of the yearly value of £8, 13s. 4d.³

The chaplainry of Navity extended yearly to 12 bolls victual.⁴

The chaplainry of Munloch was probably of the yearly extent of £4.⁵

In 1579 appears in record John Irving of Kynnok.⁶ In the year 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter by the deceased Alexander bishop of Ross, granting to John Irving in the canonry and Margaret Cumyng his wife, and their heirs born between them, with remainder to John's own heirs, the churchlands of Kynnok in the bishoprick of Ross, extending to a half davach.⁷ In 1584 John Irwyng of Kynnok and his wife Margaret again appear in record, and had a house in the canonry.⁸

In 1655 Sir George M'Keinzie of Tarbit Baronet was served heir male to his father Sir George in a fifth part of the lands of Broomhill in the parish of Rosemarkie, of the extent of £6.⁹

The burgh of Rosemarkie, styled by Bishop Leslie about 1578 a very ancient town, is said to have been erected a royal burgh (or burgh of regality?) by 'Alexander King of Scots.'¹⁰ In 1255 a charter by Laurence the soldier (miles), witnessed by several of the clergy of Ross, was given at Rosmarc, apparently the burgh.¹¹ In 1455 'the toun of Forterose callit the Channorie of Rose' was annexed by King James II. to the burgh of Rois-markie.¹² In 1505 King James IV. granted to Andrew Aytoun captain of the castle of Striueling the customs of all the burghs and bounds between Banf and Orkney (a grant which included Rosemarkie), for the yearly payment of £50 to the King's comptroller and others.¹³ In 1506 a charter by the same king is dated 'at Channonry in Ross.'¹⁴ In 1545 Queen Mary appointed Master Thomas Marioribanks burgess of Edinburgh for seven years customer of the burgh of Innernes and within all the bounds of Ros and other counties, he paying yearly the sum of £40 Scots.¹⁵ In 1553 the Queen, on the narrative that the town of Rosmerkie had been of old created a burgh of regality by her predecessors, and had been annexed to the burgh of the Channonry of Ros, and desirous that the inhabitants should provide for the lodging of strangers resorting thither, granted, in favour of David bishop of Ros, that the bailies, burgesses, and inhabitants of Rosmerkie should have within the burgh a market cross, a weekly market on Saturday for all kinds of merchandise and wares, and yearly fairs upon Saint Peter's day (1 August) and All-hallow-day (1 November), and on the octaves of both, with power to the bailies to levy all the customs and make payment of them to the bishop.¹ In 1554 the same queen created the town of Rosmarky a burgh of barony in favour of the bailies, council, and community, the grantees paying yearly to the bishop of Ross the usual burgh fermes, and a wild goose (anser silvestris) or the common price of the same on the entry of every burgess.² In 1555, 1556, 1557, and 1562, charters are given by various persons at the Chanonry of Ross; one of them is witnessed by George Monypenny, Alexander Thomesoun, and Richard Irving, inhabitants of the Chanonry, and another by (apparently) the same Alexander Thomesoun; and two are granted by the bishop, on condition of the grantee performing three suits at the three head courts yearly held at the Chanonry.³ In 1563 Queen Mary granted to John Wyischart burgess of Kirkwall the non-entry and other dues of the crofts and burgh roods beside the town of Rosmerky, extending to three roods or thereby, with the 'outsettis, hous, biggingis, and yairdis,' formerly belonging to the deceased Andrew Wischart his grandfather, provided that no other than his grandfather had been heritably infest in the same.⁴ In 1569 King James VI. granted in heritage to Andrew Monro of Newmoir the escheat of all the goods, cattle, and corn upon the piece of land called the Bischoppis Sched (in the Chanonry), and the quarter lands of Mekill Allane (in Tarbat), which belonged to John formerly bishop of Ross 'of this instant crop and yeir of God im^m veth lxi^x yeiris and sawin to his behuif,' and were forfeited by him for treason and lese-majesty.⁵ In 1590 the same king created Forterose, 'of old called the Channonrie of Rosse,' a royal burgh, with weekly markets on Saturday and Monday, and two yearly fairs, one on Saint Bonniiface day and the other on the day called Pardon day (Easter).⁶ In 1592 he confirmed the union of Forterose and Rosemarkie by King James II.⁷ In 1599 a contract of marriage between Margaret the daughter of William Ros of Kilravok and Murdoch the son of Rorie M'Kenzie of Ardafailie was made at the Chanorie of Ros.⁸ In 1612 King James VI. confirmed the erection of the burgh of Roismarkie and all the privileges granted to it by his predecessors Alexander King of Scots and James II. King of Scots, and also the union of the towns by the latter king—uniting them anew, and granting all the privileges of the burgh of Roismarkie (including the fairs on Saint Peter's and All Saints' days) to the united burgh, which was to be governed by the provost, bailies, and council of the former.⁹ In 1615 Charles Pedder was served heir to his father James Pedder burgess of the Chanonry of Ross in a piece of the common lands of Platecok within the bounds of the college of the Chanonry, of the extent of 8s. ferme.¹⁰ In 1641 King Charles I. confirmed his father's charter of 1612.¹¹ In 1655 Sir George M'Keinzie of Tarbit Baronet was served heir male to his father Sir George in 6 pecks of lands in the Chanonry of Ross and burgh of Rosemarkie, each peck of the extent of 4s. and 2d.¹² In 1661 King Charles II. — considering the ruinous state of the burgh of Rosemarkie then almost depopulated, and the flourishing condition of the burgh of Forterose, which 'is within a rig length to the same old and ruinous burgh, and of a most pleasant stance and situation, and of old the cathedrall seate of the dyocie of Rosse,' and that the latter still retained its privileges as a royal burgh and had been enrolled as such by an act of the parliament then sitting—with the consent of the inhabitants of Rosemarkie, who were to be burgesses of Forterose, confirmed all previous charters and infeftments; ordained that the united towns should thenceforth be called the burgh of Forterose; changed the weekly markets from Saturday and Monday to Tuesday and Friday; and renewed the grants of the yearly fairs, that called Saint Boniface to begin on 16 March, and that called Pardon day to begin on Whitsunday, each continuing for three days, and the fairs formerly held in Rosemarkie on Saint Peter's day and Hallowmes to be held there or at Forterose as the inhabitants of both might think expedient.¹ Fairs are now held at Fortrose on the first Wednesday of April, the third Wednesday of June, and the first Wednesday of November.² The houses of the inhabitants are chiefly the old residences of the canons.³ The old seal of the chapter of Ross, as above stated, is now used as the seal of the burgh of Fortrose.⁴ The cross of Rosemarkie still stands at the west end of the town, and the seal of the burgh, still in existence, bears the legend SIGILLUM COMMUNE BVIRGI DE ROS-MARKYN.⁵

Between the years 1561 and 1566, as we have seen, Henry bishop of Ross complained that his palace, or, as it was called, the house and place of the Chanonry, had been taken and kept from him for nine months by 'broken men,' and that he was therefore compelled to undergo considerable expense in paying men to defend it.⁶ His successor Bishop Leslie about the year 1578 describes it as the bishop's palace, situated not far from the dwellings of the canons, and in splendour and magnificence inferior to few in the country.⁷ In 1578, as above stated, King James VI. granted in heritage to Henry Lord Methuen the temporality of the bishoprick and the 'castle, house, and place of the Chanonrie,' till a new bishop should be appointed.⁸ In 1579 (20 November) the same king remitted to Colin Makeainzie of Kintail, Rodoric Makeainzie his brother german, John Irving of Kynnok, and Donald M'Intagart, all action which he had against them for their violence and treasonable coming with accomplices to the number of 100 or thereby, armed with coats of mail, steel caps (galleris cullibeis), swords, daggers, shields, ordnance great and small (bombardis bombardiculis), spears, lances, axes, bows, arrows, and other instruments of war, on the 22d day of September 1578, to the castle, fortalice, and palace of Channonrie of Ros belonging to the bishoprick, having heard and certainly understood the death of Alexander bishop of Ros, who died on that day, with the fixed purpose and deliberate intention to surprise and take the said castle, fortalice, and peel—so that they the more easily effected their purpose, laid violent hands on the persons of William Irving messenger, Thomas Merschall writer, and John Robertsoun the servitor of the deceased

bishop, who were then in the city of the Channonrie, and caused them to be carried prisoners to the castle called the Reidecastell belonging to Colin Mackcainzie and distant about 10 miles from the Channonrie, detaining them there as prisoners for 24 hours, continually beating them in terrorem, and giving occasion to all the servitors of the deceased bishop and to others the King's lieges to flee and hide themselves from the cruelty of the said Colin and his accomplices, and to leave the castle of the Channonrie as if deserted so that none save the janitor durst remain in it; continuing there with a number of armed men sufficient to accomplish their treasonable purpose; exclaiming with terrible voices and noise, and declaring that they would slay and burn all within the castle unless the doors were opened to them; and afterwards besieging the castle for eight hours or thereby, treasonably seizing the keys and entering by dint of superior force, treasonably intronitting with the goods found there, and afterwards holding the castle without the King's licence to the above effect for a long time contrary to the acts of parliament—and for treasonably supplying, fortifying, and holding either in person or by their servitors and accomplices the said castle of the Channonrie of Ross against the King's authority since the 29th of April, although regularly commanded and required on that day to deliver it up to Henry Lord Methven, and to William Lord Ruthven the King's treasurer and the tutor of Lord Methven, within 24 hours on pain of treason and lese-majesty—and for all other crimes.¹ In 1585, as we have seen, King James granted in heritage to Henry Lord Methuen, the son and apparent heir of the deceased Lord Henry, the temporality of the bishoprick, with the castle, house, and place of Channonrie, formerly granted to the deceased lord.² The bishop's palace no longer exists, but in 1835 its foundations appear to have been turned up in trenching a place in the Chanonry known as 'the precipinets.'³

In 1854, in the course of some operations on the ruins of the cathedral, there was found built into the wall near the high altar a stone sarcophagus divided horizontally into two compartments, of which the upper contained the skeleton of a tall man, apparently a bishop, with the vestments nearly entire, and at its left side a piece of wood supposed to be the remains of a crosier.⁴

In the arches separating the south aisle of the cathedral church from the chancel are two monuments, one dated about 1330 and commemorating a countess of Ross, and the other said to be that of Bishop John who died in 1507.⁵

Above the town of Rosemarkie is a circular hill with a flat top named the Courthill, probably the seat of the bishop's court.⁶

In the last century were found among the foundations of an old house in the Chanonry coins of Robert King of Scots, and in a moor near Rosemarkie coins of Queen Elizabeth, King James VI., and King Charles I.⁷

IN the year 1227 a settlement between the bishops of Moray and Ross about the churches of Kyntalargyn and Ardrosser was witnessed and subscribed by Douenald the vicar of Locuinethereth.¹ The locality of this church seems to be now unknown.

KYNTERYTH.

IN 1549 Queen Mary presented Arthur Hammiltoun to the rectory of Kynteryth in the diocese of Ross, vacant by the decease of Master Peter Sandelandis.² This church may be the same as Locuinethereth, but there seems to be nothing known of either farther than what is here noticed.

ARDERSIER.

Ardrosser³ — Ardorsier⁴ — Arthourseir⁵ — Ardyrsyir⁶ — Arthyrasyir⁷ —
Ardersier⁸ — Ardnasier.⁹ (Map, No. 35.)

THIS parish is situated in the county of Inverness upon the point or headland which lies on the Moray Firth opposite to the Ness or Point of Chanonry. The shore is flat and sandy, but diversified with sandy knolls and heathy ridges, morasses, and small lakes, and is generally known as the Carse of Ardorsier.¹⁰ The rest consists of a sea-terrace in some parts about 300 feet above the sea, and is in general cultivated.¹¹

In 1227 a controversy arose between Andrew bishop of Moray on one side and Robert bishop of Ross and his chapter on the other, the former asserting in presence of the Pope's delegates, namely, the abbot of Der, and the dean and archdeacon of Aberdene, the right of diocesan over the churches of Gylltalargyn and Ardrosser, and having been put in actual possession of the churches a year before causa rei servande.¹ The controversy was finally settled by the advice of the delegates, and with consent of the chapters and clergy of both dioceses, in the following manner: That the bishops of Moray should possess the church of Kyntalargyn as to diocesan right, and the bishops of Ross should for ever have the church of Ardrosser as to all ecclesiastical matters as their predecessors formerly held it.² Moreover the bishop of Moray for himself and his successors and with the consent of his whole chapter renounced all right, if any, which he had or might have in the church of Ardrosser, and all action and demand, solemnly promising that neither he nor his successors should afterwards claim any right in that church or in any thing belonging to it; the bishop of Ross for himself and his successors and with the consent of his chapter and clergy making a similar renunciation and promise as to the church of Kyntalargyn.³ The bishop of Ross moreover with the same consent gave for ever to the cathedral church of Elgyn a stone of wax to be held for confraternity and the orisons and other benefits there to be rendered, which stone of wax John Byseth and his heirs according to their charter were wont to give to the cathedral church of Ros.⁴ It was further agreed that, if either of the said churches should attempt to contravene the above, it should pay the penalty of £100 sterling to the other which observed the agreement, and that the agreement should notwithstanding remain valid.⁵ The settlement was subscribed by the respective bishops and clergy together with the delegates, and among those who subscribed the copy to be kept by the bishop of Moray was Maurice canon of Rosmarkyn and parson of Ardrosser, who subscribed by the hand of his procurator because he was blind.⁶ At the Reformation the kirk of Ardrosser was part of the prebend of the dean of Ross.⁷ In 1569, 1571, and 1574 John Smyth was reader at Ardorseir, and in 1574 Andro Myll was minister there and at several other churches.⁸ About the year 1661 Master Patrick Durhame, late minister at Ardnaseir, was appointed for life to the deanery of Ross.⁹

The church stood on the Carse near the bottom of the sea-terrace, where its cemetery may still be seen.¹⁰ It was rebuilt with clay in 1766, and about 1790 was ruinous.¹¹ The present church was built in 1802 near the east end of the higher part of the parish.¹²

In 1296 the master of the Knights Templars in Scotland swore fealty to King Edward I. of England, and received from that king among other mandates for restoring the possessions of his order one addressed to the sheriff of Invernys (which probably included their lands at Ardersier).¹³ In 1611 James Lord Torphichen granted the Temple lands of Ardnaseir to Master Thomas Bollock, who in 1626 granted them to John Campbell.¹⁴ In the latter year John Mackaye of the Tempill Land of Ardincheir granted to Houchone Rose of Kilravok a receipt for his 'hail vryttis hail and suir as he delyverit thame to him.'¹⁵ In 1661 King Charles II. confirmed in favour of Sir Hew Campbell of Calder the grants of the Temple lands made in 1611 and 1626, both granters and grantees being then deceased.¹ The perceptory or house of the Templars, the ruins of which remained in the beginning of the last century, stood at Dalyards.²

Between 1561 and 1566 the kirk of Ardrosser, included in the rental of the deanery of Ross, was valued yearly at 5 chalders of victual and apparently a sum of money not stated separately from the money paid by the other churches held by the dean.³ In 1569 and 1571 the reader at Ardorseir had for his stipend £20, and in 1574 he had 20 marks and the kirklands.⁴ In 1574 the minister had £80 (the amount of the deanery), the kirklands (probably of Awach), and other perquisites.⁵

In the year 1552 Robert Monro of Fowlis granted a charter at Arthursair.⁶ In 1556 David bishop of Ross, perpetual commendator of Cambuskyneth, with consent of the dean and chapter of Ross, granted to his brother Robert Leslie the lands and barony of Ardroseir, the salmon and other fishings of the same, the upper alehouse of Ardroseir and the lower alehouse with their crofts and pertinents, and the lands of Wester and Eister Delny (in the neighbouring parish of Nairn); the grantee paying yearly for Ardroseir 24 marks with 8 marks as grassum, 2 marts, 2 muttuns, 18 capons, 18 poultry, 8 kids, 160 eggs, and 4 bolls of oats — for the mails of the upper alehouse 20s. with 6s. 8d. as grassum — for the mails of the lower alehouse 2 marks with 8s. 11d. as grassum, 2 muttuns, and 24 capons — and for the fishings 10 marks; and performing three suits at the three head courts held yearly at the Chanony of Ross.⁷ In 1557 Queen Mary confirmed the grant.⁸ Between 1561 and 1566 Henry bishop of Ross enumerates the mairdom of Ardrosser among the lands belonging to the bishoprick.⁹ In 1570 King James VI., for the good service done to his 'guidschir and regent' by Robert Leslie of Arthurseir, granted to him for life a yearly pension of £103, 11s. 4d. Scots together with 300 loads of peats out of the fruits of the bishoprick of Ros, and as security he granted him the dues of the lands and barony of Arthurseir with the fishing of the same, and the dues of the lands of Estir Airdrie, in the sheriffdom of Innernes, belonging to the bishoprick as part of its patrimony, and formerly let in feuferme to Robert and his heirs for the yearly payment of those dues.¹⁰ In 1572 (3 January) the same king granted to the same Robert Leslie in heritage the escheat of the goods which belonged to Master Mungo Monypenny dean of Ross, and (6 January) confirmed to him the grant of 1570.¹¹ In 1575 the son of Robert Leslie sold the lands of Ardiersier and Delnies to John Campbell of Calder.¹²

Campbeltown, lying partly in this parish and partly in Petty, was in 1623 created a burgh of barony in favour of John Dow Campbell of Calder, with a fair on 5 July.¹³ It is now a village with about 1000 inhabitants, and has a fair on 12 August called Lammas Fair.¹⁴

Fort George, built in 1748, an irregular polygon with six bastions, and capable of accommodating 2500 soldiers, occupies the extremity of the Point of Ardersier opposite to Chanonry.¹

On the height above Campbeltown is a circular mount about 20 feet high, having a rampart of earth and clay 5 feet in height and 120 in circumference.² It is known as Cromwell's mount, a corruption of Cromal or Tom Mhoit, and was evidently the ancient moot-hill of the barony of Ardersier.³

In 1508 King James IV. crossed the ferry of Ardersier on his way to Tain, on which occasion he paid 13s. to the 'feryaris.'⁴

Near the march between Ardersier and Nairn is an erect stone 6 feet high, known as the Claoch-na-cabbac or Kebbuck-stone, traditionally said to commemorate the death of a chieftain who fell on the spot.⁵

On the heath of Balnagown are the remains of an encampment supposed to be Danish, which when perfect consisted of two parallel lines of circular mounds, each mound in the one line covering the opening between two mounds in the other.⁶

APPENDIX.

KINTYRE.

PAGE 1. In the year 574 was fought the battle of Delgen in Cindtire, in which fell Dunchad M'Conal M'Comgal and many other servants of the sons of Gauran.¹

P. 2. In the account of William Earl of Mar chamberlain, rendered at Seone in the year 1264, occurs the following memorandum — That the said earl received of the fermes of Kintyre from the term of Whitsunday of that year 20 cows valued at £3, and delivered them to the men of Galloway for defect of victuals.²

P. 2. The lands granted by King Robert Bruce to James the son of Dunsleph between 1306 and 1309 were seven senemargis and a half senemargis of his lordship of Kyntyre, namely, $1\frac{1}{4}$ senemargis of Ardayardill, $\frac{1}{2}$ a senemargis of Ogilduill, 1 senemargis of Ardinlochir, 1 senemargis of Ardincross, $1\frac{1}{2}$ senemargis of Kylteden, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a senemargis of Cartegredlene and Arngaffs, $\frac{3}{8}$ of a senemargis of Delgrenan, between the land of the abbacy of Iona and the land of Ardeardell; 1 senemargis of Penigunnum, and $\frac{1}{8}$ of a senemargis of Lagan near Penigunnum; the grantee rendering the forinsec service of a ship of 26 oars with its complement of men and victuals.³

P. 2. In the account of John de Lany constable of Tarbart, rendered at Clacmanan in 1326, he enters the sum of £4, 16s. as the value of 6 pondera of cheese received from the bailies of Kentire, according to the pondus of the district, reckoning 12 pence for each pondus.⁴ In the account rendered at Seone in 1329 by John of Dunfermelin, clerk of the liverance of the King's household, are entered 103 $\frac{1}{2}$ bolls of the barley of Kentyre.⁵ The lands which King Robert Bruce in that year granted to Gilchrist Maeymar M'Cay were two 'schanmarcate' of land in Kentyr, namely, a pennyland of Arydermeile, a pennyland of Ballostalfis, a pennyland of Kylewlan, and a pennyland of Seskamousky, to be held by Gilchrist and by his younger son in heritage, with remainder to Ymar his elder son and his heirs, for the service of two bowmen in the King's army.⁶

P. 3. In 1367 the lands of Kyntir and Unghys were in the hands of John of the Isles, and the sheriff of the lands did not appear to account for the King's rents.¹ In 1430 King James I. granted for seven years from Whitsunday of that year to Alexander of Montgomery of Ardrossane and Sir Robert Cunynghame of Kilmawris the joint wardenship within the parts of Kyntyre and Knapdale, for the purpose of making his peace with the inhabitants, and for leasing the lands to them pro tempore, and doing all other things competent to their office—and gave the wardens the liberty of levying the fermes of the lands for their own use sine compoto.²

P. 4. A. D. 1494. Note a mistake concerning Sir John of the Isles (of Donyvaig), erroneously identified with John of Ila Lord of the Isles.³

P. 9. In 1580 King James VI. presented Donald Campbell to the parsonage of Kilblawane in the diocese of Ergyle and sheriffdom of Terbert, vacant by the decease of Master Cornelius Omay.⁴

P. 9. There is an isle Sanda in the Scottish Sea on the west a mile from the mainland of Kintire. It is one large mile (magnum milliare) in circumference. Its soil is genial, and, if cultivated, would be fertile in fruit and grain. In it is a small church sacred to Saint Ninian, to whose monastery in Galloway the whole island belongs. Adjoining the church is the sepulchre of the fourteen sons of a most holy man Senclanius an Irishman, renowned for their sanctity, surrounded by a low stone wall and including seven large polished stones covering those sacred bodies, in the midst of which (as at this moment occurs to my recollection) was an obelisk higher than a man's usual stature. None can enter that enclosure with impunity. The oldest of the islanders, and the father of nearly all the rest, related to me the prodigy which I here add. Angus Macdonell lord of Kintire and the island of Ilay, whom I myself have seen, once entered the island accompanied by a numerous band, among whom were the chief of the youth of Kintire. The lord and his nobles, after treating of more serious matters, exercised themselves, as they were wont, with the game of 'shinty' (pilae ac clavarum ludo). The ball (pila) bounded into the cemetery, and a lad who dared to fetch it died of a swelled foot. In this island was found an arm of Saint Ultan, which enclosed in a silver shrine was religiously kept before this war (ante hoc bellum) by a gentleman of the illustrious family of the Macdonells. Not far from the chapel is a perennial spring, noted for miracles, as the islanders and many on the continent informed me. Indeed it was frequented in my own time by the neighbours all around, chiefly by those in whose minds any remains of the ancient religion dwelt. There were many other wonderful and pleasant things told me of this place by men most worthy of credit.⁵

KILCHOUSLAND.

P. 19. In 1580 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Sir Neil Makneill vicar of the parish church of Kilchuslane in Kintyre, granting, with the consent of Angus Makkonnell of Donyvage and Glennis the patron of the vicarage, to Adam Mackay and his heirs the lands of Kirryneh and Chaillen of the old extent of 13s. 4d., and the lands of Ballimanochwachthroeh of the same old extent, together with the glebe and kirklands of the vicarage called Gortanechabball, Arynd, Glak, Sellestir, Gortencobber, Imry, Amaill, and Browachintempill, lying in North Kintyre in the parish of Kilchuslane and sheriffdom of Tarbert.¹

KILMAROW.

P. 21. This church, like others of the same name (of which the spelling is various), appears to have been dedicated to Saint Malrube; and the church of Saint Mary, coupled with that of Killcan in the grant of 1251, was probably Kilmory in that parish.²

P. 22. In 1599 Alexander Campbell commendator of Ardehattan granted to Duncan Campbell, the natural son of Donald Campbell of Eachtrachan, a lease for life, the life of his next heir, and 19 years more, of the teinds of the parish of Kilmarrow in Kintyre, reserving the teinds payable to the minister.³ In 1602 Alexander Campbell resigned the priory of Ardehattan with its churches, including the church, teinds, and patronage of Kilmarrow, all which King James VI. then granted to him anew, incorporating the whole into the temporal tenantry of Ardehattan.⁴

KILLEAN.

P. 24. In 1575 King James VI. confirmed a charter by James bishop of Argyle and commendator of the abbey of Sadagall, granting for life to Gawine Hammiltoun a yearly pension of £40 Scots from the readiest fruits of the bishoprick and abbacy, and as security the teinds and dues of the bishop's quarter of the kirks of Kilmartine, Glenvrquhay, Kilmolevo, and Inchald.⁵

KILCALMONELL.

P. 28. In 1580 (18 August) King James VI. presented Hector M'Allister to the vicarage of Kilcalmonell, vacant by the demission of Alexander M'Allister.⁶ In the same year (5 September) he confirmed a charter by Alexander Makallister vicar of the parish church of Kilcolmannell in

P. 29. The grant of Kintyre and Knapdall, made by King James I. in 1430 to Alexander of Montgomery and Sir Robert Cunynghame, included the keeping of the castle of Skypinch with power to appoint lieutenants.²

P. 35. In 1580, as appears from the above notice, the office of constable of Tarbert was still in existence.³

KILBERRY.

P. 38. Between the years 1432 and 1480 Sir Colin Campbell first laird of Glenvrquhay acquired the 4 marklands of Innerneill in Knabdall, which he afterwards exchanged for lands in Perthshire.⁴ By a deed dated at Glenvrquhay 18 August 1502 Archibald Earl of Argyll granted to Duncan Campbell of Glenvrquhay the same 4 marklands lying in the lordship of Knapdail and sheriffdom of Tarbert.⁵

NORTH KNAPDALE.

P. 41. The grant made in 1430 by King James I. to Alexander of Montgomery and Sir Robert Cunynghame included the isles of Geyay and Dannay belonging to Castle Soon, and the keeping of that castle and of the castle of Skypinch.⁶ Between the years 1429 and 1449 Alexander of Yle, Earl of Ros and Lord of the Isles, granted in heritage to Torquel M'Neill constable of the castle of Syffyn the constabulary of that castle, certain lands in Gyga, and the following lands in Knapdale, namely, 4 marklands of Dannay, a markland of Bairbrek, a markland of Bairbeth, a markland of Bairbethan, 2 marklands of Bairnaphala and Duarbay, a halfpennyland of Duffoyng, and a markland of Tuiryngs, with the office called Toshachdeora of the lands of Knapdale.⁷ In 1455 John of Yle (the son of Alexander), Earl of Ros and Lord of the Isles, confirmed the grant in favour of Neil M'Neill the son of Torquel.⁸ In 1472, as stated in the text, Hector M'Torquell M'Neill was keeper of castle Siven.⁹ In 1478 John Lord of the Isles was summoned before parliament for treason in aiding the rebels in Castle Sone, and for other crimes.¹⁰

P. 85. The church of Kilmolevo was one of four, of which the teinds and dues of the bishop's quarter were about 1575 granted by James bishop of Argyle to Gawine Hammiltoun as security for a yearly pension of £40 Scots granted by the same bishop from the fruits of the bishoprick and of the abbey of Sadagall.²

KILMARTIN.

P. 92. The church of Kilmartin was one of the four churches mentioned above, the bishop's quarter of whose teinds and dues was in 1575 given as security to Gawine Hammiltoun for his pension of £40.³

In 1581 King James VI. confirmed a charter by Neil Campbell, rector and vicar of the parish church of Cragenes, and chaplain of the altarage or chaplainry of Saint Mary the Virgin within the parish church of Saint Martin in Arskeadinis, granting, with the consent of the patron Colin Earl of Argyle, to James Campbell or Makneill M'Illespik V'Ane and his heirs, with remainder to Dougall Campbell Makillespik V'Ane and his heirs, to Archibald Campbell Makillespik V'Ane and his heirs, to John Campbell of Melphort and his heirs, and to the rector's heirs whomsoever, the lands of Pennykill and Darrak belonging to the vicarage, of the old extent of one mark, in the barony of Craigenes and sheriffdom of Ergyle, and also the lands of Auchafyn belonging to the chaplainry, of the old extent of 3 marks, in the barony of Arskeadenis and sheriffdom of Ergyle, with the bailiary of the lands.⁴

P. 100. In 1567 Queen Mary granted to Sir Neil Campbell parson of Loynge for 19 years a remission for being art and part in the slaughter of Mawnis Chalmer in Elgyn of Murray, committed about 12 years before, and for all other crimes except the four points of the crown.¹

The church of Kilehattan, a ruin without the chancel, is built of massive stones not placed in courses; the cemetery is overgrown with rank weeds, but is still in use.²

KILBRANDON.

P. 102. In 1591 King James VI., with the consent of his chancellor, treasurer, clerk of justiciary, and collector general, granted to Master Neil M'Lauchlane the lands of Kilbrydebeg extending to about 9 acres, lying in the parish of Kilbrandan-in-Seall in the diocese and sheriffdom of Argyle, formerly occupied by Neil's deceased father Patrick, and formerly belonging to the vicars of the church as part of its patrimony, and then to the King by reason of the act of annexation; reserving to the ministers or vicars serving the cure of the church 4 of the 9 acres lying immediately around it according to the act of parliament; the grantee paying yearly 5 shillings as the ancient dues, and 12 pence in augmentation of the rental.³ The lands were bounded as follows — Kilbrydebeg (apparently); As the ditch lies between Cnokantaighemoir and Kilbrydebeg on the west; and as the rivulet runs from that ditch by the Lonmoir to the Cean-an-tsalen on the north; and as another rivulet called the Reavan flows from the same ditch to the same Cean-an-tsalen on the south — Garralehsaor; From the rivulet Reavan by the Feithe-na-glochmora to the top of the Drainan on the west; and from the top of the Drainan by the south side of the Cnokan-na-gabbar, including the Iommarie-na-geark, by the Beama of the cemetery to the church itself on the south; and from the church to the Knokan-na-sanasuge, including all the buildings of the vicar and the clerk, by the ditch that leads to the said rivulet Riavan on the east and north.⁴

Kilbrandon is still used as a cemetery, and a fragment of the church stands in the midst. There are 7 or 8 old monumental slabs richly ornamented, some of Macdonalds, and some of Maclachlans of Kilbride. A stone resembling a man's chin, belonging to the clan Marquis, if carried away, is believed always to return to their tomb.⁵

The cemetery of Kilbride has been ploughed up.⁶

P. 103. In the island of Seil on the Atlantic shore is an old fort, and at the foot of the cliff on which it is situated is the Ty-an-biortin (the house of the barge), immediately below which there is an opening in the rocks sufficient to admit a boat and named Port-an-falin (the harbour of the helm).⁷

KILBRIDE.

Pp. 108, 119. In the churchyard is a curious cross, now laid as a gravestone, with a figure of the crucifixion surmounted by I. H. S., and bearing the name of Archibald M'Phail, but said to mark the grave of Livingstones, in Gaelic M'Ianlea.¹ A tomb of Campbells of Braglean has a monument on which is the figure of a man with a sword and round targe apparently hung in chains.²

The chapel of Dunstaffnage, still used as a burying-ground, has Early English lancets and remains of a circular doorway and of the dog-tooth ornament.³

P. 109. In 1218 Sir Ewin of Argyle witnessed a charter of Malise Earl of Stratheryn to the monks of Inchaffray.⁴ This seems to indicate that Ewin of Ergadia, noticed in 1304 as apparently the father of Alexander, was his son John, styled also Ewin.⁵

P. 117. The chief who in 1455 entertained the Earl of Douglas at Dunstaffnage was not the Lord of the Isles (whose name was John), but Donald Balloch of Islay.⁶

P. 120. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has outside nothing architectural to mark its antiquity. Inside at the east end of the south wall is a low circular arch of bold mouldings (probably once over an altar tomb), and also part of a dog-tooth moulding, the whole Early English.⁷

The present farmhouse of Kilbride, about three miles above the house of Glenfeochan, was built about 50 years ago on the site of the old cemetery of Kilbride.⁸

GLENELG.

P. 208, line 4. For 'were apprised' read 'was apprised.'

In 1527 King James V. addressed a letter to his sheriff of Innernes and others, messengers, his sheriffs in that part, bearing — That Hew Lord Fraser of Lovet had complained to him that Alexander Makloyd of Dounbegane had forcibly occupied the lands of Glenelge, lying on the border of the Isles in the sheriffdom of Innernes, and belonging to Hew Fraser in heritage, and collected the profits of the lands for 18 years during his father's life and for two years since 'with the mair,' on the ground that they lay near 'his place;' that Hew had obtained a decret of the Lords of Council ordering the sheriffs to cite the parties and take cognition of the matter, and, if it was proved, to cause Alexander M'Cloyd to refund the profits; and that the case was proved, and Makloyd ordered to refund accordingly and to desist from occupying the lands.¹ The King therefore, understanding that his sheriffs delayed putting the sentence in execution, 'because the said Alexander M'Cloyd duellis in the Hieland, quhair nane of your officiaris dar pas to poynd him for dred of thair lyvis without convocatioun of oure lieges' — commanded them to proceed immediately to poind for the mails of Glenelg, 'to tak na deforcement thairin bot of landit men' that might be responsible to the King and to Hew Fraser, and to summon all his lieges in those parts by open proclamation at the market cross of Innernes to pass with them and assist them, if necessary, in the execution of the sentence.²

P. 209. In 1583 Tormot Makeloid of Downbeggane granted in liferent to his wife Jonet Campbell, the widow of Hector Maklane of Doward, 10 pennylands of Arnistill called a half davach, 10 pennylands of Aichaglyn called a half davach, 5 pennylands of Lekewuir and 5 pennylands of Meillarie called a half davach, 10 pennylands of Clamboyle called a half davach, 5 pennylands of Achatydownling and 5 pennylands of Achanahevill called a half davach, 10 pennylands of Alis and Landaik called a half davach, 10 pennylands of the two Corareis called a half davach, 5 pennylands of Arycharnachan and 5 pennylands of Achacharn called a half davach, 10 pennylands of Bowirblek called a half davach, 10 pennylands of Ballanray called a half davach, and 10 pennylands of Moilachunry and 10 of Moillockiraig called a davach — extending in all to 24 marklands of old extent, lying in Glenelg in the sheriffdom of Innernes — for the yearly payment of one penny Scots on the ground of each part of the lands at Whitsunday in the name of blench ferme, if required.³ A letter addressed by Allane Makranald of Easter Leyis 'to the richt honorabill and his belovitt eme Rorie Makloid of Harye,' and dated at the Channonrie of Ross 3 April 1596 (a most minute and elaborate document), bears — That the last time that Rorie's father was with Colyne Erle of Argile at Ternway (in Moray) he brought with him his writs of Glenelg to be inspected by the Earl, who had promised that, if he could thus prove his title to Glenelg to the satisfaction of the Earl and of certain barons of Murrayland, ‘ men of gude vnderstanding and weray expert in the lawis,’ he (the Earl) would cause the Lord Lowet, who then held the lands and by whom they were leased to the Clanrannald, to give them up to Rorie’s father without going to law, and, should he refuse, the Earl would assist the latter to recover them by order of law, and to get Lowet’s lands appraised for the damage which Rorie’s father and his friends had sustained by the ‘ herschipe’ of Glenelg committed by the Clanrannald, as they alleged, at Lowet’s instance; That Lowet, although young, ‘ being a man of a rype witt and gude foresicht,’ and being informed that William Makleod’s instrument of seisin in the lands of Glenelg had been lost, and knowing that otherwise it would be produced with the other writs, in order to test the correctness of his information agreed to produce his titles if the Earl would cause Makleod to produce his, declaring his satisfaction with the Earl as arbiter, as he was a man of good conscience, neutral, and as chancellor of Scotland a fit judge in such matters; That the Earl had declined acting as arbiter, but offered his advice, ‘ and quha wald impugne or ganestand the samen, he wald be pairtie;’ That Rorie’s father had on these conditions produced his charter and seisin of Glenelg, which the Earl and his assessors declared to be satisfactory; That they then required inspection of his writ of lawful possession, namely, of his brother’s seisin, a document which he could not produce; That the Earl was therefore offended with Rorie’s father, thinking he had through negligence left the document at home, and plainly told him that, if it had been produced, he would have caused Lowet to yield his pretended right and be at his mercy for indemnification of the ‘ herschip,’ and that, if it could not be produced, it would endanger his title not only to Glenelg but to all his other lands; That Makleod kept silence on the subject of the missing document, and on coming to Innernes detailed the whole affair to Allane Makrannald, except in so far as related to Lowet’s information about the missing instrument (a circumstance which was unknown until Allane found it out within the past year); That Makleod notwithstanding had informed Allane that the instrument was missing, and besought him as he was his friend to spare neither labour nor expense at his (Makleod’s) charge to procure the original or a copy, as he was quite certain that his brother had been seised in the lands of Glenelg by the sheriff clerk of Innernes or some other notary, and that Allane could have no difficulty in getting inspection of the ‘ schireff buekis;’ That after the decease of Rorie’s father his brother had made the same request; That Allane had therefore used more pains and been at more expense in searching into the matter than ever he had in ‘ ovtredding’ his own affairs, for, after he had found that the sheriff clerk who had given seisin to Makleod was a stranger and had died the year after he had given the seisin, he learned that his wife and children had left the country, and that after his decease his wife had left her children under the guardianship of her brothers and friends in several places, so that there was the greatest difficulty in finding their father’s books; That he (Allane) had therefore employed a confidential friend who lived in that quarter where the deceased notary’s books were to endeavour to procure either the original seisin or the notary’s ‘ prodigoll’ book to testify it; That however the parties on their side were not so busy as those on Lowet’s, although each sought the instrument for a different purpose, the former ‘ to keip it weill,’ and the latter ‘ to rywe and burne it;’ That, had Rorie’s father lived but two months longer, he would have succeeded in recovering it, for, as soon as he had left the Earl of Argill, the Lord Louet, seeing that his information was correct, had posted to Edinburgh, and purchased the nonentry of all Rorie's lands since the decease of his grandfather Alexander Makleod, with the intention, which his son was then following up, of getting all the lands, and especially Glenelg, apprised for the dues payable during that period, which on the report of some of the inhabitants he estimated at upwards of £200,000; And, finally, that Allane's confidential friend at last Christmas had got inspection of the instrument of seisin, had bound the possessors of it to conceal the fact of their possession till 15 May following, and had promised that, if they did not then hear from Rorie on the subject, he should never reveal the matter to any person.¹ The letter concludes with a request that Rorie would appoint a meeting with the writer to confer about what should be further done in the matter, and with urging him to 'tak tyme in tyme, for tyme and tyd bydis no man.'²

P. 211. The church of Saint Blane appears to have consisted originally of a nave 51 feet by 16 feet 8 inches, and a chancel 13 feet 6 inches square, but subsequently extended in length to 26 feet.³ The chancel arch is Norman, but the windows all pointed and of the period immediately succeeding the Norman.⁴

P. 212. The building called the 'Devil's Cauldron' is supposed to have been the residence of the ecclesiastic who in early times officiated in the church of Saint Blane.⁵ Its true dimensions are 33 feet 6 inches in diameter, 8 feet 6 inches in thickness of the walls, and present average height 5 feet.⁶ At the foot of the ridge to the west of the church is a well fancied to have miraculous powers.⁷

These boundaries, as given in the charter of confirmation, are incorrectly stated in the Municipal Corporation Reports quoted in the text, and are here given correctly from the Privy Seal Register, although in the latter there are some mistakes in the spelling of names. They were as follow—On the land, between the lands of Askokis and Kellecrasache on the west; the burn of Balnald on the south; the lake called the Langloche, the lands of Chapelton, Ballieloyne, Mekill Barroun, Incheeragen, Auchinculture, Knaiffislogmorie, and Eister Kames, on the west and northwest; and the sea on the north—And on the sea, beginning at the isle of Plada on the south; turning thence westward by the 'kyles' and 'straittis' between Arran and Kintyre, (and between) Ergyle and Bute from Lochriden to Clochstane, comprehending therein all the Kyles of Bute and Lochstryin, on the north; and from the Clochstane to the said island of Plada, including therein the station of Cumray, the station of Fairly (in Ayrshire), and the station of Holy Isle (de Haluo-insula) in Arraine, otherwise called Ile Malache.² King James granted also to the burgh free ports in the roadsteads of the bay and station (navium receptaculis de bey et statione) of the burgh of Rothisay and of the Kylis of Bute, the stations of Cumray, Fairlie, and Halie Ile, and all others within the bounds of the burgh.³
